his Psalms of David, &c., 1719, in 4 st. of 4 l., as the 2nd pt. of his version of Psalm 98. T. Cotterill gave, in the 1st ed. of his Sel., 1810, a much altered version of text, which was repeated in the authorized ed. of 1820 with the repetition of st. i. as st. v. This arrangement is known by st. ii., which reads, "Ye saints, rejoice, the Saviour reigns," &c. Bickersteth's arrangement in his Christian Psalmody, 1833, is also in 5 st.; but the added stanza (iii.) is from Watts's version of the first part of the same Psalm. Both of these texts have been repeated in later collections. In addition there are also the following: (1) "The Lord is come; let heaven rejoice," in Hull's Mitre H. Bk., 1836; and (2) "Joy to the world, the Lord is nigh," in the Irvingite Hys. for the Use of the Churches, 1864. In its various forms, but principally in the original, it is in use in most English-speaking countries. It has also been translated into several languages, including Latin, in R. Bingham's Hymno. Christ. Lat., 1870, "Laetitia in mundo! Dominus nam venit Iesus!" [J. J.]

Joyce, James, M.A., was born at Frome, Somersetshire, Nov. 2, 1781, and was for some years Vicar of Dorling, and d. there Oct. 9, 1850. He pub. A Treatise on Love to God, &c., 1822; The Lays of Truth, a Poem, 1825; and Hymns with Notes, 1849. This last is a small work which he compiled for his parishioners. It is composed of passages of Holy Scripture, Meditations, and 20 Hymns. Of his hymns, the following are in C. U.:—

1. Disown'd of Heav'n, by man oppress. [On behalf of the Jews.] This appeared in the Christian Observer, Nov., 1809, in 5 st. of 4 l., headed, "Hymn applicable to the present condition of the Jews," and signed "J. J." The form in which it is known to modern collections is, "O why should Israel's sons, once bless'd." This appeared in Bickersteth's Christian Psalmody, 1833, and is widely used. The cento, "Lord, visit Thy forsaken race—vine," in use in America, is Bickersteth's (1833) somewhat altered.

2. High on the bending willows hung. [On behalf of the Jews.] This hymn was given in the December number of the Christian Observer, 1809, in 6 st. of 4 l., as "A second hymn applicable to the present condition of the Jews," and signed "J. J."

3. Israel bewails her freedom gone. [On behalf of the Jews.] This is his "Third Hymn applicable to the present condition of the Jews," and was given in the Christian Observer, Dec., 1809, with No. 2. It is in 6 st. of 4 l., and signed "J. J." [J. J.]

Jubes: et, in praeceptis aquis. C. Coffin. [Tuesday] Pub. in his Hymni Sacri, 1736, p. 15, and again in the Paris Breviary of the same year, for Tuesdays at Matins. It is also in the Lyons and other modern French Brevs.; in Carl Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865; and in J. Chandler's Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837. Tr. as:—

1. He speaks the word; the floods obey. By J. Chandler, in his Hys. of the Prim. Church, 1837, p. 17. It was repeated in Dr. Oldknow's Hymns, &c., 1850; and as "God speaks the word; the floods obey," in the "Additional Ps. & Hys." given in the Scottish Episco. Coll., 1858.

2. The word is given, the waters flow. By I. Williams. Appeared in the British Magazine, July, 1834; and again in his Hys. Tr. from the Parisian Brev., 1839, p. 18.

3. He spake! and gathering into one. By J. D. Chambers, in his Lauds Syon, 1857, p. 16; and the Salisbury H. Bk., 1857.

4. Thou spakest, Lord, and into one. By the Compilers of H. A. & M., 1861, based upon I. Williams's tr. above. This is repeated in other collections.

5. Thou spakst the word, the waters flow. This in the Hymnal for the Use of St. John the Evangelist's, Aberdeen, 1870, is I. Williams's tr. altered.

6. O Father, Who this earth hast given. This in the Hymnary, 1872, is I. Williams's tr. rewritten in L. M. It is appointed for Septuagesima. [J. J.]

Jubilate. [Prayer, Book of Common.]

Jubilemus omnes una. [Advent.]

This sequence for the 4th S. in Advent is found in a 12th cent. English Gradual in the British Museum (Reg. 2, B. iv. f. 65), and a Sequentiary, cir. 1199 (Calig. A. xiv. f. 44). Also in two 14th cent. French Missals in the British Museum [Add. 16,905 (of Paris), f. 18 b; and Add. 30,058 (of Sens), f. 16 b], 14th cent. Sarum Missal (Lansdown, 432, f. 11 b), &c. The printed text is in the reprints of the Sarum, York, Hereford and Arbuthnot Missals; in Neale's Sequentiæ, 1852, p. 8; Daniel, v. p. 174 (from Neale); Kehren, No. 5. Tr. as:—

Honour and glory, thanksgiving and power. By E. A. Dayman, for the Hymnary, and pub. therein, 1872. It is repeated in the Laudes Domini, N.Y., 1884. Other trs. are:—

1. Let us all rejoice together. J. D. Chambers, 1866.
2. Before the all-creating Lord. C. B. Pearson, in the Sarum Missal in English, 1868. [J. M.]

Jubilemus pia mente. [For the Dying.

In Time of Pestilence.] The only ms. form of this sequence we have been able to find is in a 15th cent. Sarum Missal in the Bodleian (Liturg. Misc., 372, f. 261 b). It is also found in the eds. of the Sarum Missal printed at Venice, 1494; London, 1498, &c.; and in the Burntisland reprint is given at cols. 887*–889*.

This sequence occurs in a Mass, Pro mortalitate evitanda (for escaping death by pestilence), which is introduced by a notice which states that Pope Clement, with all the Cardinals in conclave, composed and arranged the Mass, and granted to all those who were truly penitent, and had made their confession, and had heard this Mass, 200 days of indulgence (i.e. remission of canonical penalties), and that all those who heard this Mass should carry in the hand a lighted candle while hearing Mass on the five days following; and should hold it in the hand, kneeling, throughout the whole Mass. And so sudden death could not hurt them. And this was certified and approved in Avignon and its neighbourhood. The Pope mentioned was Clement VI., elected Pope, May 7, 1342. The contagion alluded to was brought to Italy in 1347 by merchants from the Levant, and soon spread over Europe, causing a fearful amount of mortality. Clement, at Avignon, then the seat of the Papacy, distinguished himself by trying in various ways to alleviate and terminate this scourge, providing for the nursing and support of the sick, the burial of the dead, &c.

Translation in C. U.:—

Holy Trinity, before Thee. By Harriet Mary Chester, made for and pub. in the Hymnary, 1872, in 7 st. of 6 l., and signed "H. M. C."

Another tr. is:—

With pious minds let us rejoice. C. B. Pearson, in the Sarum Missal in English, 1868. [W. A. S.]

Jucundare plebs fidelis. Adam of St.

Victor? [Common of Evangelists.] A fine sequence founded on Ezek. i. 4–28, x. 9–22, and Rev. iv. 6–8. The "living creatures" are made symbolical of the Evangelists, St. Matthew being represented by the man, St. Luke by the ox, St. Mark by the lion, and St. John by the eagle. Then under another figure the Evangelists are compared to the four rivers which watered Paradise (by later writers St. Matthew is represented by Gihon, St. Mark by Tigris, St. Luke by Euphrates, and St. John by Pison). The sequence has generally been ascribed to Adam of St. Victor, and is included in L. Gautier's ed. of Adam's Oeuvres poetiques, vol. ii., 1858, p. 425; but in his ed. 1881, p. 223, Gautier says that the rhythm is unlike Adam, and as he thinks Adam's authorship is doubtful, he does not print the text, but merely refers to it in a Gradual of St. Victor before 1239 (Bibl. Nat., Paris, No. 14448), a Paris Gradual of the 13th cent. (B. N., No. 15615), and other sources. F. W. E. Roth, in his Lateinische Hymnen des Mittelalters, 1887, No. 252, gives the readings of a Gradual of the end of the 12th cent. (now at Darmstadt, where it is given as a sequence for SS. Mark and Luke. It is in a York Missal, cir. 1390, now in the Bodleian, but belonging to University College, Oxford; in an early 14th cent. Paris Missal in the British Museum (Add. 16905, f. 298); in the Magdeburg Missal of 1480 and others. The printed text is also in Daniel, ii. p. 84; Trench, ed. 1864, p. 62; Kehren, No. 427; Wrangham's Liturgical Poetry of Adam of St. Victor, 1881, vol. iii. p. 162. In the uses of St. Victor, of Cluny, and of Paris it was the sequence for the festival of St. Matthew. The full tr. of this hymn are, (1) "Faithful flock in whose possessing," by J. M. Neale, in his Med. Hys., 1851, p. 78; altered in later editions to "Children of a heavenly Father"; and (2) "O be joyful, faithful nation," by D. S. Wrangham, in his Liturgical Poetry of Adam of St. Victor, 1881, iii. p. 163. Portions of the hymn are also included in "Come, pur- hearts in sweetest measure" (p. 240, it.) (See also "Sing to God," in Various.) [J. M.]

Judkin, Thomas James, M.A., s. of a London tradesman, was b. at London, July 25, 1788, and was educated at Caius College, Cambridge (B.A. 1815, M.A. 1818), mainly at the expense of Sir William Curtis, an alderman of the City of London. After taking Holy Orders in 1816, he held various curacies, until 1828, when he was preferred as minister of Somers Chapel, St. Pancras, London. He d. Sept. 11, 1871. He pub. Twelve Signs of the Times; Pope's Aggression; and other works, including a volume of sonnets as Bygone Moods. His hymns were published mainly for the use of his own congregation and appeared as:—

(1) Church and Home Psalmody; being a Collection of Psalms from the Old and New Testaments, and Original Hymns, for Congregational and Domestic Purposes, 1831. In 1834 this was enlarged and issued as (2) Church and Home Melodies, being a New Version of the more devotional parts of the Psalms, together with a Version of the Collects, and Original Hymns; for Congregational and Domestic purposes. This was divided into (1) "Spirit of the Psalms," (2) "Collects in Verse," (3) "Hymns on the Gospels," and (4) "Original Hymns." (3) The 3rd ed. was pub. in 1837. At the end of the volume two title-pages were supplied, that the book, if so desired, might be divided into two, one as The Spirit of the Psalter; The Collects in Verse; together with Hymns suggested by the Gospels for the day throughout the Year; and the other, Sacred Melodies; or Original Hymns for Congregational and Domestic Use.

From the 1st ed. of his Coll. the following hymns are in C. U. :—

1. Enthroned is Jesus now. Ascension.
2. Holy Spirit, Fount of blessing. Whitsuntide.
3. How shall I pray, O Lord, to Thee. Prayer.
4. We are journeying to a place. Heavenward.
5. When in the dark and cloudy day. Jesus, all in all.

[J. J.]

Judson, Adoniram, D.D., b. at Maldon, Massachusetts, Aug. 9, 1788, where his father was Pastor of a Baptist Church. He graduated at Brown University, Providence, Rhode Island, 1807; and went in 1815, together with his first wife, as a Missionary to India. After encountering various hindrances from the East India Company, they began their mission in Burmah. On June 8, 1824, Rangoon having been taken by the British, Dr. Judson was imprisoned by the natives, and was kept in captivity until the Burmese capitulated to the British in 1826. His first wife dying on Oct. 24, 1826, he married the widow of his late colleague, G. D. Boardman (see Hull, see below), April 10, 1834. He d. at sea, April 12, 1850, and was buried in the deep. He translated the Bible into Burmese, and wrote several tracts in that language. A Burmese-English Dictionary was compiled from his papers. His Memoirs, by Dr. Wayland, were pub. in 1853. His hymns include :—

1. Our Father God, [Lord] Who art in heaven. The Lord's Prayer. This hymn is dated "Prison, Ava, March 1825," and was written during his imprisonment above referred to. It was given in his Memoirs, 1853, vol. i. p. 308. It is in C. U. in G. Britain and America.

2. Our Saviour bowed beneath the wave. Holy Baptism. This dates from 1829, or earlier, and is in 7 st. It is said to have been "sung at the Baptism of several soldiers at Moulmein, British Pegu." St. i.-iii. usually form the hymn.

3. Come, Holy Spirit, Dove divine. Holy Baptism. This is composed of st. vii., v., vi. of No. 2, and is found in Winchell's Coll., 1832.

[F. M. B.]

Judson, Sarah, née Hull, daughter of Ralph Hull, was b. at Alstead, New Haven, Nov. 4, 1803, and married first to the Rev. George D. Boardman, and afterwards to Dr. Judson (see above). She d. at St. Helena, Sept. 1, 1845. Her fine missionary hymn, "Proclaim the lofty praise," is in W. Urwick's Dublin Coll., 1829, No. 142, in 4 st. of 8 l. Its appearance in America prior to this has not been traced.

[F. M. B.]

Jesu tyranni pro fide. Nicolas le Tourneaux. [St. John at the Latin Gate.] Appeared in the Cliniac Breviary, 1686, p. 188, and the Paris Breviary, 1736, as the hymn at Lauds for the Feast of St. John, Ante Portam Latinam. It is also in several modern French Breviaries; Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865; and J. Chandler's Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837, No. 45. It is tr. as :—

1. John, by a tyrant's stern command. By J. Williams. Pub. in his Hys. Tr. from the Parisian Breviary, 1839, p. 203, in 5 st. of 4 l. It has been repeated in a few hymn-books, including the English Hymnal, 1852 and 1861, &c.

2. An exile for the faith. By E. Caswall. Pub. in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 289, in 6 st. of 4 l., and again in his Hys. & Poems, 1873,

p. 195. In addition to its use in its original form in Roman Catholic hymn-books for missions and schools, and others, it is also given in part as follows :—

1. In H. A. & M., 1861 and 1875, and others which have copied therefrom, st. i.-iii. are by E. Caswall, and iv., v. are by the compilers.

2. In the Parish H. Bk., 1863 and 1875, st. i.-iv. are by E. Caswall, with st. iii. rewritten, and v., vi. are by G. Phillimore. This was repeated in the S.P.C.K. Church Hys., 1871, and others.

3. In the Hymnary, 1872, is the Parish H. Bk. text, slightly altered, with the addition of a doxology based on Caswall's tr.

4. For Jesu's sake, to lonely lands. By F. Pott, based upon E. Caswall as above, was given in his Hymns, &c., 1861.

Another tr. is :—

Beloved disciple of thy Lord. J. Chandler, 1837.

[J. J.]

Just as I am, without one plea. Charlotte Elliott. [The Lamb of God.] Written for and 1st pub. in the Invalid's Hymn Book, 1836, in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed with the text, "Him that cometh unto Me, I will in no wise cast out" (see Index to Invalid's H. Bk.). During the same year it also appeared in Miss Elliott's Hours of Sorrow Cheered and Comforted, with the additional stanza, "Just as I am, of that free love," &c. From this last work the hymn has been transferred to almost every hymnal published in English-speaking countries during the past fifty years. It has been translated into almost every European language, and into the languages of many distant lands. The testimony of Miss Elliott's brother (the Rev. H. V. Elliott, editor of Psalms and Hymns, 1835) to the great results arising from this one hymn, is very touching. He says :—

"In the course of a long ministry, I hope I have been permitted to see some fruit of my labours; but I feel far more has been done by a single hymn of my sister's."

The text of this hymn is usually given in full, and without alteration, as in Church Hymns, 1871, No. 408. It ranks with the finest hymns in the English language. Its success has given rise to many imitations, the best of which is R. S. Cook's "Just as thou art, without one trace." A Latin rendering, "Ut ego sum! nec alia ratione utens," by R. Bingham, is given in his Hymno. Christ. Lat., 1871, and a second by H. M. Macgill, in his Songs of the Christian Creed and Life, 1876, as, "Tibi, qualis sum, O Christo!"

Justinian's Hymn. [Greek Hymnody, § x. 10.]

"K—," in Dr. Rippon's Bap. Selection. [How firm a foundation, &c.]

Kn, in Dr. A. Fletcher's Collection. [How firm a foundation, &c.]

Kämpff, Johann, was a native of Staffelsstein in Franconia. After studying at the Universities of Wittenberg and Jena, he was appointed in 1604 diaconus at St. Margaret's Church, and subsequently at the Augustinerkirche in Gotha. Along with his colleague at the Augustinerkirche, he fell a victim to the pestilence, and d. Oct. 30, 1625 (Koch, iii. 114; ms. from Dr. Otto Dreyer, Superintendent at Gotha). The only hymn by him which has passed into English is

Wenn ich in Todesnöthen bin. For the Dying. A beautiful prayer of faith, founded on St. John xix. 34. Appeared, with his name, as No. 2 in pt. III. of the Constitutionale Sacram. Gotha, 1648, in 8 st. of 7 l. Included in Freylinghausen's G. B., 1704, and in Forst's G. B., ed. 1855, No. 886. Tr. as:—

When in the pains of death my heart. A good tr. of st. i., ii., vii., viii. by A. T. Russell, as No. 249 in his Ps. & Hys., 1851. [J. M.]

Κανών. [Greek Hymnody, § XVI. 11.]

Καταβασία. [Greek Hymnody, § XVI. 6.]

Κατήλθες ἐν τοῖς κατωτάτοις.
[Ἀναστρέψως ἡμέρα.]

Κάθισμα. [Greek Hymnody, § XVI. 3.]

Keach, Benjamin, was b. at Stoke-Hammond, Bucks, Feb. 29, 1640. Early in life he joined a Baptist Church, and at 18 began to preach. For the next 10 years he laboured as an evangelist in the towns and villages of his native county, suffering at times much persecution for his principles as a Baptist and Nonconformist. In 1664, he pub. a small book entitled The Child's Instructor; or, a New and Easy Primer. For this he was tried before Lord Chief Justice Hyde, and condemned to a fine, imprisonment and the pillory. In 1668 he removed to London, and became pastor of a Particular Baptist Church which met, first in private houses, and afterwards in Horseleydown, Southwark. There a large congregation gathered round him, to which he ministered with great acceptance and usefulness until his death in 1704. Keach deserves special mention for the part he took in introducing singing into Baptist congregations, having been the first who did so. [Baptist Hymnody and English Hymnody, Early, § XII.] He wrote many hymns, the earliest appearing in his War with the Powers of Darkness, 4th ed., 1676. Nearly 300 by him were pub. in 1691 as Spiritual Melody, their subjects being the Metaphors of Holy Scripture. This subject had been previously expounded by him in his Tropologia, a Key to open Scripture Metaphors, 2 vols. folio, 1682. His Distressed Zion Relieved, or The Garment of Praise for the Spirit of Heaviness, was pub. in Lond., 1689. It is mainly in blank verse, is dedicated to William and Mary, and is written in praise of Protestantism against Romanism. In 1691 he also pub. The Breach Repaired in God's Worship; or Singing of Psalms, Hymns & Spiritual Songs proved to be a Holy Ordinance of Jesus Christ, &c. (London, J. Hancock); and also Spiritual Melody the same year. His latest poetical work appeared in 1696: A Feast of Fat Things: containing several Scripture Songs and Hymns. Keach was a voluminous writer, forty-two works being pub. by him, in addition to prefaces and introductions to the books of others. His hymns have passed out of C. U. [W. R. S.]

Keble, John, M.A., was b. at Fairford, in Gloucestershire, on St. Mark's Day, 1792. His father was Vicar of Coln St. Aldwin's, about three miles distant, but lived at Fairford in a house of his own, where he educated entirely his two sons, John and Thomas, up to the time of their entrance at Oxford. In 1806 John Keble won a Scholarship at Corpus Christi College, and in 1810, a Double First Class, a distinction which up to that time had been gained by no one except Sir Robert Peel. In 1811 he was elected a Fellow of Oriel, a very great honour, especially for a boy under 19 years of age; and in 1811 he won the University Prizes both for the English and Latin Essays. It is somewhat remarkable that amid this brilliantly successful career, one competition in which the future poet was unsuccessful was that for English verse, in which he was defeated by Mr. Rolleston. After his election at Oriel, he resided in College, and engaged in private tuition. At the close of 1813 he was appointed Examining Master in the Schools, and was an exceedingly popular and efficient examiner. On Trinity Sunday, 1815, he was ordained Deacon, and in 1816 Priest, by the Bishop of Oxford, and became Curate of East Leach and Burthorpe, though he still continued to reside at Oxford. In 1818 he was appointed College Tutor at Oriel, which office he retained until 1828. On the death of his mother in the same year, he left Oxford, and returned to live with his father and two surviving sisters at Fairford. In addition to East Leach and Burthorpe, he also accepted the Curacy of Southrop, and the two brothers, John and Thomas, undertook the duties between them, at the same time helping their father at Coln. It should be added, as an apology for Keble thus becoming a sort of pluralist among "the inferior clergy," that the population of all his little cures did not exceed 1000, nor the income £100 a year. In 1824 came the only offer of a dignity in the Church, and that a very humble one, which he ever received. The newly-appointed Bishop of Barbadoes (Coleridge) wished Keble to go out with him as Archdeacon, and but for his father's delicate state of health, he would probably have accepted the offer. In 1825 he became Curate of Hursley, on the recommendation of his old pupil, Sir William Heathcote; but in 1826, on the death of his sister, Mary Ann, he returned to Fairford, feeling that he ought not to separate himself from his father and only surviving sister. He supplied his father's place at Coln entirely. 1827 was memorable for the publication of the Christian Year, and 1828 for the election to the Provostship of Oriel, which his friends, rather than himself, seem to have been anxious to secure for him. In 1829 the living of Hursley was offered to him by Sir William Heathcote, but declined on the ground that he could not leave his father. In 1830 he published his admirable edition of Hooker's Works. In 1831 the Bishop of Exeter (Dr. Philpotts) offered him the valuable living of Poignton, but it was declined for the same reason that Hursley had been declined. In the same year he was also elected to the Poetry Professorship at Oxford. His Praelectiones in that capacity were much admired. In 1833 he preached his famous Assize Sermon at Oxford, which is said by Dr. Newman to have given the first start to the Oxford Movement. Very soon after the publication of this sermon the Tracts for the Times began to be issued. Of these Tracts Keble wrote Nos. 4, 13, 40, and 89. In 1835 his father died, and Keble and his sister retired from Fairford to Coln. In the same year he married Miss Clarke and the Vicarage of Hursley, again becoming vacant, was again offered to him by Sir W. Heathcote, and as the reason for his previous refusal of it no longer existed, he accepted the offer, and in 1836 settled at Hursley for the remainder of his life. That life was simply the life of a devoted and indefatigable parish priest, varied by intellectual pursuits. In 1864 his health began to give way, and on March 29, 1866, he passed away, his dearly loved wife only surviving him six weeks. Both are buried, side by side, in Hursley churchyard.

In his country vicarage he was not idle with his pen. In 1839 he published his Metrical Version of the Psalms. The year before, he began to edit, in conjunction with Drs. Pusey and Newman, the Library of the Fathers. In 1846 he published the Lyra Innocentium, and in 1847 a volume of Academical and Occasional sermons. His pen then seems to have rested for nearly ten years, when the agitation about the Divorce Bill called forth from him in 1857 an essay entitled, An Argument for not proceeding immediately to repeal the Laws which treat the Nuptial Bond as Indissoluble; and in the same year the decision of Archbishop Sumner in the Denison case elicited another essay, the full title of which is The Worship of our Lord and Saviour in the Sacrament of the Holy Communion, but which is shortly entitled, Eucharistical Adoration. In 1863 he published his last work, The Life of Bishop Wilson (of Sodor and Man). This cost him more pains than anything he wrote, but it was essentially a labour of love.

In the popular sense of the word "hymn," Keble can scarcely be called a hymn-writer at all. Very many of his verses have found their way into popular collections of Hymns for Public Worship, but these are mostly centos. Often they are violently detached from their context in a way which seriously damages their significance. Two glaring instances of this occur in the Morning and Evening hymns. In the former the verse "Only, O Lord, in Thy dear love, Fit us for perfect rest above," loses half its meaning when the preceding verse, ending "The secret this of rest below," is excised, as it generally is in collections for public worship, and the same may be said of that most familiar of all Keble's lines, "Sun of my soul, thou Saviour dear," which has of course especial reference to the preceding verse, "Tis gone, that bright and orb'd blaze," &c. The Lyra Innocentium has furnished but few verses which have been adopted into hymn collections; the Psalter has been more fortunate, but the translations from the Latin are almost unknown.

Taking, however, the word "hymn" in the wider sense in which Dr. Johnson defines it, as "a song of adoration to some superior being," Keble stands in the very first rank of hymn-writers. His uneventful life was the very ideal life for such a poet as Keble was, but not the sort of life which would be best adapted to train a popular hymn-writer. The Christian Year and the Lyra Innocentium reflect in a remarkable degree the surroundings of the writer. They are essentially the works of a refined and cultured mind, and require a refined and cultured mind to enter into their spirit. Keble, all his life long, and never more than in the earlier portion of it, before he wrote, and when he was writing The Christian Year, breathed an atmosphere of culture and refinement. He had imbibed neither the good nor the evil which the training of a public, or even of a private, school brings. It was not even the ordinary home education which he had received. He had been trained, up to the very time of his going to college, by his father, who was clearly a man of culture and refinement, and had been himself successively Scholar and Fellow of Corpus. When he went to Oxford, he can scarcely be said to have entered into the whirl of university life. The Corpus of those days has been admirably described by Keble's own biographer, Sir John Coleridge, and by Dean Stanley in his Life of Dr. Arnold; and the impression which the two vivid pictures leave upon the mind is that of a home circle, on rather a large scale, composed of about twenty youths, all more or less scholarly and refined, and some of them clearly destined to become men of mark. When he removed across the road to Oriel, he found himself in the midst of a still more distinguished band. Whether at home or at college he had never come into contact with anything rude or coarse. And his poetry is just what one would expect from such a career. Exquisitely delicate and refined thoughts, expressed in the most delicate and refined language, are characteristic of it all. Even the occasional roughnesses of versification may not be altogether unconnected with the absence of a public school education, when public schools laid excessive stress upon the form of composition, especially in verse. The Christian Year again bears traces of the life which the writer led, in a clerical atmosphere, just at the eve of a great Church Revival, "cujus pars magna fuit." "You know," he writes to a friend, "the C. Y. (as far as I remember it) everywhere supposes the Church to be in a state of decay." Still more obviously is this the case in regard to the Lyra Innocentium. It was being composed during the time when the writer was stricken by what he always seems to have regarded as the great sorrow of his life. Not the death of his nearest relations—and he had several trials of this kind—not the greatest of his own personal troubles dealt to him so severe a blow as the secession of J. H. Newman to the Church of Rome. The whole circumstances of the fierce controversy connected with the Tract movement troubled and unsettled him; and one can well understand with what a sense of relief he turned to write, not for, but about, little children, a most important distinction, which has too often been unnoticed. If the Lyra had been written for children it would have been an almost ludicrous failure, for the obscurity which has been frequently complained of in The Christian Year, is still more conspicuous in the latter work. The title is somewhat misleading, and has caused it to be regarded as a suitable gift-book for the young, who are quite incapable of appreciating it. For the Lyra is written in a deeper tone, and expresses the more matured convictions of the author; and though it is a far less successful achievement as a whole, it rises in places to a higher strain of poetry than The Christian Year does.

Another marked feature of Keble's poetry is to a great extent traceable to his early life, viz. the wonderful accuracy and vividness of his descriptions of natural scenery. The ordinary school-boy or undergraduate cares little for natural scenery. The country is to him a mere playing-field. But Keble's training led him to love the country for its own sake. Hence, as Dean Stanley remarks, "Oxford, Bagley Wood, and the neighbourhood of Hursley might be traced through hundreds of lines, both in The Christian Year and the Lyra Innocentium." The same writer testifies, with an authority which no other Englishman could claim, to "the exactness of the descriptions of Palestine, which he [Keble] had never visited." And may not this remarkable fact be also traced to some extent to his early training? Brought up under the immediate supervision of a pious father, whom he venerated and loved dearly, he had been encouraged to study intelligently his Bible in a way in which a boy differently educated was not likely to do. Hence, as Sir John Coleridge remarks,

"The Christian Year is so wonderfully scriptural. Keble's mind was, by long, patient and affectionate study of Scripture, so imbued with it that its language, its train of thought, its mode of reasoning, seems to flow out into his poetry; almost, one should think, unconsciously to himself."

To this may we not add that the same intimate knowledge of the Bible had rendered the memory of the Holy Land so familiar to him that he was able to describe it as accurately as if he had seen it? One other early influence of Keble's life upon his poetry must be noticed. Circumstances brought him into contact with the "Lake poets." The near relation of one of the greatest of them had been his college friend, and John Coleridge introduced him to the writings not only of his uncle, S. T. Coleridge, but also of Wordsworth, to whom he dedicated his Predictions, and whose poetry and personal character he admired enthusiastically. To the same college friend he was indebted for an introduction to Southey, whom he found to be "a noble and delightful character," and there is no doubt that the writings of these three great men, but especially Wordsworth, had very much to do with the formation of Keble's own mind as a poet. It has been remarked that in Keble's later life his poetical genius seemed to have, to a great extent, forsaken him; and that the Miscellaneous Poems do not show many traces of the spirit which animated The Christian Year and the Lyra Innocentium. Perhaps one reason for this change may be found in the increased interest which Keble took in public questions which were not conducive to the calm, introspective state of mind so necessary to the production of good poetry. The poet should live in a world of his own, not in a world perpetually wrangling about University Reform, about Courts of Final Appeal, about Marriages with Deceased Wife's Sister, and other like matters into which Keble, in his later years, threw himself—heart and soul.

It is not needful to say much about Keble's other poetical works. The Psalter was not a success, and Keble did not expect it to be. "It was undertaken," he tells us, "in the first instance with a serious apprehension, which has since grown into a full conviction, that the thing attempted is, strictly speaking, impossible." At the same time, if Keble did not achieve what he owned to be impossible, he produced a version which has the rare merit of never offending against good taste; one which in every line reflects the mind of the cultured and elegant scholar, who had been used to the work of translating from other languages into English. Hymnal compilers have hitherto strangely neglected this volume; but it is a volume worth the attention of the hymn-compiler of the future. There is scarcely a verse in it which would do discredit to any hymn-book; while there are parts which would be an acquisition to any collection. His translations from the Latin have not commended themselves to hymnal compilers. Some of his detached hymns have been more popular. But it is after all as writer of The Christian Year that Keble has established his claim to be reckoned among the immortals. It would be hardly too much to say that what the Prayer Book is in prose, The Christian Year is in poetry. They never pull upon one; they realise Keble's own exquisite simile:—

"As for some dear familiar strain
Untired we ask, and ask again;
Ever in its melodious store
Finding a spell unheard before."

And it would hardly be too bold to prophesy that The Christian Year will live as long as the Prayer Book, whose spirit Keble had so thoroughly imbibed, and whose "soothing influence" it was his especial object to illustrate and commend. [J. H. O.]

Keble's hymns, poetical pieces, and translations appeared in the following works:—

(1.) The Christian Year: Thoughts in Verse for the Sundays and Holydays Throughout the Year. Oxford: John Henry Parker, 1827. Preface dated "May 30th, 1827." The last poem, that on the "Communion," is dated March 9, 1837. The poems on the "Form of Prayer to be used at Sea," "Gum-powder Treason," "King Charles the Martyr," "The Restoration of the Royal Family," "The Accession," and "Ordination," were added to the 4th edition, 1832. The Messrs. Parker have pub. a large number of editions to date, including a fac-simile reprint of the first edition, and an edition with the addition of the dates of composition of each poem. A fac-simile of Keble's ms. as it existed in 1822 was also lithographed in 1882, by Elliot Stock, but its publication was suppressed by a legal injunction, and only a few copies came into the hands of the public. Since the expiration of the first copyright other publishers have issued the work in various forms.

(2.) Contributions to the British Magazine, which were included in Lyra Apostolica, 1836, with the signature of "X."

(3.) The Psalter or Psalms of David; in English Verse; By a Member of the University of Oxford. Adapted for the most part, to Tunes in Common Use; and dedicated by permission to the Lord Bishop of Oxford. . . . Oxford, John Henry Parker: J. O. & F. Rivington, London, MDCCCXXXIX. Preface dated "Oxford, May 29, 1839."

(4.) The Child's Christian Year: Hymns for every Sunday and Holy-day. Compiled for the use of Parochial Schools. Oxford: John Henry Parker, 1841. This was compiled by Mrs. Yonge. Keble wrote the Preface, dated "Hursley, Nov. 6, 1841," and signed R. "J. K." To it he contributed the four poems noted below.

(5.) Lyra Innocentium: Thoughts in Verse on Christian Children, their Ways and their Privileges. . . . Oxford: John Henry Parker: F. & J. Rivington, London, 1846. The Metrical Address (in place of Preface) "To all Friendly Readers," is dated "Feb. 8, 1846."

(6.) Lays of the Sanctuary, and other Poems. Cam-number of scholastic publications, of a few Scriptural plays, and of some 13 hymns. Almost all of his hymns came into church use. They take high rank among those of the 17th cent., being of genuine poetic ring, fresh, strong, full of faith under manifold and heavy trials, and deeply spiritual. Two have passed into English:—

1. Freuet euch, ihr Christen alle. Christmas. This beautiful hymn is included in 4 ed. of 191, as No. 24 in pt. iv. of A. Hammerschmidt's Musikalische Andachten, pub. at Freiberg in Saxony, 1646; and is set to a tune by Hammerschmidt introduced by Halleliujah repeated twelve times. In the Enc. L. S., 1851, No. 34. According to Koch, viii. 28, it was composed as part of a piece written by Kelmann for his scholars to perform at Christmas, 1646, and pub. as Der neugeborne Jesus, at Gellitz, 1646. Stanza iv. may refer to the truce of 1643 between Saxony and Sweden. Tr. as:—

O rejoice, ye Christians, loudly. A good and full tr. by Miss Winkworth, as No. 33 in her C. B. for England, 1863, where it is set to the original melody.

ii. Keinen Jesum laas ich nicht; Weil er sich für mich gegeben. Law to Christ. 1st appeared in A. Hammerschmidt's Part. Bus- und Danklieder, Zittau and Leipzig, 1638 (engraved title, 1639), pt. III, No. 4, in 6 st. of 6 l. It is an acrostic on the dying words uttered on Oct. 4, 1636, by the Elector Johann Georg I. of Saxony: Meinen (I.), Jesum (H.), laas (H.) ich (iv.) nicht (v.); st. vi. giving in the initial letters of lines 1-6 (J. G. I. C. Z. S.) the name, viz. Johann Georg (Churfürst) zu Sachsen, and then in line 6 the motto in full. Founded on the words of Jacob in Gen. xxxii. 26, it has comforted and strengthened many in life and at the hour of death; and has served as the model of many later hymns. Included as No. 137 in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1948. Tr. as:—

I will leave my Jesus never! A good tr., omitting st. iii., included as No. 448 in the Pennsylvania Luth. Ch. Bk., 1869, marked as Unknown tr., 1864.

Other trs. are:—(1) "Never will I part with Christ," by J. C. Jacob, 1722, p. 89 (1732, p. 132), and thence in the Moravian H. Bk., 1734 (1896 as pt. of No. 452 altered, and beginning, "Jesus will I never leave"). (2) "I will not let Jesus go," by J. S. Mallivram in the Tonic Solfa Reporter, Dec. 1900. (3) "Jesus will I never forsake," by E. Mazze, 1867, p. 717. (4) "My Redeemer quit I not," by N. L. Frothingham, 1830, p. 188. [J. M.]

Keinen hat Gott verlassen. [Trust in God.] Wackernagel, v. p. 275, gives this hymn from the Geistliche Lieder, Erfurt, 1611, and the Christliches Gesangbüchlein, Hamburg, 1612, in 8 st. of 8 l. Also in Mitsell, 1855, No. 590, and the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 847. In the 1612 it is entitled "A hymn on the name of the serene right honourable princess and lady, Lady Katharina, by birth and marriage Margravine and Electress of Brandenburg." As she d. Sept. 30, 1602, the hymn probably dates from the 16th cent. The initials of the 8 st. form the name Katharina. The common assumption to Andreas Kessler, who was only b. in 1595, is baseless. Tr. as:—

(1) "Haste, Lord, within my worthless heart." A tr. of st. vi. by C. Kinchen, as No. 33 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1742. In 12th and later eds. (1896, No. 444, ascribed without ground to Catharine Grossmann) it begins "O Lord, accept my worthless heart." (2) "Amen, this the conclusion," a tr. of st. viii., as No. 603, in the Moravian H. Bk., 1801 (1868, No. 719). [J. M.]

Keith, George. [How firm a foundation.]

Kelly, John, was b. at Newcastle-on-Tyne, educated at Glasgow University, studied theology at Bonn, New College, Edinburgh, and the Theological College of the English Presbyterian Church (to which body he belongs) in London. He has ministered to congregations at Hebburn-on-Tyne and Streatham, and is now (1887) Tract Editor of the Religious Tract Society. His translations of Paul Gerhardt's Spiritual Songs were pub. in 1867. Every piece is given in full, and rendered in the metre of the originals. His Hymns of the Present Century from the German were pub. in 1886 by the R. T. S. In these trs. the metres of the originals have not always been followed, whilst some of the hymns have been abridged and others condensed. His translations lack poetic finish, but are faithful to the originals. [W. G. H.]

Kelly, Thomas, B.A., s. of Thomas Kelly, a Judge of the Irish Court of Common Pleas, was b. in Dublin, July 13, 1769, and educated at Trinity College, Dublin. He was designed for the Bar, and entered the Temple, London, with that intention, but having undergone a very marked spiritual change he took Holy Orders in 1792. His earnest evangelical preaching in Dublin led Archbishop Fowler to inhibit him and his companion preacher, Rowland Hill, from preaching in the city. For some time he preached in two unconsecrated buildings in Dublin, Plunket Street, and the Bethesda, and then, having seceded from the Established Church, he erected places of worship at Athy, Portarlington, Wexford, &c., in which he conducted divine worship and preached. He d. May 14, 1854. Miller, in his Singers & Songs of the Church, 1869, p. 338 (from which some of the foregoing details are taken), says:—

"Mr. Kelly was a man of great and varied learning, skilled in the Oriental tongues, and an excellent Bible critic. He was possessed also of musical talent, and composed and published a work that was received with favour, consisting of music adapted to every form of metre in his hymn-book. Naturally of an amiable disposition and thorough in his Christian piety, Mr. Kelly became the friend of good men, and the advocate of every worthy, benevolent, and religious cause. He was admired alike for his zeal and his humility, and his liberality found ample scope in Ireland, especially during the year of famine."

Kelly's hymns, 765 in all, were composed and published over a period of 51 years, as follows:—

(1) A Collection of Psalms and Hymns extracted from Various Authors, by Thomas Kelly, A.B., Dublin, 1802. This work contains 247 hymns by various authors, and an Appendix of 33 original hymns by Kelly.

(2) Hymns on Various Passages of Scripture, Dublin, 1804. Of this work several editions were published: 1st, 1804; 2nd, 1806; 3rd, 1809; 4th, 1812. This last edition was published in two divisions, one as Hymns on Various Passages of Scripture, and the second as Hymns adapted for Social Worship. In 1815 Kelly issued Hymns by Thomas Kelly, not before Published. The 5th ed., 1820, included the two divisions of 1812, and the new hymns of 1815, as one work. To the later editions of 1828, 1836, 1840, 1846, and 1853, new hymns were added, until the last published by M. Moore, of Dublin, 1853, contained the total of 745.

As a hymn-writer Kelly was most successful. As a rule his strength appears in hymns of Praise and in metres not generally adopted by the older hymn-writers. His "Come, see the place where Jesus lay" (from "He's gone, see where His body lay"), "From Egypt lately come"; "Look, ye saints, the night is glorious"; "On the mountain's top appearing"; "The Head that once was crowned with thorns"; "Through the day Thy love has spared us"; and "We sing the praise of Him Who died," rank with the first hymns in the English language. Several of his hymns of great merit still remain unknown through so many modern editors being apparently adverse to original investigation. In Madeley, in Shropshire." They were reprinted, with a Preface, by D. Sedgwick, in 1881. Although most of these hymns are given in the older collections, only a few remain in modern hymn-books, and, including centos, are:—

[illegible]

1. Bear me on Thy rapid wing. Praise to Jesus in Heaven.
2. Burst, ye emerald gates, and bring. Praise to Jesus in Heaven.
3. Gentle Spirit, wait me over. Heaven desired.
4. Hail, Thou eternal Logos, hail. Adoration of Jesus.
5. Hark, 'tis the trump of God. The Last Day.
6. O my Redeemer, come. The Last Day.

Of these Nos. 1 and 2 are from the same hymn, and Nos. 5 and 6 also from another. The original texts of Nos. 3, 4, and 6 are in Lyra Brit., 1867, pp. 349-52. [J. J.]

Kempff, Johann. [Kämpf, J.]

Kempis, Thomas à. [Thomas of Kempen.]

Kemphorne, John, n.d., s. of Admiral Kemphorne, was b. at Plymouth, June 24, 1775, and educated at St. John's, Cambridge (B.A. 1796, n.d. 1807), of which he subsequently became a Fellow. On taking Holy Orders, he became Vicar of Northleach, Gloucestershire, in 1816; Vicar of Wedmore, Somersetshire, 1827, and the same year Rector of St. Michael's and Chaplain of St. Mary de Grace, Gloucester. He was also a Prebendary in Lichfield Cathedral from 1826, and sometime Examining Chaplain to the Bishop of that diocese. He d. at Gloucester, Nov. 6, 1838. His hymnological work is:—

Select Portions of Psalms from Various Translations, and Hymns from Various Authors. The whole Arranged according to the yearly Seasons of the Church of England, with attempts at corrections and improvements. By the Rev. John Kemphorne, B.D. . . . London. Hatchard. 1810.

In this collection there are a few hymns of merit, as "Forgive, O Lord, our wanderings past," "Great God, to Thee our songs we raise," and "Praise the Lord, ye heavens adore Him," which are usually ascribed, on D. Sedgwick's authority, to J. Kemphorne. These hymns, however, are not by Kemphorne, but were taken by him for his collection from the Foundling Hospital Ps. & Hys., 1796 and 1801-9; and there is no evidence whatever that he had anything to do with that hymn-book. As that book is frequently quoted by hymnologists, we append the title-page of the 1801 ed., which is a reprint of that of 1797:—

Psalms, Hymns, and Anthems; sung in the Chapel of the Hospital for the Maintenance and Education of Reposed and Deserted Young Children. London. Printed in the Year M.DCCXCI. At the end of some copies of this edition there is pasted in a four-paged sheet of hymns which include, with others, "Praise the Lord, ye heavens adore Him" (q.v.).

In the 1st ed. of his own Select Portions of Psalms, &c., 1810, Kemphorne did not in any way indicate his own hymns, but in the 2nd ed. of 1813; which is a reprint of the 1st ed. with an Appendix of 11 hymns) he says in his Preface:—

"For Hymn 140 and Hymn, p. 267. Appendix, for almost all of Ps. 43, p. 197; Ps. 51, p. 57 and 61; Ps. 54, p. 193; Ps. 44, p. 134; Ps. 115, p. 49; Hymn 127; and for a considerable part of Ps. 22, p. 64; Ps. 123, p. 103; Ps. 123, p. 141; Ps. 138, p. 38; Hymns 20, 43, 54, 61, 97, 101, 118, and several others, the Editor is responsible, and acknowledges his obligations to some kind friends."

Of these hymns and psalm versions, which Kemphorne claims as his own, only one or two are in C. U. [J. J.]

Ken, Thomas, n.d. The bare details of Bp. Ken's life, when summarised, produce these results:—Born at Berkhamstead, July, 1637; Scholar of Winchester, 1651; Fellow of New College, Oxford, 1657; B.A., 1661; Rector of Little Easton, 1663; Fellow of Winchester, 1666; Rector of Brighton, 1667; Rector of Woodhay and Prebendary of Winchester, 1669; Chaplain to the Princess Mary at the Hague, 1679; returns to Winchester, 1680; Bp. of Bath and Wells, 1685; imprisoned in the Tower, 1688; deprived, 1691; died at Longleat, March 19, 1749.

The parents of Ken both died during his childhood, and he grew up under the guardianship of Isaac Walton, who had married Ken's elder sister, Ann. The dominant Presbyterianism of Winchester and Oxford did not shake the firm attachment to the English Church, which such a home had instilled. His life until the renewal of his connection with Winchester, through his fellowship, his chaplaincy to Morley (Walton's staunch friend, then bishop of Winchester), and his prebend in the Cathedral, calls for no special remark here. But this second association with Winchester, there seems little doubt, originated his three well-known hymns. In 1674 he published A Manual of Prayers for the Use of the Scholars of Winchester College, and reference is made in this book to three hymns, for "Morning," "Midnight," and "Evening," the scholars being recommended to use them. It can scarcely be questioned that the Morning, Evening, and Midnight hymns, pub. in the 1695 edition of The Manual, are the ones referred to. He used to sing these hymns to the viol or spinet, but the tunes he used are unknown. He left Winchester for a short time to be chaplain to the Princess Mary at the Hague, but was dismissed for his faithful remonstrance against a case of immorality at the Court, and returned to Winchester. A similar act of faithfulness at Winchester singularly enough won him his bishopric. He stoutly refused Nell Gwynne the use of his house, when Charles II. came to Winchester, and the easy king, either from humour or respect for his honesty, gave him not long afterwards the bishopric of Bath and Wells. Among the many acts of piety and munificence that characterised his tenure of the see, his ministration to the prisoners and sufferers after the battle of Sedgemoor and the Bloody Assize are conspicuous. He interceded for them with the king, and retrenched his own state to assist them. He attended Monmouth on the scaffold. James II. pronounced him the most eloquent preacher among the Protestants of his time; the judgment of Charles II. appears from his pithy saying that he would go and hear Ken "tell him of his faults." Among the faithful words of the bishops at Charles's death-bed, none were so rank with the hæc erant as his. He was an English language. Several of his hymns of great merit still remain unknown, so many modern editors being adverse to original investigation. In morow, &c."—was claimed in a Roman Catholic pamphlet as a passage which "taught the scholars of Winchester to invoke the whole Court of Heaven." This passage Ken altered "to prevent all future misinterpretations," and prefixed an Advertisement to the 1687 ed. of the Manual explaining why he had done so. In looking through the texts of the three hymns for 1695, and 1709, and especially at the doxologies, and at st. x. and xi. in the Evening Hymn, "You my Blest Guardian, whilst I sleep," &c. (1695); and "O may my Guardian while I sleep," &c. (1709), do we not see a good and sufficient reason to account for the revision of the hymns?

4. With regard to the text given in the Conference, Lord Selborne observes that it is not improbable that alterations and various readings, originating with Ken himself, might have obtained private circulation among his friends, long before he had made up his own mind to give them to the public; a suggestion which may possibly help to explain the fact, that a writer, patronised by Dodwell, was misled into believing (for such a writer ought not lightly to be accused of a wilful fraud) that the text, pub. in the Conference in Ken's name was really from his hand. That Ken occasionally altered passages in his writings when for any reason he considered it necessary, is certain; and there can be little doubt that the text of the three Winchester hymns was more or less unsettled before 1695. At any rate, before their first appearance in that year in the Manual the Evening hymn had found its way into print. It was pub. in "Harmonia Sacra; or Divine Hymns and Dialogues . . . Composed by the Best Masters . . . The Words by several Learned and Pious Persons. The Second Book." London, Henry Playford, 1693.

The first volume of this work appeared in 1688, and was dedicated to Ken. It is not improbable therefore that Playford, when collecting materials for his second volume, obtained the words of the Evening Hymn directly from the author. The text is here subjoined:—

"AN EVENING HYMN.

"The words by Bishop Ken.

"Set by Mr. Jeremiah Clarke.

"All praise to Thee my God this night
For all the blessings of the light;
Keep me, oh keep me, King of kings,
Under Thy own Almighty Wings.

"Pardon me, Lord, for Thy dear Son,
The ill that I this day have done,
That with the world, myself and Thee,
I, ere I sleep, at peace may be.

"Teach me to live, that I may dread
The Grave as little as my bed;
Teach me to die, so that I may Triumphing rise at the last day.

"Oh may my Soul on Thee repose,
And with sweet sleep mine eyelids close,
Sleep that may me more vigils make,
To praise my God when I awake.

"When in the night I sleepless lie,
My soul with heav'nly thoughts supply;
Let no ill dream disturb my rest,
No power of darkness me molest.

"My dear Lord, how am I griev'd
To lye so long of Thee bereav'd!
Dull sleep of woe me to deprive,
I am but half my days alive.

"But though sleep o'er my weakness reigns,
Let it not hold me long in chains,
But now and then let loose my heart,
Till it an Hallelujah dart;

"The faster sleep the sense does bind,
The more unfetter'd is the mind;
Oh may my soul from matter free
The unvail'd goodness waking see.

"Oh: when shall I in endless day,
For ever chase dark sleep away,
And endless praise with th' heavenly choir,
Incessant sing and never tire;

"You my best Guardians, whilst I sleep,
Close to my bed your vigils keep,
And in my stead all the night long
Sing to my God a grateful song.

"Praise God from whom all blessings flow,
Praise Him all creatures here below;
Praise Him above, the angelick host,
Praise Father, Son, and Holy Ghost."

In comparing this text with that of 1693, the following differences are found:—

1693.	1695.
St. i., l. 1, All praise	Glorify.
St. iii., l. 3, so that	that so.
St. iv., l. 4, praise	serve.
St. vi., ll. 1 and 2	re-written.
" ll. 3 and 4	transposed as 1 and 2.
St. vii., l. 1, weakness	frailty.
" l. 3, But now	And now.
St. viii., l. 4, The	Thy.
St. x., l. 1, best Guardians	best Guardian.

Stanza x. was also expanded in 1695 into two by the addition of new 3rd and 4th lines to st. x., and the construction of st. xi. out of two new lines followed by lines 3 and 4 of 1693.

The hymn was set by Clarke as a Cantata for a solo voice, with the Doxology as a chorus in four parts.

5. We now submit the texts of the Morning, Evening, and Midnight hymns, as they appear in the 1695 and the 1709 editions of the Manual respectively:—

Awake my soul and with the sun. [Morning.]

The texts of 1695 and 1709 are subjoined in parallel columns for the purpose of comparison, the variations of 1709 being printed in italics.

"A Morning Hymn.	"A Morning Hymn.
"Awake my Soul, and with the Sun, Thy daily stage of Duty run; Shake off dull Sloth, and early rise, To pay Thy morning Sa- crifice.	"Awake, my Soul, and with the Sun, Thy daily Stage of duty run, Shake off dull Sloth, and joyful rise, To pay thy Morning Sa- crifice.
"Redeem thy mis-spent time that's past, Live this day, as if 'twere thy last; T' improve thy Talent take due care, 'Gainst the great Day thy self prepare.	"Thy precious time mis- pent, redeem, Each precious day thy last Esteem, Improve thy Talent with due Care, For the Great Day thy self prepare.
"As all thy Converse be sincere, Thy Conscience as the Noon-day clear; Think how All-seeing God thy ways, And all thy secret Thoughts survey.	"In conversation be sin- cere, Keep Conscience as the Noon-tide clear, Think how All-seeing God thy ways, And all thy Secret Thoughts survey.
"Influence'd by the Light divine, Let thy own Light in good Works shine: Reflect all Heaven's pro- pitious ways, In ardent love and cheer- ful praise.	"By influence of the Light Divine, Let thy own Light to others shine, Reflect all Heaven's pro- pitious Rays, In ardent Love, and cheer- ful Praise.
"Wake, and lift up thy self, my Heart, And with the Angels bear thy part, Who all night long un- wearied sing, Glory to the Eternal King.	"Wake, and lift up thy self my Heart, And with the Angels bear thy part, Who all night long un- wearied sing, High Praise to the Eter- nal King.

- "But though sleep o'er my frailty reigns,
Let it not hold me long in chains;
And now and then let loose my heart,
Till it an Hallelujah dart.
- "The faster sleep the sense does bind,
The more unfetter'd is the mind;
O may my Soul from matter free,
Thy unvail'd Goodness waking me!
- "O when shall I in endless day,
For ever chase dark sleep away,
And endless praise with th' Heavenly Choir,
Incessant sing, and never tire?
- "You my Best Guardian, whilst I sleep,
Close to my Bed your Vigils keep,
Divine Love into me instill,
Stop all the avenues of Ill.
- "Thought to thought with my Soul converse,
Celestial joys to me rehearse,
And in my stead all the night long,
Sing to my God a grateful Song.
- "Praise God from whom all blessings flow,
Praise him all Creatures here below,
Praise him above y' Angelic Host,
Praise Father, Son, and Holy Ghost."
- "But tho' Sleep o'er my frailty reigns,
Let it not hold me long in Chains;
And now and then let loose my heart,
Till it an Hallelujah dart.
- "The faster Sleep the senses bind,
The more unfetter'd are our Minds,
O may my Soul from matter free,
Thy loveliness unclouded see!
- "O when shall I in endless Day,
For ever chase dark sleep away,
And Hymns with the Supernat Choir,
Incessant Sing, and never tire?
- "O may my Guardian whilst I sleep,
Close to my Bed his Vigils keep,
His Love Angelical instill,
Stop all the Avenues of Ill.
- "May he Celestial joys rehearse,
And thought to thought with me converse,
Or in my stead all the night long,
Sing to my God a Grateful Song.
- "Praise God from whom all blessings flow,
Praise him all Creatures here below,
Praise him above ye Heavenly Host,
Praise Father, Son, and Holy Ghost."

8. A reference to the text given in Harmonia Sacra shows that the change from "Glory" to "All praise" in l. 1. is only a restoration of the original reading; and without being aware of this fact, Lord Selborne points out that the expression "All praise" is remarkably consistent with Ken's frequent use of it in other writings. The same alteration was made in 1709 in the Morning Hymn, st. 9, and in the Midnight Hymn, st. 7; while at the same time "Glory" in the Morning Hymn, st. v. l. 4, is changed to "High Praise."

As in the case of "Awake my soul," this hymn has been divided, subdivided, and rearranged in a great many ways during the last 150 years. In one form or another it will be found in most hymnals pub. during that period.

My God, now I from Sleep awake. [Midnight.]
The texts of 1695 and 1709 are subjoined:—

- "A Midnight Hymn.
"Lord, now my Sleep does me forsake,
The sole possession of me take,
Let no vain fancy me intrude,
No one impure desire intrude.

"Blest Angels! while we silent lye,
You Hallelujahs sing on high, 1709.

- "A Midnight Hymn.
"My God now I from sleep awake,
The sole Possession of me take,
From Midnight Terrors me secure,
And guard my Heart from Thoughts impure.

"Bless'd Angels! while we silent lye,
You Hallelujahs Sing on high,

- You, ever wakeful near the Throne,
Prostrate, adore the Three in One.
- "I now awake do with you joys,
To praise our God in Hymns divine;
With you in Heav'n I hope to dwell,
And bid the night and world farewell!
- "My Soul when I shake off this Dust,
Lord, in thy Arms I will entrust;
O make me thy peculiar care,
Some heav'nly Mansion me prepare.
- "Give me a place at thy Saints' Feet,
Or some fall'n Angel's vacant seat;
I'll strive to sing as loud as they,
Who sit above in brighter day.
- "O may I always ready stand,
With my Lamp burning in my hand;
May I in sight of Heav'n rejoice,
When e'er I hear the Bridegroom's voice.
- "Glory to Thee in light array'd,
Who light thy dwelling place hast made,
As immense Ocean of bright beams,
From thy All-glorious God-head streams.
- "The Sun, in its Meridian bright,
Is very darkness in thy sight;
My Soul, O lighten, and enflame,
With Thought and Love of thy great Name.
- "Blest Jesu, Thou on Heav'n intent,
Whole nights hast in Devotion spent,
But I, frail Creature, soon am tir'd,
And all my Zeal is soon expir'd.
- "My Soul, how canst Thou weary grow,
Of Antedating Heav'n below,
In sacred Hymns, and Divine Love,
Which will eternal be above?
- "Shine on me, Lord, new life impart,
Fresh ardours kindle in my heart;
One ray of thy All-quickning Light,
Dispel the sloth and clouds of night.
- "Lord, lest the tempter me surprise,
Watch over thine own Sacrifice;
All loose, all idle thoughts cast out,
And make my very dreams devout.
- "Praise God from whom all blessings flow,
Praise him all Creatures here below;
- You joyful Hymn the ever Bless'd,
Before the Throne and never rest.
- "I with your Choir Celestial joys,
In offering up a Hymn Divine
With you in Heaven I hope to dwell,
And bid the Night and World farewell!
- "My Soul, when I shake off this Dust,
Lord, in thy Arms I will intrust.
O make me Thy peculiar Care,
Some Mansion for my Soul prepare.
- "Give me a place at thy Saints' Feet,
Or some fallen Angel's vacant seat;
I'll strive to sing as loud as they,
Who sit above in brighter Day.
- "O may I always ready stand,
With my Lamp burning in my hand;
May I in sight of Heav'n rejoice,
When e'er I hear the Bridegroom's Voice.
- "All Praises to thee in light array'd,
Who light thy dwelling place hast made.
A boundless Ocean of bright beams,
From thy All-glorious God-head streams.
- "The Sun in its Meridian bright,
Is very darkness in Thy sight;
My Soul, O lighten and enflame,
With Thought and Love of thy Great Name.
- "Bless'd Jesu, Thou on Heav'n intent,
Whole Nights hast in Devotion spent,
But I, frail Creature, soon am tir'd,
And all my Zeal is soon expir'd.
- "My Soul how canst thou weary grow,
Of antedating Bliss below;
In sacred Hymns, and Heavenly Love,
Which will Eternal be above.
- "Shine on me, Lord, new life impart,
Fresh Ardours kindle in my Heart;
One Ray of thy All-quickning Light,
Dispel the sloth and clouds of Night.
- "Lord, lest the Tempter me surprise,
Watch over thine own Sacrifice;
All loose, all idle thoughts cast out,
And make my very dreams devout.
- "Praise God, from whom all Blessings flow,
Praise him all Creatures here below;

Kennedy, Benjamin Hall, D.D., a. of the Rev. Hann Kennedy, sometime Incumbent of St. Paul's, Birmingham, and editor of A Church of England Psalm-Book, &c., 1821 (12th ed. 1848), was b. at Summer Hill, near Birmingham, Nov. 6, 1804, and educated at King Edward's School, Birmingham; Shrewsbury School; and St. John's College, Cambridge. He graduated B.A. in 1827 (First Class Classical Tripos and First Chancellor's Medallist). He was Fellow of his College 1828-36; Head Master of Shrewsbury School, 1836-66; and Regius Professor of Greek in the University of Cambridge and Canon of Ely, 1867. Dr. Kennedy took Holy Orders in 1829, and was for some time Prebendary in Lichfield Cathedral and Rector of West Felton, Salop. He was elected Hon. Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge, in 1880. Besides his Public School Latin Grammar, Palaestra Latina, Palaestra Stili Latini, &c., his editions of some of the Classics, and University Sermons, Dr. Kennedy pub. the following:—

(1) The Psalter, or the Psalms of David, in English Verse. By a Member of the University of Cambridge, 1860; (2) Hymnologia Christiana, or Psalms & Hymns Selected and Arranged in the Order of the Christian Seasons (quoted in this Dictionary as Kennedy), 1863.

i. From these two works many psalms and hymns have passed into other collections. The following versions of the Psalms first appeared in The Psalter, 1860, and again in the Hymn. Christ., 1863. In many instances they have undergone considerable alteration in the latter work, and those of great length are broken into parts:—

1. All ye people, come and clap, &c. Ps. xlvii.
2. Arise, O Lord, with healing rod. Ps. x.
3. As pants the hind for cooling streams. Ps. xlii.
4. As Thy mercy lasts for ever. Ps. cix.
5. Be merciful to me, O God. Ps. lvi.
6. Be Thou my Judge, and I will strive. Ps. mcd.

13. Full of my chafing thoughts, &c. Ps. lxxviii.
14. God, avert the deadly blow. Ps. lix.
15. God, in Judah's homes is known. Ps. lxxv.
16. God of my righteousness. Ps. lx.
17. Hear Thou my prayer, O Lord. Ps. cxliii.
18. Help us, O Lord, the good decay. Ps. xiv.
19. How blest are they who flee, &c. Ps. cxi.
20. How blest the man, who fears to stray. Ps. l.
21. How blest the man whose crosses, &c. Ps. xxxii.
22. How good it is to praise the Lord. Ps. xcii.
23. How long art silent, Lord? how long. Ps. xlv.
24. How long forgotten, Lord, by Thee. Ps. xli.
25. How long wilt Thou conceal Thy face. Ps. lxxviii.
26. I lift mine eyes unto the hills. Ps. cxi.
27. I love the Lord, for He is high. Ps. cxcv.
28. I muse upon Thine ancient praise. Ps. lxxvii.
29. I praise Thee, Lord, who o'er my foes. Ps. xxx.
30. I trod the path of life, my strength. Ps. cii.
31. In trouble to the Lord I prayed. Ps. cxi.
32. Jehovah reigns, arrayed in light. Ps. xciii.
33. Judge me, O God; maintain my cause. Ps. xliii.
34. Lord, hear my prayer, and let my cry. Ps. cii.
35. Lord, I am not lofty-minded. Ps. cxxxi.
36. Lord, I lift my soul to Thee. Ps. lxx.
37. Lord, my Rock, I cry to Thee. Ps. xlviii.
38. Lord, save me from the foe's wrath. Ps. cxl.
39. Lord, Thou wilt guard with faithful love. Ps. xxi.
40. Lord, Thy love and truth I praise. Ps. cx.

41. My God, my God, to Thee I say, Ah! why hast Thou, &c. Ps. xxi.
  42. My heart is fain, O God, my heart. Ps. cxli.

date only from 1733 (the earlier having probably perished in the great fire there in 1731), that no will can be found in the district Probate Court, and that no monument or tablet is now to be found at Childs Okeford.

By a communication to me from the Process Registrar of Bristol, it appears that in a book professing to contain a list of Presentations deposited in the Consistory Court, Kethe is said to have been presented in 1545 by Henry Capel, the Patron of Childs Okeford Inferior. In the 3rd ed. of Hutchins, vol. iii. pp. 355-6, William Watkinson is said to have been presented to this moiety by Arthur Capel in 1593.

Twenty-five Psalm versions by Kethe are included in the Anglo-Genevan Psalter of 1561, viz. Ps. 27, 36, 47, 54, 56, 62, 70, 85, 86, 90, 91, 94, 100, 101, 104, 107, 111, 112, 113, 122, 125, 126, 124, 134, 142,—the whole of which were adopted in the Scottish Psalter of 1564-65. Only nine, viz. Ps. 104, 107, 111, 112, 113, 122, 125, 126, 134, were included in the English Psalter of 1562; Ps. 100 being however added in 1565 (see first lines of the rest under Scottish Hymnody, ii. § 2). Being mostly in peculiar metres, only one, Ps. 100, was transferred to the Scottish Psalter of 1650. The version of Ps. 104, "My soul, praise the Lord," is found, in a greatly altered form, in some modern hymnals.

Warton calls him "a Scotch divine, no unready rhymester," says he had seen a moralisation of some of Ovid by him, and also mentions verses by him prefixed to a pamphlet by Christopher Goodman, printed at Geneva in 1558; a version of Ps. 92 added to Knox's Appellation to the Scottish Bishops, also printed at Geneva in 1558; and an anti-papal ballad, "Tye the mare Toon-boy." A sermon he preached before the Bishops at Blandford on Jan. 17, 1571, was printed by John Daye in 1571 (preface dated Childs Okeford, Jan. 29, 1571), and dedicated to Ambrose Earl of Warwick. See Starnhold & Hopkins, §§ 9-11. [J. M.]

Key, Francis Scott, was b. in Frederick County, Maryland, 1779, and educated at St. John's College, Annapolis. He practised as a lawyer in Washington, District of Columbia, and was the United States District Attorney there till his death on Jan. 11, 1843. His poetical pieces, which were printed in various works, were collected and pub. in N. Y. as Poems in 1857. His hymns in C. U. include:—

1. Before the Lord we bow. National Thanksgiving. This Thanksgiving hymn for the 4th July was pub. in 1832, and was probably written for the celebration of that year. It is in use in G. Britain and America.

2. If life's pleasures charm [cheer] thee. The heart for God only. Appeared in The Christian Lyre, 1830.

3. Faith is the Christian's evidence. Faith.

4. Lord, with glowing heart I'll praise Thee. Praise for Pardon and Peace. Pub. in Dr. Mühlberg's Church Poetry, 1823, the Prayer Bk. Coll., 1826, &c.; and altered as "Lord, with fervor I would praise Thee," in the Unitarian Hymn for the Church of Christ, Boston, 1853. In the Oberlin, Ohio, Manual of Praise, 1890, it begins with st. ii., "Praise, my soul, the God that sought thee."

Of these hymns Nos. 1, 2, and 4 are in the Lyra Sac. Americana, 1868, together with the following:—

5. Behold the grant the King of kings. All things in Christ.

6. My God, my Father, may I dare. God, the Father.

7. When troubles, wave on wave, assail'd. Efficacy of Prayer.

F. S. Key was also the author of "The Star Spangled Banner" (1814). For original text of his pieces see the Poems, 1857. [F. M. B.]

Keymann, Christian. [Kelmans, C.]

Kiel, Tobias, was b. Oct. 29, 1584, at Ballstädt near Gotha. After completing his theological studies at Jena, he became in 1606 Schoolmaster at Ballstädt, and in 1613 Pastor at Eschenbergen. He was then, in 1627, appointed Pastor at Ballstädt, and d. there six days after his settlement. (Brückner's Kirchen und Schulstadt des Herzogthums Gotha, 1753, ii., pt. xii. p. 13; iii., pt. viii. p. 12, &c.) In 1721 some 60 of his hymns were extant in ms. The only one tr. into English is

Herr Gott, aus schloesse dem Himmel auf. For the Dying. In J. M. Altenburg's Kirchen- und Hausgesänge, Erfurt, 1626, No. 6, in 3 st., entitled "On the Festival of the Purification of Mary;" and in the Var. L. B., 1851, No. 118. Tr. as "Lord God, now open wide Thy heaven," by Miss Winkworth, 1858, p. 215.

Killinghall, John. The date of his birth is unknown. He was admitted pastor of a congregation at Beccles, Suffolk, Oct. 13, 1697. Through some indiscretion of conduct he retired from the ministry for a time. Subsequently, about 1702, he became the pastor of the Congregational Church, Southwark, then meeting in Deadman's Place (the Church of the Pilgrim Fathers). He d. Jan. 1740. His memoir is included in the Brief Records of the Independent Church at Beccles, 1838, by S. W. Rix. (Miller's Singers & Songs, 1869, p. 156.) His hymn:—

In all my troubles, sharp and long (Joy in Affliction) appeared in the Life of Faith exemplified and recommended in a Letter found in the Study of the Rev. Joseph Belcher, late of Dedham, in New England, since his increase. An Answer to this question, "How to live in this World so as to live in Heaven?" To which is added a few Verses by the late Rev. Killinghall, upon reading of it. London, 1741. It is in 3 st. of 4 l., and is found in modern hymn-books in the following forms:—(1) "In all my troubles, sharp and strong," in Reed's H. Bk., 1842, and others; (2) "In every trouble, sharp and strong," in several collections, including the Enlarged London H. Bk., 1873, &c.; and (3) "In every trying hour," in several American books, as Songs for the Sanctuary, N. Y., 1868, &c. In several of the older collections this hymn is attributed to "Coombes"—why we know not. [J. J.]

Kimball, Harriet McEwan, a native and resident of Portsmouth, Newhaven, is the author of Hymns, Boston, 1866; Swallow's Flight of Song, 1874, &c. Her hymns include:—

1. At times on Tabor's height. Faith and Joy.

2. Dear Lord, to Thee alone. Lent.

3. It is an easy thing to say. Humble Service.

4. We have no tears Thou wilt not dry. Affliction. Appeared in the Poets of Portsmouth, 1864, and the Unitarian Hymn of the Spirit, 1864, and others. In Miss Kimball's Hymns, 1866, this hymn begins with st. iii. of "Jesus the Ladder of my faith."

Several of Miss Kimball's poems were included in Baynes's Illustrated Book of Sacred Poetry, N. D. [F. M. B.]

Kindred in Christ, for His dear sake. J. Newton. [Welcome to Christian Friends.] Pub. in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. ii., No. 70, in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed, "A Welcome to Christian Friends." It is in C. U. in its original form, and also as: (1) "Kindred in Christ, to us 'tis given," adapted for Union and Home Missionary Meetings; and (2) "May He by Whose kind care we meet," also suitable for similar gatherings. [J. J.]

King, Catherine. [Pennestather, C.]

King, Elisabeth. [Wills, Elisabeth.]

Klopstock ranks among the classic poets of Germany. In his Leben (collected at Hamburg, 1771; enlarged, Leipzig, 1798; finally enlarged, Leipzig, 1806) he is seen at his best; his earlier compositions of this class being the finest modern examples for perfection of form, lyric grace, majesty, and purity of rhythm. His most famous work is his Messias, which on its first appearance created an enthusiasm such as had not been awakened by any German work for centuries. It was suggested by Milton's Paradise Lost, but Milton's calm majesty, firmness of touch, and unity of action were all foreign to Klopstock's nature—his genius was lyric rather than epic. With all its defects of style and construction, it is still a noble work, and could only have been written by a true poet and a sincere Christian; though to us its interest perhaps consists as much in its historical importance and results as in its intrinsic merits. (Books 1-3 written in prose at Jena, and then in hexameter verse at Leipzig, and 1st pub. in the Neue Beytrage, Bremen, 1748. Books 1-3 revised, and 4, 5 added at Halle, 1751; 6-10 added in the Copenhagen ed., 1755; 11-15, Copenhagen, 1764; 16-20, Halle, 1773. Finally revised ed. in 4 vols., Leipzig, 1800.)

In his hymns Klopstock is not seen at his best. He seems to have had little appreciation of the requirements which the writer of hymns for use in public worship has to meet. His hymns are emotional and subjective, little suited to congregational tunes, and not sufficiently simple in style. In his first collection (1) Geistliche Lieder, Copenhagen, 1758, he included a number of indifferent recasts of earlier German hymns; his second collection (2) Geistliche Lieder, Copenhagen, 1769, consisted entirely of original compositions. The only one of his hymns which is still much used in Germany is "Aufersteh, ja aufersteh, wirst du" (q.v.). The others which have passed into English C. U. are:—

i. Deine heilige Geburt. Supplication. In his Geistliche Lieder, 1758, p. 44, in 14 l., repeated in Knapp's Fr. L. S., 1837, No. 446. Tr. as "Naviour! by Thy holy birth," by Dr. W. L. Alexander, in 2 st. of 8 l. It was written about 1830, but 1st pub. in the 2nd ed., 1858, of his Rel. of Hys., No. 339, entitled "Christ's aid invoked."

ii. Herr, du wollst uns vorbereiten. Holy Communion. In his Geistliche Lieder, 1758, p. 138, arranged for antiphonal singing by choir and congregation. The form tr. into English is "Herr, du wollst uns vorbereiten," being the first two stanzas for choir altered as No. 246 in the Württemberg G. B., 1842, in 2 st. of 12 l. Tr. as "Grant us, Lord, due preparation," by L. Heyl, in the Ohio Luth. Hymnal, 1840. Another tr. in, "O God, do Thou Thy folk prepare," by Dr. G. Walker, 1860, p. 64.

iii. Nicht nur's treuen Überwinden. Christian Warfare. 1st pub. in the G. B. für St. Petri Kopenhagen, 1760, No. 639; repeated in his Geistliche Lieder, 1769, p. 23, in 6 st. of 14 l., entitled "The Victory of the Faithful." In the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863. Tr. as "Labour ever, late and early," a full but rather free tr. by Dr. Kennedy, in his Hymns Christ., 1863.

iv. Zeige dich uns ohne Hülle. Sunday. In his Geistliche Lieder, 1769, p. 88, in 6 st. of 14 l., entitled "Preparation for Divine Service." Included in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863. It is the only hymn by Klopstock much used in English. Tr. as "Lord, remove the veil away," a good and full tr. by Miss Swethwick, in H. L. L., 3rd Ser., p. 47 (1884, p. 148). Included in full in Kennedy, 1863; Eng. Presb. Ps. & Hys., 1867; Purple H. Bk., 1867; Dale's Eng. H. Bk., 1875, and others. It is abridged in W. F. Stevenson's Hys. for Ch. & Home, 1873, Laudes Domini, N. Y., 1884, and others.

advocate at the Court of Appeal. In the autumn of 1831 he entered the Theological Seminary at Maulbronn, and in 1836 he graduated as at the University of Tübingen. In November, 1836, he became assistant clergyman at Pötenbach, near Stuttgart; and in July, 1837, at Gmünd, near Stuttgart. He was appointed, in 1838, diaconus at Pötenbach, and in 1839, diaconus of the Hospitalkirche in Stuttgart; and in October, 1837, archidiaconus of the Hofkirche. He was finally appointed, in December, 1843, Superintendent of the Lutheran Church in Stuttgart, where, after having been for some time partially disabled by paralysis, he preached his last sermon, Feb. 13, 1863. He d. at Stuttgart, January 13, 1864. Knapp, vol. 213; Altp. Deutsche Litog., liv. 253, etc.).

Knapp was a poet possessed not merely very considerable poetic talent, but also considerable originality. He was a truly original poet, the best of his secular poems being such as to show the history and the character of his own life. His poems are characterized by a clear, simple, and sincere style, and a deep, earnest, and sincere faith in his own religion. In 1864 he became pastor at Erdmannhausen. He d. while on a visit to St. 1871 (Allg. Deutsche Biog., x).

Koch claims notice here, as the author of the Kirchenlands und Kirchengesamtheit des deutschen Reichs, 1st ed. appeared at Stuttgart, 1865, second at Stuttgart, in 4 vols., 1866, he only lived to complete vols. 1 and 2, being edited from his notes by his chaplain to Prince Alexander of 1872; with an 8th volume by R. on vol. iv. of 1863), 1874, and 1 piece in 1873. All the re-tellings are to the third ed., 1874, and the following notice is regarded as the work of one man whole field of German Hymnology achievement, and worthy of the name was a great advance on anything and as a comprehensive survey was needed. Regarded more in detail, biographical and bibliographical biographies with historical connect merit. The biographies are so careful, and interesting, and on basis of the biographical notices who has pleasure in directing attention especially much fuller of life of the authors than he has collection of notes upon individuals of the works of the authors thus impossible to speak by any means been content to indicate in any which he had himself gathered able to consult, his work might complete, but would in reality valuable. As it is, the information confused and inaccurate, and what is when definite totally wrong. The writer had never seen many of them so that no single statement (or 1600-1750) can be taken with practical result to the present compelled in 1885 to make a vi purpose of consulting the hymn various of the principal libraries page or number to the works or been made either by himself or specially for this Dictionary.

Repeated in full in the Unc. L. S., 1851, No. 322; and, abridged, in many other German collections. Illustrating this hymn, Lauxmann, in Koch, viii. 564, says that Tersteegen

"once said to some of his friends, who visited him on his birthday: 'My friends, if I should die to-day I would only have three words to say to you as a last farewell. 1. Place your whole confidence on the grace of God in Christ Jesus; 2. Love one another; 3. Watch and pray.' This is the quintessence of this noble travelling song for Christian pilgrims and strangers here below (1 St. Peter ii. 11, 12), whose course is a march through the desert to Canaan. The whole life of Tersteegen is proof of the genuineness and sincerity of the spirit that breathes throughout this hymn."

Krummacker is best known as a preacher; and as the author of the well-known Parablen, first pub. 1860, which passed through many edns., and ranks as the standard German work of its class. His hymns are little suited for church use, being often allegorical and high-toned, and not for the most part sufficiently simple and direct, though in some cases he does write in a popular, natural style, and with a beauty of his own. His hymns mostly appeared in his Festbüchlein, a work consisting of allegorical narratives, conversations, &c., with interspersed hymns. Of this the 1st part, entitled Der Sonntag, was pub. 1868 (2nd ed. 1819; 3rd ed. 1813; 4th ed. 1819); pt. II., entitled Das Christfest, in 1810 (2nd ed. 1814; 3rd ed. 1821); and pt. III., entitled Das Neujahrsfest, in 1819.

Those of Krummacker's hymns tr. into English are:—

I. Allgemach aus Dämmerung und Nacht. Ad- sent. In his Festbüchlein, pt. II., 1810 (1814, p. 154), in 5 st. of 4 l., entitled "The Prophets of Nature"; and given after the conversation on Zacharias, the father of St. John the Baptist. Included as No. 34 in J. P. Lange's Deutsches Kirchenliederbuch, Zürich, 1843. The unity of idea is violated by the concluding lines of st. v.

"Wie die kleinen Lämmlen den Propheten Einst auf Horeb's Felsenapfel umwehten."

And thus in his preface, p. vii., Dr. Lange suggests that st. v. should read thus:—

"Allgemach und stetiglich fort und fort Bricht durch unser Fleisch das ew'ge Wort;
Die Propheten grüßten es durch Gesichte,
Dann wird's Mensch und himmlische Geschichte."

It is given in the story of the festal rededication of a village church destroyed in time of war, as a choral hymn sung by boys and girls after the Holy Communion. In the Württemberg G. B., 1842, No. 72. Tr. as:—

1. Yes! our Shepherd leads with gentle hand. Through. A good and full tr. by Miss Borthwick, in H. L. L., 1st Ser., 1854, p. 59 (1884, p. 60), repeated in Kennedy, 1863; Mrs. Brock's Children's H. Bk., 1881; the Christian H. Bk., Cincinnati, 1865, and others.

IV. Mag auch die Liebe weinen. Love, Faith and Hope. Festbüchlein, pt. I., 1808, p. 136, in 3 st. of 4 l., in the section entitled "The Setting Sun," for Sunday evening. It is appended to a story in which the father has been speaking of the Resurrection of Christ the Son of Righteousness, as celebrated on that day, the hymn being introduced as sung by the La Trobe, Christian Ignatius, eldest son of the above Benjamin La Trobe, was b. at the Moravian Settlement, Fulneck, Yorkshire, Feb. 12, 1758, and educated in England and at the Brethren's College, Niesky, Silesia. Taking orders in the Moravian Church, he became in 1784 Secretary to their Society for the Furtherance of the Gospel, and in 1795 Secretary to the Unity of the Brethren in England. He d. at Fairfield, near Liverpool, May 6, 1836. He is best known through his Selection of Sacred Music, in six volumes, which appeared in 1806-25. His hymnological contributions consist of a few translations from the German. [G. A. C.]

La Trobe, John Antea, M.A., grandson of B. La Trobe, and a. of C. I. La Trobe, was b. in London in 1792, and educated at Edmund's Hall, Oxford, graduating B.A. 1826, and M.A. 1829. Having taken Holy Orders in the Church of England, he was appointed Incumbent of St. Thomas, Kendal, in 1830, and retained the same to 1865. In 1858 he was nominated Hon. Canon of Carlisle Cathedral. He d. in 1879. His musical works include The Music of the Church, 1831, and poetical, Sacred Lays and Lyrics, 1850. He also published a Selection of Hymns, including Versions of Psalms, arranged under Subjects, so as to form A Small Book of Devotion, and suited for Private, Social, and Public Worship. Lond., Seeleys, 1841.

This selection contains many of his hymns. In 1852 a 2nd ed. was pub. with authors' names. "How strange is heavenly love" (The love of God). "O bring to Jesus [the Lord] your tribute of praise" (Ps. l.). Two of the very few of his hymns in C. U. [G. A. C.]

[Afternoon, Sunday.] Appeared in his Hymns, Sacri, 1746, p. 23, as "Præno volutus impetum," and again in the Paris Breviary the same year, as "Labente jam solis rotā." It is also in J. Chandler's Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837, No. 8, and in Carl. Newman's Hymns, Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as:—

1. Now the day's declining wheel. By I. Williams, in the British Magazine, Jan. 1834; and again in his Hys. Tr. from the Parisian Breviary, 1839, p. 9, in 14 irregular lines. Rearranged as a hymn in 3 st. of 4 l., in 4 of L.M., it was given in the English Hymnal, 1852, No. 10, and repeated in 1856 and 1861.

2. As now the sun's declining rays. By J. Chandler, in his Hys. of the Prim. Church, 1837, p. 7. It was soon incorporated in several hymn-books as an afternoon hymn, and gradually grew in favour until few modern hymn-books of the first rank are found without it. Usually the text is given without alteration as in the People's H., 1867. The text of H. A. & M., 1861 and 1875, is Chandler altered by the compilers, the changes being in st. i. and the doxology. This text is repeated in Thring's Coll., 1882, and others. In Kennedy, 1863, Chandler's tr. is revised by the Editor.

Laetabundus exultet fidelis chorus:
Alleluia. Regem regum. St. Bernard of Clairvaux. [Christmas.] The earliest form known of this Sequence is in a Gradual apparently written in England during the 12th cent. and now in the British Museum (Reg. 2 B. iv. f. 177), and another ms. in the B. M. containing a collection of Sequences, apparently written c. 1199 (Calig. A. xiv. f. 50 b). It is in the St. Gall ms., No. 338, at p. 334, in a hand of the 13th cent. Among Missals it is found in an early 14th cent. Paris, and a 14th cent. Sens in the British Museum; in a Sarum, c. 1370; a Hereford, c. 1370; and a York, c. 1380, all now in the Bodleian; in the St. Andrews, the Magdeburg of 1480, and many French and German Missals. It was also used as a hymn in the Sarum Breviary, e.g. in a ms. of the 14th cent. in the British Museum (Reg. 2 A. xiv. f. 187 b). The printed text is also in Daniel, ii. p. 61; Kehrein, No. 13, and others.

Of this poem Dr. Neale says "This Sequence or Hymn is of rare perfection in its kind, and perhaps as widely known as any hymn of the Church" (Med. Hys. 1851, p. 49). As will be seen by the note above, its use was especially general in England and in France. In the Sarum Missal it was used as the Sequence on the Fourth Day in the octave of the Assumption of the R. V. M.; and in the Sarum Breviary as a hymn at the second Vespers of the Purification, and also of the Assumption of the R. V. M. In the Hereford Missal it is appointed for use within the octave of the Epiphany; and in the York Missal in the Mass at Daybreak on Christmas-day. [J. M.]

Lange, Ernst, was b. at Danzig, Jan. 3, 1650, where his father, Matthias Lange, was in the service of the Senate. He was for some time secretary in Danzig, and thereafter in Warsaw. In 1691 he was appointed judge in Altstadt of Danzig, and in 1694 senator. He d. at Danzig, Aug. 20, 1737 (Bode, p. 103; Deutsche Biog. xvii. 623, &c.). After a visit to the Netherlands in 1698, Lange allied himself with the Mennonites and Pietists in Danzig, and came into conflict with the Lutheran clergy. His hymns were mostly written about the time when the pestilence visited Danzig, in 1710, and principally appeared in his Gott geheilte Stunden, without place or date of pub., but probably at Danzig, 1711 (Preface dated "Danzig, Febr. 12, 1711"). The idea of this work was as a thankoffering preservation during this trying time; and it embraced 61 hymns, viz., one for each year of his life. A number of additional hymns seem to have been contributed in 1710, to Freylinghausen's Neues geistreiches G. B., 1714.
His
Psalm versions are noted under Pealters, German.
Lange's hymns which have passed into English are:—

1. Im Abend blüht der Morgenstern. Epiphany, 1711, as above, p. 4, in 19 st. of 4 l., entitled,
"The Saviour Who appeared at Bethlehem the Wise men from the East, set forth; from Matt. ii. 1-12." A new st. was added as (probably from his ms.) when the hymn included by Freylinghausen, 1714, No. 59.
repeated, abridged, in Knapp's Ec. L. S., 1837, No. 435 (1865, No. 414). The tr. in C. U. is:—
The wondering saga trace from far. A tr. of st.
i., ii., x., by Miss Cox, in her Sacred H. from the German, 1841, p. 23 (1864, p. 43). Repeated in Hodge & Huntington's American Hymn, for Ch. of Christ, Boston, 1853; Schaff's *Christ
Song*, 1869 and 1870, &c.

Another tr. is: "At eve appears the Morning Star."
by Lady E. Porteus, 1843, p. 5.
II. O Gott, du Tief und Grand. God's Majesty.
1st printed as No. 140, in Freylinghausen, 1714, in 10 st. of 14 l.; repeated in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863. F. Schleiermacher called it "A masterpiece of sacred poetry." The tr. in C. U. is:—

O God, Thou bottomless abyss. A spirited tr., omitting st. vi., ix., and in 8 st. of 12 l., by J. Wesley, in his Coll. of Ps. & Hys., Charlestown, 1737, No. 16, and the Wesley Hys. and Sacred Poems, 1739 (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i. p. 143). The lines—

"Thy wakened wrath doth slowly move, Thy willing mercy flows apace are adapted from the New Version of Ps. ciii. 8. The hymn passed into the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, in two parts, Nos. 231 and 232 (ed. 1875, Nos. 240, 241). In other hymn-books it has appeared in a variety of centos. As these are all from the text of the Wes. H. Bk., more or less altered and transposed, it will suffice to give their first lines with references to the text of 1780. These centos include:—

(1) While Thee, Unsearchable, I seek (l., 1. 9 alt.). Martinau's Hymns, 1840.

(2) Unchangeable, all-perfect Lord (ll., 1. 9). Longfellow & Johnson's Bk. of Hys., Boston, U.S., 1846.

(3) Thy parent-hand, Thy forming skill (ll.). Amer. Meth. Epis. South Coll., 1847.

(4) Thou, true and only God, lead'st forth (v.). Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 232.

(5) Thine, Lord, is Wisdom, Thine alone (vi.). Scottish Evang. Union H. Bk., 1856.

(6) Parent of good! Thy bounteous hand (vii.). Martinau's Hymns, 1840.

(7) Parent of good! Thy genial ray (vii. alt.). Dr. Thomas's Augustine H. Bk., 1846.

These details show the extensive use of this hymn in English-speaking countries.

Another tr. is, "O God, Thou bottomless Abyss! How shall I competently know Thee," as No. 673 in pt. 1 of the Moravian B. Bk., 1784. In the ed. 1888, No. 174, it begins, "O God, Thou fathomless abyss."

III. Vater unsern grossen Öttern. Brotherly Love, or, Quinquagesima. A fine paraphrase of 1 Cor. xiii. 1st pub. 1711, as above, p. 37, in 5 st. of 10 l., entitled, "The preeminence of Love. From 1 Cor. xiii. 1, 2, 3, 13." When included as No. 423, in Freylinghausen, 1714, a new stanza was added as st. vi., and this form is No. 798 in the Une. L. S., 1851. Tr. as:—

Many a gift did Christ impart. A full and good tr. by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 1855, p. 50; repeated, abridged, in Kennedy, 1883. In the American Unitarian Hys. of the Spirit, Boston, 1864, and in the Laudes Domini, N. Y., 1884, &c., it begins with the tr. of st. ii., l. 5, "Though I speak with angel tongues." [J. M.]

Lange, Joachim, D.D., s. of Mauritius Lange, senior councillor at Gardslegen in the Altmark, was b. at Gardslegen, Oct. 26, 1670. He entered the University of Leipzig in the autumn of 1689, where he shared rooms with A. H. Francke; and in 1690 followed Francke to Erfurt, and in 1692 to Halle. By the recommendation of J. C. Schade he was appointed, in 1693, tutor to the only son of F. R. L. von Canitz, at Berlin. Subsequently he became, in 1696, rector of the school at Cölin in Pomerania; in 1698 rector of the Friedrichswerder Gymnasium at Berlin, and in 1699 pastor of the Friedrichstadt church; and in 1709, professor of theology at Halle (D.D. 1717), where he d. May 7, 1744 (Koch, iv. 343; Allg. Deutsche Biog., xvii. 634, &c.). In his day Lange was best known as a commentator on the whole Bible (Biblisches Licht und Recht, &c., 7 folio vols., Halle, 1730-1738); as a defender of Pietism against the "Orthodox" Lutheran controversialists 18th cent.; and as the author of theological works. Only two known by him, one of which is

Langford, John. The time and place of this person's birth are unknown. He is said to have been connected with the early Methodists, and then to have become a member of the Baptist church in Eagle Street, London.
In 1765 he began to preach in a chapel called Blackfields, in Gainsford Street, London, and in the following year was ordained pastor.
There he remained for 12 years, then removed to Rose Lane, Ratcliff, and afterwards to a small place in Bunhill Row. But his imprudent conduct compelled him at length to give up preaching. He inherited considerable property, but squandered it in extravagance, and died in great wretchedness about 1790.
J. Langford pub. a few Sermons, and, in 1776, a collection of Hymns & Spiritual Songs, which reached a second ed. The excellent and well-known hymn
"Now begin the heavenly theme," has been ascribed to him. It is in his collection; but since, in the preface to his second ed., he tells us that he has marked own hymns with an asterisk, and this one is not marked, it is clearly not of his composition.

[W. R. S.]
Langhans, Urban, was a native Schneeberg, in Saxony. He was for time cantor, i.e. choirmaster, at Glauchau, Saxony; and then from 1546 to 1554 diaconus
there. In 1554 he became diaconus
Schneeberg, and still held this position 1562. The date of his death is not known but his successor in office d. in 1571 (Blätter, für Hymnologie, 1884, pp. 7-12, 25-27, 190).
Whether he wrote any hymns is doubtful.
The only one ascribed to him which passed into English is:—
Lass uns alle fröhlich sein. Christmas. The first stanza of this hymn is found at p. 17 of Martin Luther's Leudes Immanuel (a sermon on "Grates comes exultamus"), pub. at Leipzig, 1620 (Ducat brev. Gotha). The full form, in 4 st. of 4 l., has yet been traced earlier than to the Anders Theil Dresden G. B., 1632. It is also in J. Freylinghauser's Handbüchlein, 1655, p. 57n, in Freylinghauser's G. B., 1704; the Berlin G. B., 1863, No.
in the Arnstadt U. B., 1711; Langhans is given author of the text, and in the Dydden G. H., 1856, as the author of the melody. Dr. J. Zalin, in his Psalter und Harfe, 1856, No. 37, gives both text and melody from the Dydden G. H., 1852. Tr. as:—

1. Let us all in God rejoice. In full, by Dr. M. Loy, in the Evang. Review, Gettysburg, July, 1861, p. 192, repeated in the Ohio Arany, Lat. Hyl., 1866, No. 19.

2. Let us all with glad voice. In full, by Miss Winkworth, as No. 29 in her C. B. for England, 1861.

Lapsus est annus: redit annus alter. [New Year.] In the Mosaz Breviary, 1713, and 1834, this is the hymn at compline after the first vespers of the festival of the Circumcision of our Lord. This would of course be said as the last office on Dec. 31. There is a rubric directing that at stanza v. all kneel down. So also in the Poetiers Breviary (Pictariensis), in which it probably originated. Neale, in his Hymni Ecclesiae, 1851, p. 162, gives the text of Breviario Medlenai, i.e. the Mosaz Breviary. It is also in the Le Mass Brev. of 1748. Daniel, iv. 319, repeats the text from Neale. Also in L. C. Biggs's annotated H. A. & M., 1867.

Translations in C. U.:—

1. The year is gone beyond recall. By F. Pott. Appeared in L. M. in his Hym. fitted to the Order of Common Prayer, 1861, No. 48, in 6 st. of 4 l., and was repeated, unaltered, in the People's H., 1867, and others; and, abbreviated and altered, in the S. P. C. K. Church Hym., 1871. In 1861 the compilers of H. A. & M. transposed Archdeacon Pott's L. M. tr. into C. M., thus necessitating many alterations. This text has been adopted by several hymnals, including Kennedy, 1863, Allon's Cong. Psal. Hymnal, 1866, and others. In these forms this tr. is extensively used.

2. The year is gone, another dawns. By W. Cooke, written for and pub. in the Hymnary, 1872.

Past is the old year, now begins another. J. W. Hewell, 1869.

Lasset Klag und Trauern führen. J. Heermann? [Eternal Life.] This hymn is not found in any of the works of Heermann now extant. It appeared, with his name, in the Königsberg G. H., 1650, p. 702, in 9 st. of 8 l. Thence in Mützell, 1858, No. 136. In Bunsen's Allg. G. B., 1846, No. 432, is st. i. ll. 1-4, ii. ll. 5-8, iv., vii., ix. The ascription to Heermann may have arisen from confounding with his "Lasset ab, ihr meine Lieben," lat. pub. in his Devoti musica cordis, Leipzig, 1636 (1644, p. 186), thence in Mützell, 1858, No. 98, in 12 st. of 8 l. The Lasset Klag has been called a version of "Jam morosa quiesce querela," but has greater resemblance to "Ad perennis vitæ fontem." Tr. as:—

I go from grief and sighing. A good tr. from Bunsen by Mrs. Beran, in her Songs of Eternal Life, 1866, p. 17, repeated, unaltered, in Siepp's Songs of G. & G., 1872. In Reid's Praise Bk., 1872, it is altered to "We go from grief and sighing."

Lathbury, Mary Ann, was b. in Manchester, Ontario County, New York, Aug. 10, 1841. Miss Lathbury writes somewhat extensively for the American religious periodical press, and is well and favourably known (see the Century Magazine, Jan., 1885, p. 342). Of her hymns which have come into C. U. we have:—

1. Break Thou the bread of life. Communion with

God. A "Study Song" for the Chautauque Scientific Circle, written in the summer in Horder's (Egg.) Cong. Hymns, 1864.

2. Day is dying in the west. Rev. at the request of the Rev. John B. VI at summer of 1866. In was a "Vesper" been frequently used in the response Chautauque Literary and Scientific Circle Laudes Iamini, N. Y., 1864.

For these details we are indebted to Duffield's English Hym., &c., N.

The Septuagint (ᾠδὴν ᾗσαντες τοῖς ἁγίοις ἀπὸ τοῦ ἁγίου πνεύματος) proceeds—"What, then, men hymn to all His Saints?" receive a hymn. ### iii. Hymns of the Early Church.

"We find," continues Beveridge, "from the testimony of the younger Pliny (2nd cent., Lib. i., Epist. 97), under Trajan, that the Christians in the first age were accustomed to meet before day, and to sing a hymn to Christ as God by turns one after another," and to the same effect is Tertullian (Apolog. 2.), and Eusebius (Hist. iii.). Caine, a Greek author writing in the beginning of the third century the Montanists, speaks of "psalms and odes; such as were from the beginning written by the faithful, hymns to the Christ, the of God, calling Him God." (Routh, Reliq-Saer., ii. 127.) So that very early after Pentecost Christian and not mere Jewish hymns must have been composed, which were publicly sung in the congregations, and these chants and hymns were conducted by an order of persons called Psaltæ or Cantores. (Sozomen, Lib. iv., c. 8; Socrates, Lib. v., c. 22.)

Philo, in his "Vita Contemplativa," describes how the Ascetics in Egypt, then and before his time (circa A.D. 40 to 68), "composed hymns in various metres and rhythms in honour of the true God, some in the ancient trimeter; others newly composed. The president begins, and the choirs follow in various modulations, with a chorus of all the people in two choirs of men and women, each having its leader, but all equally joining at the end."
The Christians of St. Mark there possibly followed this example. Eusebius (Lib. ii., c. 17, Hist.), quoting Philo, speaks of these Therapeutæ: "Not only do they use the ancient hymns, but they make new ones to God, modulating them in metre and sounds in a very excellent and sweet composition, which is also practised in the Church and in monasteries"; and he subsequently speaks of these (Lib. v. c. 28) as "Cantica fratrum," wherein "a primordio a fidelibus con-scripserunt Christum Verbum Dei concelebrant."
In a well-known place of St. Basil (quoted Gerbert i., 233) "The psaltory (i.e. tunes) of these harmonic rhythms has its origin from above, whence we should be anxious to seek them, and not to be carried away by delight in the melody to the pleasures of the flesh,"; and in his epistle to the Neocæsariensis, 63,
"Divided into two companies, they sing in alternate parts; then to one person is allotted that he should begin first what is to be sung by the next following him." Paul of Samoso-ata was condemned in a council, held at Antioch, A.D. 260, for rejecting these hymns.
St. Ephrem of Nisibis (died 379) says, "We honour our festivals in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs." In 506 the Council of Agde (Can. 30) ordered the singing of hymns every day, morning and evening. The Council of Tours still more plainly, after having formally recommended the adoption of the Ambrosian hymns. "There are yet some others which are worthy of being sung which have the names of authors, who were constant in the faith, prefixed." Still more important decisive was the decree of the 6th Council of Toledo in 633. (Can. 13, Labbe, iv. p. 1709.)
"For singing hymns and psalms publicly in the church we have the example of Christ and His apostles. Hymns are composed like masses or petitions, or commendations, or laying on of hands, of which there are many, just as with prayers; let none of you for the future withhold hymns composed in praise of God, but let Gaul Spain celebrate them alike. Those should be excommunicated who shall dare to reject hymns."

iv. Influence of Greek Hymns.

That these Hymns to Christ, whether metrical or non-metrical, had their origin in the East, and thence travelled to the West, is evident historically. Eusebius (Lib. v. 28) speaks of the "Cantica fratrum a primordio a fidelibus conscripta"; so also Tertullian. So Sozomen (Lib. vi., c. 23), speaks of the "Sacros hymnos qui in ecclesia cani solent." St. Chrysostom speaks of the hymns after the psalms in divine service; and the tradition related by Socrates is that Iguatius (who first came to Antioch A.D. 68) had learnt in a vision of angels "how in antiphonal hymns to hymn the Holy Trinity"; to whom may be added Hierotheus, greatly commended by Dionysius and Nothus (see Gerbert, i. 75); Hippolytus and others of the second century. The rise and growth of Greek hymns, and the use made of the earliest by Latin writers of a later date, are fully set forth in the articles on Greek Hymnody, p. 456, l.; Doxologies, p. 309, l.; Gloria in Excelsis, p. 435, l., and the Te Deum. See also Syriac Hymnody. If any proofs were wanting that Latin Hymnody originated in, and was derived from, the East, it may be found in these articles; for, with a few exceptions, there are daily hymns for the Hours, and for the Festivals, Feasts, and Seasons in each case; and the Apostles and Saints are celebrated by hymns in a similar manner and on the same occasions. Nor are the Spanish and Mozarabic Christians any exception, who originally received their hymnody partly from Rome and the East, partly from the Greek-speaking Christians of Africa. The very ancient Irish Latin Hymn of the Apostles, beginning Preceamur Patrem (from the Antiphonarium Benchorence—Bangor, in the county of Down and reprinted by Daniel, vol. iv. p. 31, bears evident marks of a translation from an Eastern original. These early hymns soon made their way with Christianity itself, from the East to Rome, Africa, Spain, and all other parts of the Roman Empire; except, perhaps, Northern Gaul, where, as St. Jerome complains in his preface to the Second Book of his Commentary on the Galatians, hymns were unacceptable. They were very soon introduced into public worship, but were not originally sung in the Latin tongue; for, in the first Christian times, Greek, or dialects of it, continued to be spoken in Italy, the South of Gaul, Germany and Africa, and Latin had not yet come into common use; nor was it possible to compress into classical measures the fervid devotion of the earlier converts.

v. Earliest Latin Hymns.

Gerbert (De Cantu et Musica Sacra, vol. i., p. 80, pub. 1774), after examining all the authorities, finds that no name can be connected with any hymn in the Latin language till we arrive at St. Hilary and Pope Damasus, in the beginning of the 4th century. Isidorus of Seville, who d. 636 (De Officiis, Lib. i., c. 6) says: "Hilary of Gaul, Bishop of Poitiers, was the first who flourished in composing hymns in verse," and St. Jerome, who d. 420, makes a similar statement. It would appear, from Hilary's own words, that he brought some from the East (in Pa. lxviii., lxiv.). Those beginning Luceis largitor splendide; the Teuton hymn, Jesus quadragevarine; three short serial morning hymns, Deus pater ingente, In nativitate virginitas, and Jam meta noctis transit, in the Mozarabic Bn for Vespers in the Epiphany, J. omnia; another for Compline at Pentecost, Berita nobis gaudia, ascribed to Hilary by Fabricius, Tommasi, and Daniel. To him ascribed by the Antiphonarium (see Hymnarium) the noble mad praise of Christ, Hymnus dicent hymnus cantus personet, in trimeters, which is by Bede de cherimus (De arte metrica); but rather to be an anonymous 5th century. By the consent of us to Pope Damasus I. (A.D. 366) two short Latin hymns, one for Deus sacrali neminis, the other (martyred A.D. 251), Martyris. The latter is the earliest hymn of Saint: it is in rhyme, and the of Latin metre are ignored.

vi. St. Ambrose and Ambrosi

We arrive in succession at of St. Ambrose (b. at Treves the main founder of the dignified, objective school of Hymnody, which for so many without intermixture, preva Roman Empire, and before it penetrated even into Spain Disertationes, vi. 21-23), and in the Divine Office all owe Mabillon writes (Liturgia 6 "St. Ambrose took care that, as of the Eastern Fathers, psal should be sung by the people: previously they had only been viduale singly, and among clerks only." St. Augustine, hymns at Milan, says, "Th psalms are sung after the mat erna, lest the people be we imitated by almost all the the world."

A fact which now strikes this: that in the 101 hymns (19 cent.) printed by Daniel, vol (a very few excepted) he Ambrose or his contemporari the ancient classical metres prosody is neglected, accu tuted for correct quantity, dimeter is mostly adapted congregational singing. were very soon appropriated in minor Festivals and Fasts of seven days of the week, and the Prayer, as among the Easterns. It, however, whether this definition was first made by St. Ambrose mainly by St. Benedict after the of the monastery at Lerins, or to that of St. Cassianus of Arles (Bolland. ad diem, January printed; so in that of St. Isidore of St. Aurelian of Arles, respecting the rule of St. Benedict no doubt. Benedict founded his rule, and the method, and course of offices in the beginning of the 6th century, and spread rapidly over Europe, his Apostolatus Benedictorum maintained that for many years no other Order really followed also the customs of this Order. It would exercise a great influence on the seculars, and determine their as those of the succeeding Benedict expressly adapted the rule, composed either by him or his imitators, to his Order (Jul. xviii.). Walafrid Strabo, de Rebus Ecclesiasticis, c. 25, speaks of the rule of St. Benedict as being said in the Canonical of him. "Which," says the book on the Trinity (857), the rule of St. Benedict, the Catholic faith is redolent; his prayers, and the composition. (See Gerbert de Rebus Ecclesiasticis, c. 25, in No. 391, C. C. Library.

The Liber Sanctae Marie Wyppre per Sanctum Onacaldum, is an Benedictine Office book and 1004, the title of the latter is Hymni Ambrosiani cavendip per secundum constitutionem Patris Benedicti. (See Hymnarium, p. 547, i.) These are nearly identical with what constituted the English Church Hymnody down to the year 1556. Other English Hymnals of the 12th, 13th and 14th centuries, described in detail in Hymnarium, pp. 546, 547, 551, are nearly identical in the hymns which they contain, varying from 115 to 130 in number. The same Hymnals up to 1556, with some local variations, and the addition of such as were composed for Festivals (such as the Name of Jesus and the Transfiguration) in the Ambrosian and Benedictine offices was thus adhered to, throughout England and all the North of Europe, and, with local variations, in the remainder of Western Christendom.

viii. From the IV. to the XI. Century.

With the Ambrosiani must be grouped the succeeding composers of Christian poetry, several of them laymen, for the next five or six hundred years, for they wrote mainly on the same subjects, in the same vein, with the same intent, mostly in the same metre. recall with pleasure the names of Aurelius Clemens Prudentius, Sedulius, Felix, Sidonius Apollinarius, Juvencus, Eucherius, Venantius Fortunatus, St. Gregorius Magnus, St. Columba, St. Isidore of Seville, Bede, Venenabilis, Paulus Diaconus, Carolus Magnus, Theodulphus, Rhaenus Maurus, St. Odo of Cluny, St. Fulbert, St. Peter Damiani, with a number of anonymous poems extending over the same period, some of them most beautiful and remarkable, up to the epoch of St. Bernard.

Amongst these must be reckoned the hymn Erullet jam angelica turba colorum (found equally in the old Roman, Gallican, Ambrosian, and Mozarabic rite, as well as others, such as Sarum), whose glorious strains at the Benediction of the Paschal candle (probably with the same music from the beginning, as in the Sarum Missal), and on the new light, are probably, with a consensus of critics, those of St. Augustine (Daniel, ii. 312). As he was said to have been a deacon when he composed it, it was always afterwards sung by the deacon.

In the last half of the 4th and in the beginning of the 5th century lived Aurelius Clemens Prudentius (q. v.). He was born probably at Saragossa or at Calahorra in Spain. About his fiftieth year he determined to abandon his earthly pursuits and to spend the remainder of his days in promoting the honour of God and the kingdom of Christ. In his fifty-seventh year, according to his own preface, he published many of his poems, and continued to do so up to the year 405, about which time he went to Rome (Ille mihi cum peterem te rerum maxima Roma, &c.; Innumeros cineres Sanctorum Romula in urbe Vidimus, Peristeph. ix. xi. 1), and afterwards took up his abode at Imola. He seems to have died about 413. He was a prolific author. His Christian Lyrics are his Cathermerinon, or twelve hymns adapted to all the actions of the day: his Peristephanon, or fourteen hymns of the "Crowns of the Martyrs"; and Apotheosis of the Divinity of Christ. Amongst his hymns are the daily hymns Alea mentis, Nox et tenebrae, and Lux ecce aurum; for the Nativity, Corde natus ex Patre; for the Holy Innocents, Salvete flores Martirum; for the Epiphany, O sola magna-rum urbium; and for Lent there are also his "Hymnus jejunantium"; O Nazarene Bethelem, and Cultor Dei memento. That for Holy Saturday, at the lighting of the Paschal candle, Inventor rutili lux bone luminis, is still retained in many foreign hymnaries, and in the Sarum for the procession after Vespers on that day; along with four or five others of less note. A hymn sometimes ascribed to Prudentius, but in error, and not found in his works, is:—

"Hymnus Martæ Virginæ, Decantemus cum Angelis," &c.

This is in the Mosarabic Breviary, 1502. It may be observed, moreover, that in his sacred poetry Prudentius has made use of the Iambic trimeter and dimeter, the hendecasyllabic, Alcaic, and Sapphic metres, the Trochaic tetrameter, Glyconic, and others.

To omit mention of Paulinus of Nola, Coelius Sedulius comes in as a Christian lyricist in the first half of the 5th century, under Honorius and Theodosius II. Whether he was a layman or ecclesiastic is unknown: probably he was a Presbyter. He is said to have been a Greek, and again an Italian; and then again (confounding him with another Sedulius), an Irishman. He composed a hymn in acrostics (i.e. each verse beginning with consecutive letters of the alphabet), which is the beginning of his poem in Iambic dimeters on the Life of Christ: A solis ortus cardine, a part of which is the Epiphany hymn, Hostis Jerodes impie. These were universally adopted into all Hymnaries. St. Magnus Felix Ennodius (born in France 473, died 521), composed one or two excellent hymns; and Elpis [See Elpis, p. 329, t.], that beginning Aurea lux et decore roseo, for the Festival of St. Peter and St. Paul.

Next, in order of time, we arrive at one of the noblest and most pleasing of the Christian lyricists, Venantius Honorius Clementianus Fortunatus (See p. 363, t.). The time of his birth is unknown, but he himself tells us that he was born at a village called Duplabilis between Treviso and Coneda in Venetia. He was educated at Ravenna in grammar, rhetoric, and Roman law. He composed poetry as early as A.D. 555; he went to Tours to St. Martin's grave in 565, was at the wedding of Sigebert with Brunhilda; Rhadegunda, widow of Clothaire the First, was his friend. There he dwelt and became a priest, and was a friend of Gregory of Tours. In the year 597 he was made Bishop of Poitiers. The date of his death is not known, but it was probably about 609. He composed prose works, but his fame rests on his poetry. In the second book of his sacred poems we find the glorious ode, Vexilla Regis prodent, Fulget Crucis mysterium, for Passiontide. It finds its place in most European Hymnaries, although sometimes (as in the present Roman) in a mutilated form; the penultimate stanza, for instance:—

"Funda aroma cortice, Vincis sapore mectare,
Jucunda fructu fertili, Planda triumpho nobili."

is often omitted; but it has no worthy representative in our vernacular church hymn-books except perhaps in the Hymnary. Of equal sublimity and fervour is his well-known Passion monody, mostly in trochaics, Pange lingua gloriosi Prælium certaminis, which has been subjected to similar ignominious treatment in the Roman Breviary. Then we have the Paschal Processional, in hexameters and pentameters, from his poem on the Resurrection, very universally adopted; the first verse of which, Salve festa dies toto venerabilis ævo, was in England generally prefixed to processional proses for the great

To St. Gregory the Great we owe some of the best hymns for Sundays, plenary to Lent, for Passiontide, and for the Hours (in Sapphics speedily adopted into most by the early English. The morning especially, Primo die found in all; but neither the Lenten or Passiontide hymn entered into our vernacular church to any appreciable extent. To the ascription of the Holy Trinity at the end, which has been attributed to St. Ambrose, now first, in various forms, to general use.

The Irish Hymnody must be noticed. A Liber Hymnorum of the College, Dublin, in old Irish script, contains Scholia in the same way in the Royal Irish Academy; the Franciscan College of Rome. Some hymns from the Irish Hymnary published by Colgan (Trias sanctæ by Ware, 1658, and by Ussher, 1641), and by Ussher, Dr. Todd undertook to edit the Irish Hymnary for the Irish Archaeological Society, but two parts only appeared in 1869, the undertaking being short by his untimely death. He found a hymn in honour of St. Columba, by Sechnall, the son of his father, 458 (a Laurica, or coat of mail repeated it)—

"Audite, omnes amantes Deum,
Viri in Christo beati Patrici Episcopi
Quomodo bonum ab actu stultorum Perfiteamur propter vitam æternam."

It is printed in Daniel, iv. J. Laur, Villanueva, in his Opusculum, Dublin, 1835. Then follows the translation of St. Columba, containing the Creed in 150 lines.

"Altus Creator, vetustus diem time, probably from the 8th century.

 Anglo-Saxons used also Christe cunctorum in many French hymnals. The Urbs has not escaped mutilation, as in the Roman so-called restorers of Latin hymnody, but its main features have always been conserved.

 Archbishop Trench writes (Sacred Latin Poe- try): "This poem attests its own true inspiration in that it has proved the source of true inspiration in circles beyond its own," alluding to the numerous translations and imitations of it in English and German. The Urbs hymn for the restoration of a church, O beata Jeru- salem, is apparently an early Spanish hymn.

ix. Hymns of the XI. and XII. Centuries.

The period of the 11th and 12th centuries constitutes a marked epoch in the history of Latin Hymnody. By that time the ordinary usage of hymns in the various formu-laries of the Western Church in different countries, dioceses, and religious communities, in their daily, weekly, festal, and penitential worship, had become fixed and settled.
 the Benedictines, as already intimated, setting the example; for, although Ambrose composed hymns, it is not certain that he con-dained them to be sung in order in the Church Offices. Those we have been considering constituted the staple of the sacred songs of the Missals, Breraries, and other Offices of this date; such being from time to time added in each Country, Church, Diocese or Conventual society as celebrated the memory founders and patrons of each, with their peculiar solemnities; originally, perhaps, in versicles and responses in prose, converted after a time into poetry: of this, the Spanish hymns are notable examples. By this time, however, with a few striking exceptions, the Clergy and Monks had become the principal poets. The comparative exclusion of the laity, and the separation of the latter from all worldly affairs, exercised a marked influence on these compositions. They increased greatly in number; they became more spiritualized, subjective, devout and mystical.
 They were no longer confined to the direct worship and praise of the Creator, of Christ, of the Holy Ghost; to the honour of the Blessed Virgin, and of the Apostles and certain prinprincipal Saints, and appropriated to the various solemnities of the Church relating to them: such as were those of Ambrose, Gregory, Prudentius, Fortunatus, and their successors. They became amplified and refined into eulogies, descriptions of, and meditations upon, the Passion and Wounds of Christ, on His Sacred Countenance, on His Cross, on His Sweet Name, on the Vanity of Life, on the Joys of Paradise, on the Terrors of Judgment: into penitential exercises, of the Holy Sacrament, of the lives and sufferings of numerous Saints—most especially into praises of the Blessed Virgin, on her Dignity, on her Joys and Dolours. Of this last particular species (often mere paraphrases of Ave Maria Stella, and laudations of a somewhat extravagant kind) vast numbers, but, it is to be observed, mainly belonging to the next succeeding centuries, are to be found in Mone, it; whilst previous to this period, as Daniel remarks, very few had been composed. Peter Damiani, Bonaventura, Bernard of Cluny, Thomas of Celano, and many others, including Adam of St. Victor, were the authors of the last previously mentioned sacred devotional poetry.

x. Adoption of Accent and Terminal Rhyme.

A further fact of importance must also be noticed: the universal adoption therein of accent instead of correct quantity, and of terminal rhyme or assonance. Neither of these, as we have already seen, is a necessary adjunct of Latin Hymnody, and may be thought to detract from its dignity; but the terminations and prosody of the Latin of that age lent themselves so easily thereto, that sacred poetry in general, instead of being founded on the metre and quantity of syllables, assumed rather, as being more facile, syllabism and rhyme. These rhymes were at first merely of vowels or assonances, to be adhered to when convenient, disregarded when otherwise. They might be confined to a single letter or fall on an unaccented syllable, or be found in the last verse only. Hilary himself, perhaps, almost unconsciously set the first example in the 4th century:—

Monstrat micans in aethera, Magisque docuit precoribus,
Ipseus ad cunabula.”

Pope Damasus, St. Gregory, and others wrote rhymed or assonant hymns. Ave Maria Stella; Veni Creator Spiritus are such. Odo of Cluny has alternate rhymes “Lauda Mater ecclesiam, Lauda Christi clementiam,

Qui septem purgat vitia
Per septiformem gratiam.”

Nor is the Church, nor are individuals to be blamed, for thus following the universal promptings of human nature peculiar to no age, which in sacred compositions, as in others, looks for smoothness and ease, for the music of language, for an assistance to memory, and to rivet the attention; to which the music may form an harmonious accompaniment. “It is not,” says Dr. Guest (Hist. of English Rhythm, 116), “a mere ornament, it marks and defines the accent, and thereby strengthens and supports the rhythm. Its advantages have been felt so strongly that no people have ever adopted an accentual rhythm without also adopting rhyme.” To the 12th long trochaic tetrameter acatalectic feet) and catalectic (or incomp. An example of this last is the Damiani (Don. i. 116).

“Ad peregrinis vitæ fontem mens sitit

The composers of Sequences, as we made much use of these rhymes. Among the most remarkable of elaborate rhyming is the Hymn of Bernard of Cluny, a poem, extended for private use only. It is a strophic hexameter catalectic, with rhymed ending, divided into three between which a caesura is inadmissible. It has a feminine leonine interval between the two first clauses:—

“Hæc novissima | tempora pessima | sicut
Dr. Neale translated it into English fourteen syllables each, three original, without attempting the rhyme. Mr. Moultrie (Lyra) also rendered a considerable much success into a similar original. [See p. 433.] St. Thon (13th cent.) rhymed his sacraments in most cases the quantitative interval. Daniel prints several hymns of later date (vol. i. pp. 298–306) of St. Agnes, St. Joseph, the Visitation, Magdalene, of Augustine, of Jesus, each stanza of three line catalectics of fifteen syllables rhymes. Rhymed hexameters, hexameters and pentameters: used.

xi. Metre.

With rhyme is intimately connected the subject of metre. The principal the Greeks and Latins made verse were eight in number: 1. dæc, of two long syllables; 2. anapaest, of two short; 3. The Iamb, of two short; 4. The Trochee, of two short; 5. The Dactyl, of a long and two short; 6. The Anapaest, of two short; 7. The Molossian, of three long; 8. The Brachy, of three short. Of these the 5th and 6th measure two in the rapid, the remainder three. I sometimes found in classical Amphibrach, a long between two short; Amphimacer, a short between two long; Bacchic, a short followed by two long; Antibacchic, two long followed by a short. The first is a measure of two, in the middle, the remainder of three. These feet, with their compound and uncompound, as well as the mode of use in composing their School of Adrian at Canterbury that “centena genera metrorum” were studied, among which was the long and two short, and two short and two short. Before this time, however, measures, Hexameters, Heptameters, Anacronctic, and the Alcaic were found in Horace, although attained, were in process of change. Church Song was composed alliterative and rhythmical by the melody by the ear, as nary. Therein the Gradual (the anthem preceding the Gospel) in all Festal days and Seasons ended with a long Alleluia, being a musical jubilation on a certain number of notes, called Neumes, without words, on the final A; also called the Sequentia as following thereon. These Neumes (which were very difficult to remember) owed their origin to two chanters sent by Pope Adrian to Charlemagne; Peter, who opened a school at Metz, and Romanus, who, having been detained by illness at St. Gall, commenced a school of music there also. In this monastery of St. Gall was domiciled a young religious named Notker (called Balbulus from his stammer), of refined musical taste. He was delighted to find that the Jumièges book had affixed to these Neumes certain words corresponding to their number, a contrivance which enabled him to remember the cadences of these Neumes much more easily; especially as new ones were constantly being introduced. Under the advice of his master Yson, he forthwith set himself to compose some new words for these musical Sequences at the different Festivals of the year, and began with that for Eastertide—

"Laudes Deo concinat orbis utique totus"

(see Daniel, v. 62), wherein every note of the melody should have an accompanying word. After other lessons as to the melody and words from his master, he composed another in like form for the Dedication of a Church—

"Psallat Ecclesia mater illibata"

(see Daniel, ii. 23; Mone, i. 323; Neale's Sequentiæ, 247); and others followed.

In general these early Notkerian Proses (with a few conspicuous exceptions), were not rhymed or with assonances, except accidentally; hence the peculiar appellation. That for the Nativity, Eja recolamus (for the Circumcision in the Sarum Missal); for the Holy Innocents, Latus tibi Christe; that for the same day in the Sarum Missal, Cela pueri concerepent; the Veni Sancte Spiritus Et emitte, attributed to Robert King of France; a grand anonymous prose on the Holy Trinity—retained in the Sarum Missal for Trinity Sunday; the well-known Alleluistic Prose for Septuagesima, Cantemus cuncti; and St. Bernard's Letabundus, are amongst the exceptions and are all either rhymed or assonant. This non-rhyming gave rise to the idea (partly adopted even by Mone, iii., 49) that they were vague, incoherent compositions, without determinate metre or melodies. Such was not the case. Dr. Neale (Daniel, v. 1) and the Abbé Gautier (Preface cxxxvii.) have given a series of canons by which the recitation of them was regulated, the main principle of which was that each of the clauses or lines of the Prose should be nearly of similar length, and each syllable be closely accommodated to the musical notes of the jubilant Neumes to which they were set. If, then, the individual clause was double or treble, or more, the same musical phrase would be repeated, twice or thrice, &c. If somewhat longer, it would be lengthened out; if shorter contracted, till another phrase was arrived at. The Prose at last often consisted of a series of clauses, two the same plan, although the Intro concluding versicles had a special. The Abbé Gautier gives this exan-

"Benedicta sit beata Trinitas,"

Preface—"Johannes Jesu Christo multum

In nave parentem liquisti
2. To Ejus conjugis | pectus respicit | M.
Et Ejus pectoris | sacra mirabilis | F.

Into other phases of this ancient is not necessary to enter.

We are now arrived at the end of the 12th century, and to a Victor; to the second period of rhymed metrical Sequences, chants which, increasing in beauty and popularity on the mind of the Church Europe for centuries. Northern it observed, for it must be met neither Spain nor Italy nor France the Loire, seem ever to have well. About the year 1153 may be begun a new epoch in the history (hereafter to be called Sequences) of St. Victor at Paris, founded 44 by Louis VI. Therein resided a sacred poet and musician named compositions were destined to improvement (even a revolution) song. The learned Joseph Chiffart 1554, in the fourth and last part datorium Ecclesiasticum (who, particularly happy in the ex Proses), writes thus of him and Prose of this second epoch:—

"This form of Prose in the Church celebrated and of all that which is illustrious author, renowned no less for learning, Adam of St. Victor, was in a copious and ready in the rhythmic Prose, as very many of those compositions certainly very plainly declare."

By this time, in the North, at least, a considerable proportion Notkerian Proses and those of inferior gone out of use in choir; and chanters had set themselves to create of a more melodious and popular. These did not confine themselves to the ancient Neumes of Alleluia, repeated clauses or versicles of an equal syllables, but adopted an entire original system both of verse music, derived from popular a more grateful to the ear. A of great regularity constructed the system explained above, with rhymes of great number beauty, having penultimate a sometimes short. Of these Adam was the principal author (although many imitators), and the Abbé done signal service to Church publishing 103 of them, with which may perhaps be his, as his hymns, together with an explanation and notes exhibiting (Œuvres Poétiques d'Adam Paris, 1858; 2nd ed. 1881). M. has also done much for the publishing, with the original Paris, 1876, Poésies françaises notation, the chants of the 8th with a selection of the principal in glory. Among the latest gems were the Hymns and Sequences of St. Thomas of Aquino, the Dominican, renowned as one of the few Italian sacred poets. His hymns include the Adoro te devote; Pange lingua gloriosi Corporis; Lauda Sion; Sacris Solennibus, and the Verbum supernum, all of which have been in extensive use either in their original or their translated forms from his day to the present time. Other fine hymns before the end of the 14th century are: Surrexit Christus hodie, and Ece tempus est vernale, both for Easter; and the O beata beatorum, for Martyrs. The grand and pathetic Stabat Mater dolorosa, Juxta crucem, although often associated with this period, is of a later date. It is found in the Paris Missal, 1481, and the Belgian Missal, 1483. [See Sequences.]

The sacred lyrical Latin poetry subsequent to the 13th century, of which there is an extraordinary quantity in every possible variety of metre, may be divided into four classes:—

1. Hymns to God and the several Persons of the Holy Trinity.
2. For Festivals and Seasons, and to the Cross.
3. Of Saints and Angels.
4. Of the Blessed Virgin.

Of all these the authors are for the most part unknown. As to the first head, it would seem as if former Christian poets had exhausted these great subjects, and the praises become feebler and less original. The old Hymns and Sequences keep their places, and to them are subjoined many variations and additions peculiar to each Country, Diocese, Church, and Conventual Order; but the new hymnody attains not to the grandeur and excellence of the more ancient. This may easily be verified in the volumes of Mone. The former spirit of Christian poetry, however, still partially survived, although the style is inferior and different. There are several hymns to the Holy Trinity of the 14th and 15th centuries, especially in Germany—Dulcis amor, pax, veritas; Summe Pater sancte Deus; Trinitatis altissime, &c., most of them condensations or expansions of the Nicene and Athanasian Creeds. We find too "Hours of the Holy Trinity." The three Hymns and Sequences for the Transfiguration in the English Office-books are fine. They begin Coelestis formam gloriæ; O salutor rerum, reparator aevi; and Onata lux de lumine. There are rhymed summaries of the Life of Christ, besides such as were in use in the 11th and 12th centuries. There is an excellent rhymed hymn for Advent, with a melody, Veni, Veni, Rex Gloriæ; a number of rhymed and anonant or acrostic Songs and Hymns for the Nativity: Dies est lætitiæ; Apparuit benignitas, &c., precursors of Christmas and Epiphany Carols. We find many for the Passion, as Plange Sion Filia; Dulcis Jesu spes pauperum; Patria Sapientia; Ad matutinum gemit, and several versions of the Hours of the Passion, mostly in rhyme, a method of devotion which began and spread widely in this age. There is also a devotion of the Holy Cross, Crux tua, Christe, salus hominum; one for the Exaltation or Invention of the Cross, Salve Crux sancta, Salve mundi gloria, in Iambic hexameters Monoculum; and a Lament for Jesus, for private recitation, in eighty verses, each verse beginning with His Name. There are "of the Face of Jesus," and salut several members: Salve mea O; a double-rhymed hymn of the several Graces after Meals. Seasonal Hymns and Sequences to Pentecost and the Holy Ghost. of Aquino had many imitators: the Sacrament, in prose, in vestiments to the actions of the rally acrostics or rhymed, such Lux indeficiens; O Panis dul caro Christi caro, Tu es certe; Quod in ara ornatur; Salve Saturatus fœculis: all of which features of hymnody, were common in the churches, and also used. There are also "Salutations of line beginning with Ave or Salve of Christ, the Psalter of Jesus Jesu dulces Medicamen, with praise of the Goodness and spiritual be Angelorum si haberem, &c.; hymns, penitential hymns; many of this life; in time of tribulation of the World, &c. Man; tray the mind of the cloister, a songs, and rather meant for pation than for worship. Several glories of the Heavenly Jerusalem mea Jerusalem omnia, rhythmic music: In domo Patris; Jerusalem after the manner of the Ad perferem, and the Urbs beata. Son Holy Angela and to St. Michael the Mysterium Signifer, those Angelic Orders, Summo Deo agi Thy proper Angel," Salve mi Mone, vol. i.)

xiv. Hymns to the B.

The greatest change, however place at this period in Church relation to the Blessed Virgin. 14th century several hymns; some of them in the subjective used in the Latin Church, such Stella; Cantemus in omni ætate pontus, æthera; O quam glori mundi Domina (Nativity and Salve Regina; Alma Redempte Regina Coelorum, &c. The Honour were the Conception, sentation, Annunciation, the Vtuted 1389, the Purification, a For each of these a vast number of poems were composed, which sung (but concerning this we mation) at those Festivals by France and Germany, and Italy, for most of them, as does and Mone, have Neumes, or attached thereto. There are rable on the Angelic Saluta 100 beginning with Ave and the Canticle Magnificat. Mary have a large number how-ver, equalling in part Mater; and there are as many of Mary after the Resurre Assumption. They are all good, with a few exceptions, Sapientia (Daniel, iv. 283).

task with the Spanish Hymnody (Hymnodia Hispanica, 1786) in his Dissertation on Ecclesiastical Hymns in the same volume, gives a history of all these proceedings, and warmly approves of them; as does Guyet, a Jesuit, in his Heortologia, Paris, 1687 (Venice, 1729). The outcome was a parti-coloured mixture of doubtful character, in parts of which the old classical metres are again revived. It must, however, be admitted that among these later compositions are many of great beauty, power and devotional fervour, especially those of the brothers Santedil. Those in the Paris Breviary of 1736 for ordinary Sundays at Matins and Vespers, and in Advent, for Matins at Christmas, and St. Stephen's Day, for the Epiphany, Quæ Stella sole pulchrior at First Vespers, and Lingunt lecta Migi at Lauds; those for the Five Wounds, Prime vocem, Quæ te pro populi; those for Easter, and the Ascension, for Virgin Martyrs, for the Annunciation, are excellent. It is much to be lamented that Isaac Williams (Hymns tr. from the Parisian Breviary, 1839), who fully appreciated their beauty, has rendered them for the most part into such crabbed and incongruous measures. The Roman hymnody is known to but few, yet the Prose for Christmas, Verbum lumen de lumine; for the Epiphany, Prompto gentes animo (already mentioned); that for the Ascension, Solomnis hæc festivitas (Narbonne Breviary, 1709, an 1 Daniel, ii. 367) are worthy of notice. Besides these there are some fifteen original hymns of much merit.

All these and many more in Germany and elsewhere are now, in fact, swept away, to the infinite regret of the Churches to which they were appropriated, and the Latin Hymnody of the Western Church has thus been narrowed to the few, and in great part curtailed and formalized, compositions included in the modernized Roman Breviary, and the five Sequences in the Roman Missal. This is a conclusion much to be deplored to so glorious a career; and our grief is increased when we find, as is the fact, that the ancient music for the same has undergone a similar transformation and reduction.

xviii. Expositiones.

Notice must here be taken of the numerous Expositiones Hymnorum et Sequentiarum, which, commencing even before this epoch, continued to be produced till late in the 16th century. In the Liber Hymnorum of the ancient Irish Church, edited by Dr. Todd, in the old Irish characters, for the Archaeological and Celtic Society, Dublin, 1855 and 1869, there are elaborate scholia and explanations of all the hymns, some of them in the original Irish language. In the British Museum are two English hymn-books of the 11th century (Jul. A. vi. and Vesp. D. xii.), which are examples of expositions. Both are unprinted Benedictine, and the latter is headed:—

"Incipiant hymni quod nocturnis atque diebus
Precantur monachi laudibus assidue;
His animus monachi cordibus quæritur discit
Aeternumque melos cogitat libere modis."

It contains an interlinear paraphrase in ordinary Latin prose of each verse of the hymn, thus:—

"Splendor et immortalis Dignitas
O, Lux beata Trinitas!
Et O auctoritatis potentia!
Et principalis Unitas!" &c.

And there is also an interlinear this paraphrase in Anglo-Saxon A. vi., the hymns themselves length, but only the first few there follow, as in Vespasian I sion of the hymn in ordinary Lat between the lines of this version Anglo-Saxon translation of the prose version reads thus:—

"O Lux et O beata Trinitas
Et O principalis Unitas
Infante lumen in nostris

with the translation into Anglo-S the lines. In the Bodleian L. Misc., 384) is a Liber Hymnorum exposition of Hilarius written the end of the 13th cent. The Jam lucis orto sidere begins thus "Materia hujus hymni est depreca orto sidere, id est Christo, Christus di nos a viciis et induendo nos virtutibus superbiam; id est faciat nos humi umbra mortis, id est peccatum, recessit

Christus, jam habitat in cordibus nostri

These Expositiones became t century forward, plentiful on t and as soon as printing t they multiplied everywhere.

11. Beiträge zur Geschichte und Erklärung des deutschen Ausdrucks: Von Dr. J. Kayser. Vol. 1. 8.
Hefen. 1861; Vol. 2, 1862.

In addition to these works the ms. contains the printed Breviaria, Grobianae, Hymnaries, Missals, &c., which are commented upon by the following headings in this Dictionary.

1. Breviary. p. 179. 2. Hymnarium. p. 184. 3. Missal. p. 186. 4. Lema. Tropologiae from the p. 188. 5. Sequences. [J. J.]

Latin, Translations from the large proportion of the translations of Latin hymns into English are found in the present volume in the various hymns in use in the Episcopal Church. These hymns are annotated in the text and in the footnotes. A great number of recent texts, however, remain, of which no use has been made, although many are of great merit, and a considerable number are of higher excellence, and are better adapted for congregational use, than those now in use. The author has, therefore, collected these hymns in the appendix. The object of this article is to gather these translations together in such a manner as will enable the student to find what he needs with comparative ease.

i. In the first column is the list which follows:—
down, the opening line of each hymn, or phrase—tion of a hymn, which has been translated, is given in full.

ii. In the second column the Authors' Names are when known, are indicated by Capital Letters as follows:—

We have also to note that—

- (1) The three tra. from St. Augustine (Aug.) in the foregoing list are metrical paraphrases of portions of his prose works.
(2) Those lines which are given thus: "De ascensione Domini*", are not the first lines of Latin hymns, but are Latin titles which preface English hymns in a few works. These titles are retained in this list that the origin of the hymns so prefaced may be clearly defined.
(3) Those hymns marked A. V. (P) are noted by M. Leon Gautier in his 2nd ed. of the Œuvres Postiques d'Adam de St. Victor, 1881, as falsely attributed to that author.

In addition to searching this list for translations, the Index to Latin first lines should also be consulted, as numerous hymns (as known to the general reader) are either taken from longer hymns, or are altered forms of the authors' texts. The following list of recent collections of Latin Hymns and Sequences, which are not indexed on p. 656, is added here for the convenience of students:—

Lavater, Johann Caspar, s. of Johann Heinrich Lavater, physician in Zürich, was b. at Zürich, Nov. 15, 1741. He entered the Academic Gymnasium at Zürich in 1758, and in the end of 1769 began his studies in its theological department. After completing his course he was ordained in the spring of 1762, but did not undertake any regular clerical work till April 1769, when he was appointed diaconus of the Orphanage church at Zürich, where he became pastor in 1775. In July 1778 he was appointed diaconus of St. Peter's church, and in Dec. 1786 pastor there. When, during the Revolutionary period, the French laid the Swiss Cantons under contribution, and then in April 1799 deported ten of the principal citizens of Zürich, Lavater felt compelled to protest in the pulpit and in print. Consequently while on a visit to Baden, near Zürich, he was seized by French dragoons, May 14, 1799, and taken to Basel, but was allowed to return to Zürich, Aug. 16, 1799. When on Sept. 25, 1799, the French under Massena entered Zürich, Lavater was treacherously shot through the body by a French grenadier, who had just before thanked him for his charity, and from this wound he never entirely recovered. He resigned his charge in January 1800, and d. at Zürich, Jan. 2, 1801. (Koch, vi. 499; Allg. Deutsche Biog., xvii. 783, &c.)

Lavater was one of the most celebrated and influential literary characters of his time: a most popular and striking preacher; and a lovable, genuine, frank-hearted man, who was the object of an almost incredible veneration. His devotional writings (Aussichten in die Ewigkeit, 4 vols., Zürich, 1780–71, &c.), and his works on Physiognomy (Von der Physiognomik, Leipzig, 1772; Physiognomische Fragmente, 4 vols., Leipzig and Winterthur, 1773–76), were eagerly read and admired all over Europe, but were very soon forgotten. He was no theologian, and his warm heart and fertile imagination led him into many untenable positions. His works on Physiognomy are without order or philosophical principles of connection, and their permanent interest is mainly in the very numerous and often well-executed engravings. Of his poems the Schweizerlieder (Bern, 1767, 4th enlarged ed., 1775), are the utterances of a true patriot, and are the most natural and popular of his productions. His Epic poems (1) Jesus Messias, oder die Zukunft des Herrn, n.d., Zürich, 1769, a poetical version of the Apocalypse; (2) Jesus Messias, oder der Evangelium und Apostelgeschichte in Gesängen, 4 vols., Winterthur, 1763–66. (3) Joseph von Arimathæa, Hamburg, 1794) have little abiding value.

As a hymn-writer Lavater was in his day most popular. His hymns are well adapted for private or family use. Many of them are simple, fresh, and popular in style, and evangelical, earnest and devout in substance. But for church use he is too verbose, prolix, and rhetorical. Of his hymns (some 760) a considerable number survive in German collections compiled before 1850, e.g. the Berlin N. L. S., ed. 1840, has 12; the Wittenberg G. R., 1832, has 15; the Hamburg G. R., 1832, has 23, &c.

But in the more recent collections almost appeared, e.g., the new hymn-book for the Saxony, 1843, has not a single one. Then appeared principally in the following works: (1) Christliche Lieder, Zürich, 1771. (2) Gebrauche des Wayssenhause zu Zürich, (3) Christliche Lieder der Vaterländer besonders auf der Landtschaft, gesammelt, (4) Zweytes Fünftzig Christlicher Lieder, (5) Christliche Lieder . . . Zweytes Buch, 1769. (6) Nachzüg Lieder nach dem Catechismus, Zürich, 1769. (Nos. 1–6 Library, Berlin, and 3–6 in the Brit. Mus.)

Those of his hymns which have English include:—

1. O du, der einst im Grabe lag. his Lieder, &c., 1772, No. 7, in 9 entitled “Sunday Hymn.” Incl. Zürich G. R., 1787 and 1853; Buns 1833, No. 6, &c. The tr. in C. U. i

Lawson, John, was b. at Trowbridge, Wiltshire, July 24, 1787. He was articled to a wood-crafter in London; but believing that his knowledge of various manual arts might make him useful in the foreign mission field, he offered himself to the Baptist Missionary Society, and was sent to India. He arrived at Serampore in 1812, and soon rendered good service by showing how to reduce the types for printing used in the Eastern languages. He subsequently became pastor of a Baptist Church in Calcutta, devoting also much time to the work of education. He d. Oct. 22, 1825. Mr. Lawson was an accomplished naturalist and a good musician, but his favourite recreation was the composition of poetry. Orient Harping, Roland, and other poems were published by him between the years 1820 and 1825. Two of his hymns were printed in the Baptist New Selection, 1828:-

1. Father of mercies, condescend. Prayer for a Missionary.
2. Fountain of truth and grace and power. Prayer for the Jew.

Lead, kindly Light, amid the encircling gloom. Card. J. H. Newman. [Evening. Divine Guidance Desired.] This exquisite lyric has been the cause of much controversy, arising from the facts that, first, the statement has been made that it was the passionate outpouring of the author's soul with regard to entering the Roman Communion or no; and the second, that the closing lines—

"And with the morn those angel faces smile,
Which I have loved long since and lost awhile," through their ambiguity, have led to several ingenious interpretations, some of which appeared in Notes and Queries in 1880. The answer to each of these statements must be given, as far as possible, in Cardinal Newman's own words.

i. Cardinal Newman, in his Apologia Pro Vita Sua, 1864, pp. 94-100, sets forth his attitude at the time this lyric was written, both towards the Church of England and the Church of Rome, in a most careful and elaborate manner. His statements, in a condensed form, but in his own words, are:-

"While I was engaged in writing my work on the Ariens [1832], great events were happening at home and abroad, which brought out into force and passionate expression the various beliefs which had so gradually been winning their way into my mind. Shortly before, there had been a Revolution in France; the Bourbons had been dismissed; and I believed that it was unchristian for nations to cast off their governors, and much more, sovereigns who had the divine right of inheritance. Again, the great Reform Agitation was going on around me as I wrote. The Whigs had come into power; Lord Grey had told the Bishops to set their houses in order; and some of the Prelates had been insulted and threatened in the streets of London. The vital question was how were we to keep the Church from being liberalized? there was such apathy on the subject in some quarters, such intellectual alarm in others; the true principles of Churchmanship seemed so radically decayed, and there were such distractions in the councils of the Clergy. With the Establishment thus divided and threatened, the ignorant of its true strength, I compared that fresh vigorous power of which I was reading in the first centuries. . . . I said to myself, 'Look on this picture and on that'; I felt affection for my own Church, but not tenderness; I felt dismay at her prospects, anger and scorn at her do-nothing perplexity. I thought that if Liberalism once got a footing within her, it was sure of the victory in the event. I saw that Reformation principles were powerless to rescue her. As to leaving her, the thought never crossed my imagination; still I ever kept before me that there was something greater than the Established Church, and that that was the Church Catholic and Apostolic, set up from the beginning, of which she was but the local presence and organ. She was nothing, unless she was this. She must be dealt with strongly, or she would be lost. There was need of a second Reformation.

"At this time I was disengaged from College duties, and my health had suffered from the labours involved in the composition of my volume. . . . I was easily persuaded to join Hurrell Froude and his father, who were going to the south of Europe for the health of the former. We set out in December, 1832. It was during this expedition that my verses which are in the Lyra Apologetica were written; a few indeed before it; but not more than one or two of them after it. . . . The strangeness of foreign life threw me back into myself; I found pleasure in historical sites and beautiful scenes, not in men and manners. We kept clear of Catholics through internal, of the hidden life of Catholics I knew nothing. I was still driven back into myself, and felt my isolation. England was in my thoughts solely, and the news from England came rarely and imperfectly. The Bill for the suppression of the Irish Sess was in progress, filled my mind. I had fierce thoughts against Liberals. It was the success of the Liberal cause which irritated me inwardly. I became fierce against its institutions and its manifestations. . . . Especially when I was left to myself, the thought came upon me that deliverance is wrought, not by the many but by the few, not by bodies but by persons. . . . I began to think I had a mission. . . . When we took leave of Monsignor Wiseman, he had earnestly expressed a wish that we might make a second visit to Rome; I said with gravity, 'We have a work to do in England,' and went down at once to Sicily, and the presentiment stronger. I struck into the middle of the island, fell ill of a fever at Leonforte. My servant thought I was dying, and begged for my last directions. I gave them, as he wished; but I said 'I shall not die.' I repeated, 'I shall not die, for I have not sinned against light, I have not sinned against light.' I never have been able to make out at all what I meant. I got to Castro-Giovanni, and was laid up there for nearly three weeks. Towards the end of May I set off for Palermo, taking three days for the journey. Before starting from my inn in the morning of May 26th or 27th, I set down on my bed, and began to sob bitterly. My servant, who acted as my nurse, asked what ailed me. I could only answer, 'I have a work to do in England.' I was aching to get home; yet for want of a vessel I was kept at Palermo for three weeks. I began to visit the Churches, and they calmed my impatience, though I did not attend any services. I knew nothing of the Presence of the Blessed Sacrament then. At last I got off in an orange boat bound for Marseilles. We were becalmed a whole week in the Straits of Bonifacio. Then it was that I wrote the lines 'Lead, kindly light' (June 16, 1833), which have since become well known. I was writing verses the whole time of my passage. At length I got to Marseilles, and set off for England. The fatigue of travelling was too much for me, and I was laid up for several days at Lyons. At last I got off again and did not stop night or day till I reached England, and my mother's house. My brother had arrived from Persia only a few hours before. This was Tuesday. The following Sunday, July 14th, Mr. Keble preached the Assize Sermon in the University Pulpit. It was published under the title of 'National Apostasy.' I have ever considered and kept the day as the start of the religious movement of 1833.

In writing of further changes of thought which he underwent during the succeeding six years, Cardinal Newman says, Apologia, p. 214:—

"Now to trace the succession of thoughts, and the conclusions, and the consequent innovations on my previous belief, and the general conduct, to which I was led, upon this sudden visitation (stated on the previous page). And first, I will say, whatever comes of saying it, for I leave inferences to others, that for years I must have had something of an habitual notion, though it was latent, and had never led me to distrust my own convictions, that my mind had not found its ultimate rest, and that in some sense or other I was on journey. During the same passage across the Mediterranean in which I wrote 'Lead, kindly light,' I also wrote verses, which are found in the Lyra under the head of 'Providences,' beginning, 'When I look back.' This was in 1833; and, since I have begun this narrative, I have found a memorandum under the date of September 7, 1829, in which I speak of myself, as 'now in my room in Oriel College, slowly advancing, &c., and led on by God's hand blindly, not knowing whither He is taking me.'"

This, then, is the author's account of the state of his personal feeling, and the circumstances which surrounded him at the time that he wrote what must be regarded as one of the finest lyrics of the nineteenth century. Angry at the state of disunion and supineness in the Church he still loved and in which he still believed; confident that he had "a mission," "a work to do in England;" passionately longing for home and the converse of friends; sick in body to prostration, and, as some around him feared, even unto death; feeling that he should not die but live, and that he must work, but knowing not what that work was to be, how it was to be done, or to what it might tend, he breathed forth the impassioned and pathetic prayer, one of the birth-pangs, it might be called, of the Oxford movement of 1833:—

"Lead, Kindly Light, amid the encircling gloom, Lead Thou me on;
The night is dark, and I am far from home,
Lead Thou me on.
Keep Thou my feet; I do not ask to see
The distant scene; one step enough for me.
I was not ever thus, nor prayed that Thou Shouldst lead me on;
I loved to chase and see my path; but now
Lead Thou me on.
I loved the garish day, and, spite of fears,
Frids ruled my will: remember not past years,
So long Thy power hath blessed me, sure it still Will lead me on O'er moor and fen, o'er crag and torrent, till
The night is gone,
And with the morn those angel faces smile,
Which I have loved long since, and lost awhile."

ii. The ambiguity of the two has caused much speculation. Summarised, the principal are:—

1. The troubled and hesitating "amid encircling gloom": the night the soul has lost awhile; the "angel faces" Fancy and Hope and Youthful Confidences divine forms of faith and assurance, which long since," which had accompanied the early fervour of his belief.—30 April 3, 1880.

2. A second interpretation is that "are the faces of the ministering spirits minister to them who shall be heirs of life."

3. A third interpretation is that the prescience of the Christian's hope of the resurrection morn with those loved on earth. (N. & Q., April 3, 1880.) of the lines is set forth in a wind churches of Cheredon. An angel soaring upwards, bearing away from in his arms, and these two lines are quoted.—3. & Q., 6th S. II., Aug. 7, 1880, p.

4. A fourth interpretation is, "While business, and care and pleasures of life weary us, when the world is leaving us on us, and we once more catch glimpses that other life which most of us dreamed, and perhaps, though all too then the better soul wakes from its slumber, and with the morn those faces."—N. & Q., 6th S. I., May 9, 1880, p.

5. Another explanation is suggested. "Do these lines refer to the more intimate of infants with the unseen world of lost in later years?"—N. & Q., 6th S. p. 480.

To all which, and to all others that have been made or Cardinal Newman gives answer to Dr. Greenhill, printed in Feb. 25, 1880 p. 257, and republished 6th S. I., March 20, 1880, p. 25.

"The Oratory, J

"My dear Dr. Greenhill,—You ask questions; but I think it was Keble in his own case, answered that he was to be critic, or to give a sense to what and though I am not like him, a people that I am not bound to remember, whatever it was, at the end of. Anyhow there must be a statue-writers of verse, or it would be quite art, which is the expression, not of a nation and sentiment, one were obliged examination on the transient states upon one when home sick, or sea-sick, or way sensitive, or excited.

"Yours most truly, Jos

We may add that in this meaning of a passage written the author is not alone. We and other poets have confessed infirmity.

iii. The history of the lyric is very simple, the feature being the changes in may be taken as setting forth Cardinal Newman attached periods in his history. It is the British Magazine, March motto "Faith-Heavenly Light in Lyra Apostolica, 1836, p. 1 reading. "Unto the godly light in the darkness": an author's Occasional Verses, being "The Pillar of the Cloud."

iv. Alterations in, and additions are not numerous. Bishop additional stanza reads in the Lyra “*Continue along the narrow rugged path,

Thyself hast trod,
Lead, Saviour, lead me home in Child-like faith
Home to my God,
To rest for ever after earthly strife
In the calm light of everlasting life.*”

To this stanza Bishop Bickersteth has added this explanation in his Notes of 1878:—

“The last verse, which is founded on the Collect for St. John the Evangelist’s day, and which it is hoped will be found in unison with those that precede it, was added by the Editor from a sense of need and from a deep conviction that the heart of the belated pilgrim can only find rest in the Light of Light.”

Alterations of the text are few. In Dr. Bonar’s Bible H. Bk., 1845, No. 116, it begins, “Lead, Saviour, lead, amid the encircling gloom”; and “the garish day,” is changed to “the glare of day.” Two or three books have also adopted this reading. In the Hys. for Church and Home, Compiled by Members of the Protestant Episcopal Church, Philadelphia, 1860, it begins, “Send, Lord, Thy light amid th’ encircling gloom.” “I loved the garish day,” reads, “I loved day’s dazzling light”; and at iii. ll. 1-4:—

“No long Day power hath bless’d me, surely still Thy will lead me on Through dreary hours, through pain and sorrow, till
The night is gone.”

In the Unitarian Hys. of the Spirit, Boston, U. S. A., 1864, the original first line is restored; “day’s dazzling light” is retained; and the lines above are repeated with “dreary hours” changed to “dreary doubts.” Another alteration is “Send kindly light,” &c. (H. W. Beecher’s Plymouth Coll., 1855). The weakness of all these amendments is the surest safeguard against their general adoption.

The hymn has been rendered into several languages. The Latin versions are:—“O Lux benigna doce,” by the Rev. H. M. Macgill, 1876; and “O Lux alma, bono protinus auspice,” by the Rev. Jackson Mason, and “Alma Lux, inter media tenebrarum,” by “C. G. G.,” both in the Guardian of Jan. 3, 1883. [J. J.]

Lead us, Heavenly Father, lead us. J. Edmeston. [Holy Trinity—Invocation of J. Appeared in his Sacred Lyrics, set two, 1821, in 3 st. of 7 l., and entitled “Hymn, Written for the Children of the London Orphan Asylum (Air Lewis).” In 1858 it was included in the Bap. Ps. & Hys., No. 564, and from that date it has grown gradually into favour until it has attained to a foremost place amongst modern hymns in all English-speaking countries. It is generally given in a correct and complete form as in Thring’s Coll., 1882. It has been rendered into several languages, including Latin. The Rev. R. Bingham, in his Hymns. Christ. Lat., 1871, has fr. it as “Duc nos, Genitor Coelestis.” [J. J.]

Leader of faithful souls, and Guide. C. Wesley. [The Christian Race.] Appeared in Hys. for those that Seek, and those that Have Redemption, 1747, No. 41, in 8 st. of 6 l., and entitled “The Traveller” (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. iv. p. 262). In 1776, Toplady included from thence it passed into various collections of the Church of England, including Bickersteth’s Christian Psalms, 1833, and others. As found in the Hys. H. Bk., 1780, No. 69, and later editions, and in the collections of other Methodist bodies, st. v. and vii. are omitted. Its American use is great. [J. J.]

Leaton-Blenkinsopp, Edwin Clennell, M.A., s. of G. Leaton-Blenkinsopp, was b. Jan. 1, 1819, and educated at University College, Durham (B.A. 1839, M.A. 1842). Taking Holy Orders, he was, in 1844, Curate of Ormskirk; in 1851 Incumbent of St. James’s, Lathom; in 1855 Chaplain to the English Army in Turkey, at Algiers in 1859, and at the Fortifications of Portsmouth in 1862. In 1863 he became Rector of Springthorpe, Lincolnshire. Mr. Leaton-Blenkinsopp has pub. The Doctrine of Development in the Bible and in the Church, 1869, and has contributed numerous papers to periodical literature. His original hymns, together with trans. from the Latin, appeared in Lyra Messianica, 1864; Lyra Mystica, 1865; and The People’s H., 1867. The trans. are annotated under their respective first Latin lines. His original hymns include:—

1. O noble martyr, thou we sing. R. George. In the People’s H., 1867.
2. The Tree of Life in Eden stood. The Tree of Life. In Lyra Mystica, 1865.
3. When Israel came from Egypt’s land. Walters. Idem. In Lyra Messianica, 1864.

His signature is “E. L. B.” [J. J.]

Lebt ihr Christen, so alldhier auf Erden. [Following Christ.] Founded on 2 Tim. iv. 7, 8, and included as No. 352 in Freylinghausen’s Neues geistreiches G. B., 1714, and repeated as No. 635 in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863.

Tr. as:—“O ye true, Christians, that rough path to tread,” by Miss Cox, in Lyra Eucharistica, 1864, p. 370, and her H. from the Ger., 1864, p. 97. [J. M.]

Lees, Jonathan, sprung from an old Nonconformist family in Lancashire, was b. at Manchester, Aug. 7, 1835. He was educated at Owens College and the Lancashire Independent College, and in 1861 went as Congregationalist Missionary to Tientsin, in North China, where he has since laboured.

Mr. Lees was one of a band of young men who, about the year 1852, began the first Sunday Evening Ragged School in England, in Sharp Street, Angel Meadow, Manchester. For use in this school he made a collection of hymns, which after a time was published as Sacred Songs for Home & School (Hemmer, Manchester, &c.) Nine or ten of these hymns were composed by Mr. Lees. During his residence in China he has pub. several collections of Temperance Melodies, the largest and most recent being entitled Original & Selected Temperance Songs, together with Hymns & Hymns, intended mainly for the use of Sailors in the Far East. (Shanghai, 1881). Fifteen of these, composed chiefly of popular secular tunes, are by Mr. Lees himself. Besides the hymns and songs contained in these books, about 20 other pieces have appeared on ballads or in magazines. One, a missionary hymn commencing “They are coming, they are coming,” is in W. R. Stevenson’s Second Hymnal, where by mistake it is attributed to another author.

One of the most widely used of Christian Hymnals in the Chinese language was edited by Mr. Lees in 1872 (London Mission, Tientsin); and more recently he has prepared a smaller volume, consisting chiefly of translations of the more popular hymns in I. D. Hankey’s collection. For particulars concerning these books see Article on Missions, Foreign. [W. R. S.]

is her Infant Hymnings. Then followed Hymns and Scenes of Childhood, or A Saviour's Gift (London, James Burns; Nottingham, Dearden), 1842, in which the Infant Hymnings were incorporated. Concerning Pt. II. of the Hys. and Scenes, &c., Miss Luson says, "For the best of the Poems in the second part, the Writer is indebted to a friend." In the Rev. Henry Formby's Catholic Hymns arranged in order for the principal Festivals, Feasts of Saints, and other occasions of Devotion throughout the Year, Lond., Burns and Lambert, s.d. [1851]. "Imprimatur, N. Cardinalis Wiseman, May 3rd, 1853," her tr. of Victimæ Pascuuli ("Christ the Lord is risen to-day"), and her "Loving Shepherd of Thy Sheep" (also in Hys. & Scenes, 1842), were given under the signature "M. L." Her Paraphrases and Hymns for Congregational Singing (most of which were re-written from the Scottish Translations and Paraphrases (q.v.), 1781) were pub. by Wertheimer & Co., Lond., in 1853. In the Irvingite Hys. for the Use of the Churches, 1864, there are five of her original hymns and four of her trs. from the Latin under the signature of "J. E. L.:" and most of these were repeated in the 2nd ed., 1871. In addition Miss Luson is the author of several other works, including The Christian Child's Book, 1848, The Child's Book of Ballads, 1849, Songs of Christian Chivalry, 1848, Margaret, a Poem, 1850, The Seven Spiritual Works of Mercy, and others. Her hymns in C. U. include:—

1. A little child may know. God's love of little children. In Hys. & S. of Childhood, 1842, No. 20, in 8 st. of 4 l.
2. Dear Saviour, to Thy little lambs. For Purity. In Hys. & S. of Childhood, 1842, No. 19, in 4 st. of 8 l.
3. Father, I (we) love Thy house of prayer. Public Worship. In Hys. & S. of Childhood, 1842, No. 76, in 3 st. of 12 l. It is usually abbreviated.
4. Have ye counted the cost? Soldiers of the Cross. In Songs of Christian Chivalry, 1849, p. 9, in 10 st. of 9 l. Usually abbreviated as in the Enlarged London H. Bk., 1873.
5. In the dark and silent night. Confidence. In The Christian Child's Book, 1848, in 3 st. of 3 l., with the refrain, "Hallelujah." It is in the Irish Church Hymnal, 1873, and other collections.
6. Jesus Christ, my Lord and King. Child's Promise of Christ. In Hys. and S. of Childhood, 1842, No. 18, in 6 st. of 4 l.
7. King of Saints and King of glory. All Saints. In her Paraphrases & Hys., 1853, p. 66, in 7 st. of 8 l.
8. Saviour, teach me day by day. Adherence. In Hys. & S. of Childhood, 1842, No. 49, in 4 st. of 8 l. In several hymn-books in Great Britain and America.
9. Songs of glory all the sky. Christmas. In the Irvingite Hys. for the Use of the Churches, 1864, No. 21, in 3 st. of 8 l., with the refrain "Hail! Lord Jesus."
10. Stand we prepared to see and hear. Advent. In the Irvingite Hys. for the Use of the Churches, 1864, No. 173, in 4 st. of 8 l. Written in 1860.
11. Sweet the lesson Jesus taught. Christ blessing little children. In Hys. & S. of Childhood, 1842, No. 1, in 5 st. of 4 l.
12. Wake the song, O Zion's daughter. A cento of much excellence, which see.
13. Wake, ye saints, the song of triumph. Ascension. Written in 1861, and pub. in the Irvingite Hys. for the Use of the Churches, 1864, No. 60, in 4 st. of 8 l., with the refrain "Hallelujah." In st. li, li. 3, 4, and 6 are from C. Wesley's "Hail the day that sees Him rise."

Miss Luson's most popular hymn, "Loving Shepherd of Thy Sheep," and her trs. from the Latin are noted elsewhere in this work. Of Miss Luson's personal history we can gather nothing. [J. J.]

Of the hymns ascribed to him, some on do the following are the most ir

1. The day is past and gone Evening. This is in universal Leland's claim to the authorship disputed, although it is supported by particulars. It was first in by the invaluable Hartford Selection (Congregational) of 1799. Its first appearance, so far as known, was in Phœbe, or, A Selection of Spiritual Songs, by George Roberts, Petersburg, 1792, No. 82.

2. O when shall I see Jesus! The Christian Race. This vigorous lyric is ascribed by Dr. Hitchcock, in Hymns and Songs of Praise, 1874, to Leland. It has generally been regarded as anonymous, and is of uncertain date, cir. 1807, or probably earlier.

3. Christians, if your hearts are warm. Holy Baptism. Adult. The only hymn by Leland which can be authenticated by date and circumstances is this familiar doggerel:—

"Christians, if your hearts are warm, Let and now can do no harm."

Dr. Belcher says, in his Historical Sketches of Hymns, &c., 1859, that it was written for one of Leland's large baptisms in Virginia, 1779.

Leon, Johannes, was a native of Ohrdruf, near Gotha. He was for some time an army chaplain, then in 1557 pastor at Königsee (Schwarzburg-Rudolstadt), in 1560 at Gross-Mühlhausen, and in 1575 at Wölitz, near Ohrdruf. He d. at Wölitz, about Easter, 1597 (Allg. Deutsche Biog., xviii, 298; Wackernagel, i. pp. 466, 654; iv. p. 490, &c.). Leon's hymns appeared principally in his (1) Handbüchlein, Frankfurt-am-Main, 1568, and (2) Trostbüchlein. The ed. printed at Nürnberg, 1611, has a preface of Dec. 9, 1588, so that the first ed. was probably 1589. His hymns are reprinted in Wackernagel, iv., Nos. 671-715. The only hymn ascribed to him which has passed into English is:—

Ich hab mein Sach Gott heimgestellt. For the Dying. Wackernagel, iv. p. 519, gives this, in 18 st. of 5 l., from the Psalmen, geistliche Lieder und Kirchengesänge, Nürnberg, 1589; with a long note, in which he traces all the st. save xl., xiv., xv., xvii., to Leon's Trostbüchlein, and to his Leich-Prädigten [i.e. "Funeral Sermons"], 1581-82. Mittell., No. 347, cites it as in the Psalmen, geistliche Lieder und Lobgesänge, Strassburg, x.d., but apparently before 1587. In the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1460.

This hymn has been frequently ascribed to Dr. Johann Pappus (b. Jan. 16, 1649, at Lindau on the Lake of Constance; 1671, professor of Hebrew at the University of Strassburg; d. at Strassburg, July 12, 1610); but this ascription has not been traced earlier than about 1640, e.g. in the Antiphonale sacrum, Gotha, pt. III., 1644, No. 18, and the Königsberg G. B., 1640, p. 630. Leuckmann, in Koch, viii. 609, thinks that Pappus may have arranged the hymn in its present form. It was probably suggested by a song beginning, "Ich hab mein Sach zu Gott gestellt," which Wackernagel, iii., Nos. 1242, 1243, quotes from a Leipzig broadsheet of 1645, and other sources.

This hymn has been tr. as:—

1. My Life I now to God resign. By J. C. Jacobi, in his Psalm. Ger., pt. II., 1725, p. 56 (1732, p. 199), omitting st. vii., xv., xvi. Repeated in the Moravian H. Bk., 1754, pt. i., No. 313 (1896, No. 1242, beginning with the tr. of st. viii., "Trench us to number so our days"), and in J. A. Lasroche's Coll., 1841 and 1852. In the Bible H. Bk., 1845, it begins with st. iii., "What is this life? a constant scene."

2. My all I to my God commend. A very good tr. of st. i., iii., vi., viii., x., xi., xiv., xvii., by A. T. Russell, as No. 246, in his Ps. & Hym., 1851; repeated, abridged, in Dr. Fagenstecher's Coll., 1864, and Kennedy, 1863, No. 156. Dr. Kennedy also gives a cento, beginning with the tr. of st. x., "Few are our days and sad below."

3. My cause is God's, and I am still. A good tr. of st. i., xi., xiv., xvi., xviii., by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 2d Ser., 1858, p. 210; repeated, omitting the trs. of st. iii., xvii., in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 127. [J. M.]

Leslie, Emma. [Toko, Emma.]

Leslie, Mary Eliza, is daughter of Andrew Leslie, for many years Baptist missionary in Calcutta, was b. at Monghyr, Jan. 13, 1834, became a member of her father's church, and having received a superior education, was for eight years Superintendent of an Institution for the education of Hindoo young ladies. Since 1877 Miss Leslie has been engaged in various kinds of philanthropic work in Calcutta. Her publications include:—

(1) Sea and Other Poems, 1862. (2) Sorrows and Aspirations, 1868. (3) Heart Echoes from the East: or, Sacred Lyrics and Sonnets (London, Kisteb, 1861). (4) The Dawn of Light: a Story for Hindu Women, 1867. (5) Eastern Blossoms, a Story for native Christian Women, 1878. (6) A Child of the Day, 1882.

In the Heart Echoes from the East is a lyric beginning "They are gathering homeward from every land (Death contemplated), which has been exceedingly popular, and has been reprinted in many forms. It is in W. R. Stevenson's School Hymnal, 1880. Several of Miss Leslie's lyrics and sonnets are very good, and worthy of the attention of hymn-book compilers. [W. R. S.]

Let all the world in every corner sing. G. Herbert. [Praise to God, the King.] First pub. posthumously in his Temple, in 1633, p. 45, in the following form:—

"ANTIPHONA.

"Cho. Let all the world in every corner sing,
My God and King.

"Vers. The heavens are not too high,
His praise may thither fly:
The earth is not too low,
His praises there may grow.

"Cho. Let all the world in every corner sing,
My God and King.

"Vers. The church with psalms must shout,
No dove can keep them out:
But above all, the heart Must bear the longest part.

"Cho. Let all the world in every corner sing,
My God and King."

Although admirably adapted for musical treatment, the original form of the text is not popular with modern editors. We have the original in Thuring's Coll., 1882; and in the Hymnary, 1872, the same, with the addition of a doxology. Usually the text is rearranged, sometimes, as in the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871; Horner's Comp. Hys., 1884, &c.; and again, in other collections in a different manner. This hymn is also in C. U. in America. [J. J.]

Let earth and heaven agree, Angels and men, &c. C. Wesley. [Praise of Jesus as the Redeemer.] Appeared in the Hys. on God's Everlasting Love, London, 1741, No. 11, in 10 st. of 6 l. (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. iii. p. 71). In whole or in part, it soon came into general use not only by the followers of the Wesleya, but also by many who, on Calvinistic grounds, opposed them, and against whom the Hys. on God's Everlasting Love were written. M. Madan included st. i.-iv. in his Ps. & Hys., 1760, No. 90, and this form of the hymn was repeated by A. M. Toplady in his Ps. & Hys., 1776; and again by others to modern hymn-books in the Church of England. Nonconformists also copied this form of the hymn. In the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, st. i.-v., vii. and ix. were given as No. 33. This is the form of the hymn most popular in G. Britain and America. The following centos are also in C. U.:-

1. Jesus, harmonious Name. Composed of st. iii. iv., vii. and ix., is in the American Andover Sabbath H. Bk., 1866, and others.

2. Jesus, transporting sound. In the Hymnary, 1872, this is composed of st. ii.-iv., vi.-ix., x., considerably altered.

In G. J. Stevenson's Methodist H. Bk. Notes, 1883, p. 42, several interesting reminiscences of this hymn are recorded, mainly from Wesleyan sources. [J. J.]

Let Jacob to his Maker sing. P. Doddridge. [God the Guide of Israel.] 1st pub. in Job Orton's edition of Doddridge's (posthumous) Hymns, &c., 1755, No. 102, in 5 st. of 4 l., and again in J. D. Humphreys's edition of the same, 1839, No. 118. It is in C. U. in its full form in America, and also, beginning with st. ii. as "God knows our souls in all their fears," in the Boston Church Pastorals, 1864. [J. J.]

Let me alone [another] this only year. C. Wesley. [Death Anticipated.] Pub. in Preparation for Death in Several Hymns, 1772, No. 48, in 4 st. of 8 l. (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. vii. p. 398). In 1830 it was given in the supplement to the Wes. H. Bk. as "Let me alone another year"; and this has been repeated in a few collections. The hymn "Because for me the Saviour prays," in the American Meth. Episco. Hymns, 1849, No. 381, is from this hymn, and begins with the second half of st. i. with the lines transposed. [J. J.]

Let me be with Thee where Thou art. Charlotte Elliott. [Heaven Anticipated and Desired.] This hymn, which is usually attributed to the 1st ed. of Miss Elliott's Hours of Solace, &c., 1836, really appeared in her brother's Brighton Ps. & Hys., 3rd thousand, 1839, No. 412, in 4 st. of 4 l., and signed "C. E." It was repeated, with slight alterations, in her Hys. for a Week, 1842; and again, slightly altered, in late editions of the Invalids H. Bk. The text usually followed by modern editors is that of 1842, as in Lord Selborne's Bk. of Praise, 1862, where it is given with the change in st. iv., l. 3, of "life nor death" to "death nor life." The S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871, is an exception in favour of several changes in the text, and Kennedy's, 1863, is the greatest departure from the original. The American books vary in their texts in common with those of G. Britain. [J. J.]

Let not your hearts with anxious thoughts. William Robertson. [Ascension.] First appeared as No. 14 in the Draft Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, 1715, as a version of John xiv. 1-5, in 6 st. of 4 l. In the Draft of 1781, No. 42, st. iii. was omitted; st. iv. rewritten; and st. i. slightly altered.

Thence, unaltered, in the pub. issued in that year by the Church and still in use. In the marking daughter of W. Cameron (p. 200) is ascribed to Robertson, and in the 1781 text to Cameron. Text of 1781 is included in the Ps. & Hymns, 1867, and a few others. In Porter's Selection, it is altered to "Let not ye Jesus speak," and in the Twice Coll., 1845, p. 60, to "Let not troubled now."

Let party names no more [For Unity.] 1st pub. in the Coll. of Asht. and Evans, 1784 st. of 4 l., entitled "Christ signed 'B. B.'" It was also dome's (posthumous) Hymns, 638, but with the title communion of Saints." In some begins with st. ii., "Among earth"; and in others the changed to "Let names of." In its various forms it is amongst Nonconformists, in America.

Let saints on earth & [voices] raise. J. Evans. as the Prince of Peace. Put of Burder's Coll. of Hymns, 4 st. of 4 l., and headed "P." It is found in several modern as Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., Songs of G. & G., 1872, and o

Let songs of praises fl Cotterill. [Whitsuntide.] P. in his Selection, 8th ed., 1819, of 6 l.; and again, with his gomery's Christian Psalmist. It is in C. U. in most English tries, and sometimes reduced New Cong., 1859 and 1874.

Let such as would dwell. William Cameron. First appeared as No. 14 in Translations and Paraphrase version of Eccles. vii. 2-6. In the public worship ed. is by the Church of Scotland st. i. was reversed, ll. 1, 2 ll. 3, 4; and ll. 3, 4 reworded began "While others crow mirth;" ll. 1, 2 of st. ii. bein and ll. 1, 3 of st. iii. altered. of the Trs. & Paraphs. by th of W. Cameron (p. 200, ll.) Cameron. The revised text cluded in the United Pres Porter's Selection, Glasgow other collections.

hymn was printed in the Evangelical Magazine, June, 1818, in 8 st. of 4 l., and headed "Hymn composed for the Anniversary of the Missionary Society by J. Montgomery, Esq., and sung at Spa Fields Chapel, May 14th, 1818." It was included in Catterill's Sel., 8th ed., 1819, No. 236, in 4 st. of 8 l. In Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 554, st. iv. is omitted, and the rest are divided into 6 st. of 4 l. This form is repeated in his Original Hymns, 1853, No. 260, in the revised text, and is in several collections in G. Britain and America. The hymn "From day to day, before our eyes," in Beecher's Plymouth Coll., 1855, the N. Y. Songs for the Sanctuary, 1865, and other American hymn-books, is composed of st. iv.-viii. of the Evangelical Magazine text of 1818. (Catterill's st. iii. iv.) [J. J.]

Let us ask the important question. J. Hart. [Passiontide.] Pub. in his Hymns, &c., 1759, No. 56, in two parts, the second being "Great High Priest, we view Thee stooping," and headed "Faith and Repentance." Pt. i., in 5 st. of 8 l., asks and answers the important question, "What is it to be a Christian?" and Pt. ii., in 3 st. of 8 l., is a Prayer based upon the answer given in Pt. i. Both parts are in C. U., but the second ("Great High Priest, &c."), which is by far the fluer of the two, is also by far the more popular. It is in several collections in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

Let us love, and sing, and wonder. J. Newton. [Praise for Redeeming Love.] Appeared in his Twenty Six Letters on Religious Subjects, by Unicorn, 1774, in 6 st. of 6 l., and headed, "Praise for Redeeming Love." It was also given in the Gospel Magazine, May, 1774, and in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. iii, No. 82. It is in C. U. in G. Britain and America, and sometimes in an abbreviated form. [J. J.]

Let us praise God this day. [The Annunciation.] Included anonymously in Hym. for the Festivals and Saints Days of the Church of England, Oxford, 1846. It was repeated, with the addition of a doxology, in Stretton's Church Hym., 1850, in Johnston's English Hym., 1852, and other collections. The text of H. A. & M., 1875, is from Fallows's Sel., 1847. In addition to the original, two altered forms of the text are in C. U.:

1. Praise we the Lord this day. This slightly altered text was given in Murray's Hymnal, 1852; the Sabbathary H. Bk., 1857; Annals with new doxology, 1863; the N. P. C. W. Church Hym., 1871, &c. The last-named has Murray's text with the omission of st. iii.

2. O praise the Lord this day. This text in the Hymnary, 1872, is somewhat freely altered, and is in limited use. [J. J.]

Let us sing the King Messiah. J. Ryland. [Praise to Christ as King.] This fine paraphrase of Ps. xlv., in 7 st. of 6 l., is dated by Dr. Ryland's son "July 31st 1790" [s. mss.]. It appeared in Hymns Included for the Use of the United Congregations of Bristol at their Monthly Prayer Meetings for the Success of the Gospel at Home and Abroad, begun in 1797, Bristol, 1798. The Preface is dated Feb. 26, 1798, and is signed by eight ministers of whom Dr. Ryland is first on the list. This hymn was given, with omissions, in the Bap.

New Selection, 1828, and subsequently in numerous collections in G. Britain and America. The original text is given in Ryland's Pastoral Memorials, 1825, and in D. Sedgwick's reprint of Ryland's Hymns, 1862.

[W. T. B.]

Let us the sheep in Jesus named. J. Cennick. [Praise to Jesus, the Good Shepherd.] Pub. as a "Hymn of Praise in a Dialogue," in his Sacred Hym. for the Use of Religious Societies, Bristol, 1743, Pt. i., No. iv., in 5 st. of 4 l.; and again, in the same year, in his Sacred Hym. for the Children of God in the Days of their Pilgrimage, Lond., 1743. This, in common with all Dialogue hymns with the Moravians, was sung antiphonally, the men taking the first half of each verse, and the women the second. The opening stanzas of this hymn are thus printed for antiphonal singing:—

1. "Let us the Sheep in Jesus nam'd,
Our Shepherd's Mercy bless:
Let us, whom Jesus hath redeem'd,
Show forth our Thankfulness."
2. "Not unto us, but Thee alone,
Bless'd Lamb, be glory giv'n;
Here shall Thy Prayers be begun,
But carried on in Heaven."

In its original form this hymn is unknown to the modern collections, but, beginning with st. ii., as:—

"Not unto us, but Thee alone, Bless'd Lamb, be glory given," it appeared in Rippon's Bap. Sel., 1787, No. 384, and is found in several modern hymnals in G. Britain and America, including the Bap. Ps. & Hym., 1858 and 1880, Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1866, and others. The first stanza of the hymn, "Not unto us but to Thy name" (q.v.), is also from this hymn. [W. T. B.]

Let us with a gladsome mind. J. Milton. [Ps. cxxxi.] This paraphrase of Ps. 136 was written according to his biographers, Warton and Mitford, in 1623, when Milton was fifteen, and attending St. Paul's School, London. It appeared in his Poems in English and Latin, 1645 (2nd ed. 1675), in 24 st. of 2 l., with the refrain—

"For His mercies aye endure, Ever faithful, ever sure."

In its full form it is not in C. U., but numerous abbreviations, all beginning with the opening stanza, are in use in all English-speaking countries. Another arrangement in i. m., and without the refrain, is given in Martineau's Hymns, 1840, No. 100, as "O let us, with a joyful mind." Sir H. W. Baker's version of Ps. cxxxi., "Praise, O praise our God and King"; H. Trud's "Praise, O praise our heavenly King," in Skinner's Daily Service Hymnal, 1864, the People's H., 1867, and others; and T. Darling's "Come, and let us praise sing," in his Hymns, 1887, are all based upon Milton's text. [J. J.]

Let worldly minds the world pursue. J. Newton. [Dedication of self to God.] Pub. in R. Conyers's Ps. & Hym., 1774, No. 180, and again in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. iii., No. 59, in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed "Old things are pass'd away." It is in C. U. in its full form, and also abbreviated, beginning with st. iii., "As by the light of opening day." This abridged text is more popular than the full form of the hymn. It was given in Bickersteth's Christian Psalmody, 1833, and is found in several modern hymn-books. [J. J.]

Let Zion's watchmen all awake. P. Doddridge. [Ordination—Easter Days.] Written at "Floor, Oct. 21, 1736" [D. Mus.], in 5 st. of 4 l. This is Floore in Northamptonshire, and the hymn was written for the ordination of a Minister, probably for that place. It was pub. in Job Orton's ed. of Doddridge's (posthumous) Hymns, &c., 1755, No. 324; and again in J. D. Humphreys's ed. of the same, 1839, No. 350. Its use is extensive, especially in America. [J. J.]

Lewers, Jana. [Gray, Jans.]

Lewis, George, D.D., of Llanuwchllyn, was b. at Trelech, Caernarthenshire, in 1762. His parents were members of the Established Church, but he became a minister of the Independents. He was a learned man, and highly respected by all who knew him. He is the author of several works of great value, and the hymn "Rhyfedd na bumawn 'nawr" was composed by him. He d. in 1822. [W. G. T.]

Lie down, frail body, here. H. Bonar. [Burial.] Appeared in his Hys. of Faith and Hope, 1st series, 1857, in 13 st. of 4 l., and entitled, "The Flesh resting in Hope." It is given in an abridged form in a few collections, including Dale's English H. Bk., 1875. From it also is taken the cento "Rest for the toiling hand." [J. J.]

Liebe die du mich zum Bilde. J. Scheffler. [The Love of Christ.] No. 107, in Bk. iii., 1657, of his Heilige Seelenlust (Werke), 1862, i. p. 180, in 6 st. of 6 lines, entitled, "She [the Soul] surrenders herself to the Everlasting Love." Included as No. 35 in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, with an additional st. as iv., "Liebe die du Kraft und Leben," added when the hymn was given in the Geistreiches G. B., Halle, 1697, p. 184.

"It is one of the most beautiful and profound hymns of the spiritual love of the soul to her Saviour," says Lausmann in Koch, viii. 290. Wetzel, in his A. H. U., 771-776, relates that one evening in 1723 Benjamin Schultze, a German missionary at Madras, sang it from Freylinghausen, and was so delighted with it that he determined that his Malabar scholars should share his pleasure. That evening he translated verse after verse, not resting till he had finished it two hours after midnight. The success he attained led him to translate 103 hymns from the German which are still sung in South India.

3. Wir kommen, deine Huld :

very greatly altered form of st. xii. B., as No. 850, in the Berlin G. B., 1829; retaining little either from Lieblich or Diterich. It is repeated in Bunsen's Versuch, 1833, No. 866, and the Württemberg G. B., 1842, No. 543. The tr. in C. U. from this form is:—

We come, our hearts with gladness glowing. A good tr. from the text of 1829, by Miss Cox, in her Sacred Hys. from the German, 1841, p. 199; repeated, abridged, in the American Unitarian Hys. for the Ch. of Christ, Boston, 1853, and in Archdeacon Pott's Coll., 1861.

Another tr. is: "O Lord, Thy goodness we adore," by Lady E. Porteus, 1843, p. 29.

ii. Gott ist getreu! Sein Herz, sein Vaterhaus. Trust in God, 1768, p. 181, in 9 st. of 9 l., entitled, "The faithful God, 1 Cor. x. 13." It is a beautiful hymn, and has been specially appreciated in Württemberg, where it is found in the Württemberg G. B., 1791, No. 24 (1842, No. 45). Lausmann, in Koch, viii. 416, says it was the favourite hymn of J. C. F. Steudel, Professor of Theology at Tübingen, who d. 1837; was sung by the Württemberg contingent at a field service near Toul, in August, 1870, during the Franco-German War, &c. The tra. are:—

1. Our God is true! Thou He will ne'er forsake. In full, by Dr. H. Mills, in his Hosae Ger., 1845 (1858, p. 182); repeated, abridged, in the Amer. Luth. Gen. Synod's Coll., 1852, and the Ohio Evang. Luth. Hyl., 1880.

2. My God is true! His heart, a Father's heart. A good and full tr. by R. Massie, in his Lyra Domestica, 2nd Ser., 1864, p. 119; repeated, in full, in Reid's France Bk., 1872; and abridged in the Ibrox Hyl., 1871.

iii. Hier ist mein Herz! Mein Gott, ich geb' es dir. Self-surrender to God, 1768, p. 79, in 9 st. of 9 l. (l. 1, 9 of each st. being "Hier ist mein Herz"), entitled, "Surrender of the heart to God," and suggested by Proverbs xxiii. 26. Included, as No. 763, in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863. Tr. as:—

Here is my heart! my God I give it Thee. A good tr., omitting st. iv., by Mrs. Findlater, in H. L. L., 1st Ser., 1854, p. 16 (1884, p. 21). Included, in full, in Boardman's Sol., Philadelphia, U. S., 1861; Lyra Eucharistica, 1863 and 1864, &c. The tra. of st. i.-iii., v., reduced to 6's, and beginning, "Here is my heart, I give it Thee," were included in the American Sabbath H. Bk., 1854; and, repeated, omitting st. iii., in the Christian H. Bk., Cincinnati, 1865.

iv. So bringen wir den Leib zur Ruh. Burial, 1774, p. 204, in 12 st., entitled, "At the burial of a corpse." In the Bavarian G. B., 1854, No. 229, beginning "Nun bringen wir." Tr. as, "This body, weary and distressed," by Dr. H. Hartaugh, in the German Reformed Guardian, June, 1843, p. 187. [J. M.]

Liebster Immanuel, Herzog der Frommen. [Love to Christ.] Included in Dr. Abhanus Fritsch's Himmels-Lied, 2nd ed., 1679 [Leipzig Town Library; not in 1st ed., 1670], No. 36, p. 243, in 5 st. of 6 l., entitled "The everwished for sweet Jesus." The hymn has been ascribed to Fritsch (b. Dec. 16, 1629, at Mueheln on the Geissel near Merseburg; became, 1657, tutor to Count Albert Anton of Schwarzburg-Rudolstadt; d. Aug. 24, 1701, as Chancellor and President of the Consistory at Rudolstadt), but on no clear evidence. In the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1342. In the Geistreiches G. B., Halle, 1697, p. 160, and many later books, it begins, "Schönster Immanuel." The tr. in C. U. is:—

Dearest Immanuel, Prince of the lowly. A tr. of st. i.-iv., by M. W. Stryker, as No. 183 in his Christian Chorals, 1885. [J. M.]

Liebster Jesu! du wirst kommen. [Adeunt.] Included in the Geistreiches G. B., Halle, 1697, p. 257, in 10 st. of 5 l. Repeated in Porst's G. B., 1713 (ed. 1835, No. 561, ascribed to Christoph Pfeiffer, who was only born in 1689). The tr. in C. U. is:—

Jesus, Saviour, once again. A good but rather free tr. of st. i.-iii., v., vii., by Miss Dunn in her H. from the Ger., 1857, p. 47. Repeated in full in Dr. Pagenstecher's Coll., 1864; and, omitting st. iii., in Curwen's Sabbath H. Bk., 1859.

Another tr. is:—"Precious Jesus! Thy returning," in the British Herald, Oct. 1866, p. 344, and Heid's Priser Bk., 1872, No. 226. [J. M.]

Liebster Jesu wir sind hier Deinem Worte nachzuleben. B. Schmolek. [Holy Baptism.] 1st pub. in his Heilige Flammen (ed. 1769, No. 115, p. 180, apparently first in the 3rd ed., 1796), in 7 st. of 6 l., entitled "Reasonable Reflections of the sponsors on their way with the child to Baptism." Included in many German collections, and recently as No. 462 in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863. Tr. as:—

1. Jesus, Lord, Thy servants see. A good tr., omitting st. iv., by Miss Cox in her Sacred H. from the Ger., 1841, p. 63 (1864, p. 73). Repeated in full in Mercer's C. P. & H. Bk. 1857; and, abridged, in Mercer's Ox. ed., 1864, Horison's H. & Anthems, 1851, and the Wes. H. Bk., 1875.

2. Blessed Jesus, here we stand. A good tr., omitting st. iv., by Miss Winkworth in her Lyra Ger., 2nd Ser., 1858, p. 86 (in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 90). Included in the Scottish Hyl., 1869, &c.; and, in America, in the Pennsylvania Luth. Ch. Bk., 1869, Presb. Hyl., 1874, &c. According to Kühler (Hist. Notes to Lyra Ger., 1865, p. 220), this version was sung, April 27, 1863, at the baptism of the Princess Victoria of Hesse at Windsor Castle.

3. Blessed Jesus, we are here. A good tr., omitting st. v., by Dr. Kennedy, as No. 234 in his Hymn. Christiana, 1863.

4. Blessed Lord, Thy servants see. This is No. 166 in Dr. Allon's Suppl. Hys., 1668, and consists of tra. of st. i., vi., altered from Miss Cox, and of st. vii., altered from Miss Winkworth. Repeated in Dr. Dale's Eng. H. Bk., 1875, Horder's Cong. Hys., 1884, &c.

5. Dearest Jesus! we are here. On Thy tender grace relying. In full, by Dr. M. Loy, as No. 222 in the Ohio Lutheran Hyl., 1880.

Other tra. are:—(1) "O blessed Saviour! here we meet," by Lady E. Porteus, 1843, p. 29. (2) "According to Thy Gospel, we," by Dr. G. Walker, 1860, p. 34. (3) "Following Thy words of grace," as No. 946 in the Bavarian H. Bk., 1866. [J. M.]

Life is the time to serve the Lord. J. Watts. [Life for God.] 1st pub. in his Hys. & S. Songs, 1st ed., 1707, and again in the 2nd ed., 1709, Bk. i. No. 88, in 8 st. of 4 l., and headed "Life the Day of Grace and Hope." It is found in a few modern collections. In the authorized issue of the Scottish 2 X 2

Translations and Paraphrases, 1781, No. xv., on Eccl. ix. 4, &c., it is recast as:—

"As long as life its term extends, Hope's blest dominion never ends."

In the markings of the Trans. & Paraphs., by the eldest daughter of W. Cameron (q.v.), this recast is attributed to Cameron. Its use is very extensive. [J. J.]

Life nor death shall us dis sever. Bp. B. Heber. [Easter.] Pub. in his posthumous Hymns, &c., 1827, p. 79, in 3 st. of 4 l. It is based on the Gospel for the 5th S. after Easter, and is found in several modern hymn-books, including Dale's English H. Bk., 1875, and others. [J. J.]

Lift it gently to the steeple. J. M. Neale. [Dedication of Bells.] Written in 1865 for an Office for the Benediction of a Bell, compiled by Dr. Neale, for the Benediction of one at Hampton-Aston, Oxon, by the late Bishop of Oxford [Wilberforce]. In 1866 it was included in Dr. Neale's Original Sequences, Hymns, and other Ecclesiastical Verses, p. 81, in 10 st. of 4 l., and supplemented by the following note:—

"The above hymn is taken from an Office for the Benediction of a Bell, compiled by the writer for that of one, by the Bishop of Oxford, at Aston-Hampton, Oxon (No. it was Hampton-Aston); the first example. It is believed, of such a service, if not since the Reformation, at all events since Caroline times. It was again used by the Bishop of Salisbury, at the Benediction of the newly recast Wolsey bell, at Sherborne Minister.

This hymn has also been rearranged as, "Now at length our bells are mounted" (st. ix. slightly altered being placed as st. i.), so as to make it suitable for singing after the bells are fixed and ready to be rung. [J. J.]

Lift the strain of high thanksgiving. J. Ellerton. [Church Restoration.] Written for the reopening of St. Helen's Church, Torporley, Cheshire, 1869, and pub. in the S. P. C. K. Church Hym., 1871. From Church Hym. it has passed into numerous collections in G. Britain and America. From this hymn, and "In the Name which earth and heaven" (q.v.), Mr. Ellerton compiled a cento for the reopening of the nave of Chester Cathedral, January 25, 1872. [J. J.]

Lift up your heads, ye gates of brass. J. Montgomery. [Missions.] This hymn is amongst the "M. Hymns," but is undated. It was printed in the Evangelical Magazine, 1843; and again in Montgomery's Original Hymns, 1855, No. 265, in 19 st. of 4 l., and entitled "China Evangelized"; Pt. ii. beginning "Ye armies of the living God"; and Pt. iii. "No carnal weapons these ye bear." In the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871, No. 291, is composed of st. i.-iii., xviii., xix. somewhat altered. [J. J.]

Light of life, seraphic fire. C. Wesley. [Holiness desired.] Appeared in Hymns and Sacred Poems 1749, vol. ii., in 3 st. of 8 l., as No. 18 of "Hymns for those that wait for full Redemption" (P. Works, 1808-72, vol. v. p. 369). In 1780 it was given in the Wes. H. Bk., No. 387, with the omission of st. iii. This form of the hymn has come into extensive use in G. Britain and America. It also sometimes appears as "Light of life, celestial Fire," as in Kennedy, 1863. [J. J.]

Light of life so softly at Bonar. [The Light of Life due in his work The Song of the Lord and Other Pieces, 1872, p. 113. l., and repeated, with the omission in the Scottish Presb. Hymnal for 1882.

Light of the lonely pilgrim. Sir E. Denny. [Missions.] App. & Hymns and Spiritual Songs, Lond. 1842, Pt. i., No. 69, in 6 st. of 4 l. collection (J. G. Deck's) it passes an abbreviated form into names in all English-speaking counts become one of the most widely author's hymns. In addition to the hymnals, it was also pub. l in his Hymns & Poems, 1848, p. 1870, p. 14, and headed "The Morning for the Morning," with the q Cowper's Task:—

"Thy saints proclaim Thee King; and Thy title is engraven with a pen Deep'd in the fountain of eternal love by which it was apparently, cento from this hymn, beginning "Come, blessed Lord! bid every a few collections.

Light of the world thou bless. Cecil F. Alexander. [The Light of the World.] From Descriptive and Devotional, 189 st. of 4 l., and based on the the Light of the world," into the 1867, No. 361, and others.

Light of those whose day is. C. Wesley. [Christmas.] his Hymns for the Nativity of the No. xi., in 3 st. of 8 l. (P. W. vol. iv. p. 116). It was adopted in 1760, R. Congers in 1774, A. 1776, and most evangelical hymn of that period. At the first it was an unaltered form, but the changes in 1776 were follow until at the present time, with numerous collections in all European countries, it is difficult to find alike. The secret lay in its Arminian hymn, but so could be easily turned to account for the alterations in use. Cotterill, 1810, Bickersteth, 1835, are mainly answerable. given in the Supplement to the in an unaltered form.

Like the first disciples strange, glad hour. G. J. Communion. [A Post-Communion.] A Post-Communion printed for the first time at an article in the Evangelical Magazine, 1861, by the Editor, the Reynolds, D.D., on "Hymns," with reference to those by Mr. Rawson of 4 l., and headed "We have." In 1864 it was included in Hymns.

Lindemann, Johann. Lindemann, burgess at Gotha, c. 1550. He attended the Gotha, and apparently thereafter graduated M.A. at Jena. He became cantor at Gotha in 1571 or 1572, and retired from this post, on a pension, in 1631. In 1631 he was a member of the new Council at Gotha. The date of his death is unknown. (Monatshefte für Musikgeschichte, 1878, p. 73; also from Superintendent Dr. Otto Dreyer, of Gotha, &c. The extant register of births at Gotha only goes back to 1596, that of deaths only to 1639.)

Lowmann's Wendes Amorum Filii has been pub. at Erfurt, 1694 and 1698. The ed. of 1698 (Royal Library, Berlin) is entitled Amorum Filii (Wendes Dage: Das ist Begegnung vieldliche und ganz ammutige lateinische und deutsche neue Stürze oder Weyhenachten, Geenglein. He is there described as Cantor and musician to the churches and schools at Gotha. Whether he is the author of the words of any of these pieces is not certain. Nor is it even clear that he was the composer of the melodies; but it is evident that he must have arranged and harmonised them. The two best known of these pieces are "Jesu willst uns weihen" (No. 3, in 3 st.), and "In dir ist Freude" (Love to Christ). The latter is No. 7 in 3 st. of 12 l. It is set to a tune adapted from a madrigal by Giovanni Giacomo Gastoldi da Garavaglio (his Ballate appeared at Venice, 1591, 1593, 1595, 1597, &c.), and is marked as "Hollent: L'innamorato: A lieta Vita: a d." The text is repeated in the Chr. L. S., 1551, No. 42. The tr. in C. U. is: "In Thee is gladness." A full and good tr. by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyrical, 2nd Ser. 1856, p. 155, and her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 136.

[J. M.]

Linquunt tecta Magi principis urbis.
C. Coffa. (Epiphany.) Included in the Paris Hymnary, 1736, for Lauds on the feast of the Epiphany, and again in his Hymni Sacri, 1736, p. 40. It is also in Carl Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1855. Tr. as:—

Lo! the pilgrim Magi leave their royal halls.
By J. D. Chambers, in his Lauda Syon, 1857, p. 110. It was repeated in the People's H., 1837; the Hymnary, 1872, and others.

Other tra. are:—

1. From princely walls in Eastern pomp array'd. By I. Williams, in the British Magazine, 1835, and his Hym. tr. from the Persian Brev., 1836.
2. The princely city passing by. J. C. Kierle, in O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1864.

Lintrup, Severin Falk, was b. Nov. 17, 1700, at Tarnum, in Jutland, Denmark. In 1723 he entered the University of Copenhagen as a student of theology. In 1725 he became curate in charge in the island of Lyø, near Fünen; in 1727 chaplain at Wartau, near Copenhagen; and in 1727 preacher at the Wallo-Spital, near Copenhagen. During his tenure of this last post he became acquainted with some of the Moravian missionaries, and resigning his appointment in 1734, he joined the Brethren at Herrnhut. Subsequently he preached in several of their communities (e.g. at Gudenberg, in Silesia, on its foundation in 1743), and was also sent on various missions to Denmark and Sweden. He d. at Herrnhut, Feb. 15, 1758 (G. F. Otto's Lexicon . . . Oberlausitzischer Schriftsteller, vol. ii., 1802, p. 490, &c.). In the Historische Nachricht to the Brüder G. B., 1778, two hymns are ascribed to him, viz., Nos. 1048, at ii., iii., and 1073. One of these is in English C. U., viz.:—

Mein Knecht: wirf doch einen Blick. Christian Church. As printed as No. 1172 in Appendix vi., (i.), 1737, to the Herrnhut G. B., 1738, in 12 st. of 4 l. In the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 1013, it is reduced to 6 st., viz., i., iii., viii., ix., x., xii. Tr. as: (1) "O Lord, lift up Thy countenance." Is full, from the Brüder G. B., by F. W. Foster, as No. 513 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1749 (1866, No. 718), st. l., iii., iv. of this version are in Dr. Martinson's Hymns, 1840 and 1873. Another tr. is:

"My dearest Saviour: cast an eye." As No. 40 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1742 (1754, pt. ii. No. 142). [J. M.]

Liscovius, Salomo, a. of Johann Liscovius, or Lischkow, pastor at Niemtsch, near Guben, was b. at Niemtsch, Oct. 25, 1640. He entered the University of Leipzig in 1660, and then went to Wittenberg, where he graduated m.a., and was crowned as a poet. Shortly thereafter he was appointed pastor at Otterwisch with Stockheim near Lausigk, and ordained to this post April 21, 1664. He was then, on March 29, 1685, appointed second pastor of St. Wenzel's church, at Wurzen. He d. at Wurzen, Dec. 5, 1689. (Koch, in Sam. Rotermund's continuation of Jöcher's Gelehrten-Lexikon, iii. 1850, &c.)

Liscovius was one of the best German hymn-writers of the second rank in the 17th cent. That is, though his hymns are not lacking in intensity, in depth, or in beauty of form, yet neither by their intrinsic value nor by their adoption into German C. U. are they worthy to be ranked with the hymns of Gerhart, Franck, Schiller, and others of this period. They appeared mostly in his Christlicher Frauenstammes Geistlicher Tugend-Spiegel. The preface to this book is dated April 14, 1672, and it was probably pub. at Leipzig in 1672; but the earliest ed. extant is that at Leipzig, 1703. Dr. J. L. Pasig pub. 51 of his Geistliche Lieder, with a short biographical notice, at Halle, 1855. One of his hymns is tr. as:

Schatz über alle Schätze. Love to Christ. His finest hymn. 1672 as above, and Pasig, 1855, p. 52. In the Nürnberg G. B., 1676, No. 809, and the Bilin G. L. S., ed. 1843, No. 26. It is in 7 st. of 4 l., the initial letters of the stanzas forming his Christian name Salomon. The tr. are:—

- (1) "Treasure above all treasure," as No. 441 in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754. In the 1749 and later eds. (1866, No. 449), it begins "Jesus, my highest treasure."
- (2) "Treasure beyond all treasure," by Miss Dunn, 1857, p. 60.
- (3) "Thou treasure of all treasures," by Miss Warrington, 1863, p. 27.

[J. M.]

Litanies, Metrical. 1. The form in which Metrical Litanies are given in the hymn-books now in use, is of modern growth. A few hymns with refrains are found in some of the older collections, as "In the hour of my distress," by Herrick; "Lord of mercy and of might," by Bp. Heber; "Saviour, when in dust to Thee," by Sir R. Grant; "By Thy birth, O Lord of all," by Mrs. Harriet Mozley; "Jesus, Lord of life and glory," by J. J. Cummins, and a few others. These, however, were usually classed not as Metrical Litanies, but as hymns, and as such were embodied in the collections.

2. The Metrical Litanies of the modern hymn-books began in 1854 with one or two in rhythmical prose on the Childhood and Passion of Jesus, one of the first, if not the first, being No. 63 below. By slow degrees these have been increased, written mainly in rhymed metre, the first being No. 21 below, until provision has been made for most of the Fasts and Festivals of the Church. In a few instances, as noted hereafter, they are published as separate works from the hymn-books. The usual practice, however, is to give them as a separate division or section of the hymnal.

3. Amongst the earliest writers of Metrical Litanies were Dr. F. G. Jæ, Dr. Littledale, and G. Moultrie; and amongst the later Bp. H. E. Bickersteth, Sir H. W. Baker, and T. B. Pollock.

4. In arranging the Metrical Litanies for reference great difficulty is presented in their sameness, and the habit which some authors and compilers have of beginning several Litanies with the same stanza. Another difficulty is created by compilers of hymnals breaking the Litanies into parts which differ from those adopted by the authors. In the following list of Metrical Litanies these difficulties have been kept in view:—

1. All our sinful words and ways. Lent. By L. V. in Mrs. Brock's Children's H. Bk., 1861.
2. Bread of Life: the angels' Food. Holy Communion. By Dr. Littledale in the People's H., 1867, No. 596.
3. By the word to Mary given. The Birth of Jesus. In the Hymnary, 1872, this is given as "By the angel's word of love."
4. By the Name which Thou didst take. The Childhood of Jesus.
5. By the blood that flow'd from Thee. The Passion of Jesus.
6. By the first bright Easter-day. The Resurrection of Jesus.
Nos. 3-6 are by F. W. Faber in his Hymns, 1862, the Roman Catholic Hys. for the Year, &c.
7. By the prayer that Jesus made. For Unity. In the Eucharistic Hymnal, 1877.
8. By Thy birth, O Lord of all. The Childhood of Jesus. By Mrs. Harriet Mouley, pub. in Hys. for the Children of the Ch. of England, &c., 1835. In the R. F. C. K. Church Hys., 1871, it is considerably altered, and stas. v. vi. are rewritten.
9. Christ, the woman's promised seed. Christmas and Epiphany. A. W. Hutton.
10. Christ, Whose mercy guideth still. Lent and Passiontide. R. F. Littledale in the People's H., 1867, altered in Hys. and Chords, &c. (Ch. Extension Association), 1871, to "Christ, Whose mercy lasts for aye."
11. Father, from Thy heavenly throne. Holy Communion. By J. S. B. Monnell.
12. Father, from Thy throne on high. For Little Children. By Mrs. Stratfield in Mrs. Carey Brock's Children's H. Bk., 1861.
13. Father, hear Thy children's call. Lent. By T. B. Pollock in H. A. & M., 1875.
14. God the Father, from on high. For a Sick Person. In the Priest's Prayer Book, by R. F. Littledale, 1864.
15. God the Father, from Thy throne.  Rogation Days. By Sir H. W. Baker in H. A. & M., 1861.
16. God the Father, hear and pardon. Lent and Passiontide. J. S. B. Monnell.
17. God the Father, hear our cry. Lent. In the Eucharistic Hymnal, 1877.
18. God the Father, in the sky. Holy Trinity. By W. J. Irons.
19. God the Father of all might. Lent. By A. W. Hutton.
20. God of God, and Light of Light. Holy Communion. By Sir H. W. Baker in H. A. & M., 1875.
21. God the Father, seen of none. Passiontide. By R. F. Littledale, written about 1860 for the schools of St. Mary the Virgin, Crown Street, Soho, London. In the People's H., 1867.
22. God the Father, throned on high. Jesus Glorified. By T. B. Pollock in H. A. & M., 1875.
23. God, the Holy Ghost, by Whom. The Holy Ghost. In the Eucharistic Hymnal, 1877.
24. Great, mysterious Trinity. For all Times. T. B. Pollock.
25. Hear us, Son of God, O hear. Of Commendation. By G. Moultre in the People's H., 1867; and again in the author's Espousals of S. Dorothea, 1870.
26. Heavenly Father, from Thy throne. Passiontide. V. Hutton. In Mrs. Brock's Children's H. Bk., 1861. [See Various.]
27. Heavenly Father, let Thy light. Missions. In Mrs. Brock's Children's H. Bk., 1861.
28. Holy Father, from Thy throne. Holy Trinity. "C. S." in Lyra Messianica, 1864, i.e. Charlotte S. Hoon.
29. Holy Father, hear our cry. The Holy Ghost. By Cecil Moore in Mrs. Brock's Children's H. Bk., 1861. [See Various.]
30. Holy Jesus, All in All. Jesus glorified in His Saints. T. B. Pollock, written for Hys. for Use in the Ch. of St. Etheldreda, Bishopsgate, 1873.

5. In many instances the opet in this list are those of the se the Litanies. This was nece great majority of the Litanies hymn-books with the Invocat Trinity, "God the Father, Ge "tial the Father, God the We lines of the parts of Litanies eluded, nor are the first lines the "Seven Words on the Cross nor of parts 2-4 of the " Four (see No. 37).

6. The Litanies attributed Baker appeared in H. A. & M Hutton, in a Supplement to ed., pub. by him in 1875; W. Ps. & Hys. for the Church, 1875, first on broadsheets, fro then in the People's H., 1867;

Litany Hymns, 1870, and his Parish Hymnal, 1873; and T. B. Pollack, in his Metrical Litanies for Special Services and General Use, 1870; and his Litany Appendix, 1871. These works, together with the hymnals named in the foregoing notes: Thring's Coll., 1882, the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871; and A Book of Metrical Litanies, Lond., Rivingtons, 1879, contain most of the Litanies available for use. Hymns which are also suitable as Litanies are indicated in the Index of Subjects and Seasons. [J. J.]

Little children, dwell in love. H. Alford. [St. John the Evangelist.] First appeared in his Hymns for the Sundays and Festivals throughout the Year, 1836 (see his Life), in 4 st. of 4 l. In 1844 it was included in his Poetical Hymns, No. 13, and marked, in error, as published therein for the first time. It is found in his Year of Praise, 1867; and in his Poetical Works, in the 8th ed. of which, 1868, it is dated 1835. It has passed into a few hymnals only. [J. J.]

Little drops of water. [Importance of Little Things.] The original of this hymn, by Dr. E. C. Brewer, was 1st pub. in Reading and Spelling, 1848, in 5 st. of 4 l. Subsequently it reappeared in a very much altered and improved form in the American Juvenile Missionary Magazine, also in 5 st. From that magazine it was copied into Hymns and Sacred Songs, pub. at Manchester by Fletcher and Tubbs, 1855, and from that collection it has passed into numerous children's hymnals in the United Kingdom. When the version found in the greatest number of collections is compared with the original it is found that the leading thought of the hymn and the first stanza are all that remain of that first published by Dr. Brewer, thus:—

|---|--|
| Dr. Brewer, 1848.  | American Version.   |
| 1. Little drops of water,Little grains of sand,Make the mighty ocean,Make the beautiful land.       | 1. Little drops of water,Little grains of sand,Make the mighty ocean,And the beautiful land.   |
| 2. Stray by straw the sparrowsBuilds its easy nest;Leaf by leaf the forestStands in verdured dress. | 2. And the little moments,Humble though they beMake the mighty agesOf eternity.                |
| 3. Letter after letterWords and books are made;Little and by littleMountains level laid.            | 3. Little deeds of kindness,Little words of love,Make our earth an Eden,Like the heaven above. |
| 4. Drop by drop is ironWorn in time away;Perseverance, patience,Ever win their way.                 | 4. So our little errorsLead the soul away,From the paths of virtueInto sin to stray.           |
| 5. Every finished labourOnce did but begin;Try, and go on trying,That's the way to win.             | 5. Little seeds of mercy,Sown by youthful hands,Grow to bless the nationsFor us heathen lands. |

The somewhat unfinished American text was extensively adopted to 1878, when Hp. Bicknell, in the revised edition of the Hymn Comp., made it more complete by adding:—

6. Little ones in glory
Swell the angels' song;
Make us meet, dear Saviour,
For their holy throng.

This last thought was taken up by Prebendary Thring, and in his Collection, 1880-82, was thus elaborated:—

Little children's angels,
Happy in the sky,
See their Heavenly Father
On His throne on high.

Little children's voices,
Heavenly choirs among,
Swell the angels' chorus
With their simple song.

Glorify then for ever
Be to Father, Son,
With the Holy Spirit,
Blessed Three in One.

In this manner has been built up a very pleasing and popular children's hymn out of a short poem of no interest or merit save its one idea of the power of little things. [J. J.]

Littledale, Richard Frederick, LL.D., D.C.L., s. of John Richard Littledale, merchant, was b. at Dublin on the 14th of Sept., 1838, and was educated at Beehive House Seminary, and Trinity College, Dublin. His University course was distinguished. In 1852 he became an University Scholar; in 1854 he was first class in Classics and gold medallist; in 1856 he won the Berkeley gold medal (for Greek), and other honours. He graduated B.A., 1855, M.A., 1858, LL.D., 1862, and D.C.L. at Oxford, 1862. Taking Holy Orders in 1856, he was Curate of St. Matthew's, in Thorpe Hamlet, Norwich, from 1856 to 1857, and of St. Mary the Virgin, Soho, London, from 1857 to 1861. Through ill-health he retired from parochial work in 1861, and devoted himself to literature. Dr. Littledale's publications amount to about fifty in all, and embrace Theological, Historical, Liturgical, and Hymnological subjects chiefly. His prose works include:—

(1) Application of Colour to the Decoration of Churches, 1857; (2) Religious Communities of Women in the Early Church, 1862; (3) Catholic Ritual in the Church of England, 1861; (4) Continuation of Dr. Neale's Commentary on the Psalms, vols. R., W., IV., 1868-74; (5) Commentary on the Song of Songs, 1869; (6) The Petrine Primacy, 1868; (7) Plain Reasons against joining the Church of Rome, 1868, &c.; (8) Short History of the Council of Trent; and several articles in the Encyclopædia Brit., 1862-68. His contributions to periodical literature have been also extensive and valuable.

Dr. Littledale's Liturgical, Devotional, and Hymnological works include:—

(1) Essays of the Holy Eastern Church, in the Original Greek, with translation into English, Note, &c., 1863; (2) Carols for Christmas and other Seasons, 1863; (3) The Priest's Prayer Book, with hymns, 1864, and with Brief Pontifical in 1870 and later eds.; (4) The People's Hymnal, 1867; (5) The Children's Bread. A Communion Office for the Young, with hymns, 1868; (6) Primitive Liturgies and Translations, 1868-69; (7) Children at Altars: being The Stations of the Cross in Verse for Singing, 1872; (8) The Christian Passover, 1873; (9) The Altar Manual, 1863-77. He was joint Editor of Nos. 2, 4, 8 and 9 with the Rev. J. E. Vaux; and of No. 6 with Dr. Neale.

In addition to a large number of hymns, original and translated, in the above works, Dr. Littledale has also directly contributed original and translated hymns to:—

(1) Lyra Kocharistica, 1863; (2) Lyra Marianica, 1864; (3) Lyra Mystica, 1865; (4) The Eucharistic Hymnal, 1877; (5) The Roman Hierarchy in English, by the Marquess of Bute, 1879; (6) The Altar Manual, 1864; (7) Suppl. to H. A. & M., 1868; (8) to the Night Hours of the Church; (9) to the St. Margaret's Hymnal (East Grinstead), 1875; and (10) to the Church Times, The Guardian, &c., &c.

Dr. Littledale's Hymnological works in verse consist of translations of Danish, Swedish, Greek, Latin, Syriac, German, and Italian hymns, together with original Carols, Hymns, and Metrical Litanies. His translations are annotated elsewhere in this Dictionary (see Index to Authors and Translators); his Carols under Carols; and his Metrical Litanies under Litanies. Metrical. His original hymns remain to be noted. These include the following:—

- i. In the Priest's Prayer Book, 1864:—
  1. Captain of Salvation. Christian Warfare.
  2. Christ, on Whose Face the soldiers. Passiontide.
  3. Christ, Who hast for sinners suffered. Passiontide.
  4. God the Father, from on high. For the Sick.
  5. Lord Jesu, by Thy passion. Passiontide.
  6. Lord, Who in pain and weariness. Passiontide.
  7. O Jesu, in Thy torture. Passiontide. In Meditations and Prayers on the Passion of Our Lord Jesus Christ, 1863.
  8. O Lord, to Whom the spirits live. All Souls.
  9. The clouds of sorrow rest upon mine eyes. For the Mourning.
- ii. In the People's Hymnal, 1867:—
  10. Christ, our song we lift to Thee. S. V. M.
  11. Christ, our Sun, on us arise. Whitsuntide. In Carols for Christmas, &c., 3rd series, 1864.
  12. Christ, the Lord, Whose mighty hand. Prayer for Peace.
  13. Day is past and gone. Evening. In the Church Times, Feb. 17, 1866.
  14. Eternal Shepherd, God most high. Faithful of a Sec or Parish.
  15. Eternal Wisdom, God most high. Common of Doctors.
  16. God eternal, infinite. Septuagesima.
  17. Hidden Saviour, great High Priest. Holy Communion.
  18. I believe in God the Father. The Creed.
  19. I worship Thee, Lord Jesu. Holy Communion. In the Church Times, May 10, 1865.
  20. In Paradise re-appearing. Burial of a Child.
  21. In songs of glad thanksgiving. General Thanksgiving.
  22. Lord, Whose gentleness is ever sure. In time of Plague.
  23. Now the sun is in the skies. Morning. In the Church Times, Jan. 27, 1866.
  24. O God of mercy, God of love. For Rain.
  25. O God, Who meetest in Thine hand. For those at Sea.
  26. O God, Whose Sole-Begotten left. Almsgiving.
  27. O sing to the Lord, Whose bountiful hand. Thanksgiving for Rain.
  28. Set upon Zion's wall. Ember Days.
  29. The Cedar of Lebanon, Plant of renown. Christmas. First pub. in Sedding's Christmas Carols, 1863.
  30. The fight is o'er, the crown is won. Burial of a Sister of Mercy.
  31. The wintry time hath ended. Thanksgiving for Fair Weather.
  32. We are marching through the desert. Processional.
  33. When the day hath come at last. The Judgment.

In addition to these, a few of the more widely used of Dr. Littledale's original hymns, as "From hidden source arising," and others, are annotated under their respective first lines. In the People's H., 1867, Dr. Littledale adopted the following signatures:—

- A. L. P., i.e., A London Priest.
- B., i.e., An initial of a former address.
- R. P., i.e., The initials of a former address.
- D. L., i.e., Dr. Littledale.
- F., i.e., Frederick.
- F. R., i.e., Frederick Richard.
- L., i.e., Littledale.
- F. C. E., i.e., Priest of the Church of England.
- P. P. Rk., i.e., Priest's Prayer Book.

Taken as a whole, Dr. Littledale's trs. from the seven languages named above are characterised by general faithfulness to the originals, great simplicity of diction, good metre, smooth rhythm, and deep earnestness. His original compositions are usually on special subjects, for which, at the time they were written, there were few hymns, and are marked by the same excellent features of a good hymn as his translations. His main object throughout is to touch through Praise and Prayer.

Livermore, Abiel Abbot, at Wilton, New Hampshire, Oct. graduated at Harvard in Arts, Divinity, 1836. The latter year he was ordained as a Unitarian Minister at Keene, New Hampshire, 1850; Yonkers, New York 1853 he removed to Medford, as the President of the Theological Association's Christian one of the most widely circulated of American Unitarian collections that collection he contributed "breathing round" (Holy Communion) has passed into several collections Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1873.

Livermore, Sarah Whit A. Livermore (q.v.), was b. at Hampshire, July 20, 1789; and 3, 1874, having spent most of her life as a Teacher. Two hymns were published in the Cheshire P. A.'s Ch 1844:—(1) Glory to God, and Christmas, (2) Our pilgrim tread far. Missions. She wrote many which two are given in Putnam's Songs of the Liberal Faith, 187

Lloyd, William Freeman Uley, Gloucestershire, Dec. 22, grew up he took great interest in school work, and was engaged both at Oxford and at London was appointed one of the Ses Sunday School Union. He associated with the Religious Trinitarian Society, 1816. Miller (to whom we are indebted for these details) says in his Singer of the Church, 1869, p. 418:—

"He commenced the Sunday School, conducted for years the Child, the Weekly Visitor, and suggested the large number of books for children and literary productions were various, useful books for Sunday School teachers and numerous tracts. He was also compiler and reviser."

Mr. Lloyd d. at the residence of the Rev. Samuel Lloyd, at Gloucestershire, April 22, 1866. His hymns and poetical pieces are in the R. T. S. Child's Book of and the R. T. S. My Poetry. In 1853 he collected his pieces under the title of Thoughts in Rhyme Lloyd, Lond., Hamilton & Co. Of his hymns the following are the most notable:—

1. Come, poor sinners, come to me. (1835.)
2. Give thy young heart to Christ. oration to Christ.

3. My [our] times are in Thine hand. My God, I wish them there. Resignation. (1835.)
 4. Sweet is the time of spring. Spring.
 5. Wait, my soul, upon the Lord. In Affliction. (1835.)

The date given above, 1835, is from Spargoon's O. O. H. Bk., 1866, and was supplied to the editor by D. Sedgwick. We have no other authority for that date. The earliest we can find is No. 3, which is in Hym. for the Poor of the Flock, 1838. That hymn is very popular. [J. J.]

Lo, at noon 'tis sudden night. Ann Gilbert, née Taylor. [Good Friday.] From Hymns for Infant Minds, 1810, No. 25, in 6 st. of 6 l., and entitled "Jesus Christ came into the world to save sinners" (ed. 1886, p. 63). This is a kindred hymn to her "Jesus, Who lived above the sky," and is quoted in her Memorials, 1874, as an example of beautiful simplicity and accuracy (vol. i. p. 224). It has attained to a good position amongst hymns of established worth, in its extensive use, and is one of the most popular of Mrs. Gilbert's compositions. [J. J.]

Lo! He comes with clouds descending. Once for favoured sinners slain. [The Second Advent.] The hymn in modern collections which opens with these lines is a cento of a somewhat complicated character, and will need, for clearness and accuracy, the reproduction of the original text of several hymns.

1. The first form of the hymn is by John Cennick. There is evidence to show that it was sung by the congregation of the Moravian Chapel, in Dublin, on April 20, 1750; but the earliest printed text known appeared in the fifth (1752) ed. of Cennick's Collection of Sacred Hymns, &c., Dublin, [Samuel] Powell, and is as follows:—

[1] "Lo! He cometh, countless trumpets Blow before his bloody sign!
 'Midst ten thousand saints and angels,
 See the Crucified shine.
 Alleluiah!

Welcome, welcome bleeding Lamb!
 [2] "Now His merits by the harpers,
 Thro' the eternal deeps resounds:
 Now resplendent shine His nail-prints,
 Every eye shall see His wounds!
 They who pierced Him,
 Shall at His appearing wail.

[3] "Every island, sea, and mountain,
 Heaven and earth shall fly away!
 All who hate Him must, ashamed,
 Hear the trump proclaim His day:
 Come to Judgment!

Stand before the Son of Man!
 [4] "All who love Him view His glory,
 Shining in His beamed face
 His dear Person on the rainbow,
 Now His people's heads shall raise:
 Happy mourners!
 Now on clouds He comes! He comes!

[5] "Now redemption, long expected,
 Now, in solemn pomp appear:
 All His people, once despised,
 Now shall meet Him in the air:
 Alleluiah!

Now the promised kingdom's come!
 [6] "View Him smiling, now determined
 Every evil to destroy:
 All the nations now shall sing Him
 Songs of everlasting joy!
 O come quickly!
 Alleluiah! come, Lord, come!"

2. The next form is by Charles Wesley. In 1758 was pub. the Hym. of Intercession for All Mankind, a tract of 40 hymns. (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. vi. 143.) Of these there were three in the same metre, viz.:—

xxxviii. "Rise, ye dearly-purchased sinners."
 Anal. "Lo! He comes with clouds descending."
 xl. "Lift your heads, ye friends of Jesus."

The original text of the second of these hymns is as follows:—

"1. Lo! He comes with clouds descending.
 Once for favour'd sinners slain!
 Thousand, thousand saints attending,
 Swell the triumph of his train:
 Hallelujah,
 God appears, on earth to reign!"

"2. Every eye shall now behold Him
 Rob'd in dreadful majesty,
 Those who sat at nought and sold Him,
 Pierc'd, and nail'd Him to the tree,
 Deeply wailing
 Shall the true Messiah see.

"3. The dear tokens of his passion
 Still His dazzling body bears,
 Cause of endless exultation
 To his ransom'd worshippers:
 With what rapture
 Gaze we on those glorious scars!

"4. Yea, amen! let all adore Thee
 High on thine eternal throne!
 Saviour, take the power and glory,
 Claim the Kingdom for thine own!
 JAH, JAHUVAH,
 Everlasting God, come down."

3. The third form of the text is really the first form of the modern cento. It was given by M. Madan in his Coll. of P. & Hym., &c., 1760, No. 42. The text, with Madan's alterations in italics, is as follows:—

i.
 From Wesley. "Lo! He comes with Clouds descending.
 Once for favour'd Sinners slain!
 Thousand thousand saints attending,
 Swell the Triumph of his Train:
 Hallelujah!
 Hallelujah! Amen!"

ii.
 From Wesley. "Every Eye shall now behold Him,
 Rob'd in dreadful Majesty;
 Those who set at nought and sold Him,
 Pierc'd, and nail'd Him to the Tree,
 Deeply wailing,
 Shall the True Messiah see.

iii.
 From Cennick. "Ev'ry Island, Sea, and Mountain,
 Heav'n and Earth shall flee away;
 All who hate Him, must, confounded,
 Hear the Trump proclaim the Day:
 Come to Judgment!
 Come to Judgment! come away!"

iv.
 From Cennick. "Now Redemption long expected,
 See! in solemn Pomp appear!
 All his saints, by Man rejected,
 Now shall meet Him in the Air!
 Hallelujah!
 See the Day of God appear!"

v.
 From Wesley, Hym. No. xxxviii.
 as above. "Answer thine own Bride and Spirit, Hasten, Lord, the general Doom!
 The New Heav'n and Earth's inherit, Take Thy young Exiles Home:
 All Creation
 Travails groans; and bids Thee come,

vi.
 From Wesley. "Yea! Amen! let all adore Thee,
 High on Thine eternal Throne!
 Saviour take the Power and Glory;
 Claim the Kingdom for thine own!
 O come quickly!
 From Cennick. Hallelujah! come, Lord, come!"

4. This cento, with the omission of st. v., came into general use, and was rarely altered until after 1830, when Hall, in his Mitre II. Bk., 1836, and others, began to tamper with the text. Several editors were assisted in making their alterations and changes in the text through T. Oliver's hymn, "Come, Immortal King of Glory" (q.v.), first pub. in 20 sts. without date; and then in 36 sts. in 1763. The fourth st. of the 1763 text reads:—

"Lo! He comes with clouds descending;
Hark! the trump of God is blown;
And th' archangel's voice attending,
Make the high procession known,
Sons of Adam
Rise and stand before your God."

A cento from this hymn, and beginning with this stanza, is given in Lord Selborne's Book of Praise, 1882. Either from the original, or from Lord Selborne's cento, several lines by Oliver are interwoven in some modern collections with Madan's cento of 1760, as in Thring's Coll., 1882, where in st. iv. lines 5, 6 are from Oliver's st. xxxv.

5. The alterations which are found in the Madan cento in modern hymn-books are very numerous, and range from a single word to several lines. Of these altered versions more than twenty exist in the hymn-books now in C. U. in English-speaking countries. These alterations have not been made to suit any special school of thought, and in most cases they weaken, instead of strengthen the hymn. They can easily be detected by comparing any text with those given above.

6. Amongst the imitations of this hymn that are in C. U. we have "Lo! He comes with clouds descending," with st. ii. beginning "See the universe in motion." This imitation embodies a great many lines from Wesley's text. It is by M. Bridges, and was pub. in his Hys. of the Heart, 1848, in 9 st. In 1855 it was given in H. W. Beecher's Plymouth Coll., with the omission of st. iv., and attributed to Bridges in error. A second imitation is: "Lo! He comes with pomp victorious." This is given anonymously in the 1876 ed. of E. Harland's Church Psalter and Hymnal.

7. The Cennick-Wesley cento (Madan's) is one of the most popular hymns in the English language, and is in extensive use in all English-speaking countries. It has also been translated into many languages. The tr. into Latin, "Nube vertus en descendit," by the Rev. C. B. Pearson in his Latin Trs. of English Hymns, 1862, p. 19, is from Wesley's text, with the addition of Cennick's st. v.

8. The history of the tune "Oliver's" in its original form, and also in its recent form as "Helmaley," both of which are inseparably associated with this hymn, is given by Major Crawford in Grove's Dictionary of Music, vol. ii. p. 161. It appears from this article that Thomas Oliver (who is named above, and is the author of the popular hymn "The God of Abraham praise") constructed a tune partly out of a concert-room song, beginning "Guardian angels, now protect me," and the same was published in Wesley's Select Hymns and Tunes Annexed, 1765, under the title Oliver's. In 1769 it was reworked by M. Madan, and published under the name of Helmaley, in his Collection of Hymns and Psalm Tunes. Four years afterwards a burlesque called The Golden Pippin (1769) was produced in London, and failed. In 1776 it was revived in a shortened form, and one of the actresses, Miss Catley, introduced into it the melody of "Guardian angels" adapted to the words of the burlesque. Although there is no indication of this in the book, no doubt concluded the song, on which had based his tune eleven years dancing "Miss Catley's Hornpipe" for the purpose out of the then paltry. It seems, therefore, that a hymn tune being liable to the obtrusively cast upon it, of being "Miss Catley's Hornpipe," the made out of the tune. (See Maj article in the Diet. of Music, for together with the music in its v.

[For Men in Business.] Pub. in that Seek, and those that Have 1747, in 6 st. of 8 l, and headliever, in Worldly Business (P. 72, vol. iv. p. 214). It is in following forms:—

1. Lo! I come with joy to do. This Wes. H. Bk., 1740, No. 318, and has several collections in G. Britain and this st. iv. is usually omitted.

2. Behold I come with joy to do. Met. Episco. Hymns, 1848, and other thons. This is st. i., ii., and vi., slight

3. Since I've known a Saviour's Na form of st. ii., iv., and vi. was given Prayer Bk. Coll., 1828, and is representative of the Pro. Episco Church, 1871. In st. iii. an unfortunate change was retained in 1871. The original reads:—

"O that all the art might h
Of living thus to Thee."

This is changed to:—
"O that all the world might Of living, Lord to Thee."

10, what a glorious sight appears.
I. Watts. [The Kingdom of Christ.] 1st pub. in his Hym. & S. Songs, 1707, as a paraphrase of Rev. xli. 1-4, in 6 st. of 4 l. (2nd ed. 1709, Bk. i., No. 21). It is in C. U. in G. Britain and America. The most popular hymn with this opening line is, however, a cento compiled from it and Watts's "See where the great Incarnate God" (Hym. & S. Songs, 1709, Bk. i., No. 45), which is No. 67 of the Scottish Translations and Paraphrases of 1781. In the Draft Tr. & Paraphs., 1745, No. 38, the cento was thus given:—

St. i.-v., from Watts, No. 21, as above.
St. vi., new.
St. vii.-xii., from Watts, No. 45, as above.
St. xiii., from Watts, No. 21, as above.

In the authorized Tr. and Paraphs. of 1781, this text was repeated with slight alterations, and has been in C. U. in Scotland and elsewhere to the present time. From the markings by the eldest daughter of W. Cameron (q.v.) we gather that the authorized Scottish text of 1781 was arranged and altered by Cameron. It should be designated I. Watts, 1707-9, Scottish Tr. & Paraphs., 1745, and W. Cameron, 1781. In Miss Jane E. Leeson's Paraphs. & Hym., 1853, the Scottish cento is re-arranged as a hymn in 7 st., beginning "From heaven, the glorious city comes." [J. J.]

Lobe den Herren den mächtigen König der Ehren. J. Neander. [Thanksgiving.] A magnificent hymn of praise to God, perhaps the finest production of its author, and of the first rank in its class. It is founded on Ps. ciii., 1-6, and Ps. cl. 1st pub. in his Glaub- und Liebeslehre; aufgemuntert durch einfältige Bußes Lieder und Dank- Psalmen, Bremen, 1680, p. 47, in 5 st. of 5 l., Repeated in Freylinghausen's G. B., 1704, and in most subsequent collections, as recently in the Univ. L. S., 1851, No. 687.

It was the favourite hymn of Friedrich Wilhelm III. of Prussia, and Lessmann, to Koch, viii. 356, relates how he was affected by hearing it sung while in a boat in the mines at Wablenburg in 1800. With this hymn the Prussian War Minister, Albrecht von Boen, celebrated his Jubilee of service, near Paris, January 9, 1871. The splendid chorale, given in the C. B. for England, appeared in the Stralund G. B., 1846 (set to the hymn "Hast du denn Lobster dein Angesicht gänzlich verhohren," see Dr. J. Zahn's Psalter und Harfe, 1856, No. 335), was adapted by Neander, and repeated in Freylinghausen's G. B., 1704, and most later books.

Translations in C. U.:—

1. To God Almighty be praises and thanks from all living. A free tr. of st. i., ii., v., as No. 38 in the Dulston Hospital H. Bk., 1848.

2. Praise ye Jehovah: with anthems of praise come before Him. In 4 st. (marked as tr. from Neander, but really taking very little either from his language or his ideas), as No. 17 in the Amer. Luth. Gen. Synod's H. Bk., 1850-52.

3. Oh praise the King supreme in might, who reigneth in glory. Omitting st. iv., by A. T. Russell, as No. 214 in his Ps. & Hym., 1851.

4. Praise to Jehovah: the Almighty King of Creation. A good tr., omitting st. ii., by Miss Northwick in the 2d Ser., 1853, of the H. L. L., p. 66 (1864, p. 124). Repeated in Dr. Pagentecher's Coll., 1864, and Wilson's Servant of France, 1865.

5. Praise to the Lord: He is King over all the Creation. A good tr., by T. C. Porter, in Cont. de Harmonie, Boston, U.S., 1859, No. 315; repeated in the Hym. for the [German] Reformed Ch., Philadelphia, 1874, No. 462.

6. Praise to the Lord: the Almighty, the King of Creation! A good tr., omitting st. iv., by Miss Winkworth, as No. 9 in her C. B. for England, 1863; and thence in Dr. W. F. Stevenson's H. for Ch. & Home, 1873, Evang. Hym., N. Y., 1880, &c.

7. Praise thou the Lord, the omnipotent Monarch of Glory. In full, as No. 361, in the Ohio Luth. Hym., 1880, marked as tr. by "J. H. Good."

8. Praises we're bringing to Jesus, Almighty and Royal. A tr. of st. i., iv. (dated 1880), by M. W. Stryker, as No. 398 in the Ch. Praise Bk., N. Y., 1882, with an original st. as iii.

9. Praise to the Lord, the Omnipotent King of Creation! A tr. of st. i.-iii., v. (dated 1882), by M. W. Stryker, in his Hym. & Verses, 1883, p. 36; repeated as No. 31 in his Christian Chorals, 1885.

Other trs. are: (1) "Praise thou, my Son, the most mighty and great King of Glory," in the Suppl. to Ger. Psalms, ed. 1765, p. 69. (2) "Praise to the Father, the glorious King of Creation," in the 3rd ed., 1852, of J. H. Hopkins's Carols, Hym. and Songs, dated 1856. (3) "Praise the Almighty, the King of a glory unbounded," by N. L. Prokingsham, 1879, p. 224.

[J. M.]

Lobet den Herren, denn er ist sehr freundlich. [Grace after Meat.] Founded on Ps. cxlvii. Bode, p. 180, cites this as in the Jungfrau Schulordnung zu Torgau, printed at Leipzig, 1565, where it has 9 st. of 4 l., and is printed after the instruction on the First Commandment. Wackernagel, iv. p. 168, quotes it from a Nürnberg broadsheet s.d., circa 1560 (Zwey Schöne Geistliche Lieder), and from the Leipzig G. B., 1582, in 7 st.; and this form is in the Univ. L. S., 1851, No. 499. The only tr. in C. U. is noted under "Lobet den Herren alle die ihn fürchten" (see p. 411, &c.).

[J. M.]

Lobwasser, Ambrosius, s. of Fabian Lobwasser, inspector of mines at Schneeberg, Saxony, was b. at Schneeberg, April 4, 1515. After studying law at Leipzig (M.A. 1535) he remained there as University tutor until 1550. After acting as travelling tutor, he was appointed in 1557 Rath and Chancellor at Meissen, and in 1562 made a tour in Italy, and received the degree of LL.D. from the University of Bologna. He was finally appointed in 1563 by Duke Albrecht of Prussia as professor of law and assessor at the High Court of Justice at Königsberg. He d. at Königsberg Nov. 27, 1585 (Koch, ii. 384-401, &c.).

His principal poetical work was his version of the Psalter, which is noted under Psalters, German, pt. i. § 4. One has passed into English in recent times, viz.:

Der Knecht des Herren all zugleich. [Ps. cxlvii.] The original is Beza's version of the Psalm, "Le serviteur du Seigneur," which first appeared in his Cent quatre psaumes de David, Geneva, 1558. Lobwasser's version is in his Psalter des Königlich Preussischen Raths, Leipzig, 1573 (not pagged), in 3 st. of 4 l., entitled "He encourages the people to fulfil their calling diligently, and assures them that God will grant them His grace." It is as—

Ye servants of the Lord, who stand. In full, by Miss Winkworth, as No. 22 in her C. R. for England, 1863, and set to the original melody of 1661 (see "All people that on earth do dwell"). [J. M.]

Lodenstein, Jodocus van, s. of Jozet Cornelius van Lodenstein, burgomaster of Delft, was b. at Delft Feb. 6, 1620. After studying at the Universities of Utrecht and Franeker he was appointed in 1644 pastor at Zoetermeer and Zegwaard, near Delft; in 1650 at Sluis (Sluis, near the boundary of Flanders); and in 1654 at Utrecht. He d. at Utrecht Aug. 6, 1677 (Allg. Deutsche Biog. xix. 73-75).

A pastor of the Reformed Church, he was spiritually allied to the Mystics. After 1665, not being able to exclude the worldly, he ceased to dispense the Holy Communion and altered the Baptismal formula; but never separated from the Church.

His hymns appeared in his Uyt-Spanningen, Behelvende enige digtelyke Liederen en andere Gedigten, &c., Utrecht, 1676 [Berlin], which passed through many eds. Two are tr., viz.:

1. Hemelsch Oogen? Wilt gy dogen. [Love to God]. 1676, p. 316, in 9 st. entitled "Saltode with God." It has passed into English through

Ich will einam und gemeinam. No. 723, in Freylinghausen's G. H., 1766; Parat's G. H., ed. 1855, No. 345. It is a free tr. in 5 st. of 6 l., and is probably by C. A. Bernstein (p. 135, ii.), certainly not by G. Arnold or G. Tersteegen. Tr. as (1) "Quite alone and yet not lonely," in full, from the 110s, as No. 690 in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1764. In the Moravian H. Bk., 1799 (1806, No. 792), the frs. of st. i., ii., were reduced to 8 l., 7 l., and this form is also in the Bible H. Bk., 1848.

2. Heyje Jesu! Hemelsch Voorbeeld! [Christ our Example]. 1676, p. 152, in 9 st., entitled "Jesus Pattern." It has passed into English through Heiliger Jesu, Heiligungswelle, tr. in full. This has not yet been traced earlier than G. Arnold's Göttliche Sophia, 1760, pt. ii. p. 327, where it is No. 17 of "Some hitherto unknown poems, mostly composed by others." As it is found in this section it is perhaps more probably by B. Crasellius (q. v.). Koch, vi. 6, and viii. 437, characterizes it as "a pearl in the Evangelical Treasury of Song and a genuine Christian moral hymn, of more importance than a hundred of the so-called moral hymns in the second half of the eighteenth century." In the Berlin G. L. S. ed., 1863, No. 631.

The trs. are: (1) "As Thy will, O my Saviour," of st. i., by C. G. Gemma, as No. 1665 in the Suppl. of 1806, to the Moravian H. Bk., 1801 (1806, No. 622). (2) "Most holy Jesus! Fount unfailing," by tr. H. Mills, 1845 (1856, p. 297). (3) "Thou holdest Saviour, sacred spring," by Miss Dunn, 1867, p. 26. (4) "Most holy Jesus, Fount of light," in Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869, p. 123. [J. M.]

Logan, John. [Bruce, Michael.]

Logau, Friedrich von, was b. in June, 1604, at Brockut, near Nimtsch, in Silisia, and became in 1644 Kanzleirath in the service of the Dukes of Brieg. In 1654 he removed with Duke Ludwig to Liegnitz as his Regierungsrath, and d. at Liegnitz, July 24, 1655.

He was one of the best German poets of his time (admitted a member of the Palm Order in 1648), and especially distinguished as a writer of epigrams and aphorisms. These were first pub. in 1635. The complete ed., Breslau, 1654, was entitled Salomons von Logau deutscher Sinn-Reichte drey Tausend. A complete reprint was issued by the Stuttgart Literary Society in 1872 (vol. 113 of their publications), and selections by G. Eitner (Leipzig, 1870), and modernized by K. Simrock (Stuttgart, 1874), and L. H. Fischer (Leipzig, 1875). A few have been tr. by H. W. Longfellow, and of these the two best known, with one or two more tr. by herself, are included in Miss Winkworth's Christian Singers, 1860, pp. 230-233. [J. M.]

Long did I toil and know no earthly rest. H. F. Lyte. [Peace in Jesus]. Appeared in his Poems chiefly Religious, 1833, p. 76, in 6 st. of 6 l. It combines unwavering confidence with plaintive sweetness, and is one of his most touching efforts. Its use is extensive; but usually two or are omitted. Orig. text in Lp p. 377.

Long have I laboured C. Wesley. [Repentance]. 1st & 2nd. Poems, 1742, in 10 st., second of two hymns, "After Sin" (P. Works, 1855-72, vol. i. the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, st. vi given as No. 208, "Jesus, to T fly." This has been repeated lections, sometimes as "Jesus, I can fly," and again as "Jesus Thee, I fly," as in Dr. Alexander H. Bk., 1849 and 1865.

Long have I [we] sat sound. I. Watts. [Unfruitful in the 2nd ed. of his Hymns, and Hk. ii., No. 165, in 6 st. of 4. "Unfruitfulness, Ignorance, and Affections." It was repeated Ps. & Hymns, pub. at Charlotte Whitefield's Ps. & Hymns, 1753; Hymns, 1760, and others of the 6 and also in a large number of books both in G. Britain and usually in a slightly altered times as "Long have we a sound." Another and somewhat rangement of the text is "Long the joyful sound." This is in of G. & G., 1872, Common P many others.

Long have I seemed to Lord. C. Wesley. [Formal Re during the disputes between the Moravians concerning Ant Perfectionism. Dr. Jackson as troverary in his Memoirs of C. V ed., 1848, p. 98) thus:—

"Mother was the most active in purging the errors by which many contended that there are no degrees those who have not the full and true the divine favour, whatever they have no faith at all. Another tone and defended was, that till men have to use any of the means of grace, or the Scriptures, attending the initiatory receiving the Holy Communion; the rather injurious than beneficial, till vital faith. . . . The fine hymn on t and beginning.

"Still for thy loving-kindness I in Thy temple wait," was written by Mr. C. Wesley at it as an antidote to the mischievous prevalent."

The hymn was included in & Sac. Poems, 1749, in 23 st. of "The Means of Grace" (P. vol. i. p. 233). In 1780 J. V two hymns therefrom, and in Wes. H. Bk. 1849:—

1. Long have I seemed to serve Thee
2. Still for Thy loving-kindness.

These hymns have been re- one hymn-books in G. Brita In the American Unitarian I Christ, 1853, the first of the 4 st.

Long have I sought W. Hammond. [Death and 1st pub. in his Ps. & Hymns, 1745, p. 97, in 13 st. of 4 l. at so shall we ever be with the Lord." In this full form it is not in common use. A cento therefrom, "Lord, if on earth the thought of Thee," is given in the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871, No. 417. It is composed of st. iii., iv., ix. and xiii., all more or less altered.

[J. J.]

Longfellow, Henry Wadsworth, D.C.L., was b. at Portland, Maine, Feb. 27, 1807, and graduated at Bowdoin College, 1825. After residing in Europe for four years to qualify for the Chair of Modern Languages in that College, he entered upon the duties of the same. In 1835 he removed to Harvard, on his election as Professor of Modern Languages and Belles-Lettres. He retained that Professorship to 1854. His literary reputation is great, and his writings are numerous and well known. His poems, many of which are as household words in all English-speaking countries, display much learning and great poetic power. A few of these poems and portions of others have come into C. U. as hymns, but a hymn-writer in the strict sense of that term he was not and never claimed to be. His pieces in C. U. as hymns include:—

1. Alas, how poor and little worth. Life a Race. Tr. from the Spanish of Don Jorge Manrique (d. 1479), in Longfellow's Poetry of Spain, 1833.

2. All is of God; if He but wave His hand. God All and in All. From his poem "The Two Angels," pub. in his Bards of Passage, 1858. It is in the Boston Hym. of the Spirit, 1864, &c.

3. Blind Bartimeus at the gate. Bartimeus. From his Miscellaneous Poems, 1841, into G. W. Corder's 1874 Appendix to the Leeds H. Bk.

4. Christ to the young man said, "Yet one thing more." Ordination. Written for his brother's (S. Longfellow) ordination in 1848, and pub. in Seaside and Fireside, 1851. It was given in an altered form as "The Saviour said, yet one thing more," in H. W. Beecher's Plymouth Coll., 1855.

5. Down the dark future through long generations. Peace. This, the closing part of his poem on "The Arsenal at Springfield," pub. in his Belfrey of Bruges, &c., 1845, was given in A Book of Hys., 1848, and repeated in several collections.

6. Into the silent land. The Hereafter. A tr. from the German (see Salla).

7. Tell me not in mournful numbers. Psalms of Life. Pub. in his Voices of the Night, 1839, as "A Psalm of Life: What the heart of the Young Man said to the Psalmist." It is given in several hymnals in G. Britain and America. In some collections it begins with st. ii., "Life is real! Life is earnest."

The universal esteem in which Longfellow was held as a poet and a man was marked in a special manner by his bust being placed in that temple of honour, Westminster Abbey.

[F. M. B.]

Longfellow, Samuel, M.A., brother of the Poet, was b. at Portland, Maine, June 18, 1819, and educated at Harvard, where he graduated in Arts in 1839, and in Theology in 1846. On receiving ordination as an Unitarian Minister, he became Pastor at Gall River, Massachusetts, 1848; at Brooklyn, 1853; and at Germantown, Pennsylvania, 1860. In 1846 he edited, with the Rev. S. Johnson (q. v.), A Book of Hymns for Public and Private Devotion. This collection was enlarged and revised in 1848. In 1859 his Vespers was pub., and in 1864 the Unitarian Hymns of the Spirit, under the joint editorship of the Rev. S. Johnson and himself. His Life of his brother, the Poet Longfellow, was pub. in 1886. To the works named he contributed the following hymns:—

i. To A Book of Hymns, revised ed., 1848.

1. Beneath the shadow of the Cross. Love.

2. O God, thy children gathered here. Ordination.

ii. To the Vespers, 1859.

3. Again as evening's shadow falls. Evening.

4. Now on land and sea descending. Evening.

iii. To the Hymns of the Spirit, 1864.

5. A voice by Jordan's shore. Advent.

6. Father, give Thy benediction. Ordination.

7. Go forth to life, O child of earth. Life's Mission.

8. God of ages and of nations. Holy Scriptures.

9. Holy Spirit, Truth divine. The Holy Spirit desired.

10. I look to Thee in every need. Trust in God.

11. In the beginning was the Word. The Word.

12. Love for all, and can it be? Lent. The Prodigal Son.

13. O God, in Whom we live and move. God's Law and Love.

14. O God, Thou Giver of all good. Prayer for Food.

15. O still to us be sweet and strong. Missions.

16. O Thou, Whose liberal sun and rain. Anniversary of Church dedication.

17. One holy Church of God appears. The Church Universal.

18. Out of the dark, the circling sphere. The Outlook.

19. Peace, peace on earth! the heart of man for ever. Peace on Earth.

20. The loving Friend to all who bowed. Seasons of Nazareth.

21. Tis winter now, the fallen snow. Winter.

Of these, hymn No. 2 was written for the Ordination of E. E. Hale (q. v.), at Worcester, 1846. Several are included in Martineau's Hymns, 1873. [F. M. B.]

Look down, O Lord, and on our youth. T. Colterill. [Confirmation.] Appeared in the 9th ed. of his Sel., 1820, No. 120, in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed, "Intercession for Children about to be Confirmed." It has passed into a large number of hymn-books, and is popular as a Confirmation hymn. [J. J.]

Look down, O Lord, with pitying eye. P. Doddridge. [Missions.] This hymn is No. 66 in the D. M. S. but is undated. It was pub. by J. Orton in his ed. of Doddridge's (posthumous) Hymns, &c., 1755, No. 146, in 5 st. of 4 l., and again in J. D. Humphreys's ed. of the same, 1839, No. 164. It is based on Ezekiel's Vision of the Dry Bones, and is in C. U. in G. Britain and America.

[J. J.]

Look in pity, Lord of Glory. E. Caswall. [Confirmation.] This hymn is compiled from a "Hymn for the Renewal of Baptismal Vows," first pub. in his May Pageant and other Poems, 1865. It is written to be sung in parts, divided into a "Solo," "Chorus," and a portion to be sung by "All." In the People's H., each of these parts has been laid under contribution to furnish hymn 346. Caswall's revised text is in his Hymns & Poems 1878, p. 296.

[W. T. B.]

Look, ye saints, the sight is glorious. T. Kelly. [The Second Advent.] 1st pub. in his Hymns, &c., 3rd ed., 1869, No. 27, in 4 st.

of 6 l., and headed, "And He shall reign for ever, and ever" (1853 ed., No. 49). In popular and extensive use both in G. Britain and America. It ranks with many of the best hymns by Watts and C. Wesley. [J. J.]

Lord and God of heavenly powers. C. Wesley. [Praise.] Appeared in Hys. and Sac. Poems, 1739, pt. ii., as a metrical paraphrase of "Therefore with Angels and Archangels," &c. (See Ter Sanctus, in Greek Hymnody, p. 449, l.), from the Office for Holy Communion in the Book of Common Prayer. (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i. p. 114.) It is in 3 st. of 4 l. In its original form it is not in frequent use; but st. iii.—

"Holy, holy, holy, Lord,
Live by heaven and earth adored!
Full of Thee they ever cry,
"Glory be to God most high,"" is sometimes used in cantos, as in Mercer's version of "Bonds of God, triumphant rise" (q.v.). [J. J.]

Lord, and what shall this man do? J. Keble. [St. John the Evangelist.] Written Dec. 27, 1819, and 1st pub. in his Christian Year, 1827, in 6 st. of 6 l., and based upon St. John xxi. 21, 22. It is given in several hymn-books, but usually in an abbreviated form. In the American Plymouth Coll., 1855, No. 858, st. iv.-vi. are given as "Gales from heaven, if so He will." [J. J.]

Lord, as to Thy dear Cross we flee. J. H. Gurney. [Resignation, or The Daily Cross.] 1st pub. in his Lutterworth Coll. of Hys., 1838, No. 127, in 6 st. of 4 l., and again in the Mary-le-bone Ps. & Hys., 1851, No. 112. It is given in numerous collections in G. Britain and America, and sometimes as, "As to Thy Cross, dear Lord, we flee." Another altered form is "Lord, as we put our trust in Thee," in Common Praise, 1879. [J. J.]

Lord, at Thy feet a sinner lies. S. Browne. [Lent.] Appeared in the 1st ed. of his Hys. and Spiritual Songs, &c., 1720, No. 15, in 6 st. of 4 l., and entitled "Sinners suing for mercy." In Rippon's Sel., 1787, No. 235, it was altered to "Lord, at Thy feet we sinners lie," and this form has been continued to modern hymnals, as in Bap. Ps. & Hys., 1858 and 1880, No. 384. Its use is somewhat extensive. [J. J.]

Lord, at Thy Table I behold. S. Stennett. [Holy Communion.] Appeared in Hys. for All Denominations, Lon. 1782, No. 42, and in Rippon's Bap. Sel., 1787, No. 482, in 7 st. of 4 l., and entitled "A Sacramental Hymn." It was given as by "Dr. J. Stennett"; but the "J." is a misprint for "S." This error is repeated in most collections. The use of this hymn, usually in an abridged form, is somewhat extensive in G. Britain and America, and especially amongst the Baptists. [J. J.]

Lord, at Thy temple we appear. I. Watts. [Nunc Dimittis.] This is given as "The Song of Simeon; or, Death made desirable," in his Hys. & Spiritual S., 1709, Bk. i., No. 19, in 6 st. of 4 l. It is in use in G. Britain and America. In the Leeds H. Bk., 1853, No. 647, st. v., vi. are given as, "Jesus, the vision of Thy Face." The use of this abbreviated form is limited. [J. J.]

Lord, at Thy word I sun. J. H. Gurney. [Hark in his Lutterworth Coll. of H., No. 128, in 4 st. of 7 l., with a note for omission if desired. It was rewritten, and a new s the author for his Mary-le-bone Ps. & Hys., No. 124, and included therein the Harvest! Thee we hail! has passed into most of the best and is the most popular of the positions. In the Hymnary, 1847 Coll., 1882, Dryden's doxology, "honour, endless fame," from Spirit, &c., is added thereto. The hymn a completeness in the collections. Orig. text a rized text of 1851 in the S. Hys., with st. ii., ll. 1, 2, "I in both lines.

Lord, by Thee in safe Asstice. [Sunday Morning.] posthumous Hymns, &c., 1836 of 8 l. In 1841 it was given Christian Year as the opening collection. It is in a few hymn-collections, 1863, in which at various alterations are by Dr.

Lord, cause Thy face to T. Cotterill. [For a Blessing People.] Contributed to the Sel., 1819, No. 28, in 3 st. of 4 l. "For God's blessing on His People." Although not repeated, 1820, it was included in many hymn-books, and is still in C. U. King of Salem, Prince of P. Stevenson's Hys. for Church and other collections, beginning this hymn.

Lord, come away; we'll stay. Bp. Jeremy Taylor. [Lent.] This hymn, entitled Hymn for Advent; or, Christ Jerusalem in Triumph, "appetual and Penitential Hymns," Golden Grove, 1655, in 21 st. of 4 l. In this form it was included in (posthumous) Hymns, &c., 1 Taylor's Collected Works, in this form, however, it was not in congregational use. In a r appeared in the Leeds H. B. as, "Descend to Thy Jerusalem." This, with slight variations, the Sacrum Hymnal, 1868, as Thy Jerusalem, O Lord, and passed into the S. P. C. K. C. and others. [English Hymns]

Lord, dismiss us with thy Blessing. [Close of Service.] This is of four hymns, each of which in detail.

i. The first hymn reads:—

"Lord, dismiss us with thy Fill our hearts with joy
Let us each, thy Love possess
Triumph in redeeming
O refresh us
In this dry and barren year"

II.
Thanks we give and Adoration
For thy Gospel's joyful sound:
May the Fruits of thy Salvation
In our Hearts and Lives abound!
Ever faithful
To the Truth may we be found!

III.
"So when'er the Signal's given Us from Earth to call away,
Borne on Angels' wings to Heaven,
Glad the Summons to obey,
May we ever Reign with Christ in endless Day."

The authorship of this hymn has long been a matter of doubt. From 1773 to 1780 it appeared in many collections, but always without signature, in common with all the hymns in the same collections; and from 1786 to 1800, when it was given in collections wherein hymns were assigned to their respective authors, as the composition of "F." and "Fawcett." The details taking the leading collections are:—

i. In A Supplement to the Shawbury Hymn Book, Shrewsbury, Printed by J. Eldons, near the Market House, 1773. And sold by Mr. T. Mathew in Shrewsbury. The title of the Shawbury H. Bk. to which this is a Suppl. is A Collection of Psalms and Hymns, Extracted from Dr. Watts, and other Authors. The 2nd ed. before us is dated Shrewsbury, 1773. It has written in it "Sir Richard Hill," showing that it was the property of Sir Richard Hill, brother of the Rev. Rowland Hill. The text given above is from this Suppl., No. 46. These facts suggest the question, "Is Rowland Hill the author?" We think not, because the hymn does not appear in any of his hymn-books, all published at a later date. If it were his, we cannot conceive why it should have been omitted. The omission from his hymn-books is fatal to his claim.

ii. 1774. In Dr. Conyers's Collection of Psalms and Hymns, 8vo, London, J. & W. Oliver, 2nd ed., No. 374. In this st. l. l. 8, is altered to Travelling thro' this wilderness.

iii. 1774. In A. M. Toplady's Psalms and Hymns, 1st ed., No. 146, with alterations thus:—
St. ii. l. 2, 8.

May thy presence
With us evermore be found!
We shall surely.

iv. 1775. In A Collection of Hymns, pub. at Edinburgh.

v. 1780. In the 4th ed. of Dr. Conyers's Coll., pub. at York.

vi. 1780. In David Simpson's Collection of Psalms and Hymns, pub. at Macclesfield, Appendix, No. 402.

vii. 1780. In A Collection of Hymns, 8vo (4th ed.), pub. at York by A. Ward, for the compiler, the Rev. J. Harris, a Nonconformist Minister of Hull.

viii. 1780. In the Lady Huntingdon Collection, under the editorship of the Hon. and Rev. Walter Shirley. In this case we have the altered text of Toplady repeated for the first time.

To this date no indication of authorship can be found either in the above collections, or in contemporary literature. Thirteen years after its first appearance in Suppl. to the Shawbury H. Bk. the history is again taken up, but in a more definite form, thus:—

ix. 1786. In A Selection of Psalms for Social Worship, 8vo, York, A. Ward. This Unitarian collection contains the first four lines only of st. l. and ii., and these are signed "F." This initial we find from the list of authors given in the collection represents J. Fawcett (q. v.), a Nonconformist Minister formerly of Walsingham, Yorkshire; and then of Helsden Bridge, in the same county. A shade of doubtfulness, however, is thrown over the ascriptions of authorship in this collection by the editor prefacing his list with these words, "In the appropriation [of names] as it depended much on the compiler's memory, he wishes it to be observed, that there may probably be some mistakes, but he hopes there are not many." Preface, p. xi.

x. 1791. In the 1st ed. of Harris's Collection, No. 213 (see vi.), pub. at York, and edited by John Beaton, George Lambert, Robert Green, and John Jones, it is given as in Dr. Conyers's Collection, and signed Fawcett.

xi. 1800. In A Collection of Hymns for Christian Worship, pub. in Dublin, and again signed Fawcett.

From this date the signature falls out of use for many years, probably from the fact that, the York and Dublin Collections being little known, the editors of new hymn-books took their texts from Conyers, Toplady, the Lady Huntingdon, Burder, or similar widely-known collections in which all hymns were given without signatures, and appended thereto such notes as, "from Burder's Coll.," "Taylor and Jones's Coll.," and so on. During the past few years, however, the question of authorship has been revived, some claiming it for Dr. Fawcett, and others for the Hon. and Rev. W. Shirley. Their respective claims, with their drawbacks, stand thus:—

For Dr. John Fawcett. To him it is ascribed by the York Collections of 1786 and 1791, the editors of which, in common with Fawcett, were resident in Yorkshire, and ministers of Nonconformist congregations. Also by the Dublin Collection, 1800.

Against Dr. Fawcett. The before-named weakness in the testimony of the York Coll., 1786, must be noted, and the fact that the hymn is not in Fawcett's works, nor is it claimed for him either by his editor or his family. It must be added, however, that several of his hymns are found in the Gospel Magazine which are not given in his works.

For Hon. and Rev. W. Shirley. A tradition in his family, set forth by his son to Mr. A. C. H. Seymour, and recorded by Dr. Rogers in Lyra Brit., p. 496, and Miller, Singers & Songs of the Church, 1869, p. 246, that it was his composition.

Against Mr. Shirley. (1) There is no documentary evidence. (2) That it was in the Shawbury Suppl. seven years before admitted by Shirley as editor into the Lady Huntingdon (1841 in 1780, and (3) when admitted the text was taken from Toplady, and not from the original.

These statements are by no means satisfactory. Taking them, however, as they stand, we must conclude that the author is very probably Dr. Fawcett, and certainly not Walter Shirley.

The use of this Dismissal hymn has been and still is most extensive. Nearly every hymn-book of an Evangelical type published during the past hundred years has adopted it in a form more or less perfect. In some cases it has a doxology added thereto or substituted for the last stanza. Mercer's doxology, Oxford ed., 1864, No. 54, is the most suitable. The hymns:—

"Lord, refresh us with Thy blessing."

found in various collections; and—

"Lord, enrich us with Thy blessing," as in the Rugby School Hymn-Book, 1850, and later editions, are altered from the above.

ii. The second hymn is:—

"Lord, dismiss us with Thy blessing.

Bid us all depart in peace;
Still on gospel manna feeding,
Pure scriptural love increase:
Fill each heart with consolation,
Up to Thee, our hearts we raise,
Thine we reach that blissful station,
Where we'll give Thee nobler praise.
And sing Hallelujah to God and the Lamb,
For ever and ever, for ever and ever,
Hallelujah, Hallelujah, Hallelujah!

This hymn is found in Dr. Hawker's Psalms and Hymns for the Sunday School in the Parish Church of Charles, Plymouth, 9th ed. no date, 11th ed. 1811. In the Crawford and Eberle Index to the Irish Church Hymnal, 1876, p. 33, the editors say:—

"It is found also, but with considerable alterations, in the Rev. Edward Amy's Collection, Manchester, 1793.

Of these two versions that of Hawker seems to be the older, and is possibly by Hawker himself. It is ascribed to him in Basingstoke's Life of the Rev. R. R. Hawker, where, however, Mr. Basingstoke has inadvertently quoted the hymn with Fawcett's text which is found indeed in the latest edition of the Charles Collection (1861), but was then introduced in it for the first time by the editor, the Rev. H. A. Greaves. If the eight-line stanza is by Dr. Hawker, it must have appeared in his collection before 1783. He became Vicar of Charles in 1784, and the Sunday School was established in 1787.

From the time of its appearance in the Charles and the Manchester Collections to the present, it has been republished in numerous hymnals, including D. Simpson's Maclentfield Coll. 1795; the Wes. H. Bk., 1800; Williams & Boden, 1801; Bailey's Zion's Melodist, 1813-1866, and others. In the last case it is given in two stanzas from "Smyth's Manchester Collection" as noted above.

iii. The third hymn is:—

"Lord, dismiss us with Thy blessing,
Thanks for mercies past receive;
Pardon all their faults confessing;
Time that's lost, may all retrieve!
May Thy children
Ne'er again Thy spirit grieve!
"Bless Thou, all our days of leisure;
Help us selfish turns to flee:—
Sanctify our every pleasure,
Pure and useless may it be;
May our gladness
Draw us evermore to Thee!
"By Thy kindly influence cherish
All the good we here have gained;
May all taint of evil perish,
By Thy mightier power restrained;
Seek we ever
Knowledge pure and love unfeigned!
"Let Thy Father-hand be shielding
All who here shall meet no more;
May their seed-time past be yielding
Year by year a richer store!
Those returning
Make more faithful than before!"

This hymn is by the Rev. H. J. Bucknoll, sometime Assistant Master in Rugby School; and it appeared in the Ps. & Hym. for the Use of Rugby School Chapel, 1850, No. 56, and appointed "For the last Sunday of the Half-Year." It had a companion hymn by Bucknoll "For the first Sunday of the Half-Year" (No. 55), the opening stanza of which reads:—

"Lord, behold us with Thy blessing,
Once again assembled here;
Onward be our footsteps pressing,
In Thy love, and faith, and fear!
Still protect us
By Thy presence ever near!"

These hymns have been repeated in most of the modern Public School hymn-books.

iv. The fourth hymn is the following:—

"Lord, dismiss us with Thy blessing,
Guide us in Thy holy ways,
That Thy love and joy possessing,
May we ever sing Thy praise.
Hallelujah! Amen.
That Thy love and joy possessing,
We may ever sing Thy praise.
"Low in supplication bending,
We adore Thy power divine;
Hallelujahs never ending
Through eternity be Thine!
Hallelujah! Amen.
Hallelujahs never ending
Through eternity be Thine!"

This hymn is given in A Sel. of Ps. & Hym. pub. at Hageley, by J. T. Walters, in 1850. The Preface is signed "F. E. P."; but the hymns are given anonymously.

The first of these hymns has been translated into various languages, and in one form or another it is in most extensive G. Britain, America, the Commission stations. A tr. in slightly altered form of st. i.: Deus, Tuus, by the Rev. R. Bit in his Hymns. Christ. Lat. It may be added that T. Co form of the oldest text as above in his Sol., 1819, as "Lord, Thy blessing," failed to attend that "Dismiss us with Thy" which is sometimes taken as form of this hymn, is by J. H. "Lord, attend us with Thy blessing" in Kenndy, 1863, is based on above; and that "Lord, go with blessing," in Windle's Ch. & Hym., 1862, No. 225, is the altered.

and in most of the collections which give the hymn. Its use in G. Britain and America is extensive. [J. J.]

Lord, have mercy and remove us. H. H. Milman. [Heaven desired.] Pub. in Bp. Heber's posthumous Hymns, 1827, p. 122, in 4 st. of 4 l., and again in Milman's Sel. of Ps. & Hys., 1837 (ed. 1856, p. 90). It is found in several modern hymn-books. [J. J.]

Lord, have mercy when we [pray] strive. H. H. Milman. [Leat.] 1st pub. in Bp. Heber's posthumous Hymns, &c., 1827, p. 94, in 3 st. of 8 l., with the refrain "Oh then have mercy! Lord!" and repeated in the author's Ps. & Hys., 1837. In addition to its use in its original form, it is also given in several collections as "Lord, have mercy when we pray," as in the People's H., 1867; and, with st. ii. and iii. transposed, in the 1869 Appendix to the S. P. C. K. Ps. & Hys. Because of its refrain it is sometimes regarded as a Metrical Litany. [J. J.]

Lord, her watch Thy Church is keeping. H. Dowton. [Foreign Missions.] Written for a meeting of the Church Missionary Society, and first pub. in Barry's Psalms & Hymns, 1867, No. 170, in 3 st. of 8 l., and again in the author's Hymns & Verses, 1873, p. 1. It is also found in the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871; H. A. & M., 1875; Thring's Coll., 1882, and many others in G. Britain and America, and ranks with the best of the author's compositions. It is sometimes given as "Lord, Thy Church her watch is keeping," as in Common Praise, 1879, and others. [J. J.]

Lord, how shall wretched sinners dare. Anne Steele. [In Time of War.] Appeared in the 2nd ed. of her Poems on Subjects chiefly Devotional, 1780, vol. iii. p. 123, in 8 st. of 4 l., and headed, "On the day of Prayer for success in War." It is also in D. Selgwick's reprint of Miss Steele's Hymns, 1863. In a few American hymn-books, including the Presbyterian Sel. of Hys., Philadelphia, 1861, a cento from this is given as "Lord, may our souls Thy grace adore." It begins with st. iii., somewhat altered. [J. J.]

Lord, I am Thine, but Thou wilt prove. I. Watts. [Ps. xxi.] 1st pub. in his Psalms of David, &c., 1719, in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed "The Sinner's Portion and the Saint's Hope; or, The Heaven of separate Souls and the Resurrection." It is given in its original form in the Hy. Comp. and a few other hymn-books. In addition there are also the following abbreviations in C. U.:—

1. All, all is vanity below. This is an altered form of st. iii.-vi. It appeared in the 1st ed. of Outcries, &c., 1810, and is found in several modern collections, including that for the Harrow School Chapel, and others.

2. What sinners value, I resign. This is the most popular form of the hymn, and is in extensive use in G. Britain and America. It appeared in A. M. Toplady's Ps. & Hys., 1776, No. 164. [J. J.]

Lord, I am vile, conceived in sin. I. Watts. [Ps. li.] 1st pub. in his Ps. of David, &c., 1719, in 7 st. of 4 l. In the American Church Pastorals, Boston, 1864, st. i., ii., iv.-vi. are given as one hymn (No. 381), and st. iii. and vii., beginning "Great God, create my heart anew," as another (No. 360).

The hymn is also in use in its full form. Its original heading is, "Original and actual sin confessed." [J. J.]

Lord, I believe a rest remains. C. Wesley. [Holiness desired.] Pub. in Hys. & Sac. Poems, 1740, in 37 st. of 4 l., and based upon Heb. iv. 9, "There remaineth therefore a rest to the people of God" (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i. p. 370). In its original form it is an expression of faith in the doctrine of "Entire Holiness," or "Perfection," as understood by the early Methodists, and a prayer for personal possession of the same. In the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, J. Wesley included a cento therefrom as No. 391, embodying the same doctrine and prayer, the second and third stanzas of which read:—

"A rest, where all our soul's desire
Is fixed on things above;
Where fear, and sin, and grief expire,
Cast out by perfect love!
"O that I now the rest might know,
Believe, and enter in!
Now, Saviour, now the power bestow,
And let me cease from sin."

Wesley's theological opponents, however, had another cento from the same hymn in use for some years before, in which the rest was changed from a word which stood for the doctrine of "Entire Holiness," into a term descriptive of the eternal peace of Heaven. This is one of those changes in the text of the Wesley hymns which J. Wesley denounced in the Preface of the Wes. H. Bk. It was made by A. M. Toplady, and appeared in his Ps. & Hys., 1776, No. 52. Stanzas ii., iii. read (with the changes in the text in italics):—

"Then shall I sing and never tire,
In that best house above,
Where doubt, and fear, and pain expire,
Cast out by perfect love.
"Celestial Spirit, make me know
That I shall enter in.
Now, Saviour, now the pow'r bestow,
And wash me from my sin."

These two centos are in C. U. in most English-speaking countries, and are distinguished by the stanzas quoted above. In addition, st. xv. and xvii. of the original are given in the American Church Pastorals, Boston, 1864, as "Come, O my Saviour, come away." [J. J.]

Lord, I believe Thy word of grace. C. Wesley. [Holiness desired.] Appeared in Hys. & Sac. Poems, 1742, in 22 st. of 4 l., and headed, "The Spirit and the Bride say Come" (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. ii. p. 363). In 1780 J. Wesley gave a cento therefrom in 9 st. in the Wes. H. Bk., No. 383, as "O joyful sound of gospel grace." This has been repeated in several collections. [J. J.]

Lord, I confess my sins to Thee. C. Wesley. [Redemption desired.] Pub. in Hys. and Sac. Poems, 1742, in 37 st. of 6 l., divided into four parts, as:—

1. Lord, I confess my sins to Thee.
2. Forgive me, O long-suffering God.
3. Omnipotent, Omnipotent King.
4. Behold, ye souls, that mourn for God.

The hymn in the Wes. H. Bk., 1875, No. 120, "Comfort, ye ministers of grace," is composed of st. vi. and vii. of Pt. 4. [J. J.]

Lord, I desire to live as one. Charlie L. Bancroft. [Holiness desired.] In Spurgeon's 2 Y

O. O. H. Bk., 1866, this hymn is given in 4 st. of 4 l., and dated 1861. This text is also in other collections. In her Within the Veil, 1867, Mrs. Bancroft gives it as the last hymn in the volume, in 6 st. of 4 l., with a note saying that the hymn was revised for that work. In this text the additional sts. are v., vii. [W. T. B.]

Lord, I have made Thy word my choice. J. Watts. [Ps. cxxix. Pt. viii.] 1st pub. in his Psalms of David, &c., 1719, p. 319, in 4 st. of 4 l., and headed, "The Word of God is the Saint's Portion; or, The Excellency and Variety of Scripture." Its use has extended to almost all English-speaking countries, and it is found in a large number of hymn-books at home and abroad. [J. J.]

Lord, I hear of showers of blessing. Elizabeth Codner. [Divine Blessing desired.] Although we have the ms. of this hymn in Mrs. Codner's handwriting, sent to D. Sedgwick from Weston-super-Mare, June 18, 1866, wherein it is stated to have been "written in the summer of 1860" [s. ms.], we have no personal facts concerning Mrs. Codner and her work except that she published one or two small books, as The Missionary Ship; The Bible in the Kitchen, &c.; edited the periodical, Woman's Work in the Great Harvest-Field; and was associated for some years with the Mildmay Protestant Mission (London). "Lord, I hear of showers of blessing" was suggested by the news of the religious revival in Ireland, 1860-61. It is in 7 st. of 4 l., with the refrain "Even me," and is headed "Bless me, even me also, O my Father." The original text is in Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1866, No. 607. That in I. D. Sankey's Sac. Songs & Solos, Pt. i., which is usually regarded as the original, is altered in several instances, and st. v. is omitted. The hymn in full, or in part, is in extensive use, and is specially popular at Mission Services. In 1867 Mrs. Codner wrote a companion hymn of Praise, "Lord, to Thee my heart ascending," in 8 st. of 4 l., for the Rev. E. P. Hammond's Hym. specially adapted for Seasons of Deep Religious Interest, &c., 1867. [J. J.]

Lord, I magnify Thy power. C. Wesley. [For Daily Strength.] Given in his Hym. for Use of Families, 1767, No. 53, in 4 st. of 8 l. (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. vii. p. 60). In the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 327, st. iii. and iv. were given as "Father, in the Name I pray." It has passed into other collections. G. J. Stevenson's annotations of this hymn in his Meth. H. Bk. Notes, 1883, p. 240, are of more than usual interest. [J. J.]

Lord, if Thou Thy grace impart. C. Wesley. [Ps. cxxxi.] 1st pub. in the enlarged ed. of the Wesley Ps. & Hym., 1743, in 5 st. of 4 lines. It is one of C. Wesley's finest renderings of the Psalms; and although not admitted into the Wes. H. Bk. until the revised ed. of 1875, it has been in extensive use in the Church of England and amongst Nonconformists for more than a hundred years. During that time numerous variations have crept into the text. The first to mutilate it was M. Madan, in his Ps. & Hym., 1760. From his version Church of England and Nonconformist compilers have taken their texts, and have added thereto, instance, something of their two collections are found to changes cannot be given in denoting the full text from some book in which the hymn is found peculiar cento of all is that in Church Hymns, 1871, No. 418. Of the 16 lines 5 only are by C. W. 1, 2; st. ii. 1, 1; st. iv. 1, 1, being from Madan, 1760: Book of Praise, 1833: Hall's 1836; and several others. It is so interlarded that no one ecclesiastical hymnology can unravel the Common Praise, 1879, the hymn alterations and the omission of do Thou Thy grace impart."

Lord, in the day Thou a Mason. [Security in God.] 1st Mason's Spiritual Songs; or, Sacred Songs, 1683, appeared in the M. & Hym. (by J. H. Gurney and No. 118. It is thus composed:

St. i. from No. vi. "Song of Praise st. ii. 1-4. St. ii. from No. vii. "for Health," st. ii. 1-4. St. iii. from of Praise for Success, st. iv., ll. 1-4. No. viii., "Song of Praise for Faith," st. v., ll. 1-5.

These extracts are well pieced the result being a simple hymn. It passed from the M. & Hym. into Lord Selborne's Bk. 1862, and others. The originals are in D. Sedgwick's reprint 1859.

Lord, in this Thy mercy Williams. [Lent—A Metrical] hymn is taken from "Image of a poem on "The Day of Days: Manifestation," in 103 st. of 3 l. a part of his work, The Ray of Way of Eternal Life, 1844. Its slight changes in the Cooke & D. 1853, in 6 st. It has been repeated in numerous collections in Britain and America, and is a metrical Litany for Lent.

Lord, in Thy kingdom be. J. Anstee. [Unity.] Printed in his posthumous Hymns, 1836. It is based on the Epistle for Trinity, Eph. iv. In 1841 it was The Child's Christian Year, reprinted into a few collections, in 1863, where it is expanded 8 l. by the addition of a doxology.

Lord, in Thy Name I plead. J. Noble. [Repetition] at Malvern, Aug. 4, 1836, and in Salisbury H. Bk., 1857, No. 10 4 l., including a doxology. repeated with slight changes in Pott's Hymns, &c., 1861; the Church Hym., 1871, and others, as the Salisbury H. Bk. doxology another, and at other times with the Sarum Hym., 1868, and the (humorous) Miscellaneous Poems. Its use is extensive.

Lord Jesus, God and Ma:

Baker. [For a School Feast.] This hymn is dated 1832 in Bigger's Annotated ed. of Hymns, A. & M., but its first publication is traced only to H. A. & M., 1861. It has a slight resemblance to Faber's "O Jesu, God and Man," which was pub. in his Jesus and Mary, in 1849. Sir H. W. Baker's hymn is in extensive use in G. Britain and America. It is sometimes given as "Lord Jesus, God and Man." [J. J.]

Lord Jesus, with what sweetness and delights. H. Vaughan. [Ascension.] This poem of 62 lines on Ascension-day appeared in the second part of his Silken Sentiments; or Sac. Poems, &c., 1855, and again in the Rev. H. F. Lyte's reprint, 1846 (1858 ed., p. 133). Upon the first four lines of the poem the Rev. T. Darling based his Ascension hymn, "Lord Jesus, taken from Thy servants' sight," and pub. the same in the 1858 ed. of his Hymns for the Church of England. It is continued in later editions. [J. J.]

Lord, look on all assembled here. J. Hart. [Public Fast.] Pub. in his Hymns Composed on Various Subjects, &c., 1759, No. 98, in 8 st. of 4 l., and headed, "For a Public Fast." Two arrangements from the text are in the hymn-books. The first appeared in the 1st ed. of Cottrill's Sol., 1810, in 6 stanzas. This was reduced to 4 stanzas in Bickersteth's Christian Psalmody, 1833, and was repeated in this form in later collections of the Church of England. The second arrangement is in the Nonconformists' hymnals. It was given in the Leeds H. Bk., 1833, the N. Cong., 1839, &c. [J. J.]

Lord, not unto me (The whole I disclaim). C. Wesley. [Lent.] 1st pub. in the Hymns on God's Everlasting Love, 1741, No. 2, in 6 st. of 4 l. (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. iii. p. 6). In 1780 it was given in the Wes. H. Bk., with the omission of st. i., as "Thy faithfulness, Lord, Each moment we find," and in this form it has been repeated in several collections in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

Lord, now the time returns. J. Austin. [Evening.] Pub. in his Devotions in the Ancient Way of Offices, &c., 1668, p. 370, hymn 32, in 8 st. of 4 l., including the doxology; again in the editions by Dorrington, and Hickes, and in the reprint by J. Masters, Lond., 1856. In its full form it is not in C. U.; but, abridged as "Bless be Thy love, dear [good] Lord," it is given in a large number of hymnals in G. Britain and America. Sometimes it is found as "Blessed be Thy love," &c. The original text of this abridged form is in Lord Selborne's Book of Praise, 1862. [J. J.]

Lord of earth, Thy forming hand. Sir R. Grant. [God the Creator and Preserver.] Appeared in H. V. Elliott's Ps. & Hymns, &c., 1835, in 3 st. of 12 l., and again in Lord Glenelg's edition of Grant's Sacred Poems, 1839, No. 3. It is based on Ps. lxxiii. 25. It is in C. U. in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

Lord of heaven, and earth, and ocean. J. Croase. [Holy Trinity.] Written for the Second Yorkshire Musical Festival, held at York on the 13th-16th of Sept., 1823, and first sung on that occasion by the Festival choir. On the 20th of Sept. it was printed in the Sheffield Iris newspaper, of which James Montgomery was the editor, together with an account of the Festival, and an estimate that £100,000 had been spent in one way and another in connection therewith; and of this £20,000 were expended in the purchase of Festival tickets. Croase's hymn was included in Bickersteth's Christian Psalmody, 1833, No. 338, and subsequently in a great number of hymn-books. Orig. text in Hy. Comp. [J. J.]

Lord of hosts, how lovely fair (how bright, how fair). D. Turner. [Public Worship.] 1st pub. in Rippon's Bap. Sol., 1st ed., 1747, No. 342, in 4 st. of 4 l. and entitled, "The Excellency of Public Worship." From Rippon's Sol. it has passed into several Nonconformist collections, sometimes in its original form, and also as, "Lord of hosts, how bright, how fair," as in the Bapt. Ps. & Hymns, 1858 and 1880. [J. J.]

Lord of hosts, to Thee we raise. J. Montgomery. [Laying the Foundation Stone, or The Opening of a Place of Worship.] The foundation stone of St. George's Church, Sheffield (of which the Rev. W. Mercer was subsequently Incumbent), was laid on the day of the coronation of George IV., July 9, 1821. On that day Montgomery published in his Iris newspaper a leading article on Bonaparte, who died on the 5th of the previous May. Montgomery's original ms. of that article and "a set of the coronation medals, and other usual memorials," were placed in a glass jar under the foundation stone (Memoirs, iii. p. 241). This hymn was composed for the occasion; was sung during the ceremony, and was printed in the Iris of Tuesday, July 24, 1821. It was included in Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 475, and in his Original Hymns, 1833, No. 301, and in both instances headed "On Opening a Place of Worship." [J. J.]

Lord of life, prophetic Spirit. J. Kells. [For Theological Colleges.] A "Hymn for Eastertide, written for the Book of Prayers at Cusdession College" (circa 1854), in 10 st. of 4 l., and repeated in the author's (posthumous) Miscellaneous Poems, 1869, p. 287. In the Sacrum Hyl. it is given in two parts, pt. ii. beginning "Now Thon speakest, hear we trembling"; and in other collections, as in the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871, it is abbreviated to 6 st., and sometimes less. It is suitable for Ember Days and Ordinations in addition to its Theological College use. [J. J.]

Lord of mercy and of might. Hp. R. Heber. [Quinquagesima.] Two forms of this hymn, and both by Heber, are found in his Hymns, &c., 1827. The first form, in 5 st. of 4 l., first appeared in the Christian Observer, Nov. 1811, p. 697, together with three additional hymns by Heber, and is set forth for the "Sunday after Christmas." In his Hymns, &c., 1827, it is given as No. i. for "Quinquagesima," and reads, as in the Christian Observer—

"Lord of mercy, and of might,
Of mankind the life and light,
Maker, Teacher infinite,
Jesus, hear and save!"

"Who, when sin's primeval doom
Gave creation to the toils,
Didst not scorn a Virgin's womb,
Jesus, hear and save!"

"Strong Creator, Saviour mild,
Humbled to a mortal child,
Captiver, beaten, bound, reviled,
Jesus, hear and save!"

"Throned above celestial things,
Borne aloft on angels' wings,
Lord of Lords, and King of Kings,
Jesus, hear and save!"

"Soon to come to earth again,
Judge of angels and of men,
Hear us now, and hear us then!
Jesus, hear and save!"

The second form appeared in his Hymns, &c., 1827, p. 21, and appointed for the Sunday after Christmas, or Circumcision. It is also in 5 st., but differs from the first form in the following particulars, the 1827 reading being,

St. II., l. 1. Who, when sin's tremendous doom.
St. III., l. 1. Mighty Saviour! Saviour mild!
St. v. Who shall yet return from high,
Robed in might and majesty,
Hear us! help us when we cry:
Jesus, hear and save!

The use of this hymn is extensive. The first form is found in Kennedy, 1863; Hy. Comp., 1876; Church Hymns, 1871; Thring, 1882, and many others; the second in Alford's Year of Praise, 1867; the S. P. C. K. Ps. & Hys.; New Mitre Hymnal; Snepp's Songs of G. & G., 1872, and others; mixed texts, People's H., 1867, and Windle; and, rewritten, in Morrell and How, 1864. It is also found in many collections in slightly varying forms not here specified, the texts of which may be tested by the above readings. The original of 1811 has been rendered into Latin by the Rev. C. B. Pearson, as "Clemens hominum Regnator," and pub. in his Latin Trs. of English Hys., 1862, p. 82. [J. J.]

Lord of my heart, be Thy last cry.
J. Keble. [Good Friday.] This is composed of the two closing stanzas of Keble's poem for Good Friday, which was pub. in his Christian Year, 1827. This extract was given in Elliott's Ps. & Hys., 1835, and has been repeated in modern collections. The text is slightly altered. [J. J.]

Lord of my life, O may Thy praise.
Anne Steele. [Morning.] Appeared in her Poems on Subjects chiefly Devotional, 1760, vol. i. p. 20, in 6 st. of 4 l., headed, "A Morning Hymn"; and again in D. Selgwick's reprint of her Hymns, 1863. In addition to its use in its original, and in an abbreviated form, it is also given in a few American collections, including the Presbyterian Ps. and Hys. for the Worship of God, Richmond, 1867, as, "God of my life, my morning song." [J. J.]

Lord of my [our] life, Whose tender care. [Evening.] This hymn appeared in the Church of England Magazine, February, 1838, and was signed "G. Chelsea." It was included in the S. P. C. K. Hys. for Public Worship, 1852, No. 156; and since then it has passed into a large number of hymn-books in G. Britain and America, and sometimes as "Lord of our life," &c., as in Kennedy, 1863. [W. T. B.]

Lord of the Church, we pray. E. Oler. [Whitmaside.] Hall's Mitre H. Bk., 1836, No. 21, 6 l., and again, with slight alterations, in the author's Church and King, April, 1837, p. 11. It is an altered version by Oler of Charles Wesley's "Thou, Jesu, Thou my breast inspire" (q.v.). Wesley's original text, however, is scarcely recognizable in the form given to it by Oler, save in the last six lines, which are almost entirely from Wesley. The Church Hymnal follows the text of the M. Its use is extensive. [J. J.]

Lord of the harvest, once again
Anstie. [Harvest.] 1st pub. in his (posthumous) Hymns, 1836, No. 34, in 4 st. In the Child's Christian Year, 1841, repeated without alteration; and from date it came into general use, but with slight alterations. It is one of the number of Harvest hymns, and is in a C. U. English-speaking countries. In the H. Bk., 1868, it begins, "O Lord of once again." Orig. text in Lord's Book of Praise, 1862.

Lord of the living harvest.
Monnell. [Ordination, and Church.] This hymn appears in the hymn-book as a hymn for Ember Day and Ordination, and second, for Church Guilds and Assurance.

1. It originally appeared in Dr. Monnell's Hys. and Prises, 2nd ed., 1846, in 4 st., of 8 l., for Days and Ordinations. This was repeated in his Hymnal, 1873, and the People's ed. of his Songs, 1875, the last being the authorized text. This text Thring's coll., 1882, differs somewhat, especially in st. III. In Monnell the hymn is for the Ordained, in Thring the prayer is supposed to be offered by the Ordained themselves. For use at times Dr. Monnell's authorized form is the better.

2. In the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871, it is given in an altered form for Church Guilds and Ordinations. With two slight changes in the text (omission of st. III., this was given in W. F. St. Hys. for the Ch. and Home, 1873, with a note he says that his text was "printed from manuscript the form finally adopted by the author."

The authorized text of this hymn is (1) for Ordination—that in Dr. M. Parish Hymnal, and (2) for Church Guilds and Associations, that in Dr. Stevenson's H. [J. J.]

Lord of the lofty and the low
W. B. Acton. [For Ragged School anniversary.] "This [hymn] was written for the Ragged School anniversary, held in the Congregational Church, under the patronage of the Earl of Shaftesbury, in the year 1857" (Miller's Singers & Songs, 1869). In 1859 it was included in the New Co. It is also found in other collections. [J. J.]

Lord of the ocean, hear our cry.
Bp. E. H. Bickersteth. [For Use at Sea.] Written in 1869 and 1st pub. in his Companion, 1870, No. 392, as a hymn used at sea, with the note in the Anniversary edition, "This hymn, by the Editor, written for this work. It is to be sung by at sea; the one which follows ['Eternal Father, strong to save'] is for those at sea." I Hy. Comp., 1870, and the revised ed., Bp. Bickersteth's hymn begins, "Almighty Father, hear our cry." Its original form

"Lord of the ocean, hear our cry," is in Bp. Bickersteth's Two Brothers, 1871, p. 249. [J. J.]

Lord of the Sabbath, hear our vows. P. Doddridge. [Sunday, or Divine Worship.] This hymn, beginning "O God of Sabbath, hear our vows," is No. 80 in the 11. ms., is dated "Jan. 2, 1796-7," and headed "The Eternal Sabbath. From Heb. iv. 9." In Job Orton's ed. of Doddridge's (posthumous) Hymns, &c., 1755, No. 310, it was given as "Lord of the Sabbath," &c., in 5 st. of 4 l., and with the same title, and repeated in J. D. Humphreys's ed. of the same, 1839, No. 336. In Mr. Brooke's ms., 1739-40, it reads "O God of Sabbath," &c. The 1755 text is in use in most English-speaking countries, but the most popular form of the hymn is that beginning "Lord of the Sabbath, hear us pray," particulars of which, and other arrangements of the hymn, we here append:—

1. Thine earthly Sabbaths, Lord, we love. This cento, composed of st. ii. iv. and ii., was given as No. 353 in Ripper's Bp. 58., 1787, and is found in full or in part in several modern hymnals.

2. Lord of the Sabbath, hear us pray. This altered text appeared in Cotterill's Hym., 5th ed., 1819, No. 4 (the original, as in Orton having been in former editions), and is by Cotterill, or James Montgomery, or possibly the joint work of the two. Of this text, in 6 st. of 4 l., ed. i., iii., iv., v., are altered from Doddridge, and st. ii., v., are new. This text was repeated in Montgomery's Christian Psalter, 1925; and again, either in its full or in an abridged form, in a large number of hymn-books in G. Britain and America.

3. O Lord of holy Rest, we pray. This form of the hymn appeared in R. C. Singleton's Anglican H. Bk., 1868. It is from the Doddridge-Cotterill text, with alterations, and a slight return to the original.

When these forms of the hymn are taken together, it is found that its use is very extensive in all English-speaking countries, the Doddridge-Cotterill text being the most popular. [See English Hymnody, Part. § xiv.]

[J. J.]

Lord of the sinless world above. W. J. Irons. [Adult Baptism, or Confirmation.] On the passing of the Act for the Registration of Births there was a panic amongst the poor, and a great rush to the churches for Holy Baptism. In one day 400 children were baptized in Dr. Irons's church, St. Mary's, Newington, and 23 adults on another. On other days there were also great gatherings of children and adults for the sacred rite. Under these circumstances and amid these surroundings Dr. Irons wrote this hymn. It was pub. in Low's Hym. for the Christian Seasons, (Gainsborough, 1854; in Dr. Irons's Appendix to the Brighton Metrical Psalter, 1861, his Hym. for Use in Church, 1866; and in his Ps. and Hym. for the Church, 1873-75, &c. It is in a few collections only, and its use is not equal to its merits.

[J. J.]

Lord of the wide extended [extensive] main. C. Wesley. [For use at Sea.] 1st pub. in the Hym. and Sac. Poems, 1740, p. 31, in 10 st. of 4 l., and headed "A Hymn to be Sung at Sea" (P. Works, 1808-72, vol. i. p. 229). In the 1830 Suppl. to the Wes. H. Bk. it was given in two parts as:—

1. Lord of the wide, extensive main. No. 761.
2. Infinite God, Thy greatness spanned. No. 762.

Both these parts have come into use in G. Britain and America as separate hymns.

Mr. G. J. Stevenson, in his Meth. H. Bk. Notes, 1883, p. 591, says of this hymn:—

"It was probably written in 1736, previously to the poet and his brother John sailing to America with General Oglethorpe and the Moravians. This seems to be plainly indicated by the language of the second verse:—

"For Thee we leave our native shore,
In other climes Thy works explore."

This view, however, is not that of Dr. Osborn, the editor of the Wesley Poetical Works, 1808-72. In vol. i. pp. 228-231, there are given the following hymns:—"Servant of God, the summons hear"; "Lord of the wide-extended main"; and "Glory to Thee, Whose powerful word"; and to the first of these ("Servant of God," &c.) Dr. Osborn adds the following note:—

"The animating strains of this hymn and the two next are by no means in accordance with Charles Wesley's spiritual condition and mood of mind in December, 1737, when Mr. Whitefield first left England for America. They were more probably composed in preparation for his second voyage, which began in August, 1739. Nor can we imagine anything more suitable for the occasion; while in the hymns "To be Sung at Sea" ("Lord of the wide-extended main") and "In a Storm" ("Glory to Thee, Whose powerful word") the Christian and the poet appear to equal advantage. It may be doubted if the full assurance of faith was ever more finely expressed, or at the same time more rationally vindicated, than in the second and the third of the three hymns which follow one another here."

This suggestion by Dr. Osborn that the date is 1739 is made almost certain with regard to "Servant of God," &c., and presumably of the other two, by the fact that "Servant of God," &c., is found in Divine Hymns for the Use of the Societies, by Richard Wyan, 1739. This tract contains three hymns, two by Wyan (one addressed to Whitefield) and "Servant of God, the summons hear," by C. Wesley. The Wesleys, by printing the three hymns, "Servant of God," &c., "Lord of the wide," &c., and "Glory to Thee, &c.," as consecutive hymns in the Hym. & Sac. Poems, 1740, seem to fix the date of these hymns as 1739, when Whitefield went on his second voyage to America.

The hymn "Servant of God, the summons hear," is rarely used, whilst "Glory to Thee, Whose powerful word," is given in several collections in America, and as "All praise to Thee, Whose powerful word," in a few in G. Britain. [W. T. B.]

Lord of the worlds above. J. Watts. [Ps. lxxvii.] 1st pub. in his Ps. of David, &c., 1719, in 7 st. of 8 l., as the third version of the 84th Psalm. In addition to its use in its full form, there are also several arrangements of the text, the more important being:—

1. That in the Wes. H. Bk., 1758, and many others derived from the same source. This appeared in the Wesley Ps. & Hym., 1739; the enlarged ed. of the same, 1743; and the Wes. H. Bk., 1760. It is very popular.

2. A cento composed of st. i., iii., iv., and vii. This was given with alterations in Whitefield's Coll., 1753; Madan's Ps. & Hym., 1760; Toplady's Ps. & Hym., 1776, and thus into the hymn-books of the Church of England. In some modern collections, as Sarum, 1864, and Thring's Coll., 1862, some of these alterations are still retained. Usually, however, the text is correct.

3. Other arrangements are given in many modern hymnals, the construction of which may be tested by reference to Watts's Psalter. It will be found that in most cases the original text is retained.

As a paraphrase this ranks amongst the best by Watts. The metre is an imitation of that employed for the first time by John Puljain, in his Version of the 148th Psalm in the English Psalter, 1560. [See Old Version, iv. 12.] [J. J.]

Lord, shall Thy children come to Thee? Bp. S. Hinds. [Confirmation.] In Sonnets and other Short Poems, chiefly on Sacred Subjects. By Samuel Hinds, D.D., Lond.: B. Fellowes, 1834, p. 65, is the following:—

"Confirmation Hymn.

"Lord, shall Thy children come to Thee?
A host of love divine we seek:
Brought to Thy arms in infancy,
Ere hearts could feel or tongues could speak,
Thy children pray for grace, that they May come themselves to Thee this day.
"Lord, shall we come, and come again?
Oft as we see yon Table spread,
And tokens of Thy dying pain,
The wine pour'd out, the broken bread;
Bless, bless, O Lord, Thy children's prayer,
That they may come and find Thee there.
"Lord, shall we come, come yet again?
Thy children ask one blessing more—
To come, (not now alone and then,)—
When life and death and time are o'er,
Then, then to come, O Lord, and be Confirmed in heaven, confirmed by Thee!"

When this hymn was included in the Ps. & Hys. for the Use of Rugby School Chapel, circa 1845 (1850 ed. No. 51), the following stanza by H. J. Bucknoll, was added as st. iii., thus making a hymn of 4 st.:—

"Lord, shall we come? not thus alone
At holy time, or solemn rite?
But every hour till life be flown,
Through weal or woe, in gloom or light,—
Come to Thy throne of grace, that we
In faith, hope, love, confirmed may be."

In addition to writing this stanza, Bucknoll made a few alterations in, and repunctuated Bp. Hinds's text. Two forms of the hymn have thus come into use, the first the original, and the second the Hinds-Bucknoll text. The latter is that usually given in the Public Schools hymn-books. [J. J.]

Lord, solemnise our trifling minds. G. Burder [Before Sermon.] Appeared in his Coll. of Hymns, &c., 1784, No. 200, in 3 st. of 4 l. as one of a number of hymns for use "Before Sermon," and again in later eds. of the same work. In modern hymnals, as the New Cong., 1859, No. 786, it is altered to "Great God, impress our trifling minds." [J. J.]

Lord, speak to me, that I may speak. Frances R. Havergal. [Lay Helpers.] Written, April 28, 1872, at Winterdyne, and first printed as one of Parlance's musical leaflets in the same year. In 1874 it was pub. in her Under the Surface, and in 1879 in Life Mosaic. In the original ms. it is headed "A Worker's Prayer. 'None of us liveth to himself.' Rom. xiv. 7." This hymn has become very popular, and is highly esteemed by those engaged in Christian work. [J. J.]

Lord, teach a little child to pray. Thy grace betimes, &c. J. Ryland. [A Child's Prayer.] This simple prayer for a child's use is the most popular and widely used of Dr. Ryland's hymns. From his Memoirs of Andrew Fuller, 1831, pp. 442 and 453, we find that this hymn, and another, beginning "God is very good to me," were written by him at the request of Mrs. Fuller for the use of her child Sarah, who died May 30, 1786, aged 6 years and 6 months of the numerous collections in found it is erroneously attribute Taylor." The Taylor hymn occupies same line, but the second is accept my prayer."

Lord, teach us how to pray. J. Montgomery. [Prayer.] Written and first printed on a broadsheet Montgomery's "Prayer is the soul's sin." "What shall we ask of God in prayer?" "Thou, God, art a consuming fire the Nonconformist Sunday School field. In Cotterill's Sel., 8th ed. 280, it was repeated in full in and headed, "The preparations in man." During the same year with alterations and the omission E. Bickersteth's Treatise on Montgomery's Christian Psalms 482, the text in Bickersteth's with the restoration of st. ii., and 8 st. of 4 l. The text in his Orig 1853, No. 65, is that of the Christ with the change of st. iv., ll. 1, 2

"God of all Grace, we come to
With broken, contrite hearts to:—
"God of all grace, we bring to A broken, contrite heart."

This change is set down in the Montgomery's private copy of Psalm in his own handwriting. T full or abridged, is in numerous The variations of text which are arisen in a great measure from copying from Cotterill's Sel. or others from the Christian Psalms. Berridge appeared in Berridge Songs, 1785, in 6 st. of 4 l., as "look on me." Of this text st. i., ii altered from Wesley's hymn as st. ii., v. and vi. are by Berridge. given without alteration in Low Bank of Praise, 1862, and in wh in numerous collections through speaking countries.

Lord, Thou didst arise ax H. Milman. [Christ Stilling the] pub. in Bp. Heber's posthumous 1827, p. 36, in 2 st. of 8 l., and the 4th S. after the Epiphany, be the Gospel for that day. It wa Milman's Ps. & Hys., 1837, and in many hymn-books in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

Lord, Thou hast been Thy people's rest. J. Montgomery. [Ps. xc.] Appeared in his Songs of Zion, 1823, in 7 st. of 7 l. In his Original Hymns, 1853, st. i., iv., v. and vi. are given as hymn No. xlv. In Dr. Kennedy's Psalter, 1860, a cento was given as the version of Ps. xc., and is thus composed:—

st. i., ii., and v., J. Montgomery.
st. iii., iv., and vi., Dr. Kennedy.

Dr. Kennedy's Hymn, Christ. No. 9, in two parts is this same text repeated with the addition of a doxology to Ps. i. In the Preface to this collection, the portion of this rendering of Ps. xc. taken from Montgomery is attributed to the Rev. A. T. Russell in error. [J. J.]

Lord, Thou hast won, at length I yield. J. Newton. [Surrender to Christ.] Appeared in the Gospel Magazine, Jan., 1775, in 7 st. of 8 l., headed "The Surrender," and signed "Vigil." After a slight revision it was given in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. i., No. 121, in 7 st. of 6 l., with the extended heading "The Rebel's Surrender to Grace. Lord, what wilt Thou have me to do?" It is based on the words of St. Paul uttered on his way to Damascus, and recorded in Acts ix. 6. Although there is nothing in the Memoirs of Newton (so far as we can see) to justify us in saying that this hymn is autobiographical, yet its intense individuality suggests that it is so, and that he found in the fierceness of Saul the persecutor, and the submissive peacefulness of Saul the disciple, the embodiment of his own history and experience. Thus regarded the hymn is interesting, but for practical purposes it is far from being one of Newton's best productions. It is found in a few collections, but in an abbreviated form. [J. J.]

Lord, Thou in all things like wert [wert] made. J. Anstice. [Passiontide.] 1st pub. in his (posthumous) Hymns, 1836, No. 21, in 6 st. of 4 l., and again in the Child's Christian Year, 1841. From the Child's C. Year it passed as "In all things like Thy brethren, Thou," into the Leeds H. Bk., 1858, No. 285. This form of the hymn has become popular, and especially with the Nonconformists. It is sometimes attributed to J. Keble. [J. J.]

Lord, Thy children guide and keep. Bp. W. W. How. [The Narrow Way.] 1st pub. in Morrell & How's Ps. & Hym., 1854, in 5 st. of 6 l., and based on the words "Narrow is the way that leadeth unto life." It has become very popular with hymnal compilers, and, in full or in an abridged form, it is found in numerous collections in G. Britain and America. Orig. text in the S. P. C. K. Church Hym., 1871. [J. J.]

Lord, Thy glory fills the heaven. Bp. R. Mant. [Holy Trinity.] This hymn, extending from 1 st. of 8 l. in the Cooke and Denton Hymnal, 1853, to 3 st. of 8 l. in Laudes Domini, N. Y., 1884, is from Bp. Mant's "Bright the vision that delighted" (see p. 183, l.). It is in extensive use, especially in America. [J. J.]

Lord, Thy word abideth. Sir H. W. Baker. [Holy Scripture.] Written for and 1st pub. in H. A. & M., 1861. It has attained a great circulation, and is in C. U. in all English-speaking countries. It has also been translated into several languages. There is a tr. in German by Miss Winkworth, in Higgin's Annotated H. A. & M., 1867, beginning "Herr, Dein Wort muss bleiben." [J. J.]

Lord, to me Thy minsters are. [The House of God.] This cento, which was given in W. J. Blew's Church Hy. & Tune Bk., 1852-53, is composed thus: st. i., ii. are from the late Archdeacon Churton's tr. from the Anglo-Saxon pub. in his Poetics, and the remaining stanzas, iii.-v., are original by Mr. Blew. The cento has passed into several collections, including Kennedy, 1863; Rice's Sel. from Blew, 1870, and others. [J. J.]

Lord, we adore Thy wondrous Name. P. Doddridge. [Divine Compassion.] Written Oct. 29, 1735 (D. ms. No. v.), and pub. in Job Orton's ed. of Doddridge's (posthumous) Hymns, &c., 1755, No. 55, in 6 st. of 4 l., and again in J. D. Humphreys's ed. of the same, 1839, No. 68. The original heading is "The fruitless of human nature, and God's gracious regard to it. Ps. ciii. 14." In modern hymn-books it is usually abbreviated. [J. J.]

Lord, we are blind, we mortals blind. I. Watts. [God Invisible.] Pub. in his Hym. & Spiritual S., 1709, Bk. ii., No. 26, in 4 st. of 4 l., and headed "God Invisible." In the American Plymouth Coll., 1855, it begins with st. ii., "Infinite leagues beyond the sky." [J. J.]

Lord, we come before Thee now. W. Hammond. [Public Worship.] 1st pub. in his Ps. & Hym., 1745, p. 32, in 8 st. of 8 l. In 1760 M. Madan reduced it to 6 st. of 4 l., and as such it was given in his Ps. & Hym. of that year, No. 121. From this arrangement of the hymn most modern editors have taken their text. Orig. in Lyra Brit., 1867. [J. J.]

Lord, we confess our numerous faults. I. Watts. [Salvation by Grace.] 1st pub. in his Hym. & S. Songs, 2nd ed., 1709, Bk. i., No. 111, in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed "Salvation by Grace." It is in C. U. in its full form, and also abbreviated and altered as:—

1. "Tis not by works of righteousness. This arrangement begins with st. iii. Its use is limited.

2. How wretched was our former state. In the draft of the Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, 1745, Watts's hymn was given with alterations as No. 19, but in the authorized public worship issue of the Ps. and Paraph., in 1781, it gave place to "How wretched was our former state," which was thus composed:—st. i. new; ii. Watts; iii. new; iv. Watts and 1745; v. from 1745; vi. Watts and 1745; vii. from 1745. This recast has been in use in Scotland and elsewhere for more than one hundred years. It is sometimes attributed to W. Cameron (q. v.), but is not assigned to him in the markings, by Cameron's eldest daughter, of the Ps. and Paraph.. Its authorship is therefore doubtful.

3. Tis from the mercy of our God. This is a rewritten form of the Scottish Ps. and Paraph. text, by Miss Jane E. Leeson, and was pub. in her Paraph. and Hymns, 1853. [J. J.]

Lord, we have wandered from Thy way. P. Doddridge. [The Lost Sheep.] This hymn in the D. ms., No. 62, is undated, but immediately precedes one written on Apr. 10, 1735, and may be dated circa 1735. It was included in Job Orton's ed. of Doddridge's

(posthumous) Hymns, &c., 1755, No. 65, in 3 st. of 3 l., and again in J. D. Humphreys's ed. of the same, 1839, No. 79. In each case the original title, "The wandering Sheep recovered. Ps. cxix. 176," is retained. [J. J.]

Lord, we sit and cry to Thee. H. H. Milman. [Quinquagesima. Blind Man at Jericho.] 1st pub. in Hps. Heber's (posthumous) Hymns, &c., 1827, p. 49, in 2 st. of 6 l., and again in his Ps. & Hys., 1837. It is based on the Gospel for Quinquagesima. In Hall and Lasar's American Evangelical Hym., N. Y., 1880, it is altered to "Lord, we raise our cry to Thee." [J. J.]

Lord, what a feeble piece. I. Watts. [Ps. xc.] His s. m. version of Ps. xc., which appeared in his Psalms of David, 1719, in 5 st. of 4 l., and headed "The Frailty and Shortness of Life." In Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1840 and 1873, it is given as "Lord, what a fleeting breath"; and in the Leeds H. Bk., 1853, as "Lord, make us know how frail." [J. J.]

Lord, what a wretched land is this. I. Watts. [Pilgrimage of the Saints.] Appeared in his Hys. & S. Songs, 1709. Bk. ii., No. 53, in 12 st. of 4 l., and entitled "The Pilgrimage of the Saints: or, Earth and Heaven." In Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1866, st. viii.-xii. were given as "Our journey is a thorny maze." This arrangement, together with abbreviations beginning with the first stanza, is in several collections. [J. J.]

Lord, what is man? extremes how wide. J. Newton. [Man by Nature, Grace, and Glory.] Appeared in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. iii., No. 88, in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed, "Man by Nature, Grace, and Glory." It is the last of the longer hymns given in the Olney H., and would appear to have been designedly placed there as a fitting close to the work, a few "short hymns" and four doxologies only, following. The closing stanza is exceedingly appropriate:—

"Nearest the throne, and first in song,
Man shall his hallelujah raise;
While wondering angels round him throng,
And swell the chorus of his praise."

Although lacking the general interest and popularity of Newton's hymns, it is given in several collections. [J. J.]

Lord, when Thou didst Thyself undress. H. Vaughan. [Passiontide.] Pub. in his Silex Scintillans; or, Sac. Poems, &c., Pt. I., 1650, and again in the reprint by the Rev. H. F. Lyte, 1846 (1858 ed., p. 46), in 5 st. of 4 l., and entitled "The Incarnation and Passion." In its complete form it is not found in modern hymnals, but st. iv. and v., as "Ah, my dear Lord, what could'st Thou spy," are given in Thring's Coll., 1882. [J. J.]

Lord, when we bend before Thy throne. J. D. Carlyle. [Lent.] This hymn appeared in A Coll. of Ps. and Hys. by Various Authors, Chiefly designed for Public Worship, Carlisle, 1802. The editor was the Rev. John Fawcett, Vicar of St. Cuthbert's, Carlisle, "an intimate personal friend of Professor Carlyle; and this hymn was written by the author for use before Divine Service in St. Cuthbert's Church, where he regularly attended when in residence as Chancellor of Carlisle. It is the first hymn in the collection, and is headed "Instructor Worship." (S. P. C. K. Church Catalogue, 1881.) In 1805, it was reprinted in Carlyle's Poems Suggested chiefly by Asia Minor. Therein it is entitled "Before Public Worship." It is usually given in 4 st. by the st. iii., iv. To the fourth stanza doxology is added, as in the Hys. a practice as old as Murray's Hymns if not older. It is well to note that of each of the three Christian graces, Hope, and Charity, in Public Worship in the original text: and omission of st. iii., iv. that of ignored in the modern form of its use during the last eighty years its full or in an abbreviated form, is extensive in all English-speaking Orig. text Lyra Brit., 1867, p. also been translated into several The H. A. & M. text without it has been rendered into Latin, as: "applicamus ad thronum Tuum, Deo Rev. R. Bingham, in his Hymnals, 1871. In Kennedy, 1863, version in 3 st. of 8 l. is given when before Thy righteous throne use is confined to that work.

Lord, when we creation see Carlyle. [Thursday.] Appeared in Ps. & Hys., &c. Edited by J. Carlyle, in 1802. It was appointed "Fifth Day, First Morning," and 4 l. In 1803 it passed into A Set Anthems, &c., for Elmdon Church, No. 17; in 1807 into The and Biblical Magazine; and subsequently in various hymn-books in G. Britain. Although a good hymn it is the of Carlyle's productions.

Lord, when we search thy heart. J. Montgomery. [The Heart.] This hymn was written page of a juvenile missionary paper by Mr. George Cookman. Montgomery mentions his having in a letter to Mr. Cookman's: "Sheffield, June 24, 1819" (Montmoir, iii. p. 169). The hymn is in Cotterill's Sel., 8th ed., 1819 7 st. of 4 l. In Montgomery's Psalmist, 1825, No. 549, it was with slight variations, and the additional stanza (viii.). This text with "Thy name and knowledge," "Thy name, Thy knowledge," is given in Original Hymns, 1853, No. 170.

Lord, Who once from the ascending. J. Latham. [The Herd.] 1st printed in his Poems, Translated, Sandbach, 1846, in as the fourth of four hymns for of the Sandbach Sunday School was reprinted in his cousin's Hys. Selected for Use of the Parish; and again in English and dated July, 1827, and privately printed. The form of the hymn known to date was given it in the 1850 ed. for the Rugby School Chapel, wh were omitted. This form of the text is in Kennedy, 1863, and several other collections.

[W. T. B.]

Lord! Whose love in [and] power excelling. Hp. R. Heber. [Epiphany.] Appeared in his posthumous Hymns, &c., 1827, p. 35, in 4 st. of 4 l. It is based on a part of the Gospel for the 3rd S. after the Epiphany (the healing of the Leper). It is in C. U. in Great Britain and America, and usually without alteration. [J. J.]

Lord's Prayer in Verse, The. Metrical paraphrases of the Lord's Prayer in English date from an early period, and are of varying length and merit. Several are annotated under their respective first lines, and may be found through the Index of Seasons and Subjects. Of those that remain we shall group in this article:—

1. In Churton's Early English Church, 1840, two examples are given, which date from the 12th and 13th centuries. These are:—(1) The Lord's Prayer, "in metre sent by Nicholas Breakspere [Pope Adrian IV.] into England in the time of Henry II., A.D. 1160." It reads:—

"Ore Fadyr in heven-rych
Thy name be hallyed -verlich
Thou bring us Thy mychel blisse.
Als hit in heven y-dee,
Ever in yearth beene it also.
That holy bread that lasteth ay,
Thou send it us this like day.
Forgive us all that we have don,
As we forgivet uch other men.
Ne let us fall into no founding
As shold us fro the fowle thing."

(2) The second is of Henry III.'s time, about A.D. 1250, and reads:—

"Fadir us, that ee in hevene
Hald be Thy name to nevem.
Thou do us Thy rich rike
Thy will on erd be wrought alke
As it is wrought in heven ay;
Ur lik-day brede give us to-day;
Forgive Thou all us detours ure,
As we forgive till ur detours;
And ledde us in na fending
But shuld us fra ivel thing."

2. In Camden's Remains (J. R. Smith's reprint, 1870), in the chapter on "Languages," there is the first of the above, and another which Camden dates as of the period of Henry III. This reads:—

"Fader that art in heven bliss
Thin heige nam it wurth the bliss
Cumen and met thy kingdom,
Thin holy will be all don.
In heven and in erth also,
So it shall bin full well le tro.
Gif us all bread on this day
And forgi us ure sins
As we do ure ilder wies;
Let us not in fending fall
Ore fro evil tha syld us all. Amen."

3. The metrical versions of The Lord's Prayer which appeared in the Old Version were:—

(1) In the Anglo-Genevan Psalter, 1581 [Old Version, § III.] (St. Paul's Cathedral Library, London), there were two versions by W. Whittingham, viz.:—

(a) "Our gracious Father, which on his Dost dwell, and hast all power and might."
(b) "Our Father and most gracious Lord,
Most rich in mercy grace and love."

There is also a version by R. Cox, viz.:—

"Our Father, which in heaven art,
And maket us al one brotherhood."

(2) In the English Edition of the Psalter [Old

Version, § IV., v.], 1560, the version of R. Cox is also found; and, again, in the ed. of 1560-1. In the Complete Psalter for use in the Church of England [Old Version, § VII.], the 1562 ed. contained the version, already noted, by R. Cox, and an anonymous rendering which begins:—

"Ovr father which in heaven art, Lord, hallow'd be thy name."

4. Between the O. V. and the N. V. several versions appeared, including:—

(1) Henry Lok, in his Ecclesiastica, otherwise the Preacher, &c., 1597 [Psalter, Versions]:—

"Our Father which in heaven art, Lords: hallow'd be thy name."

This is given in full in Farr's Sel. Poetry, 1845.

(2) Robert Holland in his work, The holie Historie of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ's nativite, life, acts, &c., 1594:—

"Pray thus, when ye do pray, therefore:—
Our Father, which in heaven art."

This is given in full in Farr as above, p. 477.

5. The Supplement to the New Version (Tate & Brady [New Version, § II.]), 2nd ed. 1702, contains two versions:—

(1) "Our Father, who in Heaven art, thy name be hallow'd in each heart:—"

(2) "Our Father, who in Heaven art
all hallow'd be thy name."

These versions were retained in the "Hymns" printed at the end of the New Version, until the modern hymn-book caused the reprinting of the New Version to cease.

6. During the eighteenth century several paraphrases, some in full and others of portions of The Lord's Prayer, were published. Of these we note:—

(1) A. Pope's Universal Prayer, 1738:—"Father of all! in every age," published in that year in his Works, and, separately, in folio.

(2) Charles Wesley's "Father of all, Whose powerful voice," 1742 (p. 388, H.).

(3) "Father of all, we bow to Thee" (p. 388, H.). In the Scottish Translations and Paraphrases (Draft, 1745; authorized, 1781). As altered in Cotterill's Sel., 1819, it occurs as, "Father of all, to Thee we bow."

(4) James Merrick's "Father of all, Whose seat of rest," in his Poems on Sacred Subjects, Oxford, 1783.

(5) J. Straphan's "Our Father, whose eternal away," in Rippon's Bap. Sel., 1787.

7. The nineteenth century has produced several versions of The Lord's Prayer, many of which have come into C. U., and may be found in this Dictionary through the Index of Seasons and Subjects (q.v.). In addition we find the following:—

(1) J. Montgomery. Two versions,—"Our heavenly Father, hear our prayer" (q.v.); and "Our heavenly Father! hear," in his Christian Psalmist, 1825.

(2) A. Judson. "Our Father God, Who art in heaven." p. 609, I.

(3) B. Barton. "Father of all, Who dwell't above," in his Devotional Verse, 1826.

(4) J. Condr. In his Choir and Oratory, 1837, the whole Prayer is paraphrased in the following hymns:—

1. Holy, holy, holy, Lord, in highest, &c. (p. 337, I.)
2. Thee, my God, in ceaseless lays.
3. Thou from a fount all being sprang
4. Day by day the manna fell. (p. 362, I.)

5. Father, to Thy sinful child. (p. 379, U.)
6. Heavenly Father, to whose eye. (p. 563, L.)
7. Father of spirits, God of heaven.

Some of these appeared in former works by Conder, and are noted in detail at the pages indicated above.

(5) J. Williams. In his Cathedral, 1838, "The North Aisle" is devoted to The Lord's Prayer. The use of the Prayer in the various Offices of the Church is made the groundwork of the following paraphrases:—

1. H. Baptism. "Our Father, freed from error's chain."
2. Infant Service. "Our Father, who dost dwell above."
3. Litany. "Like as a Father His own children loves."
4. Ante-Comm. "Out of a world of grief and wrong."
5. Post-Comm. "Our Father, knit in Thy dear Son."
6. H. Matrimony. "O Thou of whom all families."
7. Burial. "O Father of the fatherless, to Thee."

(6) Anon. "Our Father God, Who art in heaven. To Thee," &c. In Curwen's My Own H. Bk., 1848, and the Meth. S. S. H. Bk., 1879.

(7) G. Movltrie. "Father of all, to Thee we pray," in his Hys. and Lyrics, 1867.

(8) W. R. Worthington. In Lyra Precatoria. Six Hymns on the Petitions in the Lord's Prayer, &c. By the Rev. W. R. Werthington, M.A.; Lond., Masters & Co., 1874.

8. To these notes must be added those which are scattered throughout this Dictionary, and can be found through the Index of Seasons and Subjects. The result, although not exhaustive, will yet present a fairly good résumé of the English metrical versions of The Lord's Prayer. (See Various.) [J. J.]

Loud hallelujahs to the Lord. I. Watts. [Ps. cxxiii.] This psalm version appeared with some 13 or 14 others in the 1st ed. of his Hys. & S. Songs, 1707, and was transferred in 1719 to his Psalms of David, &c., p. 892, as his L. M. paraphrase of Ps. 148, in 12 st. of 4 l. It is headed "Universal Praise to God." It is usually given in modern hymnals in an abbreviated form. [J. J.]

Loud to the Prince of heaven. P. Doddridge. [Christ Triumphant.] 1st pub. in J. Orten's ed. of Doddridge's (posthumous) Hymns, &c., 1755, No. 41, in 5 st. of 8 l., and headed "The Triumph of Christ in the cause of Truth, Meekness, and Righteousness." It was also repeated in J. D. Humphreys's ed. of the same, 1839, No. 52. In its original form it is found in a few collections, but its most popular form, and that which is in extensive use in G. Britain and America, begins with st. 4, "Gird on Thy conquering sword." [J. J.]

Loud was the wind and wild the tide. H. F. Lyte. [Christ walking on the Sea.] Pub. in his Poems chiefly Religious, 1833, p. 135, in 2 st. of 8 l., and headed "It is I, be not afraid." In 1853 it was given in the Leeds H. Bk., No. 292, and subsequently repeated in other collections, as "Who walks the waves in wondrous guise?" This form of the text is in 3 st. of 4 l., the additional stanza being by another hand. [J. J.]

Lowell, James Russell, M.D. Cambridge, Massachusetts, February, graduated at Harvard College, 1830; called to the Bar in 1840. Professor Languages and Literature (successor Peet Longfellow) in Harvard, 1845; Minister to Spain, also to England in was editor of the Atlantic Monthly, to 1862; and of the North America from 1863 to 1872. Professor Law; most intellectual of American poets, of her art critics and humorists. written much admirable moral ar poetry, but no hymns. One piece, "Men, whose bond it is that ye" (Against Slavery), is part of an Anti-Slavery poem, and in its present form is found in Hymns of the Spirit, 1864. Part of this is given in Songs for the Sanctuary, N.Y., 1865, as "They are slaves who will not choose." [F. M. B.]

Löwenstern, Matthäus Apelles von, was b. April 20, 1594, at Neustadt, in the principality of Oppeln, Silesia, where his father was a saddler. He early distinguished himself by his musical abilities, was appointed in 1625, by Duke Heinrich Wenzel of Münsterberg, as his music director and treasurer at Bernstadt; in 1626, director of the princely school at Bernstadt; and in 1631 Rath and Secretary and also Director of finance. Thereafter he entered the service of the Emperors Ferdinand II. (d. 1637), and Ferdinand III. as Rath, and was ennobled by the latter. Finally he became Statthalter at Oels to Duke Carl Friedrich of Münsterberg, and d. at Breslau, April 11, 1648 (Koch, iii. 57-60; Allg. Deutsche Biog. xix. 318, &c.).

Löwenstern's hymns, thirty in all, are of very varied worth, many being written in imitation of antique verse forms, and on the mottoes of the princes under whom he had served. In the original ed. they were accompanied with melodies by himself. When or where they were first pub. (cir. 1644) is not clear. They were bound up with the Breslau Kirchen und Haus-Music, 1644, and there bear the title:

Hymnen oder Gedächtnis-Sprüche III. Herzog FFFürstl. Güte. Hn. Carl Friedrichs Herzogs zu Münsterberg . . . dann auch anderer Erlauchter Fürstlicher Personen. Zummt noch etlichen absonders besetzten Gedächtnis Oden. Geleitet durch M. A. v. L.

Three of these hymns have been tr. :—

1. Christe, du Stütze deiner Kreuzgenossen. [In time of War.] 1644, No. xvii., in 4 st. of 6 l., entitled "Sapphic Ode." Included in many later collections, and as No. 215 in the Unc. L. S., 1851. It was a favourite hymn of Niebuhr, and also of Bunsen, who included it in his Versuch, 1833, and concluded with it the preface to his Bibelwerk. The trs. in C. U. are :—

1. Lord of our life, and God of our Salvation. Contributed by Philip Pusey to A. R. Reinagle's Psalm and Hymn Tunes, Oxford, 1840, p. 132, in 5 st. It is rather founded on the German than a tr., st. i., ii. on st. i.; iii.-v. on ii.-iv. The tune to which it was set was marked by Bunsen as an "old Latin melody," and so the Pusey hymn has sometimes been erroneously called a tr. from a Latin hymn of the 8th cent. From Reinagle it passed into the Salisbury H. Bk., 1857, and has been repeated in H. A. & M., Sarum Hyl., Hymnary, Church Hys.; and in America in the Evangel. Hyl., N. Y., 1880, Laudes Domini, 1884, and others.

2. Blest aid of Thine afflicted congregation. In full, by A. T. Russell, as No. 99 in the Dalston Hospital H. Bk., 1848.

3. Christ, Thou the champion of the band who own. A good and full tr. by Miss Winkworth in her Lyra Ger., 1st Ser., 1855, p. 105; repeated in Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869, and the Ohio Lutheran Hyl., 1880. In the 2nd ed. of her Lyra Ger., 1856, it begins, "Christ, Thou the champion of that war-worn host."

4. O Christ, the leader of that war-worn host. A good and full tr., based on Miss Winkworth, by W. Mercer in his C. P. & H. Bk., 1857, No. 279 (Oxford ed., No. 391), and repeated in the American Sabbath H. Bk., 1858. From the version of 1858 Mr. Windle seems to have altered the form in his Coll., No. 268.

ii. Was preiset alle. [Missions.] 1644, No. xli., in 5 st. of 6 l., entitled "Alcibiades Ode." A fine hymn of Praise. In the Unc. L. S., 1851, No. 717. The tr. in C. U. is :—

Now let us loudly. In full, by Miss Winkworth in her C. H. for England, 1863, No. 177, set to Löwenstern's original melody.

iii. Wenn ich in Angst und Noth. [Cross and Consolation.] 1644, No. viii., in 7 st. of 7 l., entitled "The 121st Psalm." It is a fine version as a hymn of consolation in times of trouble. In the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 984. The trs. in C. U. are :—

1. When in distress and woe I sit. A good tr., omitting st. v., by H. J. Buckoll, in his H. from German, 1842, p. 19, repeated in the Dalston Hospital H. Bk., 1848.

2. When anguish'd and perplexed. A good tr., omitting st. v., vi., by Miss Winkworth in her Lyra Ger., 2nd Ser., 1858, p. 70. In her C. H. for England, 1863, No. 142, altered and set to the original melody by Löwenstern. [J. M.]

Lowry, Robert, D. D., s. of Crozier Lowry, was b. at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, March 12, 1826, and educated at Lewisburg University. Having received ordination as a Baptist Minister, his first charge was at West Chester, Pennsylvania. From thence he passed to New York City, and then to Brooklyn, N. Y. In 1876 he was appointed Professor of Rhetoric in his University. On resigning his Professorship he undertook the charge of the 2nd Baptist Church, New Jersey. Dr. Lowry has been associated with some of the most popular Sunday School hymn-books published in the States, including Happy Voices, 1865; Chapel Melodist, 1868; Bright Jewels, 1869; Pure Gold, 1871; Royal Diadem, 1873; Tidal Wave, 1874; Fountain of Song, 1877; Welcome Tidings, 1877, &c. Of Dr. Lowry's hymns those which have attained the widest circulation are :—

1. Jerusalem, for ever bright. Heaven. Appeared in the American Tract Society's Happy Voices, 1865, with music by the author.

2. Low in the grave He lay. Resurrection of Christ. Written in 1874 and pub. in Brightest and Best, 1875.

3. Marching on, marching on. Sunday School Battle Song. Appeared, with music by the author, in Happy Voices, 1865.

4. My home is in heaven, my rest is not here. In Happy Voices, 1865, with music by the author.

5. My life flows on in endless song. Joy in God. In Bright Jewels, 1869; the Royal Diadem, 1873, and others in America and G. Britain, with music by the author.

6. One more day's work for Jesus. Work for Christ. Pub., with music by the author, in Bright Jewels, 1869.

7. Shall we gather at the river? Mutual recognition in the Hereafter. The origin of this hymn is thus set forth in E. W. Long's Illustrated History of Hymns and their Authors, Philadelphia, 1876, p. 64 :—

"On a very hot summer day, in 1864, a pastor was seated in his parlor in Brooklyn, N. Y. It was a time when an epidemic was sweeping through the city, and draping many persons and dwellings in mourning. All around friends and acquaintances were passing away to the spirit land in large numbers. The question began to arise in the heart, with unusual emphasis, 'Shall we meet again? We are parting at the river of death, shall we meet at the river of life?' 'Sitting myself at the organ,' says he, 'simply to give vent to the pent up emotions of the heart, the words and music of the hymn began to flow out, as if by inspiration:—

'Shall we gather at the river,
Where bright angel feet have trod?'

In 1865 the hymn and music were given in Happy Voices, No. 220, in 5 st. of 4 l. and a chorus. The hymn has since passed into a great number of hymnals in G. Britain and America.

8. Take the wings of the morning; speed quickly thy flight. Exhortation to Repentance. Written for, and pub. with music by the author in, the Royal Diadem, 1873.

9. Weeping will not save me. Salvation through Faith. Pub. in the Chapel Melodies, 1868.

10. What can wash away my stain? Precious Blood of Jesus. Given in the Welcome Tidings, 1877, with music by the author.

11. Where is my wandering boy to-night? The absent Child. In the Fountain of Song, 1877, together with music by the author.

Most of these hymns are given in Mr. I. D. Sankey's Sacred Songs & Solos, Pts. I., ii.

Ludamilia Elisabeth, second dau. of Count Ludwig Günther I. of Schwarzburg-Rudolstadt, was b. April 7, 1640, at the castle of Heidecksburg, near Rudolstadt, and was educated there along with her cousin Emilie Juliane (q.v.). In 1665 she went with her mother to the dowager castle of Friedensburg near Leutenberg; but after her mother's death, in 1670, she returned to Rudolstadt, where, on Dec. 20, 1671, she was formally betrothed to Count Christian Wilhelm of Schwarzburg-Sonderhausen. At this time measles was raging in the district, and her eldest sister, Sophie Juliane, was seized, and d. Feb. 14, 1672. By attending on her, Ludamilia and the youngest sister, Christiane Magdalene, caught the infection, and both died at Rudolstadt on March 12, 1672. (Koch, iv. 50-56; Allg. Deutsche Biog. xix. 365-367, &c.)

She received a careful and pious training, was a good Latin scholar, and well read in divinity and other branches of learning. Her hymns show her to have been of a deeply pious nature, and of intense love to Jesus. They were composed rather for her own edification than for use in public worship. Ten of them were included in the Rudolstadt G. B., 1662. They were collected, to the number of 206, and edited by her cousin Emilie (probably assisted by A. Fritsch) as Die Stämme der Preussin, das ist: Geistliche Lieder welche, aus brünstiger und bis an Ende beharrender Jesus Liebe verfertigt und gebraucht, etc. Rudolstadt, 1687. This was reprinted, with an introduction by W. Thilo, at Stuttgart, 1866.

Three of these hymns have been tr. viz. :—
1. Jesus, Jesus, nichts als Jesus. [Love to Christ.] 1887, No. 104, p. 312, in 5 st. of 6 l., entitled "Resignation to the Will of God." The initials of the stanzas form the word Jesus, and each stanza ends, "Herr, wie du wilt." It seems to have appeared in the 2nd ed. of A. Fritsch's Jesus Lieder (not in the 1st ed. of 1688. No copy of the 2nd ed. is now known), and in the 3rd ed., Jena, 1875, is No. 43.

Rambach, lib. 183, gives it from the Vermehrtes Geams-Büchlein, Halberstadt, 1675. In the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863. The tr. in C. U. is :—

Jesus, Jesus, Jesus only. In full, by A. Crull, as No. 282 in the Ohio Lutheran Hyl., 1880.

Other trs. are :—(1) "Jesus, Jesus, naught but Jesus, Shall my wish and in the Suppl. to Ger. Psal., ed. 1765, p. 11. (2) "Jesus, 'tis my aim divine," by Mrs. Penn, 1837, p. 167. (3) "The Jesus that's my sole desire," by Rev. G. Walker, 1860, p. 92. (4) "Jesus, Jesus, naught but Jesus, Can my," by R. Mansie, in the British Herald, July, 1865, p. 163, and in Reid's Prater Ak., 1872, No. 383. (5) "Jesus, Jesus, naught but Jesus, Shall my wish be," in Christian Standard, 1880, No. 97.

ii. Jesus Blut kann über mich. [Holy Communion.] A Passiontide Hymn on the Blood of Jesus. 1687, p. 45, No. 14, in 8 st. in the Blätter für Hymnologie, 1886, p. 180, it is cited as in the 2nd ed., 1679, of A. Fritsch's Himmels-Lust (1st ed., 1670, does not contain it); and as there marked "S. J. G. Z. S. V. H.," the initials of the elder sister, Sophie Juliane.

Tr. as :—"Jesus' Blood come over me," as No. 446, in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1764.

iii. Berge, Vater! ergo du. [Morning.] 1687, No. 168, in 7 st., entitled "On Resignation to the Care of God," and founded on 1 Peter v. 7. Previously in the Rudolstadt G. B., 1662, p. 692.

Tr. as :—"Care, O Father, care for me," in the Monthly Packet, xlv., 1872, p. 211.

The hymn "Zersch uns nach dir," sometimes erroneously ascribed to her, is noted under Funks, F., p. 401, ii. [J. M.]

Lugete dura marmora. [Passiontide.] This is found in the Sirenes Symp'oniace, Cologne, 1678, p. 154; the Psalterium Cantionum Catholicarum, Cologne, 1722, p. 83; the Hymnodia Sacra, Münster, 1733, p. 80; and also in Daniel, ii. 351. It is probably the production of some German Jesuit, and was most likely written in the second half of the 17th cent. It has been tr. by the Rev. R. C. Singleton, 1870, and pub. in the 2nd ed. of his Anglican H. Bk., 1871, as "O mourn, thou rigid stone"; and by H. M. Macgill in his Songs of the Christian Creed & Life, 1876, No. 71, as "Ye rocks of marble, melt and weep." [J. M.]

Lugete, pacis Angeli. C. Coffin. [Friday—Lent.] Appeared in the Paris Breviary, 1736, for Fridays at Vespers, and also "Ad Officium Noct. In Feste quinque plagarum Christi." It was repeated in Coffin's Hymni Sacri, the same year, p. 28, and is found in several modern French Breviaries. The text is also in J. Chandler's Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837, No. 31, and Carl. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as :—

1. Lament, ye saints, behold your God. By J. Chandler, in his Hys. of the Prim. Church, 1837, p. 28, and Dr. Oldknow's Hymns, &c., 1850. In 1861 it was given, with alterations, as "Angels, lament, behold your God," in H. A. & M., but omitted in the revised ed., 1875.

2. Angels of peace, look down from heaven and mourn. By I. Williams in his Hys. tr. from the Parisian Breviary, 1839, p. 36. It was repeated in the Salisbury H. Bk., 1857; the Serum, 1868; the Hymnary, 1872, and others, and usually with slight alterations.

3. Angels of peace, lament. By W. J. Blew. Written for use in his own church, 1850-2, and

pub. in The Church Hy. & Tune Bk., 1852-5; and again in Rice's Hym. Selected from the Ch. H. & T. Bk., 1870.

Translations not in C. U. :—

1. Angels, look down and weep. R. Campbell, 1860.
2. Angels of peace! ye seraphs mourn. J. D. Chambers, 1857.
3. Angels of peace, befall. D. T. Morgan, in his Hym. of the Latin Church, 1880. [J. J.]

Luise Henriette, Electress of Brandenburg, dau. of Friedrich Heinrich, Prince of Nassau-Orange and Stadtholder of the United Netherlands, was b. at 's Gravenhage (The Hague), Nov. 27, 1627. She received a careful Christian training, not only in literature, but also in domestic economy and feminine handicrafts. On Dec. 7, 1646, she was married, at the Hague, to the Elector Friedrich Wilhelm of Brandenburg, who was then residing at Cleve, but remained at the Hague to nurse her father, who d. March 14, 1647. She then, in June, 1647, joined her husband at Cleve, where her first child, Wilhelm Heinrich, was b. in May 1648. In the autumn of 1649 she set out with her husband and child on the way to Berlin, but in the inclement weather the child sickened and d. at Wesel, Oct. 24, 1649, and it was not till April 10, 1650, that she entered Berlin. On the birth of her second son, Carl Emil (who d. 1674), at Oranienburg, near Berlin, on Feb. 16, 1655, she founded an orphanage there as a thank-offering (now the Oranienburg Orphanage at Berlin). On July 11, 1657, her third son, afterwards King Friedrich I. of Prussia, was b. at Königsberg. After the birth of her youngest son, Ludwig, at Cleve, in 1666, she never entirely recovered. In the spring of 1667 she was conveyed to Berlin in a litter, and d. there June 18, 1667. (Koch, iv. 158; Allg. Deutsche Bldg., xix. 623; Goedeke's Grundriss, vol. iii., 1887, p. 319, &c.)

Luise Henriette was a woman of noble character; a devoted wife who accompanied her husband in many of his expeditions, and was his right-hand counsellor in matters of state; and a true mother of her people, introducing the culture of the potato, founding model farms, establishing elementary schools, and in many ways interesting herself in restoring their welfare after the ravages of the Thirty Years' War. She was, like the Elector, a member of the Reformed Church, but earnestly desired to promote peace between the Lutheran and Reformed communions, and exerted herself especially on behalf of P. Verhaert (see p. 609, U.). Another of her efforts in this direction was by means of the Union Hymn Book, which Christoph Runge edited at her direction, and pub. in 1652 (see p. 272, U.). To this book she herself contributed four hymns. In his dedication to the Electress, Runge says she had "augmented and adorned it with your own hymns, viz.: 'Ein ander theil sein Vertrauen'; 'Gott der Reichthum deiner Güter'; 'Jesus meine Zuversicht'; 'Ich will von meiner Missethat.' Your Electoral Highness has not only in those your now mentioned hymns (that gemeldten gelehrten (Ihren eigenen Liedern) made known to all the world your Christian spirit; how your confidence is directed to God alone; how you exhort to him with thankful heart all the here-bis you enjoy; and how you rest the hope of your future everlasting life in Heaven on Christ alone as on a steadfast rock, but have also," &c. &c.

The question however remains. Did Runge here mean more than that she had sent for insertion certain hymns which were favourites of her own, perhaps written for her, but not necessarily written by her? Such cases were common enough at an earlier period (see note on Mag ich Unglück!). It is certainly strange that her name should not be given in any of the many hymn-books in which the third of these ("Jesus meine Zuversicht") was included during the next century. It was not till 1769 that Runge's dedication suggested to D. G. Schiller, and, after him, to other compilers, the idea of the Electress's authorship; but once it was soon generally accepted. Fischer, i. 2, various additional reasons that make this likely; such as that while in Runge's day are mentioned as above, yet her name is in the individual hymns in the body of the book the funeral oration by her private chaplain is made of her poetical gifts; that Crüger in his Praxis pietatis makes without her 1661 and later eds. the first was omitted, particular the third is too classic and cool to have been written by so poor a German the Electress. This last objection would meet if we could suppose with Koch (iv. p. 158) that the hymn was originally written in Dutch, or Idoma, and was revised and corrected by Otto von Schwerin, or by Runge.

In view of the present evidence we can only say that if the Electress were not the author of it there is at least no proof of any kind to show that it was composed by any of those whose names have sometimes been attached to them; such as Schwerin (b. 1618, d. 1679), Caspar Ziegler (d. 1690), Hans von Assig (b. 1650, d. 1693). In this state of uncertainty the case must remain for further proof to be forthcoming.

Two of these hymns have passed into English, viz.:—

i. Ich will von meiner Missethat. A beautiful hymn first appeared in the Runge G. B., 1853, No. 45, in 16 st. entitled, "Hymn of Penitence," and signed, Koch, iv. 160, conjecture may have been written at Cleve in the Uac. L. S., 1851, No. 380. The

(1) "With sorrow now for past misdeeds (see, 1854, p. 304. (2) "I will return unto by Miss Winkworth, 1860, p. 231.

ii. Jesus meine Zuversicht. East beautiful hymn, founded on Job xix. 1. 1 Cor. xv. 35 ff., appeared in the Crüger G. B., 1653, No. 140, in 10 st. of without signature. Its origin is thus: Laumann, in Koch, viii. 69:—

"It dates from the early years of her marriage in the autumn of 1649 she lost her first child, Prince Wilhelm Heinrich, at Wesel, while on (to Berlin), by which death for a long time succession in the Electoral House and in a modern family line seemed to be lost. At that time in the Altmark (on the Elbe), she had to quiet winter months, and here probably the twenty-two years poured out her heart before in this hymn."

This, however, is conjecture rather than fact; for, as stated above, it is not yet proved that the Electress wrote the hymn itself in of the first rank; Rambach calls it "an acknowledged in of Christian poetry;" while C. von Voss says, "it will ever remain a treasure of the hallowed songs of the Evangelical Church." It bears a certain resemblance to the section of the Apotheosis of A. C. P. (lines 1084-1085, with the subtitle "Deus tuus carnis humane," and beginning meum in Christo corpus consurgere. Quia but can hardly be called a fr. of it. It is included in Crüger's Praxis, 1656, No. 1 into almost all later hymn-books, and is in the Uac. L. S., 1851.

The beautiful chorale (as in the C. England) appeared in its first form along with the hymn. C. von Winterfeldt conjectured that it may have been by the Electress. The form now in use is modified from that by Crüger in his Praxis, 1656. Tr. as text, but adds no new hymns by himself. In pt. I, are 61 German hymns, in pt. II, 46, of which 36 in all are by Luther.

For these books Luther wrote three prefaces, first pub. respectively in Nov. 3, 4, 9. A fourth is found in his Christliche Gesung, Lateinisch und Deudsch, zum Begrebnis, Wittenberg, J. Klug, 1542. These four prefaces are reprinted in Wackernagel's Bibliographie, 1855, pp. 548-563, and in the various editions of Luther's Hymns. Among modern editions of Luther's Geistliche Lieder may be mentioned the following:—

Carl von Winterfeld, 1840; Dr. C. E. P. Wackernagel, 1845; G. C. H. Sulp, 1854; Wilhelm Schircks, 1854; Dr. Dannel, 1853; Dr. Karl Gerok, 1853; Dr. A. F. W. Fischer, 1853; A. Frommel, 1853; Karl Goedeke, 1862, &c. In The Hymns of Martin Luther. Set to their original melodies. With an English version. New York, 1862, ed. by Dr. Leonard Woolsey Bacon and Nathan H. Allen, there are the four prefaces, and English versions of all Luther's hymns, principally taken more or less altered, from the versions by A. T. Russell, E. Maeste and Miss Winkworth (repub. in London, 1854). Complete sets of Luther's hymns have been pub. by Dr. John Anderson, 1846 (2nd ed. 1847), Dr. John Hunt, 1852, Richard Maeste, 1854, and Dr. G. Macknald in the Sunday Magazine, 1867, and his Erotica, 1876. The other versions are given in detail in the notes on the individual hymns.

ii. Classified List of Luther's Hymns.

Of Luther's hymns no classification can be quite perfect, e.g. No. 3 (see below) takes hardly anything from the Latin, and No. 18 hardly anything from the Psalm. No. 29 is partly based on earlier hymns (see p. 225, i.). No. 30 is partly based on St. Mark i. 9-11, and xvi., 15, 16 (see p. 226, ii.). No. 35 is partly based on St. Luke ii. 10-16. The following arrangement, however, will answer all practical purposes.

A. Translations from the Latin.

1. From Latin Hymns:

1. Christum wir sollen loben schon.
A solis ortus cardine (p. 4, ii.).
2. Der du bist dreif in Einigkeit.
O Lux beata Trinitas.
3. Jesus Christus unser Heiland, Der von,
Jesus Christus nostra salus (p. 226, i.).
4. Komm Gott Schöpfer, heiliger Geist,
Veni Creator Spiritus, Mentis.
5. Nun komm der Heiden heiland,
Veni Redemptor gentium.
6. Was fürchtst du Feind Herodes ehre,
A solis ortus cardine (p. 5, i.).

10. From Latin Antiphons, &c.:

7. Herr Gott dich loben wir.
Te Deum laudamus.
8. Verleih uns Frieden gnädiglich.
Da pacem, Domine (p. 276, ii.).
9. Wir glauben all an einen Gott.

10. Partly from the Latin, the translated stanzas being adopted from Pre-Reformation versions:

10. Komm, heiliger Geist, Herre Gott.
11. Mitten wir im Leben sind.
Media vita in morte sumus. (p. 721, i.).

B. Hymns revised and enlarged from Pre-Reformation popular hymns.

12. Gelobet seist du Jesus Christ.
13. Gott der Vater wohn uns bei.
14. Gott sei gelobet und gebenedeiet.
15. Nun bitten wir den heiligen Geist.

C. Psalm versions.

16. Ach Gott vom Himmel, sieh daruin.
17. Aus tiefer Noth schrei ich zu dir.
18. Ein feste Burg ist unser Gott.
19. Es spricht der Unweisen Mund wohl.
20. Es wollt uns Gott genädig sein.
21. Wir Gott nicht mit uns diese Zeit.
22. Wohl dem, der in Gottes Furcht steht.

D. Paraphrases of other portions Scripture.

23. Dies sind die heiligen zehn Gebot.
24. Jesaja dem Propheten das geschah.
25. Mensch wilt du leben seliglich.
26. Mit Fried und Freud ich fahr dich.
27. Sie ist mir lieb die werthe Magd.
28. Vater unser im Himmelreich.

E. Hymns mainly Original.

29. Christ lag in Todesbänden.
30. Christ unser Herr zum Jordan kam.
31. Ein neues Lied wir heben an.
32. Erhalt uns Herr bei deinem Wort.
33. Jesus Christus unser Heiland, Der.
34. Nun freut euch lieben Christenges.
35. Vom Himmel hoch da komm ich!
36. Vom Himmel kam der Engel Saba.

37. Für allen Freuden auf Erden.
38. Kyrie eleison.

In the Blätter für Hymnologi Dannel arranges Luther's hymns what he thinks their adaptation German C. U., as follows:—

- i. Hymns which ought to be include Evangelical hymn-book: Nos. 7-18, 20 32, 34, 36, 38, 39.
- ii. Hymns the reception of which (at might be contested): Nos. 2, 3, 4, 19, 21 33.
- iii. Hymns not suited for a hymn-book 27, 31, 37.

The whole of these 38 pieces is in the body of this Dictionary unlines, except Nos. 1-8, 11, which under the first lines given in ital.

There are also from the 1856 and 1868 eds. the following:—

20. A thousand years have come and gone. Christmas.

23. The Lord is rich and merciful. How Faith in God.
24. There is purpose in this waste. Easter.

Lyte's hymns are marked by intense individuality, gracefulness and felicity of diction, picturesqueness, spiritual freshness, and the sadness of a powerful soul struggling with a weak and emaciated body. Although The Riculet was pub. for use by his own congregation as a supplement to Watts, more than one half of the hymns were designed for private use only, but were not so distinguished in the work. Its publication caused one of the most bitter hymnological controversies known in the annals of modern Congregationalism. Time, however, and a criticism, broader and more just, have declared emphatically in favour of his hymns as valuable contributions to cultured sacred song. [W. G. H.]

Lyte, Henry Francis, M.A., s. of Captain Thomas Lyte, was b. at Ednam, near Kelso, June 1, 1793, and educated at Portora (the Royal School of Enniskillen), and at Trinity College, Dublin, of which he was a Scholar, and where he graduated in 1814. During his University course he distinguished himself by gaining the English prize poem on three occasions. At one time he had intended studying Medicine; but this he abandoned for Theology, and took Holy Orders in 1815, his first curacy being in the neighbourhood of Woxford. In 1817, he removed to Marazion, in Cornwall. There, in 1818, he underwent a great spiritual change, which shaped and influenced the whole of his after life, the immediate cause being the illness and death of a brother clergyman. Lyte says of him:—

"He died happy under the belief that though he had deeply erred, there was One whose death and sufferings would atone for his delinquencies, and be accepted for all that he had incurred;—

and concerning himself he adds:—

"I was greatly affected by the whole matter, and brought to look at life and its issue with a different eye than before; and I began to study my Bible, and preach in another manner than I had previously done."

From Marazion he removed, in 1819, to Lymington, where he composed his Tales on the Lord's Prayer in verse (pub. in 1828); and in 1823 he was appointed Perpetual Curate of Lower Brizham, Devon. That appointment he held until his death, on Nov. 20, 1847. His Poems of Henry Vaughan, with a Memoir, were pub. in 1846. His own Poetical works were:—

- (1) Poems chiefly Religious, 1833; 2nd ed. enlarged, 1845.
- (2) The Spirit of the Psalms, 1834, written in the first instance for use in his own Church at Lower Brizham, and enlarged in 1835.
- (3) Miscellaneous Poems (posthumously) in 1848. This last is a reprint of the 1845 ed. of his Poems, with "Abide with me" added.
- (4) Remains, 1850.

Lyte's Poems have been somewhat freely drawn upon by hymnal compilers; but by far the larger portion of his hymns found in modern collections are from his Spirit of the Psalms. In America his hymns are very popular. In many instances, however, through mistaking Miss Auber's (q.v.) Spirit of the Psalms, 1829, for his, he is credited with more than is his due. The Andover Sabbath H. Bk.,

1838, is especially at fault in this; the best known and most widely used positions are "Abide with me, eventide"; "Far from my leave: "God of mercy, God of grace" are Thy courts above"; "Praise, King of heaven"; and "There is secret place." These and several annotated under their respective the rest in C. U. are:—

contributed to magazines, and the most notable of which are David Elginbrod; Robert Falconer; Alec Forbes of Howglen; and Annals of a Quiet Neighbourhood. He was some time Editor of Good Words for the Young, and wrote England's Antiphon for Macmillan's Sunday Library. His poetical works are:—

(1) Within and Without, 1855; (2) The Disciple, and Other Poems, 1860; (3) The Diary of an Old Soul (printed for private circulation), 1867; (4) Ascolics, a volume of trs. from the Sierman (most of which first appeared in the Sunday Magazine), 1876; and (5) A Threefold Cord, 1903, part of which previously appeared in his Works of Fancy and Imagination, 10 vols., 1871.

Most of his original hymns were contributed to Hys. and Sacred Songs for Sunday Schools and Social Worship, &c., pub. by Fletcher and Tubbs, Manchester, in 1855 (2nd. ed., 1856), and of which his brother, and the Rev. G. B. Bubier (p. 100. ii.) were the editors. The original hymns, which are signed "G. Macdonald," in this collection are:—

1. A quiet heart, submissive, meek. The Meek inherit the Earth.
2. Daylight fades away. Second Advent.
3. Father, I well may praise Thy name. Sunday Morning.
4. Father, these souls of ours have been. Blessed are the Pure in Heart.
5. If we were longing for the food. Blessed are they that Hunger and Thirst after Righteousness.
6. It was an awful hour that gave. Blessed are the Merciful.
7. Let Thy own voice, O Father, say. Blessed are they that mourn.
8. O Son of Man, Thy Name by choice. Blessed are the Meek.
9. Our Father, hear our longing prayer. Blessed are the Poor in Spirit.

Some of these hymns were afterwards revised by their author. The next two are from The Disciple, and Other Poems, 1860:—

10. O God, Whose daylight leadeth down. Evening.
11. O Lord (thou) of life, Thy quickening voice. Morning.

Dr. Macdonald's hymns are rich in ideas, but are touched with a mysticism which renders them a little difficult of apprehension. They are however of great value in setting forth truths rarely expressed in hymns, and are likely to grow in favour. [W. G. H.]

Macduff, John Ross, D.D., second s. of Alexander Macduff, of Bonhard, near Perth, was b. at Bonhard, May 23, 1818. After studying at the University of Edinburgh, he became in 1842 parish minister of Kettins, Forfarshire, in 1849 of St. Madoc's, Perthshire, and in 1855 of Sandyford, Glasgow. He received the degree of D.D. from the University of Glasgow in 1862, and about the same time also from the University of New York. He retired from pastoral work in 1871, and now (1887) lives at Chislehurst, Kent. He has published many practical and devotional works which have attained a wide circulation. In 1857 he was appointed by the General Assembly a member of their Hymnal Committee. His 31 hymns appeared in his Altar Stones, 1853, and were also included with his later poems in his The Gates of Praise, 1876. Of these hymns the following are in C. U.:—

1. Christ is coming! Let creation. Second Advent.
2. Eternal Rock! To Thee I flee. (1863.) Christ the Rock.
3. Everlasting arms of love. (1863.) Support in Christ.
4. From Thy habitation holy. Whitsuntide.

5. Hasten, Lord, that morn of glory.
6. Jesus wept! Those tears are over-raising of Lazarus.
7. O do not, blessed Lord, depart. 'T desired.
8. Where shall I look for holy calm.
Whitside.
9. Why should I murmur or repine?

Of these hymns those dated 11 only of Dr. Macduff's originals.

He was popular as a preacher, and had no inconsiderable reputation as a musical composer. He ceased preaching on the publication of his work Thelyphthora, in which he advocated the practice of polygamy. He d. in 1790. He pub. A Commentary on the Articles of the Church of England; A Treatise on the Christian Faith, &c., and:—

A Collection of Psalms and Hymns Extracted from Various Authors, and published by the Reverend Mr. Madan. London, 1766.

This Coll. contained 170 hymns thrown together without order or system of any kind. In 1768 he added an Appendix of 24 hymns. This Coll., referred to in this Dictionary as Madan, and Madan's Ps. & Hys., had for many years a most powerful influence on the hymnody of the Church of England. Nearly the whole of its contents, together with its extensively altered texts, were reprinted in numerous hymn-books for nearly one hundred years. At the present time many of the great hymns of the last century are in use as altered by him in 1760 and 1768. Although several hymns have been attributed to him, we have no evidence that he ever wrote one. His hymnological labours were employed in altering, piecing, and expanding the work of others. And in this he was most successful.

Maerentes oculi spargite lachrymas.

Passiontide. This hymn, which sometimes begins "Maerentes oculi," is the hymn at Vespers in the Office of the Passion of our Lord Jesus Christ, which has been added to the Roman Breviary since 1740 (see "Aspice infami Deum"). It is in the Roman Breviary, Bologna, 1827, Pars Hiemalis, Supplement, p. 270, in 7 st. Tr. as:—

Now let us sit and weep. By E. Caswall. 1st pub. in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 63, in 7 st. of 4 l.; and again in his Hys. & Poems, 1873, p. 35. In the Hymnary, 1872, it is altered to "Come let us sit and weep."

Another tr. is:—

Ye weeping eyes, still bring tears. J. Wallace, 1874.

Mag ich Unglück nicht wiederstoßn.

[Cross and Consolation.] Wackernagel, iii. pp. 118-121, gives four versions from a Nürnberg broadsheet, circa 1526, the Erfurt G. B., 1531, &c. The text in the Unc. L. S., 1851, No. 684, follows that in the 1531. It is in 3 st. of 11 l., the two initial letters of st. i., ii. and the initial letter of st. iii., giving the name Maria.

In the Nürnberg broadsheet it is called "Queen Maria of Hungary's hymn," and so in the Magdeburg G. B., 1534, and many other later collections, it is ascribed to her. She was sister of the Emperor Charles V., and wife of King Ludwig II., of Hungary, who d. in 1526, she surviving till 1538. Both Wackernagel, and Lauxmann in Arch., viii. 528, think it was merely adopted by her as her hymn of consolation, and may have been written for her by Martin Luther. Had Luther written it, however, it is hardly likely that in the hymn-books edited by him or for him from Kling's G. B., 1529, to Babst's G. B., 1845, it would always have appeared without his name.

The tr. are:—(1) Can I my fate no more withstand, by Miss Winkworth, 1858, p. 178. (2) I cannot thine suppress, or quell, by Dr. G. Walker, 1860, p. 47.

tion of the Edict of Nantes. Pierre Malan, after seeing his sister fall a victim to persecution, left Merindol (1714), and arrived at Geneva (1722). Henri Abraham César Malan was b. at Geneva in 1787. After an education at the College, he went to Marseilles, with the intention of learning business: but, soon after, entered the Academy at Geneva, as a preparation for the ministry, to which he was ordained in 1810. He had been appointed one of the masters at the College in the previous year. The National Church of Geneva was at that time almost Unitarian, and Malan's convictions were in accord with it. But the great movement known as the Réveil, of which the first products were the dissident church of Bourg de Four and at a later date that founded by Malan himself, and which finally imbued the whole Swiss Church with its spirit, was silently preparing itself. The germ of the movement may be traced in the Société des Amis (1810), of which Empeytaz and A. Bost were leaders; and in Malan's independent attainment to the doctrines of the Divinity of the Saviour and the free gifts of salvation through Him (1816). But the human agency, which gave it force, and determined its Calvinistic direction, was the visit of Robert Haldane (in the autumn of 1816), to whom not only these pioneers of the movement, but P. Monod, E. Rieu, Guers, Gonthier, Merle d'Aubigné, and others, always pointed as their spiritual father. Empeytaz and others sought to attain enfranchisement by the establishment of the "petite Eglise of Bourg de Four." Malan wished to reform the national Church from within: and a sermon at Geneva, which brought on him the obloquy of the professors and theologians that composed his audience, and which Haldane characterized as a republication of the Gospel, was his first overt act (Jan. 19, 1817). But the opposing forces were far too strong for him. The Venerable Company excluded him from the pulpits, and achieved his dismissal from his regentship at the College (1818). In 1820 he built a chapel (Chapelle du Temoignage) in his garden, and obtained the licence of the State for it, as a separatist place of worship. In 1823 he was formally deprived of his status as a minister of the national Church. The seven years that succeeded were the palmy days of the little chapel. Strangers, especially from England, mingled with the overflowing Swiss congregation. But (in 1830) a secession to Bourg de Four, and then the foundation of the Oratoire and the Société Évangélique, which in 1849 absorbed the congregation of Bourg de Four under the title of the Eglise Évangélique, thinned more and more the number of his adherents. His burning zeal for the conversion of souls found a larger outlet in long tours of evangelization, subsidized by religious friends, in his own land and Belgium and France, and also in Scotland and England, where he had friends among many religious bodies, and where he preached to large congregations. The distinguishing characteristic of these tours was his dealing with individuals. On the steamboat or the diligence, in the mountain walk, at the hotel, no opportunity was lost. On one occasion an old man whom he visited drew from his pillow a copy of his great hymn-book de Sion, 1841, and told him he prayed to see the author of it before he died.

It is as the originator of the movement in the French Reform that Malan's fame cannot perish. Hymnody, § v.] The spirit of his perpetuated in the analysis of experience, the never-wearied delineation of hopes and fears, the joys and sorrows of the believer's soul, which are still the French Protestant hymns. To this added, in Malan himself, a mark of tone, necessitated by the great struggle for Evangelical doctrine: phatic Calvinism, expressing the despondency of Newton and C in contrast with them, in brightness and gladness. French Calvinism pronounced his hymns unequal, literary defects; but their unaffected and fervent sincerity are universal. In the Chants de Sion, hymns 20, "Béni soit"; 165, "Mon cœur se désespère"; 199, "Du Rocher"; 200, "Agneau de Dieu"; 239, "Jehovah," are in every Protestant hymn-book; and several others are very

Besides his hymns Malan produced less tracts and pamphlets on the dispute between the National and Churches and the Church of Rome. His articles in the Record and reviews. He was a man of various talents. His hymns were set to melodies. He was an artist, and his little workshop had its forger's bench, its printing press. In his life his strong Calvinism, and mere external union in church, kept him distinct from all in church comprehension, though in communion with all the sectarian thought in Geneva and Switzerland. One time there seemed a prospect of rejoining the national Church, driven him from her. One of his joys was the meeting of the Evangelical Alliance at Geneva (1861). He had one of his latest orders was the rebuilding of his decayed chapel, in which he had labored for 43 years. He died at Vandoeuvres, Geneva, in 1864, leaving a number of whom, the Rev. S. C. Malan, at that time Vicar of Broadwindsor, is known as a linguist and a theologian of the Church. [For further details see les Travaux de César Malan, D. I ses fils.] To English readers Malan is known as a hymn-writer through "Non, ce n'est pas mourir" (q.v. death to die," &c. About a dozen hymns appear in a translated Friendly Visitor for 1826, and citations are noted at p. 302, l. [Fr. p. 300, l. § v.]

Man of Sorrows and C. J. Latrobe.

This hymn is marked by the Eberle in his notes in the Yenger for June, 1868, as C. Gre-

C. I. Latrobe, 1802. Mr. Miller (Singers and Songs, p. 231) quotes Mr. Latrobe as saying:—

"The late venerable Bishop of the Brethren's Church, Christian Gregor, was the principal author and compiler of the following cantata, of which he kindly furnished me with a copy. It has been my desire and study to preserve all the ideas contained in the original, and I hope, on comparison, it will be found that I have omitted few, if any, that are essential; but I did not always confine myself to words, or to the same number of verses."

The original German has not been traced. In English the hymn was given as No. 1011 in the 1808 Suppl. to the Moravian H. Bk. of 1801 (1886, No. 72), in 6 st. of 8 l. It was adopted by Montgomery in his Christian Psalmist, 1825, and has since appeared in the Cong. H. Bk., 1836; N. Cong., 1859; Bapt. Ps. & Hys., 1858; Allon's Cong. Psalmist Hyl., 1886, and others. [J. M.]

Mane prima Sabbati. [Easter.] This sequence has sometimes been ascribed to Adam of St. Victor, but Gautier in his 1881 ed. of Adam's Oeuvres poetiques, p. 236, does not print the text, and says that this ascription is false, for the piece is earlier than Adam and not in his style. Among the British Museum mss. it is found in one of the 12th cent. (Reg. 2 B. iv. f. 101 b); in another, v. 1199 (Calig. A. xiv. f. 69 b); in a third of the 13th cent. (Add. 12194, f. 123 b), &c. It is also in the Sarum (Bodleian ms. Barlow, 5, c. 1370, pp. 216, 364); Hereford (ms. in the Bodleian, c. 1370); York (ms. in the Bodleian, c. 1390); Paris (early 14th cent. ms. in the Brit. Mus. Add. 16905, f. 144 b), and other Missals. Morel, p. 45, cites it as in a 12th cent. ms. at Einsiedeln. The text is also in Mons. No. 168; Daniel, ii. p. 255; Kehrein, No. 93, &c. The Sarum and some other Missals give it also for St. Mary Magdalene. Tr. as :—

Manington, Alice, daughter of Thomas Manington, of Hastings, was b. at Brighton, and in 1882 was residing in Vienna. She has published:—

(1.) Footprints of the Holy Road; Translations from the German, by A. M. London, W. Macintosh, 1863, containing in all 102 pieces. (2.) A Wreath of Carols from the Netherland. London, W. Macintosh, 1866. This contains trs. of 25 German hymns and carols, No. 26 being original.

None of these versions appear to be in English C.U. They are noted under the first lines of the German wherever possible. [J. M.]

Mant, Richard, D.D. s. of the Rev. Richard Mant, Master of the Grammar School, Southampton, was b. at Southampton, Feb. 12, 1776. He was educated at Winchester and Trinity, Oxford (B.A. 1797, M.A. 1799). At Oxford he won the Chancellor's prize for an English essay: was a Fellow of Oriel, and for some time College Tutor. On taking Holy Orders he was successively curate to his father, then of one or two other places. Vicar of Coggeshall, Essex, 1810; Domestic Chaplain to the Archbishop of Canterbury, 1813, Rector of St. Botolph, Bishopsgate, London, 1816, and East Horsley, 1818, Bishop of Killaloe, 1820, of Down and Connor, 1823, and of Dromore, 1842. He was also Hampton Lecturer in 1811. He d. Nov. 2, 1848. His prose works were numerous, and although now somewhat obsolete, they were useful and popular in their day. His poetical works, and other works which contain poetical pieces, are:—

(1) The Country Curate, 1804; (2) Poems in three Parts, 1806; (3) The Slave, 1807; (4) The Book of Psalms in an English Metrical Version, &c., 1824; (5) The Holydays of the Church; or Scripture Narratives of Our Blessed Lord's Life and Ministry, and Diographical Notices of the Apostles, Evangelists, and other Saints, with Reflections, Collects, and Metrical Sketches, vol. I., 1828; vol. II., 1831; (6) The Gospel Miracles in a series of Poetical Sketches, &c., 1832; (7) The British Months, 2 vols., 1836; (8) Ancient Hymns from the Roman Breviary, for Domestic Use. . . . To which are added Original Hymns, principally of Commemoration and Thanksgiving for Christ's Holy Ordinances, 1837: new ed., 1871. (9) The Happiness of the Blessed Dead, 1847.

Bp. Mant is known chiefly through his translations from the Latin. He was one of the earliest of the later translators, I. Williams and J. Chandler being his contemporaries. Concerning his translations, Mr. Ellerton, in his Notes on Church Hymns, 1881, p. xlviii. (folio ed.), says justly that:—

"Mant had little knowledge of hymns, and merely took those of the existing Roman Breviary as he found them: consequently he had to omit many, and so to alter others that they have in fact become different hymns: nor was he always happy in his manipulation of them. But his book has much good taste and devout feeling, and has fallen into undeserved neglect."

His metrical version of the Psalms [See Psalters, English, § xvii] has yielded very few pieces to the hymnals, the larger portion of his original compositions being from his work of 1837. The most popular of these is "Come Holy Ghost, my soul inspire, Spirit of," &c., and its altered forms; "Bright the vision that delighted," and its altered form of "Round the Lord in glory seated;" and "For all Thy saints, O Lord." His hymns in C. U. which are not annotated under their respective first lines are:—

i. From his Metrical Version of the Psalms, 1824.

1. God, my King, Thy might confessing. Ps. cxi.
  2. Lord, to Thee I make my vows. Ps. xxiiv.
  3. Blessed be the Lord most High. Ps. cxviii.
  4. My trust is in the highest Name. Ps. xli.
  5. Reign, Jehovah, King supreme. Ps. xciii.
  6. Thy listening ear, O Lord, incline. Ps. lxxviii.
  7. To God my earnest voice I raise. Ps. cxlii.
  8. To Jehovah hymn the lay. Ps. cxviii.
- centos in Spurgeon's G. O. H. Hk., 1866. (1) st. 1. v. and (2) "Thee, Jehovah, will I bless" from st. vii.-x.

ii. From his Holydays of the Church, &c., 1828-31.

9. Lo, the day the Lord hath made. Easter.
10. There is a dwelling place above. All Saints.

iii. From his Ancient Hymns, &c., 1837.

11. Before Thy mercy's throne. Lent.
12. Father of all, from Whom we trace. Unity.
13. For these who first proclaimed Thy word. Apostles.
14. Not when He bids me seek His face. Holy Communion.
15. Oft as in God's own house we sit. Divine Worship.
16. Put off thy shoes, 'tis holy ground. The House of God.
17. Saviour of men, our Hope (Life) and Rest. The Greater Festivals.

18. Thy House each day of hallowed rest. Holy Communion.

19. We bless Thee for Thy Church, O Lord. Thanksgiving for the Church.

20. We deem and own it, Lord, a proof. Divine Grace.

When all Bp. Munt's trs. original hymns, and versions of the Psalms in C. U. are taken into account, it is found that he is somewhat strongly represented in modern hymnody.

March, Henry, was b. at Barnstaple, Aug. 29, 1791, and educated for the Congregational ministry at Homerton College under Dr. J. Pye-Smith. He held pastorates at Bungay, Mill Hill, Colchester, and Newbury. He d. in London, July 28, 1869. His pub. works are:—

(1) Sabbaths at Home, or Help to their right Improvement, Founded on the 42nd and 43rd Psalms, London, 1820; 2nd ed. 1824. This work consists of Essays on religious subjects, followed by Reflections and Hymns. (2) Hymns for the Closet of the Christian Minister, Lond., 1823. (3) The Early Life of Christ an Example for the Young.

Of his hymns in C. U. the best are:—

1. Eternal God, eternal King. Adoration of the Father. In Couder's Cong. H. Bk., 1836, and several modern collections, especially in America.

2. O send Thy light, Thy truth, my God. Public Worship. Appeared in his Sabbaths at Home, &c., 1820, p. 227, where it is given at the close of an Essay on "Natural Gifts Consecrated to God." It was repeated in the Leeds H. Bk., 1853, and later hymnals.

Marckant, John. [Old Version, §§ ix., x.]

Mardley, John. [Old Version, §§ ix., x.]

Maria mater Domini. [The Assumption of the B. V. M.] In the Durham Hymnarium of the 11th cent. (f. 32b) this is given as a hymn "on the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary." It is also in two mss. of the 11th cent. in the British Museum (Vesp. D. xii. f. 88; Harl. 2961, f. 231 b). The printed text is in the Surtees Society's Lat. Hys. of the Anglo-Saxon Ch., 1851, p. 109. Daniel, i. No. 387, prints only the first stanza. Tr. as:—

Mary, Mother of thy [the] Lord. This tr. was given anonymously in the 1860 Appendix to the H. Nodet, No. 172; and again in Skinner's Daily Service Hymnal, 1834.

[J. M.]

Mark the soft-falling snow. P. Doddridge. [Natural things emblematical of things Spiritual.] 1st pub. in J. Orton's posthumous ed. of Doddridge's Hymns, 1755, No. 111, in 4 st. of 8 l., and headed "Fruitful Showers, Emblems of the salutary Effects of the Gospel." In that and subsequent editions to 1839, the opening lines read:—

"Mark the soft-falling Snow,
And the diffusive Rain;
To Heav'n, from whence it fell,
It turns not back again."

In 1839 J. D. Humphreys, in reprinting the Hymns from the original mss., corrected from the ms. of this hymn the grammatical error of "it" for "they," in these lines, and drew special attention thereto in the Preface to the Hymns, as evidence of his charge against Job Orton as a careless editor. Amongst modern collections the text of 1755 is retained in the Scottish Evang. Union Hymnal, 1878, and that of the original ms. in Martinengo's Hymns, 1840.

Marot, Clement, was b. at Cahors about 1497. His education there and at Paris gave him a fair knowledge of Latin, and to some extent Greek. He possessed knowledge of music, and played spinet and composed tunes for chansons. Though destined at law, he was placed at sixteen as a service of Nicolas de Neufville, one he became valet de chambre, rite de Valois. The passionate ad conceived for her turned his toward Huguenot doctrines, which were impressing themselves on her: an ridicule of the vices of the moral disorders of the Church, united with confessions of simple faith, were of all the misfortunes that beset him. He was wounded and taken prisoner with Francis I. After his return he married (1526?). About the time he succeeded, at his father's death, of valet de chambre to Francis, outbreak of persecution obliged him to flee from France to Ferrara, where for a time he must have met Calvin. From there he went to Venice; and was then the influence of Marguerite of Navarre called to France by the king. That that he recanted his Huguenot errors (1536) rests on no sufficient evidence. In 1537-9 he completed the translation of the psalms, which were circulated at once. They became the fashion of the hour, king, Catherine de Medici, the Diane de Poitiers, and the court and ladies sang them to ballad tunes. Francis V. rewarded Marot for a copy of 200 golden doubloons. The publication of these psalms (1542) brought on him the wrath of the Sorbonne, and he fled again to Savoy, then to Geneva. There, called by Francis and by Calvin, he composed 50 Psalms, published with a Dedication to the Ladies of France (1543). The style of Geneva must have been stifling to his mercurial nature. The only authentic of his story that has come down is the mention of Bonivard for playing truant with him. His prosecution for heresy, one of the malicious inventions of his enemies, He left Geneva (1543) for Savoy, Turin, where he d. in August 1544.

The poetry of Marot is composed of all ballads, rondeaux, epigrams, and rhymed stanzas, of grace and delicacy, gaiety, wit, and satiric, enriched and simplified the lyrical style. In his matured work—exhibit an accession of stateliness. His many-sided character, from the prejudices of Catholic and Huguenot enemies he is a dispassionate heretic, to Bayle a poet who gave his talents easily to either a Marc Girardin a man penetrated by the disgust at the corruptions of the Church, deep Huguenot conviction, to others a child of learning and Free Thought of the Renaissance, last no doubt he never lost his courtier's habit is no proof of his licentiousness, except in his "Abuse," to which he often alludes; his style is abundantly paralleled in the language of the close analysis of his life and his writings, and Mr. Henry Morley attests the existence of real religion of which the Trente Psaumes a distinguished fruit.

Marot, Samuel, D.D., was b. at Magdeburg, Dec. 11, 1770, and studied at the University of Frankfurt a. Oder. On July 1, 1798, he was ordained as preacher to the Orphanage (Friedrichs-Waisenhaus) at Berlin. In 1808 he was appointed preacher at the Neue Kirche; in 1816 superintendent of the Reformed Churches in Berlin; and also became Consistorialrath in 1830, and Oberconsistorialrath in 1846 (D.D. from University of Berlin, 1846). He d. at Berlin, Oct. 12, 1863 (Allg. Deutsche Biog., ix. 404, &c.). He was one of the Committee which compiled the Berlin G. B., 1829. The only hymn known by him is:—

Von des Himmels Thron. Confirmation. Contributed to the Berlin G. B., 1829, as No. 350, in 8 st. of 6 l. Its excellence and simplicity have gained it a place in many recent German collections, as the Berlin G. B., ed. 1863, No. 1614. Tr. as:—

From Thy heav'nly throne. A good and full tr. by Miss Winkworth as No. 91 in her C. H. for England, 1863; repeated in the Parish H. Bk., 1875. [J. M.]

Marriott, John, M.A., s. of R. Marriott, D.D., Rector of Cottesbach, near Lutterworth, was b. at Cottesbach, in 1780, and educated at Rugby, and Christ Church, Oxford. He was the second of two who obtained honours in the schools in 1802, the first year in which there was a public examination for honours at Oxford. He was also Student of Christ Church, and for about two years a private tutor in the family of the Duke of Buccleuch. The Duke presented him to the Rectory of Church Lawford, Warwickshire. This he retained to his death, although his wife's health compelled him to reside in Devonshire, where he was successively curate of St. Lawrence and other parishes in Exeter, and of Broadclyst, near Exeter, where he d. March 31, 1825. His published works include a vol. of Sermons which he issued in 1818, and a posthumous vol. of Sermons, pub. by his sons in 1838. His hymns were never pub. by himself, nor in book form by any one. A few appeared in print during his lifetime, but without his permission. These include:—

1. A saint! O would that I could claim. Holiness desired. "Written off almost at the moment, on bearing the name applied in a scornful way at a party, about 1813." It was printed in The Friendly Visitor, 1834.

2. Thou, whose Almighty word. Missions. Written, his son says, "about 1813." It was printed in The Friendly Visitor, July, 1826, in 4 st. of 7 l., with the title "Missionary Hymn," and without signature. This text differs only in two or three words from the original as supplied by the author's son to Dr. Rogers and pub. by him in his Lyra Brit., 1867, p. 395. Two texts are known which are received as original, the first the undoubted text in Lyra Brit., and the second that given by Lord Selborne from the coll. of Dr. Raffles, Congregational Minister of Liverpool. The differences are, (1) in st. iii. l. 4, orig. is "Move o'er," and Raffles "Move on," and (2) st. iv. — original.

"Blessed, and holy, and Glorious Trinity.
Wisdom, Love, Might:
Boundless as ocean's tide
Rolling in fullest pride
Thro' the world, far and wide,
Let there be light."

Dr. Raffles.

"Holy and blessed Three,
Glorious Trinity.
Wisdom, Love, Might!
Boundless as ocean's tide
Rolling in fullest pride,
Through the earth, far and wide,
Let there be light!"

The second text is that mostly in C. U. in all English speaking countries, and that which is usually translated. Tr. into Latin, by R. Bingham, in his Hymn, 'Christ, lat., 1871, as "Tu, Bingham, in his Hymn, 'Christ, Another form appeared in The Casket, Oliphant, Edinburgh, 1838, but this is unknown to the collections.

3. When Christ our human form did bear. Christ's love of Children. "Written in 1816 for the Parochial Schools, Upottery, Devon."

The foregoing details are in great part from MS. notes supplied by the author's son. [S. Mss.] [J. J.]

Marshall, Julia A. [Elliott, Julia A.]

Martin, Henry Arthur, M.A., s. of George Martin, Chancellor and Canon of Exeter, b. at Exeter July 30, 1831, and educated at Eton, and Christ Church, Oxford, graduating B.A. 1855, and M.A. 1857. On taking Holy Orders he became Curate of Hallow, near Worcester, 1856, and Vicar of Laxton with Moorhouse, Nottinghamshire, 1858. In 1871 he contributed the following hymns to Church Hymns:—

1. Lord of the frost-bound winter. Harvest. Written in 1859.

2. O Rock of Ages, One Foundation. St. Peter. Written in 1871.

3. Sound aloud Jehovah's praises. Holy Trinity. Written in 1870, in 8 st., four of which only are given in Church Hymns.

4. The heavenly King must come. St. John Baptist. Written in 1871. [J. J.]

Martin, Samuel, D.D., s. of John Martin, schoolmaster at Anstruther-Easter, Fife, was b. at Anstruther, July 7, 1740. He studied at the University of Edinburgh, and, after being licensed to preach in 1762, became in 1768 parish minister of Balmaghie, Kirkcubright, and in 1776 of Monimail, Fife. He received the degree of D.D. from the University of St. Andrews in 1798. He d. at Monimail, Sep. 12, 1829. As a member of the Committee appointed by the General Assembly of 1775, to revise the Trans. and Paraph. of 1745, he contributed No. 12 to the 1781 collection (see Cameron, William, and Scottish Translations and Paraphrases). [J. M.]

Martineau, Harriet, was b. at Norwich, June 12, 1802, and d. at Ambleside, June 1876. Best known as the writer of Illustrations of Political Economy, Retrospect of Western Travel; two novels, Deerbrook and The Hour and the Man; Eastern Life, Past and Present; a History of the Thirty Years' Peace, and various other works. Her first publication was a book of Devotional Exercises, with hymns appended to each Exercise, and her hymns also belong to what she speaks of in the Autobiography as her "Unitarian" period. Five of them appeared in a Collection of Hymns for Christian Worship, printed in 1831 for the congregation of Eustace Street, Dublin, and edited by her brother, the Rev. James Martineau.

1. All men are equal in their birth. Human Equality.
2. Lord Jesus! come; for here. Jesus desired.
times given as (1) "Come, Jesus, come, for here" and "Thy kingdom come, for here."

3. The floods of grief have spread around. In Affliction.

Martineau, James, LL.D., D.D., b. at Norwich, April 21, 1805, the son of a manufacturer and wine merchant of Huguenot descent. After four years at the Norwich grammar-school, and two as a pupil of Dr. Lant Carpenter, at Bristol, and a short experience in the shops of a mechanical engineer at Derby, he entered as a Divinity student in Manchester College, York. His first ministry was at Eustace St. Chapel, Dublin [1828-32], as assistant to his uncle, the Rev. Philip Taylor. From 1832 to 1857 he was in Liverpool, as minister of the congregation meeting in Paradise St. Chapel, and from 1849 in the new Hope St. Church. In 1840 he was appointed professor of Mental and Moral Philosophy and Political Economy in Manchester New College, and in 1857 followed the college to London, becoming its Principal in 1869 and resigning in 1885. On settling in London he became also minister of Little Portland St. Chapel, first in conjunction with the Rev. J. J. Taylor, and afterwards alone till his resignation in 1873. He received the degree of D.C.L. from Oxford in 1888.

The chief of Dr. Martineau's works hitherto published are four volumes of sermons, Exhortations after the Christian Life, 2 vols., 1843 and 1847; Hours of Thought on Sacred Things, 2 vols., 1876 and 1879; Studies of Christianity, 1858; Essays Philosophical and Theological, 2 vols., 1866 and 1868, collected from various Reviews; A Study of Spinoza, 1882; and Types of Ethical Theories, 2 vols., 1885, 2nd ed., 1886. These contain the substance of his teaching as a Christian minister and an expounder of a spiritual philosophy of religion. By early training and matured conviction a Unitarian of the Catholic and spiritual type, Dr. Martineau has served not only the little group of churches with which he is immediately connected, but the Church Universal by his gifts of sympathy and insight into the deepest questions of human life. He has strengthened the foundations of faith in the light of modern knowledge, and added treasures, the worth of which have yet to be fully measured, to the rich store of the devout literature of the Church.

The Catholic spirit and deeply Christian temper impressed upon all Dr. Martineau's literary work give their distinctive character to the three hymn-books which he has edited, viz.:—

(1) A Collection of Hymns for Christian Worship. Dublin: Printed for the Congregation of Eustace Street, 1831. This collection of 273 hymns already clearly indicates the principles of selection afterwards to be more fully worked out. It was made for the use of a society, "whose worship is paid solely to the God and Father of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ," and in adopting the hymns of Dr. Watts and others, such changes are made as are required by theological consistency; but the preface pleads for a wider latitude of choice than had been usual in older selections, "bringing all the resources of lyric poetry (the poetry of the affections) into the service of religion." There are 18 hymns by Bp. Heber introduced, and special mention is made of his merit in "first liberalizing the style of poetry designed for our churches."

During his ministry in Liverpool Dr. Martineau published:—

(2) Hymns for the Christian Church and Home. Collected and edited by James Martineau. London, 1840. This with his own congregation took the place of the old Paradise St. collection of 1816, and was quickly recognised as pre-eminent among the books in use among the non-subscribing churches.

Dr. Martineau's last collection was:—

(3) Hymns of Praise and Prayer, collected and edited by James Martineau, LL.D., D.D. "Vatum inspirata solatione Rectoriae." London, 1873.

The character of the last two books, and the place they hold in the religious connection for which they were in the first instance prepared, are more fully described in the article on Unitarian Hymnody. It remains only to mention Dr. Martineau's own hymns:—

1. A voice upon the mid-night air. Ge.
2. Thy way is in (on) the deep, O Lord
3. "Where is your God?" they say. J of God. They have been hitherto published anonymously, but the authorship is acknowledged. Nos. 1, 2, appeared first in Ge., 1840, and 3 in his Hymns. They are also found in other collections of G. Britain and America.

Martyr Dei qui unicum. A hymn for the Common of Martyr Sarum, York, Aberdeen, old Roman Breviaries. It is found in four of the 11th cent. in the British Museum of the English Church (Vesp. D. Jul. A. vi. f. 65 b; Harl. 2961, f. 24 of the ancient Spanish Church (A. 153 b). In the Lat. Hys. of the Ch., 1851, p. 133, it is printed for the first time at Durham (B. iii. 32 f. 39). No. 234, prints the original, and gives the text of the revised Roman Breviary, 1632, where it begins, Invierte mar-

The original and the Roman Breviary of this hymn have been translated:—

Marvell, Andrew. [Addison]

Mary, Queen of Scotland. Mary, Queen of.

Mason, John. The known life is scanty. He was the son of a Minister, and the grandfather of the author of A Treatise on Self-Denial. He was educated at Strixton School and Clare Hall, Cambridge. In 1668, he became Curate of Islip, and in 1668, Vicar of Stantonbury, Buck. He was more than five years afterwards appointed Rector of Water-Stratford.

composed the volumes containing The Songs of Praise, his paraphrase of The Song of Solomon, and the Poem on Dives and Lazarus, with which Shepherd's Penitential Cries was afterwards bound up. This volume passed through twenty editions. Besides the Songs of Praise, it contains six Penitential Cries by Mason, and it is this portion of his work which harmonizes with the compositions of Shepherd. Probably his hymns were used in public worship, and if so, they are among the earliest hymns so used in the Church of England. Some of his hymns are often found in the early Hymn Collections of the 18th century. The most notable work besides this volume is Select Remains of the Rev. John Mason, a collection of sententious and practical sayings and Christian letters, published by his grandson, and much eulogised by Dr. Watts. His friend, Shepherd, who was at Water-Stratford at the remarkable period to which reference is made below, published two of Mason's Sermons, with a preface of his own. Mason was a man of true piety and humility; known for eminent prayerfulness; faithful, experimental, effectual preaching: "a light in the pulpit, and a pattern out of it." His friendship with Baxter, and Shepherd, the Nonconformist Minister of Braintree, probably indicates his sympathies and theological position. Baxter calls him "the glory of the Church of England," and says:—

"The frame of his spirit was so heavenly, his deportment so humble and obliging, his discourse of spiritual things so weighty, with such apt words and delightful air, that it charmed all that had any spiritual relish."

The close of his life was sensational enough. One night, about a month before his death, he had a vision of the Lord Jesus, wearing on His head a glorious crown, and with a look of unutterable majesty in His face. Of this vision he spoke; and preached a Sermon called The Midnight Cry, in which he proclaimed the near approach of Christ's Second Advent. A report spread, that this Advent would take place at Water-Stratford itself, and crowds gathered there from the surrounding villages. Furniture and provisions were brought in, and every corner of the house and village occupied. Most extraordinary scenes occurred, singing and leaping and dancing. The excitement had scarcely died out when the old man passed away (1694), still testifying that he had seen the Lord, and that it was time for the nation to tremble, and for Christians to trim their lamps. His last words were, "I am full of the loving kindness of the Lord." [See English Hymnody, Early, § x1.]

The full titles of his Songs of Praise, and the additions thereto, are:—

(1) Spiritual Songs; or, Songs of Praise to Almighty God upon several occasions, 1683. (2) The Song of Songs which is Solomon's first Turned, then Paraphrased in English Verse. Pub. with the former. (3) Dives and Lazarus, incorporated with the former 1685. (4) Penitential Cries, Begun by the Author of the Songs of Praise, And carried on by another Hand. Licensed and Entered, Sept. 13, 1693. This forms the concluding part of all editions of the Songs of Praise after 1693. The complete work was reprinted by D. Sedgwick in 1859. This reprint was accompanied by a short Memoir. In this reprint of Praise, P. Cries and Ps. are given under all by Shepherd (q.v.). Mason's Life, by John Dunton, was pub. in 1694, and included some miscellaneous poems; and another, by Henry Maurice, in 1695, in which are two hymns not found elsewhere. (See also an Article on him in the Sunday at Home, Feb. 1881.) We may add that Mason pub. a Catechism, with some Verses for Children. Of this, however, no copy is known to exist.

Mason's Songs are commonly presented in modern hymn-books in the form of centos, which are sometimes compiled from a single Song, and in other instances from several Songs. Many of these are annotated under their respective first lines. The rest include:—

1. Blest be my God that I was born. Praise for the Gospel.
2. Lord, for the mercies of the night. Morning.
3. Lord of my life, length of my days. Praise for Deliverance from immediate danger of death.
4. My God, a God of pardon is. Praise for Pardon of Sin.
5. My God, my only Help and Hope. Praise for Providence.
6. My God, my reconciled God. Praise for Peace of Conscience.
7. My God was with me all this night. Morning.
8. Thou wast, O God; and Thou wast blest. Praise for Creation.
9. Thousands of thousands stand around. Praise. A cento from Songs i. and ii.

In Griffith, Farran & Co.'s Ancient and Modern Library, No. 12, Giles Fletcher's Christ's Victory and Triumph, &c., 1888, p. 208 (edited by W. T. Brooke), a short hymn by Mason is given from Multum in Parvo: or the Jubilee of Jubilees, 1792, beginning "High praises meet and dwell within." It is an indifferent example of Mason's powers as a writer of sacred verse. [J. J.]

Mason, William, M.A., was b. at Kingston-upon-Hull, 1725, and educated at St. John's College, Cambridge. He was some time a Fellow of Pembroke Hall. On taking Holy Orders he became Rector of Aston, and Precentor of York Minster. He d. April 5, 1797. His poetical writings, including Poems, Tragedies, Odes, and Hymns, published at intervals, were collected and issued in 4 vols. in 1811 as The Works of William Mason, M.A. His Precentor of York, and Rector of Aston. His hymns, few in number, include, "Again day returns of holy rest" (p. 29, i.); "Soon shall the evening star with silver [illegible] ray" (p. 29, i.), &c. These are in vol. i. of his Works. [J. J.]

Massie, Edward, M.A., was educated at Wadham College, Oxford, where he was Ireland Scholar in 1828; B.A. 1830; M.A. 1834. He took Holy Orders in 1830; was Fellow and Tutor of University College, Durham, from 1841 to 1845; and then for some time Curate of Gawsorth, Cheshire. He has pub. in the Services of the Church, and Sacred Odes, vol. i., Lond., 1866, vol. ii., 1867. The latter contain many translations from the German. Those which are from German hymns, and within the range of this Dictionary, are annotated under the original German lines or their author's names. See Index of Authors and Translators. [J. J.]

Massie, Richard, eldest s. of the Rev. R. Massie, of Coddington, Cheshire, and Rector of Eccleston, was born at Chester, June 18, 1800, and resides at Pulford Hall, Coddington. Mr. Massie pub. a tr. of Martin Luther's Spiritual Songs, Lond., 1854. His Lyra Domestica, 1st series, Lond., 1860, contains of the 1st Series of Spitta's Psalter und Harfe. In 1864 he pub. vol. ii., containing trs. of Spitta's 2nd Series, together with an Appendix of trs. of German hymns by various authors. He also contributed many trs. of German hymns to Mercer's Church Psalter & H. Bk.; to Reid's British Herald; to the Day of Rest, &c. Most of these are annotated in this Dictionary. See Index of Authors and Translators. [J. J.]

Master, it is good to be. A. P. Stanley. [Transfiguration.] 1st pub. in an article by Dean Stanley on the Transfiguration and hymns relating thereto, in Macmillan's Magazine, April, 1870 (vol. xxi. p. 543). It is in 6 st. of 8 l. In a note which accompanies the hymn Dean Stanley says:—

"I have endeavoured (as in a hymn written some years ago on the Ascension) ['He is gone—Beyond the skies,' p. 500, ii.] to combine as far as possible, the various thoughts connected with the scene."

It is given in full in the Westminster Abbey H. Bk., 1883, and other collections, and with the omission of st. i. as "O Master, it is good to be," in the Hymnary, 1872. [J. J.]

Master, where abidest Thou? Elizabeth Charles, née Rundle. [Jesus desired.] Appeared in her work, The Three Wakings and Other Poems, 1859, p. 182. It is found in a few collections only. [J. J.]

Masters, Mary. Biographical facts concerning Mrs. Masters are very few. In 1733 she published a volume of Poems; and again, in 1755, by Subscription, Familiar Letters and Poems on Several Occasions (Lon. D. H. Cave). These Poems include versified epistles on various subjects to her friends, Odes, and a few paraphrases of single Psalms, &c. From the Preface to her Poems, 1733, we find that Thomas Scott took an interest in her, and contributed some Poems to that volume. It is evident also from the following extract that she was in humble circumstances, and without a liberal education:—

"The author of the following poems never read a Treatise of Rhetorick, or an Art of Poetry, nor was ever taught her English Grammar. Her Education rose no higher than the Spelling Book, or the Writing Master: her Genius to Poetry was always brow-beat and discountenanced by her Parents, and till her Merit got the better of her Fortune, she was shut out from all Commerce with the more knowing and polite part of the world." Poems, 1733: Preface.

In her Familiar Letters and Poems, 1755, pp. 228-29, there are three "Short Ejaculations," the first of which is the well known:—

"Tis Religion that can give,
Sweetest Pleasures while we live;
'Tis Religion must supply
Solid comforts when we die,
After Death its Joys will be,
Lasting as Eternity."

When these lines were included in Rippon's Selection, 1787, the following were added:—

"Be the living God my Friend, Then my bliss shall never end:—" and the 8 lines were divided into two stanzas. In this form the hymn is known to modern collections.

An ejaculation for use "At the Altar" is sometimes met with. It is also in the Familiar Letters, &c., p. 229, and reads:—

"O my ador'd Redeemer! deign to be,
Now present with the mystic Bread to me;
May I the Blessings of Thy Blood partake,
Who drink the Sacred Wine for Thy dear sake."

This volume also contains a which are worthy of attention.

Besides other volumes devotional works he also pub. a life of Luther (Historien von Doctoris Martini Luthers Anfang, Lehr, Leben und Sterben, Nürnberg, 1566) completed just before his death, and with a preface dated Oct. 5, 1565. His hymns are few in number, and appeared scattered in his various publications. Wackernagel, iii. pp. 1150-1161, gives 21 pieces, of which 15 may be called hymns; and 15 of these pieces with a memoir by K. F. Ledderhose appeared at Halle in 1858 (see also under Herman, N. p. 513, ii.). The finest of all his hymns, the beautiful cradle song, "Nun schlaf mein liebes Kindlein" [Wackernagel vii. p. 1152, from a Nürnberg broadsheet N. B. C. 1560, in 15 st. of 4 l.; and in the Berlin G. L. S. ed., 1863, No. 1416] does not seem to have been tr. into English.

Those of Matheson's hymns which have passed into English are:—

1. Aus meines Herzens Grunde. Morning. This has generally, though apparently without ground, been ascribed to Matheson, and is included in the 1855 ed. of his Geistliche Lieder, p. 149. But it is not found in any of his original works now extant, nor in the collected ed. of his Schöne geistliche Lieder, Nürnberg, 1580; and the ascription to him has not been traced earlier than in M. Pratorius's Musae Sioniae, 1610. Wackernagel, v. pp. 177-184, gives 8 forms varying from 6 to 15 st. (some beginning "Von meines Herzens Grunde"); the oldest, in 7 st. of 8 l., being from a Gesangbüchlein pub. at Hamburg in 1592. He ranks it as anonymous. The text of 1592 is No. 440 in the Unc. L. S., 1851. The hymn was a great favourite with Gustavus Adolphus, and was often sung by his army at morning prayer. The tra., from the text of 1592, are:—

1. My heart its incense burning. In full, by Dr. H. Mills, in his Horae Ger., 1856, p. 220, repeated, abridged, in M. W. Stryker's Christian Chorals, 1885, reading "her incense."
2. My latest heart now raises. A good tr. omitting st. iv., v., by Miss Winkworth, in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 164.
3. My heart with deep emotion. Omitting st. iii., v. by E. Cronenwett as No. 294 in the Ohio Luth. Hymnal, 1880.

Other tr. are:—

(1) "O let Thy angels always dwell" (st. v.). As No. 325 in pt. I. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1764. (2) "May Jesus' grace and blessing" (st. iii. ll. 1, 2; vii. ll. 4-8). By F. W. Foster, as No. 749 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1769 (1855, No. 1167). (3) "O God, my heart is full of praise." By Dr. G. Walker, 1860, p. 59.
11. Oft Vater, Sohn, heiliger Geist, Durchs Sprech'n gut In wahren heisst. Miner's Song, 1st pub. as Ein geistlich Beckelied, 1556, and thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 1151, in 9 st. Tr. as "O, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, Thou God, dost fix the miner's post." By Miss Winkworth, 1869, p. 144. [J. M.]

Matheson, Annie, eldest daughter of Rev. James Matheson, Congregational Minister, of Nottingham, was b. at Blackheath, March, 1853, and now (1888) resides at Nottingham Hill, London.

At an early age she showed considerable literary ability, her first hymn, "Jesus, the children are calling," being composed when she was only 13 years old. This hymn, attracting the attention of Dr. George MacDonald, was introduced by him to the notice of the editor of Good Words, who inserted it in that magazine, as a "Hymn by a Child." In 1869 appeared "I am weak and weary," frequent contributor to Good Words, Macmillan, The Spectator, St. Nicholas, and other magazines, both English and American. Her illustrated book for children, Margaret's Year Book, containing twelve poems from her pen, was pub. in 1887.

The following are the best known of Miss Matheson's hymns:—

1. Dear Master, what can children do? Children as Workers for Christ.

2. How shall we worship Thee, O Lord? Divine Worship.
3. I am weak and weary, Lord. Divine Strength desired.
4. Jesus, the children are calling. Children's Prayer to Christ.
5. Lord, when we have not any light. Evening.
6. O little birds, that all day long. God's Love to all Creatures.
7. The little snowdrops rise. Easter.
8. When through life's dewy fields we go. Comfort in God's Presence.
Of these hymns, Nos. 5, 6, and 7 were written for W. R. Stevenson's School Hymnal, 1880; and Nos. 1 and 2 for a Harvest Festival about 1882.

Miss Matheson's hymns are characterized by a pleasing combination of simplicity and refinement, both of thought and expression.

Matson, William Tidd, was b. at West Hackney, London, Oct. 17, 1833. He was educated first under the Rev. J. M. Gould, and then at St. John's College, Cambridge. Subsequently he studied under Professor Nesbitt, at the Agricultural and Chemical College, Kennington. In 1853 he underwent a great spiritual change. Leaving the Church of England, he first joined the Methodist New Connexion body, and then the Congregationalists. After the usual theological training, he entered the ministry, and held several pastorates, including Havant, Hants; Gosport; Highbury; Portsmouth, and others. His poetical works include:—

(1) A Summer Evening Reverie, and Other Poems, 1887; (2) Poems, 1888; (3) Pleasures of the Sanctuary, 1865; (4) The Inner Life, 1866; (5) Sacred Lyrics, 1870; (6) Three Supplemental Hymns, &c., 1873; (7) The World Redeemed, 1881, &c.

Several of Matson's hymns have been given in Allon's Suppl. Hys.; Order's Cong. Hymns; The Baptist Hymnal; Dale's English H. Bk.; and Barrett's Cong. Church Hymnal, 1887, and others. The best known are:—

1. Father of all, Whose wondrous power. Prayer to the Holy Trinity.
2. Glory, glory to God in the highest. Christmas.
3. God is in His temple. Divine Worship.
4. I'm but a little child. A Child's Prayer.
5. In whom shall I find comfort? God, the Source of Comfort.
6. Lord, I was blind, I could not see. Christ, the Life of Men.
7. O blessed Life, the heart at rest. Christ the Life of Men.
8. Teach me, O Lord, Thy holy way. Divine Guidance desired.

Mr Matson's hymns show a considerable mastery of the forms of hymnic expression, but are somewhat lacking in lyric energy. Those written for use with German chorales are excellent efforts, and rank with his best work. Taken as a whole his hymns are far above the average, and deserve acknowledgment. [W. G. H.]

Matthesius, Johannes. [Matthesius, J.]

Matthews, Rose, a nom de plume of Mrs. Van Alstyne.

Maude, Mary Fawler, née Hooper, daughter of George Henry Hooper, of Stanmore, Middlesex, was married in 1841 to the late Joseph Maude, some time Vicar of Chirk, near Ruabon, and Hon. Canon of St. Asaph, who d. in Feb. 1887. Mrs. Maude's hymns were pub. in her Twelve Letters on Confirmation, 1848, and in Memorials of Past Years, 1852 (privately printed). Her best known hymn, is "Thine for ever, God of love" (Confirmation). Concerning it Mrs. Maude says:—

"It was written in 1847 for my class in the Girls' Sunday School of St. Thomas, Newport, Isle of Wight, and pub. in 1848 at the beginning of a little book called 'Twelve Letters on Confirmation,' by a Sunday School Teacher, and reprinted in the Memorials, 1862." [S. M.]

The original is in 7 st. of 4 l. It is usually abbreviated, and st. ii., iii. transposed, as in the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871; the Hymn Comp.; H. A. & M., 1875, Thring's Coll., 1882, and most other hymn-books. As a hymn for Confirmation its use is extensive. The omitted stanzas are:—

"Thine for ever in that day
When the world shall pass away:
When the trumpet note shall sound,
And the nations underground
"Shall the awful summons hear,
Which proclaims the judgment near.
Thine for ever. 'Neath Thy wings
Hide and save us, King of Kings." [J. J.]

Maurice, Jane, sister of the Rev. P. Maurice (see below), contributed to her brother's Choral Hymn Book, 1861, 20 hymns together with one or two additions to others, and all under the signature of "J. M." The best known is "Glory to God, for the Day-spring is dawning" (Advent). Taken as a whole her hymns are limited to her brother's book. Miss Maurice was b. at Tyddyn Tudor, Denbighshire, Oct. 19, 1812. [J. J.]

Maurice, Peter, D.D., s. of Hugh Maurice, of Plas Gwyn, Llanrug, Carnarvonshire, and a descendent of one of the oldest families in Wales, was b. at Plas Gwyn, June 29, 1803, and educated at Jesus College, Oxford (B.A. 1826, D.D. 1840). He was Chaplain of New College, 1828-58, and of All Souls, 1837-1858, and Curate of Kennington, Berks, 1829-54. In 1858 he was preferred to the Vicarage of Yarnton. He d. March 30, 1878. He pub. several pamphlets against Popery (Popery in Oxford, 1832), and was author and editor of:—

(1) Choral Harmony, 1864; (2) Tunes in Four Parts for Congregational Worship, 1856; (3) Supplement to Choral Harmony, 1858; and (4) The Choral Hymn Book, Psalms and Hymns for Public and Private Use, Compiled, Prepared, and Composed as a Companion to the Choral Harmony. N.D. [1861.]

To this Choral H. Bk. Dr. Maurice contributed 23 hymns under the initials "P. M." Of these only two or three are found outside of his work, as: "Come, my soul, cast off all sorrow" (Confidence in God); and "I lift mine eyes to Zion's hill" (Ps. cxxi.). To the Choral H. Bk. A. T. Russell and Dr. S. P. Tregelles contributed a large number of original hymns in ms., which are practically unknown elsewhere. This book should be consulted by hymnal compilers. [J. J.]

Maxwell, James, was b. in Renfrewshire in 1720. In his youth he journeyed to England with a hardware pack, but eventually returning to Scotland, he followed the joint occupation of schoolmaster and poet. In 1783, during a famine in Scotland he was reduced to great destitution, and had to earn his bread by breaking stones on the highway. Most of his publications (from 30 to 40 in all) were produced after that period works in which we are interested

3. Go forth, ye heralds, in my Name.

It also occurs in the York B (Surtees Society's reprint, 1880, l. 328).

A rendering of this form is in Church of England Order for the Dead as to be said or sung at beginning, "In the midst of life death." Dr. H. Bonar, in his I and Hope, 2nd Series, 1864, gives antiphon in metre as "In the mid life." The antiphon is found cent. ms. in the British Museum f. 59) for use during Lent; and in Mozarabic Breviary (Add. 30849, also given from later mss. by M and Morel, p. 68. As parallel Fathers, Mone quotes the followi Uaque ad an em mundi Jacemus in morte Gregor. M.

Mor. 14, 68. Unenque mortalium sub quotidianis vitas hujus casibus i numerabiles mortes quodammodo comminantur. Augustin. de civ. dei 1, 9. Mala mora pu-tanda non est, quia in morte bona vita praecesserit. Neque enim, facit malum, nisi quod sequitur mortem. Non itaque multum curandum est eis, qui necessario morituri sunt, quid accedat, ut moriantur, sed moriendo quoire cogantur. Augustin. ibid. He adds that it was probably suggested by the antiphon Da pacem (p. 878, li.).

According to tradition the antiphon was written by Notker (d. 912) after watching the workmen building a bridge at the Martinstobel, a gorge of the Goldach on its course from St. Gall to the Lake of Constanz (the present wooden bridge, 96 feet high, was built in 1468). This tradition, however, has not been traced earlier than the Chronicle of J. Metzler, written in 1613 (St. Gall MS. No. 1408), and no evidence can be found for either the story or the ascription. Moreover the antiphon is only given in three of the St. Gall MSS., and these comparatively recent, viz. No. 388 of the 14th cent., No. 418 of 1431, No. 546 of 1507, and none of these name Notker as the author. (See G. Scherrer's Verzeichniss der Handschriften der Stiftsbibliothek von St. Gallen. Halle, 1875, pp. 165-167.)

Rambach, in his Anthologie, i. p. 242, li. pp. vii.-viii., says that by the middle of the xiii. cent. it had come into universal use as a hymn of Prayer and Supplication in times of trouble, was sung regularly at Compline on the eve of Lactare Sunday, and was used by the people as an incantation. Binsler, in his Altchristliche Lieder, 1852, p. 90, adds that it was used as a war song by the priests accompanying the hosts before and during battle; and that at a synod held at Cologne in 1316 (1310), on account of the magical properties ascribed to it, its use was forbidden unless by permission of the Bishop. Gradually it fell into disuse, and has now disappeared from the services of the Roman Catholic Church. The refrain "Sancte Deus," &c. (founded on Isaiah vi. 3) is said to date from the 6th cent. It is based on the Trisagion, an invocation introduced into the Greek service books about A.D. 446. [See Greek Hymnody, § x. 7.]

In the 15th cent. tr. into German had come into use. One of these is given by Wackernagel, ii. p. 749, from a 15th cent. ms. at Munich, thus:—

"En mitten in des lebens seyt wir mit tod umbfangen:
Wen auch wir, der uns hilffe geit,
von dem wir huld erlangen,
Iken dich, Herre, al syne?
der du umb unser missehat rechtlichen zurnen tuest.
Heyliger herre got,
beyliger starcker got,
beyliger parmhertziger haller, ewiger got,
lass uns nit gewalden des pittern todes pot."

He also gives (p. 750) nearly the same text from the Basel Plenarium of 1514. This stanza Martin Luther took with alterations, added in two stanzas the Gospel delineation of Life through Christ to the Medieval picture of Death, and pub. it as a hymn of 3 st. of 14 lines, beginning Mitten wir im Leben sind, in the Erfurt Enchiridion of 1524. Thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 10, in Schireks's ed. of Luther's Geistliche Lieder, 1854, p. 89, and in the Unv. L. S. 1851, No. 566. Justly called "A hymn of triumph over the Grave, Death and Hell," it took and still holds a foremost place among German hymns for the dying, and has comforted many in their last conflict. The translations from the German in C. U. are:—

1. Most holy Lord and God! The German text from which this is tr. is st. iii., ll. 8-13, altered by N. L. Zinzendorf, and included in the Brüder

G. B., 1778, as part of No. 585, the Litany on the Life, Sufferings and Death of Jesus Christ, and again, as part of No. 1464, the Church Litany thus:—

"Heiliger Herr und Gott!
Heiliger starker Gott!
Heiliger barmhertziger Heiland,
Du ewiger Gott!
Lass uns nie entfallen
Unsere Trost aus deinen Tod.
Kyrie eleison!"

This stanza was tr. as part of the Church Litany in the Moravian H. Bk. 1789, p. 223, in 7 lines, and included as No. 129 in 1801. In the 1808 Supplement to the Morav. H. Bk. a single stanza identical save in ll. 5, 6, was included as No. 1175. In the 1826 ed. these stanzas were united as No. 156 (ed. 1886, No. 137), and repeated unaltered as No. 405 in the Irish Church Hymnal, 1873. No. 561 in the 1872 Appendix to Mercer's C. P. & H. Bk. is an adaptation by Edward Jackson, ll. 5, 6 being given in 3 varied forms, making 3 sts.

2. When we walk the paths of life. A paraphrase in 14 st. of 6 lines, by Miss Fry, in her Hymns of the Reformation, 1845, p. 147. Her st. v., i., x., ix., xiv. altered and beginning "God of mercy, unto Thee," were included in J. Whittemore's Supp. to All H. Bks., 1860, and her st. v., ii., xiv. altered and beginning "God of holiness! to Thee," in Maurice's Choral H. Bk., 1861.

3. Lo! the mid-day beam of life. A free tr. of st. i. iii., by A. T. Russell, as No. 255 in his Ps. & Hys. 1851, and repeated, slightly altered, in Kennedy, 1863.

4. Though in midst of life we be. Good and full, by R. Massie, in his M. Luther's Spir. Songs, 1854, p. 80. Thence, unaltered, save "Have mercy, Lord," for "Kyrie eleison," as No. 481 in the ed. 1857 of Mercer's C. P. & H. Bk. (Ox. ed., 1864, No. 468, omitting st. ii.).

5. The pangs of death are near. A free tr., in 3 st. of 10 l., as No. 1203 in the Andover Sabbath H. Bk., 1858.

Other tr. are:—(1) "In the myddest of our lyvyng," by H. Coverdale, 1539 (Remains 1846, p. 664). (2) "Living, but in midst of death," by J. Anderson, 1846, p. 77 (ed. 1847, p. 90). (3) "What is our life? a fleeting breath," by Dr. J. Hunt, 1853, p. 161. (4) "In the midst of life, behold," by Miss Winkworth, 1855, p. 236. (5) "In the midst of life is death," by Dr. H. Mills, 1856, p. 75. (6) "In the midst of life we are," by F. G. Macdonald, in the Sunday Magazine, 1867, p. 840, and thence altered in his Eclogues, 1876, p. 107. (7) "In the midst of life, by death," in S. Garratt's Hys. & Franz., 1867, p. 23. [J. M.]

Mediae noctis tempore. [Midnight.] This hymn is found in slightly varied forms in a ms., c. 890, in the Bodleian (Junius 25 f. 122 b), where it is entitled "A Hymn at Nocturns on Sundays", in the 8th cent. Bangor Antiphonary now at Milan (see Hymnarium); in a 9th cent. Rheinau ms.; in an 8th cent. ms. in the Vatican, &c. (See Daniel, i., No. 31, iv. p. 26, &c., where it reads "Mediae noctis tempus est.") In an 11th cent. Moravian Hymnarium in the British Museum (Add. 30,851, f. 168 b), it is given as the second part of a long hymn which begins "Jesu defensor omnium;" and with this text may be compared Neale's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1851, p. 6, where he professes to give the text of Arevalus's Hymnodia Hispanica, 1786.

Translations in C. U. :—

1. 'Tis the solemn midnight hour. By E. Caswall. 1st pub. in his Musque of Mary, 1858, p. 374, and again in his Hym. & Poems, 1873, p. 235, in 13 st. of 4 l. This is repeated in the 2nd ed. 1863 of the Appendix to the H. Nodet, No. 117. In Nicholson's Appendix Hymnal, 1868, it is divided into two parts, part ii. beginning "At the solemn midnight hour."

2. It is the midnight hour. By Elizabeth Charles, in her work The Voice of Christian Life in Song, 1858, p. 94, in 13 st. of 4 l. This, in a recast form by Canon W. Cooke, was given in the Hymnary, 1872, in 6 st. of 8 l., and opening with the same first line.

In W. J. Blew's Church Hy. and Tune Bk., 1852-55, st. i., ii., xv., xvi., xviii. of the "Jesu defensor omnium" form of the text are fr. as "Jesu, our Captain and our King." This is repeated in Rice's Sel. therefrom, 1870. [J. J.]

Medley, Samuel, b. June 23, 1738, at Cheshunt, Herts, where his father kept a school. He received a good education; but not liking the business to which he was apprenticed, he entered the Royal Navy. Having been severely wounded in a battle with the French fleet off Port Lagoa, in 1759, he was obliged to retire from active service. A sermon by Dr. Watts, read to him about this time, led to his conversion. He joined the Baptist Church in Eagle Street, London, then under the care of Dr. Gifford, and shortly afterwards opened a school, which for several years he conducted with great success. Having begun to preach, he received, in 1767, a call to become pastor of the Baptist church at Watford. Thence, in 1772, he removed to Byrom Street, Liverpool, where he gathered a large congregation, and for 27 years was remarkably popular and useful. After a long and painful illness he d. July 17, 1799. Most of Medley's hymns were first printed on leaflets or in magazines (the Gospel Magazine being one). They appeared in book form as:—

(1) Hymns, &c. Bradford, 1785. This contains 42 hymns. (2) Hymns on Select Portions of Scripture, by the Rev. Mr. Medley. 2nd ed. Bristol. W. Pine. 1785. This contains 34 hymns, and differs much from the Bradford edition both in the text and in the order of the hymns. (3) An enlargement of the same in 1787. (4) A small collection of new Hymns. London, 1794. This contains 23 hymns. (5) Hymns. The Public Worship and Private Devotion of True Christians Assisted in some thoughts in Verse; principally drawn from Select Passages of the Word of God. By Samuel Medley. London. Printed for J. Johnson. 1800. A few of his hymns are also found in a Coll. for the use of All Denominations, pub. in London in 1782.

Medley's hymns have been very popular in his own denomination, particularly among the more Calvinistic churches. In Denham's Sel. there are 48, and in J. Stevens's Sel. 30. Their charm consists less in their poetry than in the warmth and occasional pathos with which they give expression to Christian experience. In most of them also there is a refrain in the last line of each verse which is often effective. Those in C. U. include:—

1. Come, join ye saints, with heart and voice. (1800.) Complete in Christ.
2. Death is no more among our foes. Easter.
3. Eternal Sovereign Lord of all. (1789.) Praise for Providential Care.
4. Far, far beyond these lower skies. (1789.) Jesuz, the Forerunner.

5. Father of mercies, God of love, & (1789.) New Year.
6. Great God, to-day Thy grace in Sermon.
7. Hear, gracious God! a sinner's cry
8. In heaven the rapturous song I mas.
9. Jesus, engrave it on my heart. Needful to all.
10. Mortals, awake, with angels join. mas.
11. My soul, arise in joyful lays. (1789)

15. O God, Thy mercy, vast and free. cation of Self to God.
16. O let us tell the matchless love.
17. O what amazing words of grace. tain of Living Waters.
18. Saints die, and we should gently Death and Burial. From his "Dear Our Lord and King."
19. See a poor sinner, dearest Lord. 1
20. Sing the dear Saviour's glorious Jesus the Breaker of bonds.

Μέγα καὶ παράδοξον θαῖμα. St. Germanus. [Christmas.] Dr. Neale, in his Hys. of the Eastern Church, 1862, calls these stanzas "Stichera for Christmas-Tide," and ascribes them to St. Anatolius. In the Greek office for Christmas Day in the Menæa, they are however ascribed to St. Germanus. In the 4th ed. of the Hys. of the Eastern Church, 1882, Mr. Hatherly explains the error thus:—

"The original Greek of this Hymn is in two stanzas, both of which in the Menæa, are ascribed to St. Germanus. Adjoining stanzas in the same series of Aposticha from which the first is taken are ascribed to S. Anatolius, hence, probably, the mistake of Dr. Neale, in the previous editions, where this hymn occurs as the work of that saint. The two stanzas in the Aposticha are in inverse order to that here given" (p. 26).

Dr. Neale's tr. in his Hys. of the Eastern Church, 1862, begins, "A great and mighty wonder," and is in 6 st. of 4 l. In 1863 it was repeated in the Parish H. Bk., in 1868 in the Appendix to H. A. & M., and again in other collections in G. Britain and America. Mr. Hatherly gives in his note a prose tr. of the original, whilst Dr. Littledale has a blank verse tr. in his Offices from the Service Books of the Holy Eastern Church, 1863, p. 181, and the original also, at p. 64. [This is in all probability Johann Siegmund Hoffmann, b. Feb. 8, 1711, at Goldberg in Silesia, who, after studying and graduating M.A. at Wittenberg, was ordained diaconus at Goldberg, June 20, 1737; became pastor primarius in 1738; and d. there May 26, 1784.]

Bunsen, in his Versuch, 1833, No. 797, gives st. i.-iii., x., xi. Tr. as:—

My God, in Thee all fulness lies. A good tr. from Bunsen by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 2nd Ser., 1858, p. 191, and her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 133. [J. M.]

Mein Jesu, wie du willst. B. Schmolck. [Trust in God.] A fine hymn founded on St. Mark xiv. 36. 1st pub. in his Heilige Flammen (ed. 1709, No. 1, p. 3; probably in the 1st ed., 1704), in 11 st. of 8 l., entitled "As God will is my aim." In each st., ll. 1, 8 are "Mein Jesu, wie du willst." Included in many German collections, and recently in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863. Tr. as:—

My Jesus, as Thou wilt. A good tr., omitting st. ii., vi., vii., ix., by Miss Borthwick, in

H. L. L. 1st Ser., 1854, p. 56 (1864, p. 57). This was the favourite hymn of the Rev. Professor Skinner of New York (d. 1871), and many American Christians. It has been included in various recent English and American hymnals, but generally abridged, as e.g. in Dale's English H. Bk., 1874; Songs for the Sanctuary, N. Y., 1865; Laudes Domini, N. Y., 1884, and many others. In addition to these it has also appeared under the following first lines:—

1. My Saviour, as Thou wilt, in the Amer. Episc. Hys. for Ch. & Home, 1860; Scottish Presb. Hyl., 1870; Canadian Presb. H. Bk., 1880, &c.

2. O Jesus, as Thou wilt, in the R. T. S. Hys. for Christian Worship, 1860.

3. Lord Jesus, as Thou wilt, in Bp. Ryle's Coll., 1860, and the Baptist Hyl., 1879. [J. M.]

Meinhold, Johann Wilhelm, D.D., s. of Georg Wilhelm Meinhold, pastor at Netzelkow on the island of Usedom, was b. at Netzelkow, Feb. 27, 1797, and entered the University of Greifswald in 1813. He became rector of the Town School at Usedom in 1820. In 1821 he was appointed pastor of Coserow in Usedom, and, in 1828, of Crummin in Usedom (D.D. from Erlangen in 1840). He finally became, at Easter, 1844, pastor at Rehwinkel, near Stargard. He was a staunch Conservative, and after passing through the revolutionary period of 1848, this feeling, coupled with his leaning to Roman Catholicism, made him resign his living in the autumn of 1850. He retired to Charlottenburg, a suburb of Berlin, and d. there, Nov. 30, 1851 (Allg. Deutsche Biog., xxi. 235; ms. from Pastor Schmuck of Netzelkow, &c.).

Meinhold is perhaps best known by his historical romance Maria Schwoedler, die Bernsteinkönigin (1843), which professed to be taken from an old ms. and was universally accepted as genuine. His poems appeared in his Gedichte, Leipzig, 1823; Vermehrte Gedichte, Coserow, 1824; Proben Geistlicher Lieder, Stralsund, 1834; Gedichte, Leipzig, 1835, &c.; and also in Knapp's Christologie and Ev. L. S.

Meinhold's hymns are of considerable interest. Those tr. into English are:—

i. Guter Hirt, du hast gestillt. Death of a Child. This beautiful little hymn is in his Gedichte, Leipzig, 1835, vol. i., p. 38, in 3 st. of 6 l., and headed, "Sung in four parts beside the body of my little fifteen months' old son Joannes Ladislaus." (In reply to inquiries addressed to Crummin in January, 1888, Provinzial-Vikar Bahr has kindly informed me that this child was b. at Crummin April 16, 1832, d. there, of teething, on July 2, and was buried there, July 5, 1833.) It is included in Knapp's Ev. L. S., 1837, No. 3411 (1865, No. 2983). Tr. as:—

Gentle Shepherd, Thou hast still'd. A full and very good tr. by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 2nd Ser., 1858, p. 122. This has passed, unaltered, into many recent hymnals, as the People's H., 1867, Hymnary, 1872, Hy. Comp., 1876, &c.; and in America, into the Presb. Hyl., 1874, Evang. Hyl., N. Y., 1880, and others. In the Appx. of 1868 to H. A. & M., it was included as No. 358, with long in st. i., l. 2, altered to brief, and beginning, "Tender Shepherd, Thou hast stilled." This form has been followed in the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871, Bapt. Hyl., 1879, &c.; and in America, in the Episc. Hymnal, 1871, Hys. & Songs of Praise, N. Y., 1874, Laudes Domini, N. Y., 1884, and many others.

Melanchthon, Philipp, s. of Georg Schwarzer, armourer to the Elector Philipp of the Palatinate, was b. at Bretten, near Carlsruhe, Feb. 16, 1497. From 1507 to 1509 he attended the Latin school at Pforzheim, and here he was already, by Johann Reuchlin, called Melanchthon (the Greek form of "Black Earth," his German surname). In October, 1509, he entered the University of Heidelberg (b.A. 1511), and on Sept. 17, 1512, matriculated at Tübingen, where he graduated M.A., Jan. 25, 1514, and where he remained till 1518 as private lecturer in the philosophical faculty. On Aug. 29, 1518, he was appointed professor of Greek at the University of Wittenberg, and in January, 1526, also Professor of theology. He d. at Wittenberg, April 19, 1560 (Allg. Deutsche Biog., xxi. 268, &c.). Melanchthon is best known as one of the leaders of the German Reformation; as a theologian (Loci communes, 1521, &c.); and as the framer of the famous Confession presented to the Diet of Augsburg in 1530, and still accepted as a standard by all the sections of Lutheranism in Germany, America, and elsewhere. His poems and hymns were written in Latin, and exercised no appreciable influence on the development of German hymnody. They were edited by Grathusen in 1560, Vincent 1563, Major 1575, &c.; the most complete ed. being that by C. G. Bretschneider, at Halle, 1842 (Corpus Reformatorum, vol. x.). One of his hymns is noted at p. 292, l.; and a number of others are tr. by Miss Fry in her Echoes of Eternity, 1859. [J. M.]

Men of God, go take your stations. T. Kelly. [Missions.] Appeared in his Hymns, &c., 1809, No. 156, in 4 st. of 6 l., and headed "Cry aloud, spare not. Isaiah lviii. 1" (ed. 1853, No. 561). It also appeared in the August number of the Evangelical Magazine the same year, as a "Missionary Hymn," and signed "T. K." Its modern use is somewhat extensive, especially in America. [J. J.]

Mencken, Lüder, LL.D., was b. at Oldenburg, Dec. 14, 1658, and became a student of law at the Universities of Leipzig and Jena; graduating at Leipzig M.A., 1680, LL.D., 1682. In 1682 he became tutor in the faculty of law at Leipzig, and was appointed ordinary professor of law in 1702. After a stroke of paralysis, on June 26, he d. at Leipzig, June 29, 1726. The only hymn ascribed to him is:—

Ach komm, du süßer Hermans-Gast. Holy Communion. Included in the Geistreiches G. B., Darmstadt, 1698, p. 273, in 17 st., and repeated in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 467. Mercer, William, M.A., b. at Barnard Castle, Durham, 1811, and educated at Trinity College, Cambridge (B.A., 1835). In 1840 he was appointed Incumbent of St. George's, Sheffield. He d. at Leavy Greave, Sheffield, Aug. 21, 1873. His principal work was:—

The Church Psalter and Hymn Book, comprising The Psalter, or Psalms of David, together with the Canticles, Pointed for Chanting; Four Hundred Metrical Hymns and Six Responses to the Commandments; the whole united to appropriate Chants and Tunes, for the use of Congregations and Families, by the Rev. William Mercer, M.A. . . . Assisted by John Goss, Esq. . . . 1864; enlarged 1866; issued without music, 1867; quarto ed. 1860; refranged ed. (Oxford edition) 1864; Appendix 1872.

For many years this collection was at the head of all the hymn-books in the Church of England, both in circulation and influence. Its large admixture of Wesleyan hymns, and of translations from the German gave it a distinct character of its own, and its grave and solemn music was at one time exceedingly popular. To it Mercer contributed several translations and paraphrases from the Latin and German, the latter mainly from the Moravian hymn-books; but his hymn-writing was far less successful than his editing, and has done nothing to increase his reputation. [See England, Hymnody, Church of, § IV.] (J. J.)

Mercy alone can meet my case. J. Montgomery. [Lent.] In Holland's Memoirs of Montgomery this hymn is referred to under the following circumstances. Speaking to Holland on April 3, 1825, of the Rev. Peter Haslem, Montgomery said:—

"On Sunday afternoon he preached in Carver Street Chapel (Sheffield); there were few persons present besides myself and some servant girls. What were the divisions or the style of his sermon I do not recollect; but the text—'O save me for Thy mercies' sake' (Ps. vi. 4)—was so powerfully impressed upon my mind that it has never since ceased to influence me; hundreds and thousands of times have I repeated it in meditation and prayer, and I feel at this moment that if I am saved at last, it must be through the free, unmerited mercy of God, exercised towards me for the Saviour's sake."—Vol. iv. p. 103.

To this Holland adds the note:—

"How deep an impression these words made upon the poet's heart may also be inferred from his hymn, of which they are the theme. It was composed under the colonnade at Leamington, October 30, 1819, in the midst of much desolation of soul, and is a just picture of the author's feelings at the time."—Vol. iv. p. 103.

The hymn was pub. in Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 463, in 5 st. of 4 l., and headed with Mr. Haslem's text, "O save me for Thy mercies' sake"; and in his Original Hymns, 1853, No. 178. (J. J.)

Merlo, Jacques, sometimes Meilo, sometimes Horst, and sometimes Horstius, was b. of poor parents at Horst, in Germany, 1597, became a parish priest at Cologne, and d. there in 1644. He was the author of the Paradies Animæ Christianæ, Cologne, 1630, which has been several times translated, and recently partly by Dr. Pusey in 1847, and in full by Canon F. Oakeley in 1850, as The Paradise of the Christian Soul, and in which several Latin hymns by older writers were embodied. So far as we are aware he was not the writer of hymns. (J. J.)

Merrick, James, M.A., was b. in 1720, and educated at Oxford, where he became a Fellow of Trinity College. He entered Holy Orders, but his health would not admit of parish work. He d. at Reading, 1769. His publications include:—

(1.) Messiah, a Divine Essay. Humbly dedicated to the Reverend the Vice-Chancellor of the University of Oxford and the Visitors of the Free School in Reading. By James Merrick, B.A., 14, Senior Scholar of the School at their last Terminal Visitation, the 11th of October, 1734. Reading. (2.) The Destruction of Troy. Translated from the Greek of Tryphiodorus into English Verse, with Notes, &c. 1742. (3.) Poems on Sacred Subjects. Oxford. 1763. (4.) The Psalms of David Translated or Paraphrased in English Verse. By James Merrick, M.A., late Fellow of Trinity College, Oxford. Reading. J. Curran and Co. 1765. 2nd ed. 1766. A few only of these paraphrases were divided into stanzas. In 1797 the Rev. W. D. Tattersall pub. the work "Divided into stanzas for Parochial Use, and paraphrased in such language as will be intelligible to every capacity . . . with a suitable Collect to each Psalm from the Works of Archbishop Parker."

Merrick's paraphrases, although weak and verbose, were in extensive use in the early part of the present century, both in the Church of England and with Nonconformists. They have, however, fallen very much into disuse. Those in modern hymn-books, mainly in the form of centos, include:—

1. Blest Instructor, from Thy ways. Ps. xix.
2. Descend, O Lord! from heaven descend. Ps. cxlv. (In time of National Peril.)
3. Far as creation's bounds extend. Ps. cxlv.
4. God of my strength, the wise, the just. Ps. cxxi.
5. He who with generous pity glows. Ps. xli.
6. How pleasant, Lord, Thy dwellings are. Ps. lxxvii.
7. Lift up your voice and thankful sing. Ps. cxxvi.
8. Lo, my Shepherd's hand divine. Ps. xlviii.
9. Lord, my Strength, to Thee I pray. Ps. xlviii.
10. My heart its noblest theme has found. Ps. xlv.
11. O let me, [gracious] heavenly Lord extend. Ps. cxxix.
12. O turn, O Ruler of the skies. Ps. li.
13. Praise, O praise the Name divine. Ps. cl.
14. Sing, ye sons of [men] might, O sing. Ps. cxxi.
15. Teach me, O teach me, Lord, Thy way. Ps. cxxi.
16. The festal morn, my [O] God, is come. Ps. cxxii. (Sunday Morning.)
17. The morn and eve Thy praise resound. Ps. lxx. (Harvest.)
18. To Thy pastures, fair and large. Ps. xxiii.

From his Poems on Sacred Subjects, 1763, the following centos have also come into C. U.:

19. Author of good, to Thee we turn. Resignation.
20. Eternal God, we look to Thee. Resignation.
21. 'Tis enough, the hour is come. Nunc Dimittis.

Messiah! at Thy glad approach. M. Bruce. [Advent.] This hymn, which we have ascribed to M. Bruce (q.v.) on evidence given in his memoir in this work, was written probably about 1764-65, for a singing class at Kinnesswood, Scotland, and was first pub. by John Logan in his Poems, 1781, p. 113, No. 7, in 6 st. of 4 l. Although a vigorous hymn, and possessing much poetic beauty, it has not come into extensive use. In the American Church Praise Bk., N. Y., 1881, st. vi. and iv. are given as "Let Israel to the Prince of Peace." Orig. text as in Logan's Poems in Dr. Grosart's Works of M. Bruce, 1865, p. 144.

Metcalf, Lucy E. [Akerman, Lucy E.]

Methinks I stand upon the rock. T. Kelly. [Balaam. The Safety of God's people.] 1st pub. in Kelly's Coll. of Ps. & Hys., 1802, No. 271, and again in his Hymns, 1st ed. 1804, and later editions, in 9 st. of 6 l. (ed. 1853, No. 290). In Hall's Mitre H. Bk., 1836, No. 121, appeared "Come, let us stand as Balaam stood," in 3 st. of 6 l. This has usually been attributed to E. Osler. It is a cento, st. i., ii. being st. i., ii. altered from this hymn by Kelly, and st. iii. an addition probably by Osler, who assisted Hall in preparing the Mitre H. Bk. In the Hall mss. there is no ascription of authorship.

Methodist Hymnody.—Methodism has made liberal contributions to the hymnody of the Christian Church. Before the first Methodist Society was formed, its founders saw the importance of singing in religious worship, and provided, out of the best available material then at command, a collection of Psalms and Hymns for that purpose. John Wesley made some excellent translations of German hymns, and his brother, Charles Wesley, began to write spiritual songs immediately after his conversion. His father, the Rector of Epworth, and his elder brother, S. Wesley, jun., had each written a few good hymns at a still earlier date, which remain in use at the present time. Charles Wesley continued to write hymns for nearly fifty years, and he has left over six thousand five hundred hymns and sacred poems, some of which are amongst those most frequently found in collections used in public worship. Some of the followers of J. Wesley have also contributed hymns, both in the last and in this century, which have been included in many collections, and are of permanent interest.

Before dealing with the hymnody of the various Methodist bodies, it will be necessary to present some details concerning the rise and development of the principal sources from which all Methodist hymnody is derived. These sources are the Poetical Works of John and Charles Wesley.

i. Poetical Works of John and Charles Wesley.—Charles Wesley pub. about fifty different books and tracts of hymns, from nearly all of which hymns have been selected for use in the churches. When "Missioner in Georgia," John Wesley prepared and published A Collection of Psalms and Hymns, which he described as an enlarged edition of Wood's Athenæ Cantabrigiæ of the year 1736, but the imprint title-page is "Charles-Town, printed by Timothy, 1737." This work was a collection of hymns published for the Church of England. The volume was his care to provide for the spiritual those to whom he ministered; his earnest and serious temper; and his aversion to ecclesiasticism." On his return to England he prepared a new edition of that work and issued it in 1738. It is a 12mo. of 84 pages. Of the American book copy is known to exist; of the reprint of 1738 three copies are known of which is in the Lambeth Palace Library. [For details, see England, Hymnody, Ch.]

The first Methodists at Oxford sang psalms in proportion to their early religion; when they declined to do so from the reproach of serious godliness, singing in their meetings was resumed. After the conversion of the two Wesleys in May, 1738, singing was resumed; that time to the present, singing has been an essential part of Methodist worship. To encourage this form of service, as early as 1742, provided tune-books for the use of his followers (some of which at the present time); and that all who wished to sing, he printed the melody of each, which will now enumerate the original poems of J. and C. Wesley in detail.

1. The first collection pub. by John Wesley with their names on the title-page is Hymns and Sacred Poems, 1739, 12mo., contained 139 hymns. This was a reprint of the year without the Poems, and a third ed., also dated 1739. In this book are given Charles Wesley's compositions, and out of 50 hymns were selected for the Wes. H. Bk. The fourth ed. appeared in 1743, and another in 1744.

2. Early in 1740 appeared Hymns and Sacred Poems, an entirely new book of 209 pages, with 100 amongst them some of the most popular including "O for a thousand tongues" (428, i.), and "Jesus, lover of my soul." This volume supplied 64 hymns to the Wes. H. Bk.

3. In 1741 the Wesleys issued A Collection of Psalms and Hymns, a volume of 126 pages, containing 100 psalms and 26 hymns. This was not a reprint of the first collection, though containing a few of the pieces the Psalms were C. Wesley's version of the Psalms and the Hymns were new. Only 3 of their way into the Wes. H. Bk. of 1740. In 1741 of John Wesley, Dr. Coke made additions which doubled its size. It came into general use at the Conference of 1816 recommended it for "a Collection of Hymns for the forenoon," from which it was called The Morning Hymn Book, and so till 1831, when the Suppl. was added to it.

4. In 1741 appeared Hymns on God's Love, in 36 pages, containing 38 new hymns are in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780. The 2nd ed. appeared in 1770.

5. In 1742 a new volume of Hymns and Sacred Poems appeared, with 304 pages and 155 new hymns 102 were selected for the Wes. H. Bk. of 1740.

6. An enlarged ed. of the collection of Hymns appeared in 1743, containing 139 hymns which are in the 1780 book.

7. In 1744 three tracts of hymns were published: Hymns for the Nativity, 18 hymns; Hymns for the Watchnight, 11; and Hymns for the Morning, 10. From these three 10 hymns are in the Wes. H. Bk.

8. Four tracts and one volume of hymns were published in 1745. From two only of these have been made. A Short View of the Difference

Moravian, and J. and C. Wesley contains 6 hymns, 3 of which are in the Wes. H. Bk. The second is a most important work: Hymns on the Lord's Supper by Charles Wesley, a volume of 141 pages and 166 hymns, "with a preface concerning the Christian Sacrament and Sacrifice, extracted from Dr. Brevint." From this work 20 hymns were selected for the Wes. H. Bk. of 1780. The Hys. for the Lord's Supper have been often reprinted, but generally without the preface, which was never intended, as Charles Wesley has only versified portions of Dr. Brevint's remarks, in some of the hymns. In the extracts from Dr. Brevint the doctrine of the True and Real Presence is taught, and Charles Wesley embodies the teaching of the preface in his verses. In the fourth section "Concerning the Sacrament as a Means of Grace," and in paragraph 5, are these words in reference to the efficacy of the Death of Christ: "This victim having been offered up in the fulness of time, and in the midst of the world, which is Christ's great Temple, and having been thence carried up to Heaven, which is His Sanctuary; from thence spreads Salvation all around, as the burnt-offering did its smoke. And thus His Body and Blood have everywhere, but especially at this Sacrament, a true and real presence." Catching the same inspiration, Charles Wesley expresses the same ideal in at least seven of the hymns which follow:—

- Hy. 33. "Drink Thy blood for sinners shed Taste Thee in the broken bread."
Hy. 57. "Who shall say how bread and wine
God into man conveys:
How the bread His flesh imparts,
How the wine transmits His blood?"
Hy. 65. "Now on the sacred table laid Thy flesh becomes our food."
Hy. 77. "Taste Thee in the broken Bread
Drink Thee in the mystic wine."
Hy. 81. "We come with confidence to find Thy real presence here."
Hy. 116. "To every faithful soul appear
And show Thy real presence here."
Hy. 124. "Yet may we celebrate below
And daily thus Thine offering shew
Exposed before Thy Father's eyes
In this tremendous mystery:
Present Thee bleeding on the tree
Our Everlasting sacrifice."

It is worthy of remark, that Charles Wesley, in his Journals, makes no mention of the publication of this volume of Hymns during the year 1748, but from February to July of that year, he makes special mention of about a dozen Sacramental Services, which are described as occasions of much blessing to himself and to others; and during the octave of Easter he communicated every day. The latter half of the year, the subject is scarcely mentioned. It seems probable, therefore, that the book was passing through the press during the months when he was so much under Sacramental influence and power. In justice to C. Wesley, it should be recorded, that the "real presence" is not alluded to in any of the six thousand hymns he wrote, apart from this 1748 book, nor did he ever allude to it in his pulpit discourses. In his Journals, he names many instances of his baptizing adult persons, but the subject of Holy Baptism does not seem to have inspired his muse, except in "God of Families, 1767, and one or two others. This is the more noticeable when it is considered how strict he was generally in observing the ordinances of the Church.

9. The year 1746 was a remarkable one for the variety of subjects which occupied Charles Wesley's poetic mind: no less than nine separate tracts of hymns were issued during that year, including Hymns for Times of Trouble; Hymns and Prayers for Children; On the Trinity; On the Great Festivals; of Petition and Thanksgiving for the Promise of the Father; for Our Lord's Resurrection; for Ascension Day; Graces before and after Meat; and for the Public Thanksgiving in October of that year. These introduced 184 new compositions, of which only 12 found their way into the Wes. H. Bk. of 1780. The Festival Hymns had Lampe's Tunes issued with them, which insured for them a long term of popularity.

10. Only one new work was issued in 1747: Hymns for those that seek and those that have Redemption in the Blood of Jesus Christ, containing 72 pages and 52 new hymns, 25 of which were placed in the 1780 book.

11. In 1748, C. Wesley wrote a number of hymns on Marriage, the subject being then uppermost in his mind, but they were not then printed. He was married in the spring of 1749, and when the arrangements were made with his brother respecting his stipend, the question of house-furnishing was not considered. To meet the emergency, C. Wesley gathered up all his unpublished compositions, and, without consulting his brother John, issued them in two volumes. The work was sold by subscription through the preachers, was a great success, and fully accomplished the object contemplated. Those volumes extend to 688 pages, with 458 new hymns, with the old title "Hymns and Sacred Poems." In that work will be found the largest number of the author's best hymns, and it has yielded 143 compositions to the 1780 book.

12. In 1750 only two hymn tracts appeared, Hymns for New Year's Day, and Hymns occasioned by the Earthquake, March 8th. The first contained 7 new hymns, one of which has been in use in Methodist Services, once at least every year since it appeared: viz.:—the hymn sung at the close of every watch-night Service, commencing "Come let us anew, our journey pursue." The 2 hymns selected from the Earthquake tract ("Woe to the men on earth who dwell," and "My faith we find the place above") are said to be amongst the holden of the poet's theological conceptions. In 1763 appeared Hymns and Spiritual Songs intended for the use of Real Christians. This was followed in 1756 by an enlarged edition of the Earthquake Hymns, with 22 hymns; and Hymns for the Year 1756, particularly for the Fast Day, Feb. 6th, with 17 new hymns, of which 6 are in the 1780 book.

13. In 1758 was issued Hymns of Intercession for all Mankind, but being without author's name, the popular judgment hymn given therein, "Lo! he comes with clouds descending" (p. 881, i.), was, for nearly a century, attributed to Martin Marlan. This tract has 34 pages and 40 new hymns, of which 8 are in the 1780 book.

14. Three new works were issued in 1759, namely, Funeral Hys., enlarged to 70 pages, with 43 new hymns; Hymns for the Expected Invasion, with 8 new hymns; and Hymns to be used on the Thanksgiving Day, November 29, and after it 24 pages, with 15 new hymns.

15. In 1761 appeared a volume of 144 pages and 134 hymns, with the title, Hymns for those to whom Christ is All in All. This was a selection intended for popular use; it reached a 3rd ed. During the same year, John Wesley issued a volume of Select Hymns for the Use of Christians of all Denominations, to which was added an admirable selection of Tunes Annexed. This useful volume was used at the Foundry; a 2nd ed., corrected, was issued in 1765, a 3rd in 1770, and a 4th in 1773. In 1761, to encourage and improve the vocal part of Divine Service, John Wesley issued Sacred Melody; or, a Choice Collection of Psalm and Hymn Tunes; another book of Tunes called Sacred Harmony, and an abridged ed. of the latter.

16. One of Charles Wesley's largest contributions to the service of song in the Church appeared in 1762, and was entitled Short Hymns on Select Passages of Holy Scripture, 2 vols., containing no fewer than 2030 new compositions, out of which 99 were selected for the 1780 book. This work was rigidly revised by the author; and was republished in a somewhat condensed form, in 2 vols., 1794-98, after the author's death. In that work are some popular hymns, and elegant renderings of Scripture phraseology.

17. Hymns for Children appeared in 1763, with 100 new compositions; and Hymns for the Use of Families in 1767, a volume of 176 pages and 188 hymns. In the same year came Hymns on the Trinity, with 132 pages and 182 hymns. From these three works 51 hymns are selected for the Wes. H. Bk., 1780. Five or six other tracts of hymns followed, but out of these only one hymn found its way into the 1831 Supplement to the Wes. H. Bk. taken from Hymns for the Nation and for the National Fast Day, February 4th, 1743.

These are the original publications from which are derived all the Wesley hymns now in use in the Hymnals of all the churches. All these volumes and tracts (except the Ps. & Hys. printed at Charlestown in 1736-37), with fac-similes of title pages, are reprinted in the Poetical Works of John and Charles Wesley, Lond. 1868-72 (13 volumes), and the same are tabulated with dates, titles, pages, sizes and number of hymns, in G. J. Stevenson's Methodist H. Bk. Notes, 1883, p. 635.

ii. Wesleyan Methodists.—1. With such a variety of works, most of which were occasionally used by the Methodist Societies, much confusion and difficulty naturally arose, so that John Wesley did wisely when, in 1779, (soon after he had opened his chapel in the City Road, London), he prepared out of those numerous works a collection for general use in all his societies, which was issued in 1780. The necessity for such a work was felt all over the country. It extended to 504 pages, and 16 pages of contents and index, and included 525 hymns. The contents were divided into the five parts and twenty sections as still retained in the revised ed. of 1875. The 2nd ed., corrected, appeared in 1781, the 3rd in 1782, the 4th 1784, 5th 1786, 6th 1788, 7th 1791. Up to 1791 it remained unaltered, although, every edition having to be set up afresh, errors had crept in. These increased till 1797, when a few of the preachers presumed to prepare a new edition, which they issued with an ornamental title-page. In it about 36 hymns were changed, and some of the favourite hymns of the people, designedly excluded by J. Wesley, were included, and at the end 25 additional hymns were given, making the total 550. This edition gave so little satisfaction to the people that the Conference of 1799 appointed Dr. Coke, G. Storey, H. Moore, and Adam Clarke "to reduce the large Hymn Book to its primitive simplicity, as in the second edition, with liberty to add a note in places to explain difficult passages for the sake of the unlearned, and with discretionary power in respect to the additional hymns." They rigidly revised the book, omitted 6 of the additional hymns, extended the work to 560 hymns and published it in 1800. The added hymns introduced a new and important feature into the collection, which is a distinct landmark (so to speak) in the history of Methodism, by including 7 hymns by C. Wesley on The Lord's Supper. All the unsold copies of the 1797 book were destroyed, and the revised edition remained unaltered for thirty years.

2. The publication at Manchester in 1825 of a piratical edition of the Collection, together with copyright needs, and the desire for greater variety of hymns, led the Conference to appoint the Revs. Thomas Jackson and Richard Watson to make such a selection as would meet the wishes of the people, and in 1831 a Supplement was issued, extending the collection from 560 to 769 hymns. These were chosen from some of Charles Wesley's original mss.: from his Festival Hymns and from the collection of Psalms and Hymns then known as the Morning Hymn Book. Many from Dr. Watts were also added, and a few of a popular character which were favourites with the people. The Preface is dated November 9, 1830, and in this Dictionary the date of this Supplement is given as 1830, the date of the Preface. Of the entire collection, including this Supplement, 668 hymns are by the Wesleys (father and three sons), and 101 by 20 other authors. Dr. Watts is represented by 66. Only two hymns in the book are specially adapted for Holy Baptism, one by Dr. Doddridge, commencing "See Israel's gentle Shepherd stand;" the other by C. Wesley, "God of eternal truth and love."

3. The copyright of the entire collection had for some years depended on only a few hymns, and when the right in these had run out, a new collection became a necessity. A collection was issued by a London publisher independently of the Conference, in 1873, an improvement on the 1831 book. It was compiled by a layman at Bristol, and included 1076 hymns, amongst them being many of the best modern compositions, and 71 church anthems. The Wesleyan Conference, however, could not recognise the work, and the Committee were obliged to prepare a new selection. A large committee took the matter in hand, and devoted much time and labour thereto. The edition of 1800 up to which was retained, but each hymn was compared with the original, and rigidly criticised: those which were omitted altogether; others had been altered, or added; and in this way 49 hymns were changed in the standard part of the collection. The new Supplement includes 487 hymns. Its contents embrace what may be described as a poetical body of divinity. In this it is more complete than the book prepared by John Wesley, in that it includes hymns on Holy Baptism, the Lord's Supper, and for children. It is divided into nine parts, in which the hymns are classified according to their subjects, or the season for which adapted, a special feature being the Psalms. The authors and translators are 120. Of these 74 contribute each one hymn, and of the rest 41 have hymns therein, bearing from 2 to 9 each, the total number being 11 by P. Doddridge, 13 by J. Montgomerie, 14 by I. Watts, and 724 by C. Wesley. For the first time the authors' names are added at the end of the first lines. The Methodist Hymn Book, illustrated with Biography, History, and Anecdote, by George Johnson, M.A., 1883, deals with this collection in an exhaustive manner.

4. Taken as a whole, whilst allowing for its distinct and definite advocacy of Methodist doctrine, and admitting the otherwise preponderance of C. Wesley's hymns, we judge this book as ranking with the best amongst Protestant Christians. It is distinctly Methodist, and it is more. It retains the Standard Hymn Book, not wrongly so called, which John Wesley gave to his people in 1780; and it has added thereto many of the best choice and valuable from most branches of the Church of Christ. The wisdom of the Conference in retaining the Standard Hymn Book is realized when we find that it has done more to conserve the essential doctrines of Methodism amongst a multitude than the combined process of all her divines.

5. The provision for Children and Young Persons, which is an important feature of modern hymnody, is not new, either to Methodism, or elsewhere. For the Methodist Hymn Book, C. Wesley published his Hymns for Children in 1763. Many of these compositions go beyond the comprehension of children, but the object was attained in drawing attention to spiritual wants and education of the young. In 1814, Joseph Benson, a preacher and of high repute with the Methodists, published Hymns for Children and Young Persons, containing Principal Truths and Duties of Religion and Selected from various Authors, and arranged in a natural and systematic Order. London, 1814.

Joseph Benson also published eight years afterwards:—

Hymns for Children, selected chiefly from the publications of the Rev. John and Charles Wesley, and Dr. Watts, and arranged in proper Order. London, 1814.

From the Preface to the first of these collections (the second has no preface), we find that it was compiled and published "to meet the wishes of many persons in different parts of the United Kingdom," but there is no indication that it (or the second collection either) had the official sanction of the Conference, although "printed at the Conference Office." The Conference, however, took up the matter at a later date, and in 1835 Thomas Jackson and Richard Watson, "compiled by the direction of the Methodist Book Committee in London":—

A Collection of Hymns for the Use of Wesleyan-Methodist Sunday Schools. London, 1835.

At the request of the same "Book Committee of the Wesleyan Conference," Dr. W. H. Rule compiled, and the Conference published, in 1857:—

The Wesleyan-Methodist Sunday-School Hymn-Book. London, 1857.

This was followed in 1870 by a "Selection of hymns suitable for use in Day and Sunday Schools," . . . "made by a number of Ministers, at the request of the Wesleyan Methodist Book Committee," which was compiled chiefly by the Rev. Samuel Lees, and published as:—

The Methodist Scholars' Hymn-Book. London, 1870.

Finally, in 1879, there was issued, after some delay which is apologised for in the preface:—

The Methodist Sunday-School Hymn-Book. A Collection of Hymns and Spiritual Songs for Use in Schools and Families. Compiled by Direction of the Wesleyan Methodist Conference. London, 1879.

This collection of 589 hymns, by a very large number of authors, is not only the best hymn-book for children extant amongst the Methodist Societies, but it has no equal elsewhere except the Church of England Children's Hymn-Book by Mrs. Carey Brook. Both the official hymn-books issued by the Conference have suitable tunes pub. with some of the editions. [See Children's Hymns, § iv.]

iii. Methodist New Connexion.—1. This branch of the Methodist family originated in 1796; the cause being the exclusion of Alexander Kilham from the ministry by the Conference of that year. From the time of J. Wesley's death, those preachers whom he had ordained had occasionally administered the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper. One of the old preachers who had done so, was much blamed for his conduct. Mr. Kilham wrote a defence of his conduct in An Address to the Members and Friends of the Newcastle Society, in which he also discussed the question of the right of the people to have the Sacrament from their own preachers. That address, in pamphlet form, was much commended by many of the old preachers, including Dr. Coke, H. Moore, J. Pauson, T. Taylor, W. Bramwell, S. Bradburn, and others, some of whom freely distributed the Address in their circuits. They also, by letters, encouraged Kilham to continue his advocacy of the rights of the people to the privileges asked for by them. Kilham wrote and spoke freely on the subject for a few years, and for so doing he was, at the desire of Mr. Mather, censured by the Conference of 1793. Other preachers, including Mr. Taylor and Mr. Bradburn, had also published their opinions in support of Kilham's views, but they were not censured. For this act of partiality, the Conference was blamed, and Kilham was encouraged by many preachers who desired to conciliate the Societies rather than the Conference. At the Conference of 1795, some steps were taken to reconcile the contending parties, under the name of the "Plan of Pacification," but it did not fully meet the case. Soon afterwards Kilham published a pamphlet entitled The Progress of Liberty, in which he pointed out the defects in the Plan of 1795, and sketched the Outline of a Constitution. This Outline included the following principles:—

- 1st. That the power to admit and expel members should be the act of the preachers with the consent of the people.
2. The members to have advice in choosing their leaders.
3. That local preachers be examined and admitted by preachers and lay officers conjointly.
4. That Quarterly Meetings should have a voice in recommending young men as preachers.
5. That the people have the right to representation in all the Church Courts, including the Annual Conference.
6. That religious worship be held in such hours as were most convenient for the people.
7. That the Societies receive the Sacraments of Baptism and the Lord's Supper from the hands of their own Ministers.

For publishing this pamphlet, and advocating the principles it contained, Kilham was tried and expelled from the ministry, in 1796. Those principles became the basis of the Methodist New Connexion, which took permanent form at a Conference held in August 1797, in Ebenezer Chapel, Leeds. Kilham's chief opponent was Alexander Mather, whom J. Wesley had ordained as a bishop to exercise authority in his Societies. The New Connexion was commenced with 9 circuits, 7 itinerant preachers (5 of whom had belonged to the parent Society), and over 5,000 members. It was in defence of the principles advocated by Kilham that the new Society was formed; and the preachers and lay-officers have exercised equal rights in the government of the Society throughout its history.

2. At the first the New Connexion adopted the use of the Wes. H. Bk., but a few years later a Supplement was prepared by order of the Conference, and was designated The Small Hymn Book. It consisted of 276 hymns. This Supplement reached a 5th edition in 1810, and was used till the new hymn-book of 1835 was issued.

3. Soon after the Wesleyans issued their Supplement in 1831, the New Connexion Conference appointed a committee to prepare a revised and enlarged collection for use in their Societies. The Revs. Thomas Mills and William Shuttleworth were the acting members. The Preface says that they took from the Wes. H. Bk. and from its Supplement the best hymns "for poetic merit, happy Scriptural illustration, and those which most clearly expressed breathings after peace and holiness. With these were combined a number of other hymns from various authors, and a few by pious persons of poetic genius, composed for the work." Such hymns only were admitted as "gave prominence to those doctrinal and experimental truths which are the chief glory of Methodism." This work was divided into seven parts, and forty-one sections. All the copyright hymns in the Wes. H. Bk. were omitted, and, as far as the Committee knew them, the names of authors were added to the hymns. This was the first official Methodist Collection with authors' names. The total number of hymns was 664, and of these nearly 50 were new, and by 27 authors not found in the Wes. H. Bk. This book was in use for over a quarter of a century, when it was superseded by the Collection published in 1863.

4. This New Collection was undertaken by a Committee, with the Rev. Henry Piggin as chief acting member. It was first issued in May, 1863, and included 1024 hymns by 130 authors. A collection of suitable tunes for each hymn, prepared by the Rev. James Ogden, has since been published.

5. Whilst Mr. Piggin and his coadjutors were preparing a new collection for congregational use, the Rev. John Stokoe, then a New Connexion minister, now a clergyman in the Irish Church, was preparing a smaller collection for use in their Sunday schools and houses, which was pub. in December, 1862, with the title The Juvenile Hymn Book. It contains 315 hymns, classified under seventeen sections, with authors' names added to each where known.

iv. Primitive Methodists.—1. This branch of the Methodist family originated in 1810 by the expulsion from the Methodist Society of Hugh Bourne (q.v.). Previous to this H. Bourne had compiled a small hymn-book, which he published in 1809. What was long known amongst the Primitives as The Small Book was issued in 1821, and consisted of 154 hymns, most of which were by Charles Wesley, and William Sanders, a few by Dr. Watts, and 16 by Bourne. This Small Book was widely known in all parts of the land by the first couplet in the book—

"Christ he sits on Zion's hill, He receives poor sinners still,"

with the chorus:

"I a soldier sure shall be Happy in Eternity."

2. With the growth of the Society, a larger number of hymns was required, and in 1824-25 Bourne prepared and issued what he called the Large Hymn Book, which included 536 hymns. Of these 16 were by William Sanders, 146 were the joint production of William Sanders and Hugh Bourne; a few were by Dr. Watts, Cowper, and Dr. Doddridge; 225 by Charles Wesley; and 20 new hymns by Bourne. A lengthy preface describes the Service of Song as set forth in the Old and New Testaments, and deals with Private Prayer, Preaching, Prayer Meetings, Class Meetings, Love Feasts, Camp Meetings, and Musical Instruments. Bourne says of the new hymns that they are "of a superior cast, and they lead into the mystery of faith."

3. As the Societies increased, a still greater variety of hymns was desired, and the Conference appointed the Rev. John Flesher to prepare an enlarged book. He acknowledges his own inability for performing the duty, but collected 852 hymns "from numerous popular authors, living and deceased, and enriched with original hymns and selected ones, altered or re-made." Mr. Flesher adds: "thought my lack of sufficient poetic and taste would save me from such an attempt, but when chosen, I was surprised, and humbled, and durst not disobey. unqualified editor proceeded to correct and mangle over 225 hymns. It need be added, that few but himself have appraised his work. In his preface he remarks:

"Knowing that Providence had not stored productions of any poet, I have freely altered hymns from authors of different grades of reputation as important item in strengthening right."

This book, issued in 1834, may be described as the worst edited and severely mutilated collection of hymns published.

4. The Conference of 1882 appointed a Committee to prepare an entirely new edition. This was published, in 1887, Primitive Methodist Hymnal, compiled by a Committee appointed by the Conference. It contains 1052 hymns by over 340 authors and translators (besides many several that are unknown), ranging from the earliest ages of hymnody to the present from the Unitarians on the one hand Latin and Greek Churches on the other is divided into twelve sections, which are subdivided: but the arrangement of it is more after the manner of the Congregationalists than that usually adopted in Methodist collections, and is the arrangement Flesher's book simplified. It is supplied with the usual Indices of first lines of "of texts," of "subjects," &c., and a "list of authors and translators," with the titles of their hymns. This last is in addition names of the authors being added to the hymns throughout the book. It is an intensely Methodistic, whilst in the number of its authors, in the comprehensiveness of its subjects, in the richness of its poetic care and accuracy displayed in its designations of authorship, it is equal in Methodist hymnody.

5. Provision for the children in the schools has been made by the publication of the Primitive Methodist Sunday School Book, in 1879. It was edited by G. B. and William Jeckworth. It is a collection, is well edited, and is set to music. Its use is extensive.

v. United Methodist Free Churches. These Churches were formed by the separation, in 1857, of several separate societies, the members of which had formerly been connected with the Wesleyan Methodist Society. One of these was that known as the Methodists, who, in 1827-28, came to an Organ Question at Leeds. Another was formed in 1834-35, when Dr. Warren was expelled, the proceedings arising chiefly out of the formation of a Theological Institution. These sections united to form the Wesleyan Association. They used the Wes. H. with a small Supplement added. In 1849, to the expulsion of the Revs. James Samuel Dunn, and William Griffiths from the Wesleyan Conference, another division resulted, and a Society designated the Reformers was established, which fifty thousand adherents. Mr. Everett was expelled on suspicion of having written The Fly Sheets and Wesleyan Takings, and published them anonymously; Mr. Dunn for publishing The Wesley Banner, a monthly magazine, and for declining to discontinue the work as desired by the Conference; Mr. Griffith for reporting the proceedings of the Conference in The Wesleyan Times. The body then formed by those who adhered to those ministers, at their Annual Delegate Meeting held in Sheffield, in August, 1852, appointed the Rev. James Everett to prepare a new edition of the Wes. H. Bk., with the addition of such new hymns as would replace the copyright hymns which could not be used. The preface to that book is dated July 1st, 1853. The Supplement contained 243 hymns in addition to the hymns in the Wes. H. Bk. In these were included the compositions of 15 authors not then in the Supplement to the Wes. H. Bk. At the end of this collection there is an index which gives the source whence every hymn in the book is derived, together with the author's name. The collection contains 804 hymns.

2. When the Wesleyan Methodist Association and the Wesleyan Reformers, who united in 1857 to form the Methodist Free Churches, held their annual assembly in Sheffield, in 1859, they resolved to have a new hymn-book, and appointed the Revs. James Everett and Matthew Baxter to prepare the same. They were to retain all the original Wes. H. Bk. of 1780, and add "A Supplement of 250 hymns, and also hymns suitable for a Sunday School." The preface is dated October, 1860. Changes were made in 53 hymns, but none of the new hymns were by authors other than those who had already contributed. From No. 778 to 821 the hymns were all new. Five doxologies and two graces closed the collection of 828 hymns. The Supplement was issued in 1861 as a separate book, with the sub-title Miscellaneous Hymns. Their Sunday School Hymns, 1860, is a fairly good collection.

3. The Methodist Free Churches are compiling a new Coll. of Hymns, which may appear in 1889. A committee of ministers have been employed for a long time in its preparation. The Sunday S. H. Bk. appeared in 1888.

vi. Bible Christians.—1. The founder of this Society was William O'Bryan, a Cornishman, born February 6th, 1778, at Gunwen, Luxillian. His father owned a farm and was a Cornish miner. Both his parents were Methodists, and had heard John Wesley preach. They had preaching services in their own dwelling-house. William had a fair education, and the curate of the parish offered to prepare him for college. He was converted under the Methodists in May, 1789, was apprenticed to the drapery business, became worldly, lost his religion, and again gave his heart to God, November 5th, 1793. He heard J. Wesley preach twice, and received his blessing. He began to preach in 1801, was married in 1803, and made a local preacher in 1809. For preaching in villages beyond his own parish, where there was no Methodist preaching, he was expelled from the Methodist Society. Being urged to continue his preaching, he found in North Devon fourteen villages without any places of worship, and in November, 1814, he left his home to itinerate and preach in those places. In October, 1815, he preached in the house of Mr. Thorne at Shebbear, and, being urged to do so, he then formed those present into a religious Society. This Society was at first known by the name Arminian Bible Christians; afterwards the initial word was dropped, and they have since been known as Bible Christians, and sometimes, locally, Brianites. Their chief Societies are in Cornwall and Devonshire, but they have a few elsewhere. O'Bryan compiled their first hymn-book, about 1819, when their first Conference was held. In 1829 a separation took place. O'Bryan left the body in 1831, and went to America, where he died, January 8th, 1868. For his share in the copyright of the hymn-book, and for other claims, the Conference allowed him twenty pounds a year till he died. The hymn-book is divided into six parts and twenty-eight sections. The hymns are mostly those in use in the Wes. H. Bk., but they are rearranged throughout, and several by 18 other authors were added. In July, 1862, a 4th ed. was issued, with 9 hymns changed, the names of authors added as far as known, the index of Scripture texts enlarged, and an index of verses. The 6th ed. is dated 1882. The Conference of 1885 appointed a committee to prepare a new and more comprehensive collection, to be published in due course.

2. In 1832, a Sunday School Union for the Bible Christians was formed at Shebbear, in Devonshire, and they published The Child's Hymn Book for use in their schools. In 1863 a new ed. was prepared and published, containing 272 hymns, more than 60 of which were new. That book has served the Connexion nearly a quarter of a century, and is still in favour. The hymns are carefully classified, but no authors' names are given.

vii. Conclusion.—When the Methodist (Ecumenical) Conference was held in City Road Chapel, in September, 1881, a suggestion was made to have one comprehensive hymn-book for all the branches of Methodism throughout the world. This course, however, has not been adopted.

Translations of English hymns into various European and other languages have been made for use by the various branches of the Methodist Societies on the Continent of Europe and on Mission Stations. In several instances these translations have been supplemented by original hymns in the vernacular, and composed chiefly by the resident missionaries. [See Missions, Foreign.]

The Methodist hymn-writers are very limited in number. The provision made by John and Charles Wesley for every aspect of Methodism, the stereotyped character of each book when issued, the great number of years it had to run before any omissions or additions could be made, and the intense affection of Methodists for their old hymns, have had much to do in producing this result. When at rare intervals outlets for pent-up poetic life were made in new editions of old books, and in collections for children and the young, W. M. Bunting, W. M. Punston, B. Gough, J. Lyth, G. S. Rowe, J. Briggs,

E. E. Jenkins, M. G. Pearce, and a few others, have produced lyrics of merit and usefulness; but no great singer has appeared in Methodism since Charles Wesley was gathered to his fathers. [See American Hymnody, p. 58, ii. and Various.] [G. J. S.]

Metrophanes of Smyrna, was bishop of Smyrna towards the close of the ninth century. He was a partizan of Rome in her contest with Photius, and an adherent of his rival, Ignatius. He d. circa 910. His chief hymnological works are his Canons in honour of the Blessed Trinity, one of which has been published in Anth. Graec. Carm. Christ., 1871, p. 254. They are eight in all, one for each Tone, and are sung at Matins on Sundays, the Canon changing with the Tone on each succeeding Sunday. A cento only, and that from the Canon for the Sunday of the Second Tone, from the Odoechus, has been rendered into English. Meusel, Wolfgang, s. of Anton Meusel (Meuselin, Münslein, Mosel, Mösel, Musculus, &c.), cooper at Dieuze in Lorraine, was b. at Dieuze, Sept. 8, 1497. He studied for short periods in the schools at Rappoltweiler, Colmar, and Schlettstadt, between times wandering over the country and earning his way by his singing. In 1512 he happened to come to the Benedictine monastery at Lixheim near Saarburg, just as Vespers were being sung. His beautiful voice, as he joined in, led the monks to receive him, and here he studied music, and became organist to the cloister. In his 20th year he devoted himself to the study of theology, and soon after began to preach in the church at Lixheim, and in the neighbouring village churches. In 1518 he became acquainted with Luther's writings and embraced his views, but did not till 1527, after he had declined as prior. On Dec. 26, 1527, married at Strassburg to a niece prior at Lixheim. Meyfart, Johann Matth Nov. 9, 1590 at Jena, during a v mother (wife of Pastor Meyfart kel, near Waltershausen, Gotha to her father. He studied at the of Jena (M.A. 1611; D.D. 1624) and and was thereafter for some tin the philosophical faculty at Jena he was appointed professor in the at Coburg and in 1623 director his residence at Coburg was a power. When his colleagues in sium made a complaint to the regarding a dissertation (De d clesiastica), which he pub. in 1633 the offer of the professorship of the revived University of Erfurt. on his work at Erfurt, July, 163 of the University in 1634, and in also pastor of the Prediger Kir at Erfurt, Jan. 26, 1642 (Koch iii. 117; Allg. Deutsche Biog. xxi. 646, &c.).

Meyfart's devotional works (Tuba poenitentiae prophetica, 1626; Tuba Novissima, 1626; Höllisches Sodoma, 1629; Himmliches Jerusalem, 1630; Jüngste Gericht, 1632) passed through various editions, and produced a great impression by their vivid picturing and their earnest calls to repentance and amendment of life. His well-meant efforts, by books and otherwise, towards raising the tone of student life in Germany, and his exposition of the excesses and defects in both academic and churchly life at that period, brought him much ill will and opposition, and did not produce useful fruit till much later. His hymns were few in number, and appeared mostly in his devotional books.

Only one of Meyfart's hymns has passed into English, viz. —

Jerusalem, du hochgebaute Stadt. The New Jerusalem. This splendid hymn appeared in his Tuba Novissima, Coburg, 1626 [Ducal Library, Gotha], a volume containing four sermons preached at Coburg on the Four Last Things, viz. Death, Last Judgment, Eternal Life, and Eternal Punishment. It forms the conclusion of the third sermon (on St. Matt. xvii. 1-9) which is entitled "On the joy and glory which all the Elect are to expect in the Life everlasting." This conclusion is reprinted verbatim et literatim (i.e. with the introductory and closing sentences, and the connecting sentences between st. i., ii., iii. and iv.) in the Blätter für Hymnologie, 1883, pp. 120-124. The text of the hymn, in 8 st. of 8 l., is given unaltered, according to the marginal directions of the original (save st. vii. l. 6, where the original is "Man spielt"), as No. 1537 in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863. Of it Lausmann, in Koch viii. 669, says:—

"The hymn is a precious gem in our Treasury of Song, in which one clearly sees that from it the whole heart of the poet shines out on us. Meyfart had his face turned wholly to the Future, to the Last Things; and with a richly fanciful mysticism full of deep and strong faith, he united a flaming zeal for the House of the Lord, and against the abuses of his times."

He adds that the hymn was a great favourite with Charles Gütschaff, the apostle of China (d. at Hong-Kong, Aug. 9, 1851), whose last words were "Would God I were in thee" (st. i. l. 3); and of Julius Schnorr of Carlsfeld, the well-known painter, whose last work was the illustrating of this hymn, and at whose funeral in 1872 it was sung. The popularity of the hymn was greatly aided by the magnificent melody, generally ascribed to Melchior Franck [b. at Zittau, 1580; c. 1604, capellmeister at Coburg; d. at Coburg, June 1, 1639], but not yet traced earlier than to the Erfurt G. B., 1663.

Middleton, Thomas Fanshaw, D.D. s. of Thomas Middleton, Rector of Radleston, in Derbyshire, was b. there on Jan. 26, 1769. He was educated first by his father, then at Christ's Hospital, and finally at Pembroke Hall, Cambridge (B.A. in honours 1792). He was successively Curate of Gainsborough; Rector of Tansor, Northamptonshire, 1795; Vicar of St. Pancras, 1810; Archdeacon of Huntingdon, 1812; and the first bishop of Calcutta, 1814. He d. in Calcutta, July 8, 1822. Bishop Middleton's publications were mainly confined to various Sermons and Charges, and a work on the Greek Article. In 1824 his Sermons and Charges were collected and pub. with a short Memoir, by Dr. H. R. Bonney. At p. xciv. the only hymn ascribed to him is given with the explanation that it was composed by the Bishop "and always sung on new year's day, by his desire." It is: "As o'er the past my mem'ry strays" (New Year), in 4 st. of 4 l. It was printed in the August number of Carus Wilson's Family Visitor, 1826; again in Hall's Mitre Hymnal, 1836, and later in several collections. Orig. text in Bk. of Praise, 1862, p. 238. [J. Midlane, Albert, was b. at Newport, Isle of Wight, Jan. 23, 1825, and has been engaged in business in that town for many years. To his Sunday school teacher he ascribes the honour of prompting him to poetic efforts: and the same teacher did much to shape his early life. His first printed hymn, "Hark! in the presence of our God," was written in September, 1842, at Carisbrooke Castle, and printed in the Youth's Magazine in November of the same year. Since then he has written over 300, and of these a large proportion are in C. U. They appeared in magazines and small mission hymn-books, including:—

(1) The Youth's Magazine; (2) The British Messenger; (3) The London Messenger; (4) Trotter's Evangelical Hymn Book, 1869; (5) The Ambassador's Hymn Book, 1861; (6) Second ed. of the same, 1868; (7) Hymn Book for Youth; (8) Good News for the Little Ones, 1860; (9) William Carter's Gospel Hymn Book, 1862; and several other works of a similar kind.

In addition to several small works in prose, Mr. Midlane has gathered his verse together from time to time and published it as:—

(1) Poetry addressed to Sabbath School Teachers, 1844; (2) Vesta Garland, 1850; (3) Leaves from Olivet, 1864; (4) Gospel Echoes, 1865; (5) Above the Bright Blue Sky, 1867; (6) Early Liftings, 1889.

Of the hymns contained in these works nearly 200 have been in C. U. from 1861 to 1887, the most popular being "There's a Friend for little children." The hymn-books, however, in which many of them are found are usually very small, are used in what are commonly known as Gospel Missions, and have gradually given way to other and more important collections. We therefore append only those hymns which are at the present time in use in official or quasi-official hymn-books, or such collections as have a wide circulation. Those hymns which are omitted from the following list may be found in the works given above, and especially in the Gospel Echoes. The bracketed dates below are those of the composition of the hymns.

79. 'Tis heaven where Jesus is. (Oct. 23, 1863.) Joy and Peace in Jesus. In the Enlarged London H. Bk., 1873.
80. Together all things work for good. (Aug. 14, 1860.) All work for Good. In the Enlarged London H. Bk., 1873.
81. Waiting for Jesus, and loving while waiting. (Jan. 9, 1872.) Second Advent desired. In the 1873 Appar. to Snopp's S. of G. & Glory.
82. Without a cloud between. (Mar. 18, 1862.) Jesus, Face to Face. In the London Messenger, June, 1862.
83. Yet awhile; how sweet the thought. (Dec., 1864.) Second Advent desired. In the London Messenger, 1865.

The collections in which these hymns are mainly found are Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1866; Snopp's Songs of G. & G., 1872-3; Hurditch's Enlarged London H. Bk., 1873, and smaller books for Evangelical mission work. Of Mr. Midlane's hymns as a whole, Miller's estimate that "His hymns are full of spiritual thought, careful in their wording, and often very pleasing without reaching the highest form of poetical excellence" (Singers and Songs, p. 572), is just. A marked feature of these hymns is the constant and happy use of Scripture phraseology. [J. J.]

Midst scenes of confusion and creature complaints. D. Denham. [Heaven Anticipated.] This hymn appeared in the 1826 Appendix to J. Rees's Coll., No. 168, in 5 st., and again in Denham's Saint's Melody, &c., 1837, No. 740, in 6 st. of 4 l. It is given in a few collections in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

Mighty Father! Blessed Son! J. S. B. Monsell. [Holy Trinity.] Appeared in his Spiritual Songs, 1857, in 9 st. of 9 l., as the hymn for Trinity Sunday. In the Hymnal Comp., 1876, and the Prim. Meth. Hymnal, 1887, st. i., iv., and ix. of this text are given as No. 197. In Dr. Monsell's Hys. of Love and Praise, 1863, the same hymn is rearranged and partly rewritten (but still retaining the opening lines) in 9 st. of 3 l. Snopp, in printing this form of the hymn in his Songs of G. & G., 1872, has divided it into three parts, and added this note thereto:—

"Note the Symbolic Form—three lines harmonizing in each verse; three verses in each division; three divisions making one hymn."

This form of the text, but usually without these divisions, is also in Thring's Coll., 1882, and others. [J. J.]

Miles, Elizabeth, née Appleton, was b. at Boston, U.S.A., March 28, 1807, and married in 1833 to Solomon P. Miles, Head Master of the Boston High School, and afterwards the Principal of a private school for young ladies in the same city. He d. in 1842. On leaving Boston, Mrs. Miles went to reside with her son at Brattleborough, Vermont. Her principal hymns are:—

1. The earth all light and levelness. Part i. Summer.

2. When on devotion's seraph wing. Part ii., st. v., vii. Foretaste of Heaven. These two parts appeared as one hymn in The Christian Examiner, 1828.

3. Thou Who didst stoop below. Looking unto Jesus. Appeared in The Christian Examiner, 1827. Sometimes it begins with st. ii., "It was no path of flowers," as in the Boston Unitarian Bk. of Hymns, 1846.

4. Father, direct my ways. Divine Guidance desired in Affliction. In the Boston Book of Hys., 1846; the Boston Hys. of the Spirit, 1864; and some other collections, it begins with st. ii., "Thou, infinite in love."

Three additional hymns were pub. for the first time in Putnam's Singers and Songs of the Liberal Faith, 1875. [F. M. B.]

Millard, James Elwin, D.D., was b. May 18, 1823, and educated first at Magdalen College School, and then at Magdalen College, Oxford (B.A. in honours, 1845). Taking Holy Orders, he became Curate of Bradfield, Berks, 1846; Head Master of Magdalen College School, 1846; Fellow of his College, 1853; and Vicar of Basingstoke, 1864. Dr. Millard has pub.:—

(1) The Island Choir, or the Children of the Child Jesus, 1847; (2) Historical Notices of the Office of Choristers; and (3) A Short Account of Basingstoke, Basing and the Neighbourhood, 1874. He also contributed a few hymns to the Rev. T. F. Smith's Devout Chorister, 1849.

From the Devout Chorister the following hymns have come into C. U.:—

1. God eternal, mighty King. Te Deum.
2. In deep humiliation. Ascension.
3. Last night I lay a-sleeping. Curo!

The first of these passed, with alterations, into Hys. & Introits (Masters), 1852, with further alterations into H. A. & M., 1861. The text was corrected in Biggs's Annotated H. A. & M., 1867. The hymn is widely known. [J. J.]

Miller, Emily, née Huntingdon. [Various.]

Miller, Josiah, M.A., was b. at Putney, April 8, 1832, and educated for the Congregational ministry at Highbury College, also graduating M.A. at the University of London, 1855. After holding pastorates at Dorchester, Long Sutton, and Newark, he became Secretary of the "British Society for the Propagation of the Gospel among the Jews," and subsequently of the "London City Mission." He d. in London, December, 1880. He pub.:—

(1) Our Hymns: their Authors and Origin, 1866. The groundwork of this volume was the leading hymn-books of the Congregational body. (2) Our Dispensation, 1868. (3) Singers and Songs of the Church: being Biographical Sketches of the Hymn-writers in all the Principal Collections. With Notes on their Psalms and Hymns, Lond., Longmans, 1869. This was an extension of Our Hymns to twenty-five representative English hymn-books of various denominations. (4) Christianum Organum, 1873.

Mr. Miller rendered great service to hymnology by the production of Our Hymns and Singers and Songs. These works, and especially the latter, furnished the fullest illustrations of hymnody, which up to the time of their publication had appeared in English, and embodied a great mass of information which had been gathered by the author and other workers in the same field, notably D. Sedgwick, C. D. Hardcastle, G. J. Stevenson, and Dr. C. Rogers. Considering the wide ground which it covered, it was an accurate and painstaking work. Where it fails is usually in omissions, and not in positive errors. His statements are generally correct so far as they go, but recent researches in hymnody have shown that in numerous instances they did not go far enough. The Greek, Latin, German, and American portions of his work are especially weak. His main strength is in his Biographies. [W. G. H.]

Millions within Thy courts have met. J. Montgomery. [Sunday Evening.] Pub. in his Poetical Works, 1841, vol. iv. p. 293, in 10 st. of 6 l. and again in his Original Hys., 1833, No. 120, where it is headed "Evening Song for the Sabbath-Day." Its use, especially in America, is extensive, but it is usually abbreviated. In Kennedy, 1863, and one or two others it begins "Thousands within Thy courts have met." Also given as, "Within Thy courts have millions met." [J. J.]

Mills, Elizabeth, née King, dau. of Philip King, was b. at Stoke Newington in 1805; married to Thomas Mills, M.P., and d. at Finsbury Place, London, April 21, 1829. Her popular hymn:—

We speak of the realms of the blest [Heaven] is thus annotated in Miller's Singers and Songs, &c., 1869, p. 483: "We are much indebted to John Remington Mills, Esq., M.P., for information about this hymn, written by his accomplished relative. The original has 6 st. and was composed after reading 'Bridges' on the 119th Psalm' (on ver. 44, p. 116). 'We speak of heaven, but oh! to be there.' . . . Already deservedly a favourite, new interest will be added to this hymn when we know that the authoress was early called to 'the realms of the blest,' of which she sang so sweetly, and that she wrote this hymn a few weeks before her death." The text of this hymn is usually given in an imperfect form. The corrections are supplied by W. F. Stevenson in his Hys. for Church and Home, 1873, "Children's Hymns," No. 151, and the note thereon. Few children's hymns have been received with more favour. It is found in almost every hymn-book published for Children in Great Britain and America during the last fifty years. In some collections it begins, "We sing of the land of the blest"; and in others, "We talk of the land of the blest." [J. J.]

Mills, Henry, D.D., s. of John Mills, was b. at Morriston, New Jersey, March 12, 1786, and educated at the New Jersey College, Princeton, where he graduated in 1802. After being engaged in teaching for some time at Morristown and elsewhere, he was ordained Pastor of the Presbyterian Church of Woodbridge, New Jersey, in 1816. On the opening of the Auburn Theological Seminary in 1821, he was appointed Professor of Biblical Criticism and Oriental Languages, from which he retired in 1854. He d. at Auburn, June 10, 1867. In 1845 he pub. Horae Germanicae; A Version of German Hymns. This was enlarged in 1856. The trs. are not well done, and very few are now in C. U., although 18 and 9 doxologies were given in the Lutheran General Synod's Coll., 1850. Many are noted in the articles on German hymn-writers and hymns throughout this Dictionary. [F. M. B.]

Milman, Henry Hart, D.D., the youngest s. of Sir Francis Milman (who received his Baronetage as an eminent Court physician), was b. Feb. 10th, 1791, and educated at Dr. Burney's at Greenwich, and subsequently at Eton. His career at B. N. C., Oxford, was brilliant. He took a first class in classics, and carried off the Newdigate, Latin Verse, Latin Essay, and English Essay. His Newdigate on the Apollo Belvedere, 1812, is styled by Dean Stanley "the most perfect of Oxford prize poems." His literary career for several years promised to be poetical. His tragedy Fazio was played at Covent Garden, Miss O'Neill acting Bianca. Samor was written in the year of his appointment to St. Mary's, Reading (1817): The Fall of Jerusalem (1820); Belshazzar and The Martyr of Antioch (1822), and Anne Boleyn, gained a brilliant reception from the reviewers and the public. He was appointed Poetry Professor at Oxford in 1821, and was succeeded ten years after by Keble. It must have been before 1823, the date of Heber's consecration to Calcutta, that the 13 hymns he contributed to Heber's Hymns were composed. But his poetry was only the prelude to his larger work. The Bampton Lectures (1827) mark his transition to theological study, and the future direction of it was permanently fixed by his History of the Jews (1829). This book raised a storm of obloquy. It was denounced from the University pulpit, and in the British Critic. "It was the first decisive inroad of German theology into England, the first palpable indication that the Bible could be studied like another book, that the characters and events of the sacred history could be treated at once critically and reverently" (Dean Stanley). In 1835 he was presented by Sir Robert Peel to a Canonry at Westminster and the Rectory of St. Margaret's. In 1839 appeared his valuable edition of Gibbon's Decline and Fall; and in 1840 his History of Christianity to the Abolition of Paganism in the Roman Empire. Among his minor works in a different field were his Life of Keats and his edition and Life of Horace. It was not till 1854 that his greatest work—for "vast and varied learning, indefatigable industry, calm impartiality, and subtle and acute criticism, among the most memorable in our language" (Quart. Rev.)—Latin Christianity—appeared. He had been appointed Dean of St. Paul's in 1849. The great services under the dome originated in his tenure of the Deanery. His latest work, published after his death, Sept. 24, 1868, was The Annals of St. Paul's. Though one of the most illustrious in the school of English liberal theology, he had no sympathy with the extreme speculations of Germany. The "criticism" of Tübingen "will rarely bear criticism." He "should like an Ewald to criticise Ewald." "Christianity will survive the criticism of Dr. Strauss," and the "bright flashing artillery" of Rénan. His historical style has been compared to Gibbon in its use of epigram and antithesis. His narrative is full of rapidity of movement. His long complex paragraphs have often a splendour of imagination as well as wealth of thought. All the varied powers of his mind found vent in his conversation; he was called, after his death, "the last of the great conversers." The catalogue of his friends from the days of Heber, "his early friend," to those of Hallam, Macaulay, and Dean Stanley, was long and distinguished.

Milman's 13 hymns were published in Heber's posthumous Hymns in 1827, and subsequently in his own Set. of Ps. & Hys., 1837. The fine hymn for The Burial of the Dead, in Thring's Coll., "Brother, thou art gone before us," is from The Martyr of Antioch (1822). Like Heber's, they aim at higher literary expression and lyric grace. He makes free use of refrains. The structure is often excellent. His style is less florid and fuller of burning, sometimes lurid force than Heber's. His hymn for the 16th Sunday after Trinity, "When our heads are bowed with woe," has no peer in its presentation of Christ's human sympathy: the hymn for the 2nd Sunday in Lent, "Oh! help us, Lord! each hour of need," is a piece of pure deep devotion. "Ride on, ride on in majesty," the hymn for Palm Sunday, is one of our best hymns. And the stanzas for Good Friday, "Bound upon the accursed tree," form one of the finest meditations on the Passion. All his hymns are still in C. U. [H. L. B.]

Milton, John, was b. in London, Dec. 9, 1608, and d. there Nov. 8, 1674. His poetical excellences and his literary fame are matters apart from hymnology, and are fully dealt with in numerous memoirs. His influence on English hymn-writing has been very slight, his 19 versions of various Psalms having lain for the most part unused by hymnal compilers. The dates of his paraphrases are:—

Ps. cxi. and cxvii., 1623, when he was 15 years of age. These were given in his Poems in English and Latin, 1645.

Ps. lxxx.—lxxxviii., written in 1648, and pub. as Nine Psalms done into Metre, 1648.

Ps. i., 1653; ii., "Done August 8, 1653;" iii., Aug. 9, 1653; iv., Aug. 10, 1653; v., Aug. 12, 1653; vi., Aug. 13, 1653; vii., Aug. 14, 1653; viii., Aug. 14, 1653.

These 19 versions were all included in the 2nd ed. of his Poems in English and Latin, 1673. From these, mainly in the form of centos, the following have come into C. U.:—

1. Cause us to see Thy goodness, Lord. Ps. lxxv.

2. Defend the poor and desolate. Ps. lxxvii.

3. God in the great assembly stands. Ps. lxxviii.

4. How lovely are Thy dwellings fair. Ps. lxxviii. From this, "They pass refreshed the thirsty vale," is taken.

5. Let us with a gladsome [joyful] mind. Ps. cxvii.

6. O let us with a joyful mind. Ps. cxvii.

7. The Lord will come and not be slow. Ps. lxxxv.

Of these centos Nos. 4 and 5 are in extensive use. The rest are mostly in Unitarian collections. There are also centos from his hymn on the Nativity, "This is the month, and this the happy morn" (q.v.). [See Psalters, English, § xi.] [J. J.]

Minimus. One of A. M. Toplady's signatures in the Gospel Magazine.

Mir nach, spricht Christus, unser Held. J. Scheffler. [Following Christ.] This hymn, founded on St. Matt. xvi. 24, has been justly characterized as "a masterpiece of Scriptural didactic poetry." It is No. 171 in Bk. v., 1668, of Scheffler's Heilige Seelenlust (Werke, 1662, i. p. 289), in 6 st. of 6 l., entitled "She [the Soul] encourages to the following of Christ." In the Geistreiches G. B., Halle, 1697, p. 423, a new stanza was added as st. iv., and this form passed through Freylinghausen's G. B., 1704, and is No. 640 in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863. Tr. as:—

1. Come, follow me, our Lord doth call. A good tr. of st. i., iii., v., vii., by A. T. Russell, as No. 100 in the Dalton Hospital H. Bk., 1848, repeated, altered, as No. 183 in his own Ps. & Hys., 1851.

2. Rise, follow Me! our Master saith. A tr. of st. i., v., vi., vii., by Miss Winkworth, as No. 78 in her C. B. for England, 1863.

3. Says Christ, our Champion, follow me. A tr. of st. i., ii., vii., included as No. 449 in the Church Praise Bk., N. Y., 1882, marked as abridged from a tr. by F. M. Finch, 1880.

Other trs. are:—(1) "My yoke, saith Christ, Upon you take," by F. W. Foster, as No. 310 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789 (1806, No. 497). (2) "After me! Christ our Champion spake," in the British Magazine, April, 1838, p. 401. (3) "Christians, attend! Our Champion cries," in the Family Treasury, 1877, p. 111. [J. M.]

Mirabilis Deus in sanotis. [Martyrs.] In the Bodleian ms. 775, f. 160 b (written in the reign of Ethelred between 904 and 1017), this is the sequence for many martyrs. It is given in the Common of many Martyrs in the Sarum (Bodleian ms. Barlow 5, circa 1370, page 430); Paris (Brit. Mus. Add. 16905, f. 235, early 14th cent.); Sens (Brit. Mus. Add. 30058, f. 136 b of the 14th cent.); St. Andrews (reprint, 1864, p. 416), and other Missals. It is also in an 11th cent. Winchester service book now in the Library of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, No. 473. It was tr. by C. B. Pearson as, "God is to be admired in all His saints," in the Sarum Missal in English, 1868; and as "God is much to be admired," in his Sequences from the Sarum Missal, 1871. It was also tr. as, "Praise to Thee, O Lord, most holy," for the Hymnary, 1872, by "H. M. C." (i.e. Harriet Mary Chester). [J. M.]

Miramur, O Deus, Tuas. C. Coffin. [Wednesday.] Appeared in the Paris Breviary, 1736, for Wednesdays, at Matins; and again in his Hymni Sacri, 1786, p. 18. It is also in several modern French Breviaries; in J. Chandler's Hys. of the Prim. Church, 1837, p. 151; Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiæ, 1838 and 1865; and in Biggs's Annotated H. A. & M., 1867. [W. A. S.]

Translations in C. U.:—

1. The wonders of the Almighty hand. By J. Chandler, in his Hys. of the Prim. Church, 1837, p. 20, in 6 st. of 4 l.; and again in his Hys. of the Church mostly Primitive, &c., 1841, No. 13. It is found in a few modern collections.

2. O God supreme! in rapt amaze. By J. D. Chambers, in his Lauda Syon, 1857, p. 20, in 6 st. of 4 l. It was repeated in the Salisbury H. Bk., 1857; Martineau's Hymns, 1873 (in 5 st.), and in others.

3. New wonders of Thy mighty hand. By the compilers of H. A. & M., based on J. Chandler, as above, and pub. in H. A. & M., 1861, abbreviated; in Kennedy, 1863, &c.

Translations not in C. U.:—

1. O God, we behold how Thy wondrous might. L. Williams. British Magazine, July, 1834, and his Hys. tr. from the Parisian Brev., 1839.

2. O God, Thy wonder-working hand. In J. A. Johnston's English Hymnal, 1852.

[J. J.]

Miris probat sese modis. Jean Baptiste de Santeuil. [St. Stephen.] Appeared in the Choir Breviary, 1686, p. 182, in Santeuil's Hymni Sacri et Novi, 1689, p. 57, and the Paris Breviary, 1736. It is also in several modern French Breviaries, and Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as:—

1. Holy love towards her foes. Pub. in I. Williams's Hys. tr. from the Parisian Breviary, 1839, p. 61, 7 st. of 4 l., with a doxology. In his preface Williams says that this tr. was made by a "a friend." In Johnston's English Hymnal, 1852, this tr. was altered to "Christian Love in wondrous ways"; and in the editions of 1856 and 1861 to "Holy love in wondrous ways."

2. Holy Love herself displays. This tr. in R. Campbell's Hys. & Anthems, &c., 1850, is based upon the above by I. Williams's "friend."

Another tr. is:—

What kindness e'en to mortal foes. J. D. Chambers, 1857.

[J. J.]

Missala. The Missal [Missale] is the Service-book of the Latin Church, which contains all that is said or sung in the service of the Holy Eucharist or "the Mass" [Missa]. It comprises within itself many and various elements which anciently were distributed in different volumes. Such were the Sacramentarium containing the Priest's part of the service in the unvarying Canon, with the varying Prefaces, Collects, Secrets, and Postcommons; the Epistolarium or Lectionarium, containing the Epistles; the Evangeliarium, containing the Gospels; the Graduale, containing all the choral portions of the service, viz., the Introits, Kyries, Gloria in Excelsis, Graduals, Tracts, Sequences, Creeds, Offertories, and Communions. Of these the Sequences frequently formed a separate volume called the Sequentiale. Still more ancient and long obsolete books were the Benedictionale, containing the varying triple episcopal benedictions; and the Troparium, containing verses or farces, varying with each festival, dovetailed into or in some way attached to almost every choral part of the service. These verses, known as Tropes, went generally out of use in the 13th century.

The Missal most widely in circulation in the present day, and gradually superseding all other Latin Uses, is the Roman Missal. It was carefully revised by Pius V. (1570) in accordance with the directions of the Council of Trent, and so revised its use was enjoined in all places and on all communities which could not plead a prescription of two hundred years in favour of a local or peculiar use. It subsequently underwent two slighter but careful revisions under Clement VIII. (in 1604) and Urban VIII. (in 1634), and has received, and will continue to receive from time to time, additional services necessitated by the institution of new Festivals.

Besides the Missale Romanum there were, and to a lesser extent than formerly still are, various Missals, belonging to different Provinces, Dioceses, and Religious and Military Orders. Such were the Sarum, York, and Hereford Missals of the unreformed Church of England, the Paris, Lyons, and many French Missals, the Augustinian, Benedictine, Premonstratentian Missals, &c. These may all be regarded as variations and offshoots of the Missale Romanum.

In addition to monastic or diocesan variations of the Roman Missal, there are two living Latin Liturgies which deserve special notice, because they are, the first probably, the second certainly, of a distinct genus or family, viz.: that known as the Ephesine or Hispano-Gallican. These are the Ambrosian Missal in use in the Church of Milan, and the Mozarabic Missal in limited use in the Church of Spain.

Most of these Missals form a quarry from which an immense amount of hymnological material can be drawn in the shape of Sequences or Proses, for an account of which see Sequences.

But besides Sequences, there are other parts of the Liturgy, which sometimes, though rarely, assume a metrical or rhyming form. These are the Gradual with its Verses, the Tract, the Offertorium, the Communio, and possibly the more ancient Trope. Details concerning these are given under their respective titles (q.v.).

Missions, Foreign. The hymnody of Foreign Missions is, as a whole, practically unknown. Most persons have some idea of the great work accomplished by Christian missionaries in the translation of the Holy Scriptures into almost all known languages; but few have ever thought how much has been done by them in the translation and composition of hymns, the preparation of hymn-books, and in general, in the introduction of Christian Hymnody among the various nations to whom they have preached the Gospel. It is the object of this article to set forth this as fully and accurately as the limits of our space will allow. Although Protestant Christians of several denominations in Great Britain and America have missions in various parts of Europe, we shall not include any of these in our notice, with the single exception of the missions in European Turkey. We propose to speak of Missionary Hymnody—

I. In various parts of America; North, Central, and South;

II. In the Islands of the Pacific, in New Guinea and Borneo;

III. In Asia, from Japan westward to Turkey;

IV. In Africa, East, South and West.

The following abbreviations will be used:—

M. M. = Moravian Missions.

C. M. S. = Church Missionary Society.

S. P. G. = Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts.

B. M. S. = Baptist Missionary Society.

W. M. S. = Wesleyan Missionary Society.

L. M. S. = London Missionary Society.

K. S. M. = Church of Scotland Foreign Missions.

F. C. S. = Free Church of Scotland Foreign Missions.

A. B. M. = American Baptist Missionary Union.

A. B. C. = American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions.

A. M. E. = Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church of America.

A. P. M. = Board of Foreign Missions of the American Presbyterian Church.

The names of other Missionary Societies, less frequently mentioned, will be given in full.

I. America.

1. North America.

This extends over a vast extent of country from Greenland to Mexico. The M. M. on the western coast of Greenland commenced in 1721. In 1738 Kajarnak, the first convert, was won by "the story of the Cross;" now the whole of the country is Christianized. Since 1772 the Greenlanders have had their own printed hymn-book. An enlarged ed., pub. in 1819, was received by them with great joy, and recent accounts show that they retain their fondness for hymns. Not only do they sing well in their churches and homes, but the long coasting voyages in the "umiaks," or women's boats, are enlivened by the sweet voices of the female rowers uniting in sacred song.

2. Labrador.—Crossing Davis Strait to the bleak coast of Labrador we find the self-denying agents of the same society [M. M.] at work. In 1770 Jans Haven, from Greenland, sang to the Eskimoes of Labrador, a hymn in Greenlandic, a language which they understood, and in the midst of a barbaric dance they were charmed by it into silence. These Eskimoes now themselves sing Christian hymns at their morning and evening prayers, even when away from their homes on their hunting, fishing, or sealing expeditions. For a long time they have had a neat 12mo hymnal, the last revision being by the Rev. Theodore Bourquin, who translated most of the modern hymns. The book contains about 900 hymns, and was printed in 1879, at Stolpen, in Germany. The last eight pages contain the notes of 10 melodies with the words below. The following are the first lines of a few of the hymns:—

"Passeljaksauingitotit .. = "O Lamb of God, unspotted."
 "Karallit kakkanginit .. = "From Greenland's icy mountains."
 "Atté, tupaleritsee okpert .. = "Christians awake."
 "Ilakka, makauauka .. = "Hold the fort."

The number of syllables and accents is the same as in the English hymns, so that they may be sung to the same tunes, but the lines do not rhyme.

3. Cree Indian.—Crossing the northern part of North America, and passing westward through British territory, more than 3000 miles, we traverse a region at present sparsely inhabited by Indians and European settlers. Here, however, are many stations of the C. M. S., S. P. G., and M. S., the last named being now sustained by the Wesleyans of Canada. We can here speak of only one specimen of the hymnal work of this region. Bishop Horden, of the diocese of Moosonee, has recently completed an enlarged hymn-book in the language of the Cree Indians, containing 150 hymns, all, except three or four, being his own translations.

4. British Columbia.—We pass to British Columbia, on the North Pacific coast. Here at Metlakahla, and other places in the north of that territory, are stations of the C. M. S. among the Taimahean Indians, and other tribes. For the use of the Taimaheans a collection of 19 hymns has been made by Bishop W. Ridley, translated by himself, Mrs. Ridley, and Mrs. Morrison, and printed at Metlakahla. Such hymns as "How sweet the name of Jesus sounds"; "Just as I am"; "Jesu, Lover of my soul," &c. are included. In the report of the C. M. S. for 1887, we read how on one occasion the last hours of a dying Indian were soothed by the singing of the last named hymn.

In the Niska dialect, akin to the Taimahean, a collection of hymns has been prepared by the Rev. W. H. Collison, to which Mr. J. B. McCullagh, the present missionary on the upper Naas, has recently made additions, including a metrical paraphrase of Ps. xliii., which is a great favourite with the people.

5. Queen Charlotte's Islands.—Among the Haidas of Queen Charlotte's Islands, just off the coast of B. Columbia, another mission of the C. M. S. has been established by the Rev. W. H. Collison. In their language, which differs greatly from the Taimahean, Mr. Collison has composed some hymns, and translated others, which, although not yet pub. in book form, are known and sung far and wide. The present missionary, Rev. C. Harrison, is adding to the number of these hymns.

6. Vancouver's Island.—The Rev. A. J. Hall, of the C. M. S., who is labouring among the Kwa Galth tribe, in the north of Vancouver's Island, has prepared a number of hymns in the language of that people, and has taught them to sing them.

7. Various in the U.S.A.—Passing southward through the territories of the United States, where the Red Men still survive, we find them chiefly to the west of the Mississippi, occupying "Reservations." A recent Government return gives their number as 277,656, of whom only about 30,000 know English enough for ordinary intercourse. Ten American Missionary Societies are at work among them, and the following Hymnals have been prepared for their use by agents of the A. B. C.:—Cherokee, 52 pp.; Creek, 35 pp.; Seneca (two books); Ojibwa, 40 pp.; Choctaw, 84 pp.; Dakota or Sioux Indians, 97 pp., by Dr. S. R. Riggs, and another, by the Rev. J. P. Williamson, 184 pp.

8. Mexico.—From the United States territories we naturally pass to Mexico, where the American Baptists of the Southern Convention, the A. B. C. and A. M. E. have vigorous Protestant missions, conducted for the most part in the Spanish language. But no replies have been received to our inquiries as to their Hymnody.

ii. Central America.

In connection with the M. M. in Central America various hymns have been rendered into the language of the Mosquito Indians. But these have not been printed, as the English hymn-book is mainly used in that mission-field.

In like manner in British Honduras, in Jamaica, the Bahamas, the Bermudas, and other places in the West Indies, where hundreds of congregations of Negroes and Creoles have been gathered into the Church of Christ, the hymn-books used are chiefly those of their respective Denominations in Great Britain.

iii. South America.

1. British Guiana.—Here are missions of the S. P. G. and L. M. S. The population consists of a great variety of nationalities: the Aborigines, British settlers, and Coolies from China and different parts of India. The Missionaries teach the Aborigines to sing in English. For the Chinese they obtain hymn-books from Hong Kong; for the Indian coolies books from India in Tamil, Bengali, Hindi, and Urdu. [See on India, p. 746.]

2. Dutch Guiana, or Surinam has stations of the M. M. Being a Dutch possession the hymnal used for the services at Paramaribo is in that language, prepared in connection with the M. M. in South Africa. But a curious Creole dialect, called Negro-English, is the mother tongue of the negroes in many parts of Surinam; and a hymn-book in this dialect was issued from the mission press in 1820. A new ed. appeared in 1841. Yet another ed., revised and enlarged, has been recently pub. It contains 600 hymns, is attractively bound, and has met with a large sale.

3. Various.—More than a century ago the borderland of British and Dutch Guiana was the scene of a Moravian mission to the Arawack Indians, and there is still extant in us a collection of hymns in that language. With regard to the hymnody of the far greater part of South America, viz. Venezuela, Columbia, Peru, Brazil, Bolivia, the Argentine Republic, and Uruguay, we are able to give but little information. The English South American Missionary Society uses the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns for most of its English services, and the hymn-book of the B. & F. Sailors' Society in services for seamen. The A. M. E. has missions in Uruguay, the Argentine Republic, and at several places on the Western Coast. The Southern Baptist Convention of the U. States has missions in Brazil; and the A. P. M. in Columbia, Brazil, and Chili, but no answer to letters of enquiry has been received except from Chili. From Valparaiso the Rev. D. Turnbull, D.D., writes to say that two or three hymn-books have been pub. there, the hymns being in Spanish, mostly translations, probably made in Spain, and are not very satisfactory. Hymns are sung at Ooshooia, in Tierra-del-Fuego, and we believe that some of these, probably composed by Capt. Allen Gardiner, are in the language of the Yahgan Indians, but have not been able to ascertain particulars.

II. Islands of the Pacific, &c.

Modern geographers have arranged the islands of the great Pacific Ocean under three divisions, Micronesia, Polynesia and Melanesia. (i.) Micronesia, so called from the smallness of most of its islands, comprises all those lying north of the equator, from the Hawaiian group in the east to Malaysia in the west. (ii.) Polynesia, a name once used in a wider sense, is now restricted to the islands situated to the south of the equator, and between 180° of longitude and S. America. It includes the Marquesan, Tahitian, Samoan, and other groups. (iii.) Melanesia, so called from the dark colour of its inhabitants, includes the islands south of the equator, from long. 180° westward to New Guinea, such as the Fiji group, the New Hebrides, and others. Micronesia and Polynesia are inhabited by the Malay-Polynesian race, probably of Asiatic origin. The people are, for the most part, tall and well-formed, their skin of a light yellow colour, their hair a smooth glossy black, and their language soft and mellifluous. The Melanesians, on the other hand, belong to the Papuan race, and are probably of African origin. Their skin is dark, their hair crisp, and features plain. Their language is quite distinct from the Malay-Polynesian, and is endlessly diversified. Not only on every group of islands but on every island, a different dialect is spoken, and so widely different are they as to be almost, sometimes altogether, unintelligible to the inhabitants of an adjoining island. It may be conceived how much toil in the learning of languages and the preparation of distinct books, such as hymnals, this fact imposes on missionaries.

i. Micronesia.

1. Hawaiian Islands.—In our notice of hymnody in the Pacific we begin with the Hawaiian Islands, at the eastern extremity of Micronesia. These islands, mountainous and volcanic, and yet so lovely in scenery as to be likened to a terrestrial paradise, were once notorious for the barbarism and cruelty of their inhabitants. But now, chiefly through the labours of the missionaries of the A. B. C. they are Christianized and civilized. As early as 1823 a small hymn-book of 60 pp. was prepared by the Revs. H. Bingham and W. Ellis; in 1834 appeared a Hymn and Tune Book of 360 pp. edited by the Rev. H. Bingham, and a few years later a Child's hymn-book (72 pp.) by the same editor. In 1842 another Children's book with tunes was pub., and in 1855 appeared the Hawaiian Lyre. In 1867 the Rev. L. Lyons edited a hymnal for general use, containing 400 hymns, translated by himself. H. Bingham, W. Ellis, A. O. Forbes, R. Armstrong, and A. Bishop. This has been enlarged, and the last ed. (1885) contains 612 hymns. Mr. Lyons has also translated and pub. the Sacred Songs and Solos of Saukey, and other collections of popular Christian songs with music.

In connection with the Anglican mission in these islands, commenced in 1861, services are conducted in the Hawaiian language and hymns are sung, but we have failed to obtain information as to details.

2. Marshall Islands.—Sailing west by south from Hawaii, for about 1800 miles, we come to the Marshall Islands, in two groups, comprising about 30 coral islets, with a population of 12,000. For their use the Rev. E. T. Doane, of the A. B. C., prepared, in 1860, a Primer and Hymn-book of 44 pp. In 1863 appeared Hymns, by Mr. Doane (24 pp.), and in 1866 a similar book edited by the Rev. B. G. Snow, of the same Society.

3. Caroline Islands.—Still more to the west are the Caroline Islands, claimed by the Spaniards, the chief of which are Ponape, or Ascension Island, 60 miles in circumference, and Kusaie, or Strong's Island, about 30 miles in circuit. In 1858 a hymn-book of 19 pp. was prepared in the Ponape dialect by Dr. L. H. Gulick, and enlarged in 1864-5 by the Rev. A. A. Sturges. Another collection of 32 pp. was prepared in 1865, by the Rev. B. G. Snow, in the Kusaie dialect. All this was in connection with the missionary work of the A. B. C.

4. The Gilbert Islands.—Passing from the Caroline Islands in a south-easterly direction we come upon the Gilbert Islands, right on the equator, forming 16 groups of a fair size, with many islets, and a population of 30,000. Here the A. B. C. has a mission. In 1860 the Rev. H. Bingham, jun., and his wife, pub. a hymn-book of 12 pp. Three years later it was enlarged to 27 pp., and in 1874 and 1877 additional hymns were printed. Before leaving Micronesia we may quote the invocation of the Lord's Prayer in some of its different languages. This will show that, though allied in grammatical structure, they are yet so diverse as to require a distinct hymn-literature for each one.

"Our Father, which art in heaven."
Hawaiian. "E ko makou Makua Iloko o ka lani."
Marshall Islands. "Jememulij i lun."
Gilbert Islands. "Tamara are i karawa."
Kusaieas. "Papa tumos su in konoa."

ii. Polynesia.

We are not able to give information concerning the hymnody of more than two groups of islands in this part of the Pacific. In the Society Islands, including Tahiti, the Hervey Islands, the Tonga Islands, and others, agents of the L. M. S. and W. M. S. have long laboured, and the people have possessed hymn-books, but we are without details. The Marquesas Islands, six in number, are about 2000 miles east by south from the Hawaiian group, and the language is similar but not identical. In 1870 the Rev. James Bicknell, son of an English Missionary to the Society Islands, prepared in Marquesan an hymn-book of 30 pp., since reprinted. In the important Samoan group, a hymnal is used, begun in 1840, enlarged in successive editions, and now containing 372 hymns and 39 chants. Most of the hymns are translations of well-known English hymns, such as "Jesu, Lover of my soul," and "When I survey the wondrous cross" ("Jesu, fana'paolo mai," and "A Scripture paraphrased"; or passages of Holy chants are taken from the words of the translators were missionaries of the L. M. S., Messrs. Buzacott, Heath, Hardie, Murray, Pratt, Nisbet, G. Turner, L.L.D., Parell and Whitmee—Mrs. Turner and Mrs. Nisbett, and Peni, a Samoan pastor.

iii. Melanesia.

(1) The Fijian group comprises 80 inhabited islands, and has been Christianized mainly through the labours of the W. M. S. From the commencement of the Christian worship the Lord's Prayer, the Te Deum, the early missionaries, &c., as translated by Jubilate, the Te Deum, have been sung to by the early missionaries, are monotonous and native chants; but these first used were mainly melancholy. The hymns of Revs. J. Hunt, R. H. Lyth, and J. Walsford. A few of these are still in use and throb with life, "expressing" and says the Rev. J. Nettleton, "in melodious and Italian-like Fijian all the cadences of Christian faith and hope and love." There have been several editions of the Fijian hymn-book, the one now in use containing 178 hymns, chiefly composed or translated by the Revs. J. Nettleton, — Lorrimer, — Fison, M.A., and A. J. Webb. The best hymns are original; the translated ones are stiff English metres; the translated ones are rhyme. The people delight in singing, and those who have been taught new tunes go round and teach them to others in the villages.

(2) The New Hebrides.—About 400 miles west of Fiji and 1000 miles nearly due north of New Zealand, is the group of the New Hebrides, so named by Capt. Cook, because he believed them to be the most westward islands of the Pacific. There are about 30 in the group; nearly 20 are inhabited and some are of considerable size. Almost every inhabited island has its own dialect, often so different from the rest as to be practically a distinct language. But all these dialects belong to the Papuan stock. The L. M. S. was the first to begin missionary labour in the New Hebrides, but many years ago the work was amicably transferred to the Reformed Presbyterian Church of Scotland, which in 1876 united with the Free Church of Scotland. The Rev. John Inglis, D.D., who was a missionary in Aneityum, the most southerly island of the group, from 1852 until recently, has furnished us with the following particulars as to the hymnody:—

(a) "The hymnal used in Aneityum contains 51 hymns—'Nohralitai Itap'—partly translations or imitations of English hymns, and partly original. They were translated or composed chiefly by the Rev. Drs. Geddie and Inglis, a few by the Revs. J. Copeland and T. Powell. Also, since the printing of the hymn-book in 1860, some additional hymns have been prepared by the Revs. J. Annand and I. Laurie.

(b) "On the island of Tanna two languages are spoken, and there are two missionaries, the Revs. Messrs. Watt and Gray. Mr. Watt has from 20 to 30 hymns, chiefly prepared, and all printed by himself. Mr. Gray has a few, prepared by himself, and printed by Mr. Watt.

(c) "On Krokhanga, notorious for the murder of John Williams and of the missionary brothers G. N. and J. D. Gordon, they now sing about 30 hymns, prepared by Messrs. J. D. Gordon and Robertson.

(d) "Similarly, small collections of hymns have been prepared for the use of the natives of Fatuna, Kfate, Aniwa, Nguna, Tongas, Kyi and Ambrim, the composers or translators being the missionaries respectively located on those islands. In the northern islands of the group a commencement of missionary labour has only just been made."

All the hymns in the above-named collections are composed to English metres and sung to English tunes, but the lines do not rhyme. The native poetry is a kind of elevated prose, cut up into divisions like verses, followed by choruses which are chiefly single syllables with no meaning, such as lil la, lil la. And the native music is a kind of chanting, with "a loud noise." Dr. Inglis is of opinion that the singing of Christian hymns would be more popular if they were composed more after the native style of song.

(3) Banks Islands, Santa Cruz Islands, Solomon Islands, Norfolk Island. All these islands, except Norfolk Island, are situated to the north and north-west of the New Hebrides, and were brought into notice as a scene of missionary labour through the self-denying devotion of the lamented Bishop Patteson. His plan was to make Norfolk Island, to the south, a base of evangelistic operations, and to visit the other islands periodically, the language of Mota, one of the Banks Islands, being used as a lingua franca. In his letters (see Life of Bp. J. C. Patteson, by C. M. Yonge) are very interesting references to Psalms and Hymns translated or composed by him, and sung in various religious services. Thus, in 1867, the bishop writes from Norfolk Island, "we sing the Venite, Magnificat, Nunc dimittis, &c., in parts, to single and double chants." Again, "and now they are practising hymns in Mota for our 11 a.m. service." And the following year he writes, "Every week we read in chapel about 40 psalms and sing 12 hymns. These are pretty well known by heart." A number of hymns seem to have been in use for years, before being collected into a book. The Rev. Dr. Codrington, who was for some time Bishop Patteson's colleague in the Anglican Melanesian Mission, has favoured us with the following account of the Mota hymn-book:—

"This book, as lately reprinted, contains 67 hymns, and there are three more since in use that I know of. Of these, 25 are by Bishop Patteson. 21 are original compositions, most of them excellent. The rest are adaptations rather than translations. 20 are by myself, of which 11 are original; 12 are by the Rev. C. Bice; 9 by the Rev. J. Palmer, and 2 by Bishop Selwyn. The hymns by the three last named are translations or adaptations. Among the hymns translated are, 'Thou whose Almighty word,' 'Eternal Father, strong to save,' 'The Church's one foundation,' 'Gracious Spirit, Holy Ghost,' 'How beautiful are the feet,' &c., &c. The most interesting hymns in the book are three by native composers, particularly one by a teacher named Clement Marau, a Banks Islander."

Several hymns were composed by the Rev. C. H. Brooke in the language of Florida, one of the Solomon Islands; others, by Bishop Selwyn and the Rev. C. Bice, in the languages spoken in Ysabel (Solomon Islands), Aurora Island, Pentecost Island, and Leper's Island, in the New Hebrides.

(4) Loyalty Islands.—Between the New Hebrides and the French possession of New Caledonia is a small group, called the Loyalty Islands, the chief of which are Lifu, Mare and Uvea. In these islands the L. M. S. has for many years had a mission. In 1864 what is known as the Lifu Hymn Book was prepared and printed at Mare by the Rev. S. McFarlane, LL.D. It contains 231 hymns. Most are translations of the best English hymns, but many are original. The metres and tunes are English, and the natives are said to sing very well.

(5) New Guinea.—A few years ago the L. M. S. began a mission in the eastern part of New Guinea, and the labours of the Rev. Dr. McFarlane were transferred thither from the Loyalty Islands. Already three small hymn-books have been prepared, each containing 36 hymns, in 3 distinct dialects. These are bound up in one volume with the Gospel of St. Mark and a small catechism. Though belonging to the same Papuan or Melanesian group of languages, these dialects are distinct from the Lifuan both in words and in grammatical structure.

iv. Borneo and Singapore.

(1) Borneo, one of the largest islands in the world, is inhabited for the most part by a people called Dyaks, akin to the Malays, and divided into numerous petty tribes, with exceedingly barbarous usages. Near the coasts are many Malays proper, and in the north-western portion of the island probably a quarter of a million of Chinese. For 40 years past the S. P. G. has had missions in Borneo, which now form part of the diocese of Singapore, Labuan and Sarawak. The Ven. Archdeacon Mesney has supplied us with the following particulars in regard to Christian hymnody.

"Collections of hymns have been made in three languages—Malay, Land Dyak, and Sea Dyak. These have been gradually formed, the 1st now containing about 100 hymns; the 2nd, about 40, and the 3rd, between 30 and 40. The hymns prepared in the early days of the mission were in simple Malay, and the first hymn was a metrical version of the Creed. Most of the hymns in all three collections are translations or adaptations of English hymns, such as "We love the place, O God;" "Abide with me;" "Rock of ages;" "O come, all ye faithful;" "Glory be to Jesus," &c. The translators were Bishop Chambers; the present Bishop, G. F. Hose, D.D.; the Revs. W. H. Gomes, F. W. Abt, J. L. Zehnder, J. Perham, C. W. Fowler, and other missionaries. A few of the hymns are original, e.g. a harvest hymn in Sea Dyak, and others in Malay, by Bishop Chambers, and some in Sea Dyak by the Rev. J. Perham. English metres and tunes are used, and in most of the hymns the lines rhyme as in English. The books are printed at the mission press, at Kuching, Sarawak."

(2) Singapore has a very mixed population of Malays, Tamils, and Chinese, all of whom the S. P. G. seeks to benefit. The Malay hymn book there used was arranged by the Rev. W. H. Gomes (named above), and was printed at Singapore.

III. Asia.

i. Japan.

In this remarkable country the development of Christian hymnody has been as rapid as that of other ideas and usages so recently introduced from Europe and America. At the close of 1873, when the Rev. C. F. Warren, of the C. M. S. (to whom we are indebted for much of the information contained in this section), arrived in Japan, converts were very few, and though attempts had been made to produce metrical hymns for Christian worship, some were of opinion that the use of hymns could never become general. The character of Japanese poetry presented one great difficulty. "It has neither rhyme, assonance, nor quantity. It is not marked by a regular succession of accented syllables, as in English, and is only distinguished from prose by metre." As a rule Japanese metre consists of lines of 5 and 7 syllables. What is called Short Poetry—the most common—consists of 31 syllables, divided into lines as follows:—5, 7, 5, 7, 7. There is a variation from this with lines thus:—5, 7, 7, 5, 7, 7, and another, though this is not classical, of 17 syllables, 5, 7, 5. The Long Poetry consists of any number of lines of 5 and 7 syllables, regularly alternating and closing with a final line of 7 syllables, thus:—5, 7 . . . . 5, 7, 7. Another difficulty was to find suitable tunes to these peculiar metres. A few English tunes, like "Home, sweet home," could be easily adapted, and one or two Japanese tunes were available. These, however, were but few, and the effect was by no means pleasing. But, notwithstanding these initial difficulties, we have at this moment before us five Japanese Christian hymn-books, and have received information concerning yet others. Altogether there are now at least 350 hymns in the Japanese language. Most of these are translations or adaptations of English and American hymns. They are composed to English metres, though without rhyme, and are sung to English tunes. Among hymnals at present in use may be mentioned the following:—

(1) A hymn-book containing 76 hymns in Roman characters and 43 tunes in Sol-Fa notation was pub. at

Yokohama, in 1876, and prepared by the Rev. Nathan Brown, D.D. [A. B. M.]

(2) The same distinguished missionary, who had previously laboured in Assam and Burma, and written hymns in the language of each country [see Burma], put forth, in 1876, another hymn-book, in Japanese, containing 139 hymns. This was enlarged in successive editions, until, in 1886, it comprised 337 hymns. It is the recognized hymnal of the A. B. M. in Japan, and the last ed. was pub. shortly after Dr. Brown's death. The hymns are chiefly translations, although a good number of original compositions, mostly by native Christians, are included. Three translations and two original hymns are by Miss Clara A. Sands, of the A. B. M. From hymn-book No. 1 we may quote, as a specimen of Japanese, the first verse of "All hail the power of Jesus' name":—

Yeshu nawa toutomi
Tentci hirefue,
Cuno sokutoi twai
Tencuto tonaye."

(3) The hymn-book of the Episcopal Church Missions, prepared by the Rev. T. S. Tyng, of the Amer. Epis. (some original) by the Revs. P. K. Fyson and C. F. Warren, of the C. M. S., and H. J. Foss, M.A., of the Rev. H. Evington [C. M. S.] and several native scholars for important assistance.

(4) Hymn-book of the Presbyterians, called The United Church of Christ in Japan, pub. in Tokio, 1881. The translator was Mr. Hara, a Japanese, and it contains 103 hymns, the names of the tunes being attached in English.

(5) Hymn-book of the A. B. C. mission, prepared by the Rev. W. Curtis and a committee of natives; pub. at Osaka, 1882. This book contains 130 hymns with tunes, and 14 Psalms set to Chants, and is at present used by the Congregational Churches. But the Rev. Dwight W. Learned [A. B. C.] informs us that it is soon to be superseded by one now in course of preparation by a joint committee of missionaries and Japanese representing the A. B. C., the Presbyterian and the Reformed

(6) The hymn-book of the A. M. E., containing 244 hymns and a few chants edited about 3 years ago, by the Rev. J. C. Davison, of Nagasaki. It contains several tunes composed for it in the Japanese metre 5,7,5,7,7, and is said by Mr. Learned to be the "most elaborate book yet produced in Japan."

Congregational singing is an innovation in Japan. In the Buddhist services the priests alone chant. But thousands of Japanese Christians now sing hymns heartily and even enthusiastically; and harmoniums and the use of cabinet organs and in the girls' schools is common in the churches, play on them. The pupils learn to ii. China.

The first hymn-book in China was pub. by Dr. Morrison in 1818, and contained 80 hymns. The number published during the last 50 years has been very large, partly because increased acquaintance with the language has made translators of hymns dissatisfied with their earlier efforts, and partly because of the number of distinct spoken dialects in China. A peculiarity of the Chinese language is that the written or printed characters represent ideas rather than sounds, and these characters in the Wen Li, or "Classic style," are understood by the educated throughout the empire. But the ordinary colloquial varies according to the district. Thus, what is called the Mandarin Colloquial, used by the mandarins and in court circles at Peking, is the principal spoken language in North China, the region north of the great Yangtse Kiang. But besides this, are the Shanghai and Foochow colloquials, spoken by about 8 millions each, the colloquial of Ningpo, spoken by about 5 millions, the dialects of Canton, Szechow, Amoy, and other districts. Some of these dialects differ so much that interpreters are needed between them. Some missionaries hold that hymn-books should be in the Wen Li, or classical form of the language, and that the people should be educated to the use of it. But the majority have maintained that the present needs of the multitude should be considered, and for this reason have published hymn-books in the various colloquials.

In the present article we shall mention, as samples, books pub. in North, Middle, and South China.

(1) North China. (1) Through the kindness of the Rev. Jon. Lees, of the L. M. S., we have now before us a copy of the hymn-book pub. by himself and the Rev. J. Edkins, D.D., at Tientsin in 1872. It contains 266 hymns, and from the English index of first lines it appears that almost all are translations (often very free) of the best English hymns. Previous to this the Rev. W. C. Burns had pub. a small collection; and 43 of his translations, in many cases recast, are included in the 1872 book. In the preparation of this book Mr. Lees had as assistants two very able Chinese scholars, the Rev. Chung-tau-leu and his son, Mr. Chung-chiu-seng. It is used not only in the North China missions of the L. M. S., but also by Presbyterians and New Connexion Methodists.

(2) Another equally important work is the hymnal pub. at Peking in 1872 by the Revs. D. Blodgett, D.D. and Chauncey Goodrich. It is in the Mandarin Colloquial, and has been pronounced by one authority to be "the best hymn-book used in China." Nearly all the hymns are translations. Indeed the number of original Chinese Christian hymns in existence is very small.

(3) In the B. M. in North China, a book is used compiled from others, but including a few translations by the Rev. F. H. James [B. M. S.].

(4) The Rev. J. Lees has pub. a small book containing 47 hymns, chiefly translations by himself from I. Sankey's Sac. Songs & Solos, but including one original hymn by Mr. Chang-chiu-seng, and said to be a fine hymn.

(ii.) Mid-China. (1) A hymn-book in the Ningpo dialect was pub. about 1858, prepared by the Revs. Archdeacon Cobbold of the C. M. S.; Dr. Martin and H. V. Rankin, of the A. P. M.; J. Hudson Taylor, and others. This was revised and enlarged several times, until in 1875 it included 275 hymns, eleven being translations or compositions by the Ven. Archdeacon Moule [C. M. S.]. This hymn-book, printed at the Presbyterian Mission Press, Shanghai, has been used hitherto by Churchmen and Non-conformists in Ningpo, and in other parts of the province of Chehkiang.

(2) In 1871 Bishop Moule prepared a book in the Hangchow dialect for the use of the churches of the C. M. S. in that city and neighbourhood. It contains 82 hymns, and is printed in both Roman and Chinese characters.

(3) Archdeacon Moule [C. M. S.] has now (1887) in the press at Shanghai a collection which he hopes will be widely intelligible in China. It contains 221 hymns, some being translations by himself, others by his brother, Bishop Moule, and one hymn is original.

(4) The collection compiled by the Rev. Griffith John, of Hankow [L. M. S.], contains 200 hymns, all translations. Of these 8 or 10 are from the Welsh, made either by Mr. John or the Rev. Evan Bryant [L. M. S.]. In the later editions many expressions of the Mandarin Colloquial have been exchanged for others belonging to the literary style. This book is used by many missionaries of the China Inland Mission, and also at I Chang, a station of the K. S. M.

(5) At the W. M. S. at Hankow a book is used, compiled by the Rev. W. Scarborough, and pub. in 1875. It was preceded by a hymnal prepared by the Rev. Josiah Cox. The 180 hymns in the present book are chiefly translations, many of them from Sankey's Sac. Songs & Solos. "We wait," says Mr. Scarborough, "for a Christian poet in China." The dialect is the Mandarin Colloquial.

(iii.) South China. (1) The most flourishing missions in China up to the present have been those of the English Presbyterian Church at Amoy, Swatow, in Formosa and in the Hakka country. Two hymn-books have been prepared, one in the Amoy dialect, containing 70 hymns, the other, in that of Swatow, containing over 150. Some of these are translations of Psalms, others translations or adaptations of English hymns, and a few are original. The Rev. W. S. Swanson, of the E. Presb. Mission, informs us that the Rev. Wm. Young, of the L. M. S., was the first successful composer of hymns in the Amoy dialect, and 13 of his hymns are still in use. To him succeeded the Rev. W. C. Burns, already mentioned. The Revs. Carstairs Douglas, LL.D., J. V. N. Talmage, D.D., and Alex. Stronach have also helped in the work. In connection with the Presbyterian Missions in this part of China many interesting facts might be related illustrative of the value of hymnody as an evangelistic agency, but for these we have no room.

(2) The great city of Foochow is the central station of three missions—those of the C. M. S., A. B. C. & A. M. E. In 1860 the Rev. W. C. Burns, named above, was here temporarily, and prepared in the Foochow Colloquial a translation of hymns written by Mr. Young and himself, which had previously appeared in the Amoy dialect. He added others, making up a book of more than 30 hymns. These were deemed so excellent that they were adopted by all three missions, and superseded others previously used which were in the Wen-Li, or book language. In course of time more hymns were desired, and each of the missions, taking Mr. Burns's book as a foundation, pub. a Hymnal of its own. (a) The hymn-book of the C. M. S. contains 198 hymns, and was prepared by the Revs. J. R. Wolfe, B. W. Stewart, M.A., and L. I. Lloyd, Mr. Wolfe being the principal contributor. (b) The hymn-book of the A. B. C. contains 165 hymns. Through the kindness of the Rev. C. Hartwell, one of the principal contributors to this book, a copy is now before us printed at Foochow, on native paper. It contains several original hymns by native converts. (c) The hymn-book of the A. M. E. has 180 hymns, and was prepared by the Revs. R. S. MacLay, D.D., S. L. Baldwin, D.D., and F. Ohlinger. A large number of the hymns are common to all three books.

(3) We are indebted to the Rev. John Chalmers, LL.D., of Hongkong, one of the oldest and most learned missionaries now in China, for the following information concerning Hongkong and Canton. When he came to China in 1852 he found a book in use, pub. two years previously by Rev. Dr. Legge, entitled

(1) Hymns for the worship of the Lord. The number of hymns was 41, with 7 doxologies. No hymn was a translation, and everything was done in regard to language and metre to command the respect of the literary class, and in so far it was a success. In 1860 Mr. Chalmers pub. an ed. of this book with tunes in the usual English notation, and for nearly 30 years this was the only book in use in the London Mission at Canton and in Hongkong. In 1879 Dr. Chalmers pub. New Songs for the worship of the Lord, as a Supplement to the previous book. This contained 18 translations of popular English and American hymns; and being liked by the people, received, in 1884, considerable additions. The volume thus finally produced is the one now in use.

(2) Hymns for Singing Praise. W. M. S., Canton, 1863. "This," says Dr. Chalmers, "was one of the most successful early attempts to translate English hymns." The translator was the Rev. George Piercy. The number of hymns is 34. The translation is by no means literal, and the rhyming is somewhat adapted to Chinese ideas.

(3) Hymns for praising the Lord. A. B. M., Canton, 1875. It contains about 20 of the L. M. S. hymns, nearly all the 34 of the W. M. S. in both cases much altered, and many other translations of English and American hymns, making up 286.

(4) Hymns for praising the Lord. W. M. S., Canton, 1877. A book much like the preceding, and containing 230 hymns. It was compiled by the Rev. G. Piercy, before named.

(5) Hymn-book of the Basel Mission. Hongkong, 1884. "This book," says Dr. Chalmers, "is exceptionally good." The number of hymns is 284. Many are translations from German hymns, and those taken from the Baptist and Wesleyan books are usually improved in style. Beginning, about 1860, with a book of 55 hymns compiled by the Rev. R. Lechler, it has attained its present size and arrangement through the combined labours of Messrs. Piton, Genähr, Lechler, Bender and others.

(6) Hymn-book of the C. M. S., Hongkong. Altered from blocks in the Americo-Chinese College, Peking, 1886. This book has been introduced by Bishop Burdon. It contains 315 hymns and 10 doxologies.

It remains to add a few words in regard to the music sung to these hymns and the metres employed. Chinese native music is quite unsuited to sacred song. English, American and German tunes are therefore used and are commonly liked by the people.

In most of the books named above our metres are used and the lines rhyme as in English. But in the Canton book of the L. M. S. and one or two others, the rules of Chinese poetry are observed, some of which are as follows. "Sevens" is decidedly the "Common Metre," our c.m. and s.m. being regarded as irregular innovations. Next comes "Fives," and then "Eights," which is really "Fours," every four syllables making a clause. The same rhyme is kept up from the beginning to the end of a hymn, an arrangement made easy by the nature of the language. Let the following represent a hymn of eight lines, and the two kinds of marks, X and o, indicate the alternations of "tones" required in a finished poem. The proper places, for the rhyme syllable and changes of tone may be expressed thus:—

1.	x	x	o	o	x	x	rhyme-syllable
2.	o	o	x	x	o	o	rhyme
3.	o	o	x	x	o	o	x
4.	x	x	o	o	x	x	rhyme
5.	x	x	o	o	x	x	x
6.	o	o	x	x	o	o	rhyme
7.	o	o	x	x	o	o	x
8.	x	x	o	o	x	x	rhyme.

There should also be antithesis of meaning between the third and fourth, and between the fifth and sixth lines.

Referring to the difficulty of compliance with these strange and exacting rules, a missionary correspondent wittily observes that the descendants of the writer of the 119th Psalm would be the likeliest persons to succeed in the attempt to create a good Christian Chinese hymn.

iii. Siam.

The name Siam both stands for Siam proper (chiefly, Bangkok) and, in a wider sense, embraces certain dependent States of Shans and Laos, with a part of the Karen country. The population consists of about 6,000,000 in Siam proper, 3,000,000 Shans and Laos, and upwards of 1,500,000 Chinese. The religion of nearly the whole country is Buddhism, mingled with a kind of nature worship in the ruder tribes of the north. The Siamese language is monosyllabic, many words having a variety of different meanings, according to the tone with which they are pronounced. The A. B. M. has missions to the numerous Chinese of Bangkok, and to the Karens and Shans, for a notice of which see Burma. The A. B. C. commenced a mission to the Siamese in 1840, which since 1871 has been carried on by the American Presbyterians. It has stations at Bangkok and Petchaburi (about 85 miles to the south from Bangkok), and also among the Laos, 500 miles to the north. The Laos speak a language akin to Siamese.

The first hymn-book in Siamese was prepared by missionaries of the A. B. M. The 3rd ed. bears date 1859, and comprises, with a Supplement, 186 hymns. Another book, with a similar title, was pub. by the A. B. M. in 1880, containing 123 hymns, the compiler being the Rev. S. J. Smith, a Baptist missionary. A few years later a small collection was pub. for use in schools and prayer-meetings. These have all been superseded by the Siamese Hymnal, prepared by Dr. S. G. McFarland, and printed at Petchaburi in 1876. It contains 213 hymns, and has passed through several editions, the last in 1886. For this book the best of the old hymns in the last two Sacred Songs were selected, and many new ones translated or composed. A smaller and cheaper book is also about to be issued.

About 400 hymns now exist in Siamese, most of them being translations from the English by various missionaries. Of the original compositions some are by missionaries; 10 good ones are by a converted Buddhist priest named Chan; and quite a number by Kru Phoon, a native who, strange to say, is still a Buddhist, though having been in the employ of the mission as scribe and translator for 18 years, he has a good knowledge of both the doctrines and spirit of Christianity. Miss Mary L. Cobb, of the A. P. M. (to whom we are indebted for much of the preceding information), has sent us a list of the principal translated hymns, which includes most of those best known in England and America. Our metres and tunes are used, and the lines rhyme as with us. Native airs have not yet been utilized in Christian song. "Siamese music is very weird and monotonous, and is never used in the temple services, only at funerals and in processions, and in connection with weddings, and in boat-races and theatres."

Every native song is composed in lines of 11 syllables, but the Siamese learn western tunes readily, and seem to like them, especially tunes in 11's metre, and everything in a minor key.

iv. Burma.

Under the head of Burma we have to speak (1) of Burma proper, and (2) of certain tribes inhabiting the more mountainous districts, and known as Karens and Shans.

(1.) Burma Proper. In Burma the A. B. M., S. P. G. and W. M. S. have missions, but that of the last named has been commenced only recently. The A. B. Mission was begun in 1814, by the celebrated Rev. Dr. Judson (p. 600, i.), and in the early years of the mission there was no singing. Dr. Judson himself could not sing, and according to Burman ideas, singing in connection with worship was improper. In the native mind it was almost exclusively associated with theatrical and other similar performances. After a time, however, Dr. Judson composed the first Burman hymn—

"Shway pyee koun-gin,"
"Golden country of heaven," and his fellow missionary, Dr. Wade, became responsible for the music. But it was not until long after, on the arrival of missionaries named Cutter and Hancock, who were good singers, that "the service of song" became popular as a part of worship.

The Baptists in Burma have now a hymn-book containing 294 hymns, 125 being translations and 169 originals. Through the kindness of the Rev. H. S. Burrage, D.D., of Portland, Maine, we are enabled to give the following particulars, supplied by the Rev. Dr. Cushing, the missionary in Burma :—

Three of the hymns, and these among the best, are by Dr. Judson. They are almost the only ones in which a foreigner has endeavoured to embody Burman ideas of poetry, which are very different from ours. In Burman songs the lines are usually short, and 'rhyme runs riot,' it being quite common for every word in a line to rhyme with the corresponding word in the second verse of the couplet. This arrangement is comparatively easy, owing to the monosyllabic character of the language. Fifteen hymns were written by Mrs. Sarah B. Judson (p. 600, i.), the doctor's second wife (d. in 1846), and one by his third wife Emily C. Judson (d. in 1854). Eighty-nine hymns, chiefly trans. or adaptations from the English, are by the Rev. E. A. Stevens, D.D.; his son, the Rev. E. O. Stevens, b. in Burma in 1838, contributed 27. Mrs. C. Simons (d. in 1843) composed 22 hymns, said to be very excellent. The Rev. J. K. Haswell (d. 1877) contributed 19 hymns. Burman was a mother tongue to him, and his hymns have much of the sonorous, stately movement which characterizes the religious language of the people. 14 hymns were composed by the Rev. L. Ingalls (d. 1866); 13 by the Rev. J. M. Haswell, D.D. (d. 1858), and 10 by the Rev. Lyman Stilson (d. 1860). The Rev. N. Brown, D.D., who d. at Yokohama in 1868 (see Japan), was the writer of 9 hymns in the Burman hymn-book, one of which, a translation of 'There is a happy land,' has always been exceedingly popular. The Rev. J. M. Wade, D.D., colleague of Dr. Judson, was the author of 7 hymns. Others were written by Miss Kate F. Evans, the Revs. A. R. R. Crawley, T. Allen, and Cephas Bennett, Mr. B. Le Goola, Mrs. Crawley, Mrs. R. A. Bailey, Mrs. H. C. Stevens, and Mrs. A. W. Lonsdale. Several native Burmans have also composed hymns, some of which are written in lines of seven syllables, in accordance with the Burmese style. One of these Burmans, Moung Shway Bwin, was a man of some literary reputation, and assisted Rev. L. Stilson in preparing the 2nd edition of the hymn-book.

Besides the book just described, another has been pub. in connection with the A. B. M., containing more than 200 of I. Sankey's Sac. Songs and Hymns. A few of the translations are by missionaries already named, but most are by Ah Sow and Ah Sino, two brothers of Chinese extraction on their father's side, employed as teachers in a mission school at Moulmain.

In connection with the S. P. G. mission a hymn-book was pub. in 1879, edited by the Rev. J. Fairclough, but prepared chiefly by the Rev. James A. Colbeck. It contains, including the two Appendices, about 120 hymns. One appendix was prepared by the Rev. T. Rickard. A few hymns are taken from the book of the A. B. M., but most are translations by the Rev. Messrs. Colbeck and Rickard. English metres and tunes are used, and the lines rhyme as with us.

(ii.) Other parts of Burma. In the hill country of Burma dwell the

(i.) Karens, a semi-aboriginal people, of Mongolian origin, divided into three tribes, speaking distinct dialects of a monosyllabic language, Sgau, Bghai, and Pgho or Pwo. The missions of the A. B. M. have been remarkably successful among them, many thousands having embraced the Christian faith.

(1) For their use a hymn-book has been prepared in the Sgau Karen dialect containing 442 hymns, 216 of which are translations or adaptations of English hymns by Mrs. Calista Vinton (d. 1865), wife of the missionary, the Rev. Justus H. Vinton. This lady has been spoken of as the "Watts" of Karen hymnody. Her son, the Rev. J. B. Vinton, D.D., b. in Burma, contributed 60 hymns (chiefly translations) to the same book. 54 were written by the Rev. B. C. Thomas (d. 1868); 45 by the Rev. D. A. W. Smith, D.D., now President of the Rangoon Theological Seminary, and 9 by the Rev. E. B. Cross, D.D. The Rev. Francis Mason, D.D., translator of the Karen Bible, was the author of many hymns, only 9 of which have been preserved in the Sgau Karen hymn-book. He also prepared a volume of hymns in the Bghai Karen dialect, which was used until recently in the Bghai churches. Dr. Mason's hymns are written in the style of native Karen poetry. Each line consists of seven syllables, and the thought is expressed in couplets resembling the parallelism of Hebrew poetry. They can be fitly used only with the "plaintive, weird, strangely sweet" native Karen music, and hence at the revision of the hymn-book many of them were replaced by others which could be sung to Western tunes. The remaining hymns were contributed by other missionaries or their wives, or by native hymn-writers.

(2) Church Hymns. A book with this title was brought out in 1881 by the Rev. Wordsworth Jones, missionary of the S. P. G., among the Sgau Karens. It originally comprised 98 hymns. In 1885 an Appendix was added containing 56 hymns. These are chiefly translations, 79 being by the Rev. W. Jones, 9 by the Rev. T. W. Windley, and 2 by J. Hackney; others are from the book of the A. B. M. Thirteen are original, 4 being composed by the Rev. W. Jones, and others by native clergymen. A large number of the translations are from H. A. & M. English metres and tunes are used, and are appreciated by the natives.

(ii.) Pgho Karen. The Rev. D. L. Brynion, of the A. B. M., is the principal translator and composer of hymns in this dialect. He translated the Bible into Pgho or Pwo Karen, and is the author of most of its Christian literature.

(iii.) Shans. The Shans are a numerous people, occupying most of the region between Burma and China, the Siamese being one branch. They are Buddhists, and in their various branches speak the same language with little variation. Many are found in Burma, in the basin of the Irawadi and elsewhere; and for their use a hymn-book, containing 87 hymns, has been prepared by missionaries of the A. B. M. Seventy-nine of these are translations and four originals, by the Rev. J. N. Cushing, D.D. Three were composed by Shway Wa, an able man, who in the recent occupation of Upper Burma by the English, acted as chief Shan interpreter.

(iv.) Khyan, or Chin. There is also a people related to the Karens inhabiting the hill separating Upper Burma from the Shan Chinese territories, and speaking a language called Khyan. A small hymn-book has been prepared for them, but we are unable to supply particulars.

It may be added that in Burma are many Telugu, Tamil, and even Chinese immigrants whose religious needs are not overlooked by Christian missionaries. For their use hymn-books are brought from mission stations in India and China.

v. India.

In the collection of countries to which we give the general name of India more than 250,000,000 of people dwell, the various nations and tribes differing in colour, stature and other physical characteristics, having different customs and, what chiefly concerns us, speaking many different languages. In account of hymnody in India it will be convenient to treat the subject in sections according to the languages.

(1) The Northern and Central parts are inhabited chiefly by nations of the Aryan stock, the principal languages of this group being Bengali, Oriya, Hindi, Hindustani or Urdu, Marathi, Gujarati, Punjabi and Sanskrit, to which all in this group are related, is not a spoken language; it is the language of the learned and has no Christian hymns. [See Various, under Missions, F.]

(2) In the South of India are nations and tribes of what is called the Dravidian group. Their languages belong to the agglutinative phase of human speech, as opposed to the inflexional stage, represented by the later Aryan migrations into India. The principal members of this group are Tamil, Telugu, Malayalam, Canarese, and Tulu.

(3) Tribes of common origin, though now often widely separated, and whose languages belong to what philologists call the Kolarian group, occupy certain mountainous, wooded regions, usually remote from the coast. These are the Santals, Kohls, Juangs, and others. Descended probably from the most ancient inhabitants of India, they are often spoken of as Aborigines.

(4) Lastly, there are tribes occupying Assam, Sikkim, and the passes leading towards Tibet and China, whose languages form part of the Thibeto-Burman group. These are the Kacharis, Deori-Chutias, Bhutias, Lepchas, and others.

i. The Northern and Central Groups.

In these groups we have:—

1. Bengali, the vernacular of nearly 50 millions of people.

Baptists.—The first to compose Christian hymns in this language was the celebrated Baptist missionary, Dr. Carey. In Dr. Rippon's Annual Register is a hymn in Bengali, written by Dr. Carey about 1798, and translated into English by J. Fountain [Fountain, J., p. 304, l.]. The subject is "the Penitent's Prayer and Resolve," and the metre, the English 8.7.4, to be sung to the tune "Helmsey." Some time afterwards a hymn-book was prepared by the Serampore Missionaries, and in 1810 the missionary, J. Chamberlain, pub. a volume consisting chiefly of translations of English hymns.

The book at present in use at the Baptist mission stations appeared about fifty years ago, and was edited by the Rev. Geo. Pearce (d. 1887). It contains 475 hymns, chiefly in native metres. Among the authors named are W. Carey, J. Chamberlain, G. Pearce and A. Sutton. The names of 18 Bengalis also appear among the contributors, and Krishna Pal's well-known hymn is included.

Church of England.—(1) The hymn-book used in the Anglican missions (C. M. S. and S. P. G.) entitled 'Hymns Old and New,' was prepared by a committee of the two Societies and has been often revised and enlarged,—on the last occasion, in 1884. It contains 546 hymns, 254 being in English metres, and almost all translations. The remaining 292 are in Bengali metres, and are nearly all original. The chief and best translator was the late Rev. R. P. Greaves; others were Revs. J. Vaughan, A. Stern, C. Bonwetsch, J. J. Weitbrecht, J. J. Linke, C. D. Lippe, and Mr. J. K. Biswas, all of the C. M. S. A few hymns are taken from the Baptist collection. The original hymns in Bengali metres were nearly all written by native Christians. An Appendix to this book containing about 400 hymns is in preparation and will be pub. by the Bishop's College.

(2) The 'Sabbath School Hymn Book,' was prepared by the Teachers of the Trinity Church Sunday School, and contains 254 hymns. 2nd edit. in 1885.

(3) The C. M. S. 'Mission Hymn Book' appeared in 1887. It contains 55 hymns.

Special mention ought to be made of the part taken in this great work of the Church by the Rev. Jacob K. Biswas, tutor in the Divinity School of the C. M. S. He has composed and translated no fewer than 1000 hymns in English and Bengali metres. Many of these have appeared in the books already named and in the Hymnals described below.

Wesleyan.—In connection with the W. M. S. a book has been prepared entitled A Methodist Hymnal for Bengal (2nd ed., 1886), the compiler being the Rev. J. A. Macdonald. It contains 322 hymns, and is popular in all parts of India (see §§ Marathi, Tamil, &c.), usually sung in processions at festivals, to the accompaniment of a drum and cymbals. Many of the translations are by the editor. Others are by the missionaries of the B. M. S. and C. M. S., named above, with the addition of the C. M. S. Krauss, of the C. M. S., H. Harrison and C. the W. M. S., and N. C. Biswas of

The Calcutta Vernacular Education Society has pub. a hymn-book called Gītihar, containing 138 selected hymns. It is being revised, and promises to become very popular.

A. M. E.—The Rev. J. P. Meik, of the A. M. E., has brought out a similar small collection, consisting of original and translated hymns.

K. S. M.—In 1884 the missionaries of the K. S. M. adopted the Anglican Bengali hymn-book. Before that time they had used two small hymnals that they had used two Chakraborty. Prepared by Babu Bipro Charnan pub. a collection. This gentleman has recently mentioned above. Indeed, small collections of hymns by educated Christian natives are very common in Bengal. Such are the Gitamrita ("Immortal Songs"), by Amrita Lal Nath, said to be very good; the Khulnea Hymns, by Gogou Chunder Dutt; Gitankur ("Song Germs"), Gitmala ("Garland of Songs"), and Gītrotro ("Jewels of Songs"), by a Christian Evangelist, Modhu Sudan Sircar. The last-named collection contains many hymns very appropriate for Bazar preaching.

In connection with Bengali hymns and hymn-writing the following remarks by the Rev. G. H. Rouse, M.A., of Calcutta (B. M. S.) are worthy of notice:—

"Native Bengali hymnody is abundant, but meagre. New hymns are being constantly made, but the range is limited; very little about the Holy Ghost, or Christian experience, except of the mournful order. 'O my soul, how wicked thou art,' is a sentiment we are always meeting; but 'How happy they that know the Lord!' does not meet with much response. Joyous Christian experience is very deficient in the native church of Bengal, but things are improving."

Perhaps these statements may be partly explained by the fact that in this part of India the native idea of music is wholly melancholy.

2. Uriya. Travelling from Calcutta in a south-westerly direction for about 70 miles we leave Bengal proper and enter the province of Orissa, containing a population of 5,250,000. The language is called Ur yā and belongs to the Sanscrit group. At Puri in Orissa is the world-famous shrine of Juggernaut, visited by 300,000 pilgrims annually. For many years the General Baptists have had a mission in Orissa, their principal station being Cuttack. Since 1836 the Free Baptists of New England, whose doctrinal sentiments are similar to those of the General Baptists, have occupied Balasore and other stations in the northern part of the province.

The first Uriya hymn-book was pub. for the Baptists by Rev. Amos Sutton, D.D., in 1844. (See Sutton, A.) It contained 310 hymns, 179 of which bear the initials of the compiler. Gunga Dhar, the first Uriya convert, a Brahmin by birth and education, composed 66, and Rev. C. Lacey 34. But this hymn-book has long been disused. As the Christian community increased, hymn-writers and hymns increased rapidly, and from these latter selections were made from time to time, and printed in tract form. The hymn-book now in use amongst the Baptists consists of eight of these selections bound together in one volume. The total number of hymns is 302, from 23 contributors, of whom 13 are now living. Forty hymns from the old book are retained, including some of Dr. Sutton's and 23 of Gunga Dhar's. It is believed that several of these latter, from their superior quality, as regards both sentiment and poetry, will continue in use for a long time to come. Makunda Das, who has been called the "Dr. Watts of Orissa," composed 148 of the hymns in the present book. Shem Sahu is the author of 57. Other native contributors are Kartick Samal, Bamadeb, and Daniel Mahanty. In the first book a number of the hymns were in English metres. These have disappeared, and the present collection consists entirely of hymns in native metres adapted to the ballad tunes of the country. Makunda Das has also prepared, in conjunction with Shem Sahu and Rev. P. E. Heberlein, a selection of hymns for the young, mostly translations from the English. A number of these are in English metres, and are sung to English tunes in the schools.

3. Hindī, and Urdu. Ascending the stream of the Ganges in a north-westerly direction we enter, as we pass the city of Rajmahal, a vast and populous region in which two languages are spoken, Hindī and Urdu, called also Hindustani. This region includes the North-West Provinces, Oudh, and the northern part of the Central Provinces of India, with a total population of 80,000,000. Some prefer to speak of these two languages as but different forms of one language, though they are almost as diverse as English and German. Hindī, which is allied to the Sanscrit, may be regarded as the original vernacular; Urdu, literally, "Camp" language, came in with the Muhammadan conquerors of the country, and has Hindī for its basis, with a large admixture both of Persian, the court language of the Moguls, and of Arabic, the sacred language of Islam. Hindī uses the Sanscrit characters, upright, square and block-like; Urdu employs the Persian script characters, which are distinguished by flowing curves and are written from right to left. Urdu is most common in large cities, and is used by Muhammadans; Hindī is preferred by the villagers, and wherever Hindu influences prevail. The two languages, says Dr. Hooper, of the C. M. S., "act upon one another, and neither is spoken pure, except as a form of pedantry." The educated classes commonly understand both.

(a) The mingling of the two languages is seen in the first hymn-book we notice, the Sat Sangrah, or Gut Sangrah, issued in connection with the B. M. S., and used at their stations in Monghyr, Allahabad, Agra, Benares, Delhi, Patna and Dinapore. This book, which has reached a 5th edition, contains 267 hymns, of which 193 are in (a) Hindī, language and metre; 41 in (b) Urdu, language and metre; and 33 (c) Hindī language and English metre.

Most of the 1st class (a) were written by the Revs. J. Chamberlain (d. 1826), J. Parsons, of Monghyr (d. 1869), and Mr. J. Christian, an Indigo planter, a member of the Baptist Church at Monghyr (d. 1863). A few are by native converts. The whole of the 2nd class (b) are by Hindu composers. The 3rd (c), which are free versions of English and German hymns, are by various missionaries. Two eds. of this book with music have been pub. by Dr. Lazarus.

The hymns of Mr. John Christian, composed to Hindu airs and in Hindu metres, deserve special notice. Anglican, Baptist and Congregational missionaries all speak of them as being peculiarly excellent, and as likely to retain a high place in the affection of the Christian Churches of this part of India for a long time to come.

Before us is a collection of 100 hymns, called Satyd-Shatah, all by Mr. Christian, including, however, some in the hymn-book already described. This is not a book intended for use in the churches, but rather to be circulated as a tract. Indeed, tracts of hymns are much employed as a missionary agency, the people of India being extremely fond of anything in the form of poetry; and Mr. Christian's hymns may often be heard sung in the streets, as snatches of songs are with us.

(b) Another collection similar to the one just named has been sent us by Col. Millett, of Dharmsala, India (to whom we are indebted for much of the information contained in this section). It is entitled Diffusion of Praise, a Book of Bhajans, pub. by the North India Book and Tract Society.

And here it may be stated that the word Bhajan is the name usually given in this part of India to a hymn composed to a native Hindu tune, and it implies the tune as well as the words. Col. Millett says "there is no equivalent for this word in the English language. It may be termed a song in a savage state." But speaking generally, Bhajan is the Hindu name, and Ghazal the Muhammadan name, for a Christian hymn in native style.

(c) An Urdu hymnal was compiled and printed eight years ago by the Rev. R. F. Guyton, for the use of the Baptist Mission in Delhi. It is entitled Kharzand i Khurrami, and contains the 193 Hindī hymns of the Sat Sangrah (named above) transliterated; the 41 in Urdu, with about 70 additional, extracted or contributed.

(d) The A. P. M. pub. in 1872, Zabur aur Ga ("Psalms and Hymns"). It contains 485 hymns in English metres, nearly all in Urdu, the few exceptions being in Hindī; also, 31 Bhajans, chiefly Hindī, with a few Ghazals in Urdu. An appendix of 72 tunes is added.

The editor of this book was the Rev. J. F. Ullmann, who also translated, from the English or German, the far greater number of the hymns. Some are by the Revs. Messrs. Brodhead, Däuble, Broese and Janvier, and a few by Shujāt Ali, a native poet of some eminence, recently deceased. This book is printed in Roman characters, and is used in other missions besides the A. P. M.

(e) The Masikh Ga ki Kitāb ("Christian Hymn-book"), printed in 1876 at the Secundra Orphanage Press, near Agra, was prepared at the suggestion of the Rev. J. Erhardt by a committee of missionaries of the S. P. G. & C. M. S., and is arranged according to the order of the Christian Year. It contains 387 hymns in English metres and 13 Bhajans. The translations are chiefly by the Rev. Messrs. Banli, Ullmann, Däuble, and Erhardt. Bishop French and others contributed single hymns. Many are identical with the hymns in the book of A. P. M. It is printed in both Roman and Persian Urdu characters.

(f) Ga ki Kitāb ("Book of Hymns") is the Urdu Hymnal of the A. M. E., and is printed in both Roman and Urdu characters. It contains 210 hymns in English metres, 75 Ghazals and Bhajans, and 16 hymns for Sunday-schools. The list of translators and composers of hymns contains the names of Ullmann, Fieldbrave, Baume, Waugh, Däuble, Brodhead, Parker, Chamberlain, Manall, Gill, Janvier, Christian, Shujāt Ali and others.

(g) The preceding are the principal books; others less important include:—

Gitanjali, "Hymns and Songs for Children," by J. F. Ullmann; Int. aur Rore ("Bricks and Brickbats") Hymns for Children, with music, by the Rev. E. Broese; Sikandra ki Choti Gitanjali ("The Little Sikandra Hymnbook"), by the Rev. C. G. Däuble, a collection of 53 hymns and Anthems; Choti Ga ki Kitāb, "Sunday School aur Ibadat ne Liye," containing 152 hymns, pub. at Lucknow, in 1884, at the Church Mission Congregational Press; Shuti Prakash, a book of Hindī hymns by the Rev. W. F. Johnson, of the A. P. M.

It may be added that the American United Presbyterian Church, which does not use hymns, has brought out, in connection with the Siālkot Mission, metrical versions of many Psalms, by Licentiate T. D. Shah Bāz, and quite recently (1887), a collection of 100 Psalms in metre printed at the Secundra Orphanage Press, Agra.

(h) In the broad tableland of Chota Nagpore, about 200 miles from Calcutta, are very successful missions of the German Evangelical Lutherans and of the S. P. G. The inhabitants are chiefly aboriginal tribes belonging to two distinct races, the Mundāris or Kolhs, of the Kolāsiān group, and the Uraṇs, of the Dravidian group of South India. Of the former we shall speak again in the section devoted to the aborigines of India. Both are to some extent acquainted with Hindi, as well as with their own languages. Hence the following books have been prepared in Hindi.

(a) The Hymnal of the German R. L. Mission, reprinted and enlarged several times between 1850 and 1880, and now containing 123 hymns, chiefly translated from the German, by the Revs. E. Schatz, H. Batsch, and others.

(b) The Anglican Church Hymnal, including many hymns from the German book, with 22 from B. A. & M., translated by the Rev. J. C. Whitley, together with Miss Havergal's "Tell it out among the heathen," and Lord, speak to me," by the same author. The metres and tunes used are English and German, usually the same as in the originals.

(c) A book of Hymns for Children, by the missionaries of the German R. L. M., is now (1888) ready for publication.

(d) The Rev. H. D. Williamson, of the C. M. S. of Mundla, in the Central Provinces, has lately compiled a small hymn-book in Hindi, containing some hymns of his own composition, but we are without information as to particulars.

(e) The United Presbyterians of Scotland have important missions in Rajpootana, and in the Annual Report for 1887 are some interesting allusions to hymns and sacred song. For instance:—

At Ajmere the school children "commit hymns to memory and make vigorous, if not always successful, efforts to sing." At Oodeypore "the children can repeat and sing several of the hymns dear to the heart of childhood all the world over." And at Ulwar "every Tuesday evening a service of Christian hymns and bhajans praise is held in the church. Christian hymns and bhajans are sung to the accompaniment of the organ, and a brief address is given." The principal hymn-book used is one of which the 2nd (enlarged) edition appeared in 1883. It comprises about 300 hymns and bhajans, printed in Hindi characters, though many are in the Urdu language. It is chiefly a compilation of hymns from the hymnals named above, in paragraphs a, d, e and f, with additions, original and translated, by Munshi Hasan Ali, the Rev. J. Gray (editor) and others.

(f) Leaving this part of India and re- crossing a portion of the immense district already traversed, on the slope of the gigantic Himalayas, we arrive at the K. S. M. at Darjeeling, and the Scottish Universities Mission in British India. These districts are Hindi, Nepali, Bengali, Urdu, but Nepali is a dialect of Hindi, and Hindi is the lingua franca of the whole. Up to 1884 a hymn-book used by the Mission. The pore bound up of the Urdu hymn-book had been used consisting of the L. M. S. at Mirza with some Hindi hymns collected by the Rev. W. Macfarlane of the K. S. M. But late in that year the Rev. A. Turnbull, B.D. pub. a book entitled Prayer and Hymn Collection.

It contains 256 hymns. Twenty-two are originals or translations by Mr. Turnbull; one is by Rev. J. F. Campbell, of Mhow; the rest are taken from other Hindi or Urdu hymn-books; the collection previously used, referred to above, such as the Git Sangrah (B. M. S.) and the Gitputak (Allahabad, 1883), and the hymns are mainly translations of well-known English hymns or paraphrases of Scripture. English metres and tunes are used, and the lines are made to rhyme as in English. Mr. Turnbull, however, informs us that frequently hymns to native tunes are graphed for use. Many of these, as adapted to the tastes of the people, will be incorporated in the next edition of the Hymnal.

4. Panjabi.—In the Panjab, or region of the five rivers, eight missionary societies have been labouring with considerable success during the last forty years. The chief of these have been American and Scottish Presbyterian Societies and the C. M. S. Urdu is extensively spoken in the Panjab, and its use as the language of literature is extending, but Panjabi, a language closely akin to western Hindi, is still the vernacular. Dr. H. U. Weitbrecht, of the C. M. S., says it is "essentially a peasant's language and is in danger of relegation to the position of a mere patois." It is written mainly in two characters, Gurmukhi and Persian. Gurmukhi signifies that which has to do with the mouth of the Gurd, or religious teacher, and it is the sacred character of the Sikh religion. From Dr. Weitbrecht we learn that the following hymn-books have appeared in Panjabi:—

(1) Gitan di Pothi. A collection of Urdu and Hindi hymns and bhajans, compiled from various sources and printed in the Gurmukhi character. By the Rev. E. P. Newton, of the Ludhiana A. P. M., 64 pp. 1881.

(2) Masiki Git ki Kitab. The hymn-book of the Methodist Episcopal Church, pub. at Lucknow in Urdu-Gurmukhi character. 140 pp. 1884. Edited by the Rev. J. Newton, of the Lahore A. P. M.

(3) Masiki Git ki Kitab, Panjabi, in Urdu characters. 140 pp., 8vo. 1884. By Miss Warton of the C. E. Z. S.

5. Sindhi.—Sindhi is spoken in the valley which lies along the lower course of the river Indus or Sindhu. The population of Sindh is about 2,400,000, and the prevailing religion is Muhammadanism. "Sindhi," says Dr. Weitbrecht, "is mainly a rustic tongue, with little literature." It is generally written in the Arabic character. The C. M. S. has stations in Sindh, and its missionaries have been the authors of nearly all its Christian literature. A collection of 26 hymns and 10 Bhajans has been recently prepared by Rev. J. Redman, and through the kindness of Col. Millett is now before us. It is printed at the Ludhiana Mission Press, and bears date 1887. It includes translations of "Rock of Ages," "Just as I am," "Art thou weary," and other well-known hymns. The Rev. A. W. Cotton, of Sukkur, Sindh, sent some Bhajans to press in Dec., 1887.

6. Gujarati.—Gujarati, another of the languages of northern India allied to the Sanscrit, is the vernacular of the province of Gujarāt and Kāthiāwar, in the Bombay Presidency, and is spoken by nearly 10,000,000 of people. The boundaries of the district are, on the north, the Gulf of Cutch and a line drawn from it eastward for about 150 miles; on the south, a small river near the Portuguese territory of Damān; on the east, a line about 120 miles inland, nearly parallel to the sea coast; and on the west, the Arabian Sea from near Damān to Cutch. The L. M. S. was the first to labour here, but in 1846 and 1859 their missions at Surat and other stations were, by a friendly arrangement, transferred to the Irish Presbyterians, who have since then been the sole Christian workers in this district.

(1) The first hymn-book in Gujarati, so far as is now known, was prepared by the brothers William and Alexander Fyvie, of the L. M. S., and consisted of translations from the Hindi. The 2nd ed. (1839) contained 112 hymns in English metres. The Rev. W. Clarkson, of the same mission, also prepared a small collection with the title Dharma Gita, i.e., "Religious Songs," lithographed at Ahmedabad in 1851. This was reprinted two or three times.

(2) In 1856 a metrical version of the Psalms was pub. by the Rev. James Glasgow, D.D., of the Irish Presbyterian Mission, English rhyming metres being used throughout. But Gujarati, like other languages of the same stock, is unadapted to English metres. The accent must always be on the root; and the number of syllables in a line of poetry is determined, not merely by the number of vowels, but by the number of consonants and vowels, which together make up the line. Another version of the Psalms, therefore, in native metres, and fitted to be sung to native tunes, was prepared by a Gujarati Christian named Walji Bechan, and pub. at Surat in 1876.

(3) But the hymn-book now in general use is the Adhyatma, or "Poetic Offering," first pub. in 1862. The 7th ed. was pub. at Surat in 1877, and contains in all 287 psalms and hymns. About 210 of the hymns are original, the greater part being composed by the Rev. Joseph van Someren Taylor (d. in 1881); others are by the Revs. Dr. Glasgow and W. Clarkson, and several by native Christian poets. Forty are translations of Psalms of David, and others are versions of well-known English hymns. Both English and Gujarati metres and tunes are used.

7. Marathi.—Marathi (pronounced Marat-hi) is a language belonging to the Sanscrit group, and is spoken in the region comprised in a triangle having Nagpore for its apex and the west coast of India from Goa to above Bombay for its base. The population is about 17,000,000, among whom six Societies are at work. (1) A hymn-book called Sacred Songs is used in the missions of the A. B. C., K. S. M., F. C. S., and probably others, the history of which is as follows:—

The first book of hymns in Marathi was pub. by missionaries of the A. B. C. in 1819, and contained 16 small pages. The hymns were in native metres. Another book, called Psalms & Hymns, written in English metres, appeared in 1835.

These books, enlarged and improved from time to time, were used until 1845, when Rev. H. Ballantyne, a man of fine poetic taste and culture, prepared a new collection of translations of the best English hymns in English metres. It contained more than 100 hymns, and was called Hymns for Divine Worship. Being received with great favour, Mr. Ballantyne was prompted to enlarge it considerably. The 4th ed. was pub. in 1865 by the Bombay Tract Society, whose Committee say in the preface "336 of the choicest hymns in the English language are here rendered into flowing Marathi, with a success that leaves nothing to be desired." This hymn-book entirely superseded all previous ones. Mr. Ballantyne prepared, in addition, 64 hymns for children. Failing health, however, compelled him to leave India, and he d. at sea, Nov. 9, 1865.

In the meantime, in the years from 1861 to 1867, there was a gradual re-introduction of hymns in native metres. A true native Christian poet appeared, Mr. Krishnaraw Ramaji Sangale, a catechist of the A. B. C. A collection of his compositions, with the title Gayanamrit, was pub. in 1867, and soon became very popular.

When it became necessary therefore, in 1874, to pub. a 5th ed. of Mr. Ballantyne's Hymns for Divine Worship, it was resolved to combine the English and native metres in the same work. Other compositions by native poets, and other translations by Mrs. Bissell and Dr. Fairbank, were added; the name was changed to Sacred Songs, and it now, in its 7th ed., contains 607 hymns. (Bombay Book and Tract Society.)

(2) The Bulbul is a collection of 161 hymns for children, including those by Mr. Ballantyne, with additions by Mrs. Bissell, Mrs. Bruce, Dr. Fairbank, Krishnaraw, and others.

(3) The Ganunidhi, or "Song-Treasury," pub. at Bombay in 1886, is a collection of 215 hymns, with appropriate tunes, including more than 50 popular native airs, all in European old notation, edited by the Rev. C. Harding, of the A. B. C. Some of the hymns are new. The tunes, other than the native airs, are culled from other collections.

(4) The Rev. J. Taylor, of the S. P. G., pub. at Poona, in 1884, Hymns Ancient and Modern translated and compiled for use in the Church in Western India. Besides the hymns translated from the well-known English book, there are a few taken from the Sacred Songs noticed above, and from other sources. Translated hymns usually follow the English metre; the original hymns are for the most part in native metres.

Since it was in the Marathi-speaking country that Christian Kirtans were first performed, which have since become popular throughout India, we may here introduce a brief account of them.

The Kirtan is a musical performance in which the praises of some god are celebrated with singing and instrumental music. In the year 1862 it occurred to Mr. Krishnaraw and others, that a Christian Kirtan might be made a useful evangelistic agency. The first was performed in Ahmednagar and the neighbouring villages, and everywhere met with an enthusiastic reception. The leader stood on a platform, and behind him four or five trained Christian singers, who joined in the choruses. There were Hindu musical instruments, including a kind of guitar,—a pair of cymbals,—a saringi, played like a violoncello, and a small drum, beaten with the ends of the fingers. First, a brief prayer was offered; then, the leader announced the subject of the kirtan, and a chorus followed. The words of the chorus became the text for a brief exhortation, delivered in a musical tone, and leading the way to another chorus, the whole performance occupying about two hours.

The native Christian Marathi hymns, in which choruses are frequent, afford abundant matter for these Kirtans, as do lyrics among the Bengalis and Tamils, and Bhajans among the Hindus, and others.

ii. South Indian, or Dravidian Group.

1. Canarese.—Moving southward from the Marathi country we come to a people, 9,000,000 in number, speaking Canarese, a language of the Dravidian or South Indian group. These are found not only in Canara on the Western coast, but also through the Mysore, Coorg, and northward as far as Beder, in the Nizam's territory. Seven Societies have missions in this district, those in strongest force being the Basel Evangelical Society, the W. M. S., and the L. M. S.

(1) The hymn-book used by the W. M. S. and L. M. S. is entitled Canarese Hymns, original and selected, by the Rev. B. Rice (7th edit. revised and enlarged, Bangalore, 1881.) It contains 280 hymns, sixteen of which are for children. Among these latter are "There is a happy land," "There's a Friend for little children," &c. Seven are chants, such as the Ti Drum. Most are sung to tunes selected from H. A. & M., the Bristol and Wesleyan Tune Books, &c.

The Rev. B. Rice was a missionary of the L. M. S., who d. in 1887, after 50 years of service. Other authors and translators were Messrs. C. Campbell, J. Paul, Coles, W. Arthur, and Riddett. 62 hymns were taken from the book of the Basel mission described below. J. Paul is a native minister of the L. M. S.

(2) Bound up with this hymnal, in a volume before us, is a collection of Christian Lyrics (Bangalore, 2nd edit. 1879) by the Rev. Abijah Samuel, a native Wesleyan minister, and very superior man, who d. a few years ago. [For further particulars concerning Lyrics in the Dravidian languages, as distinguished from Hymns, see Malayalam and Tamil below.]

(3) The Basel missionaries, whose printing press is at Mangalore, pub. a Canarese hymn-book in 1845, which was revised and enlarged in 1855 and 1867. At the latter date it contained 168 hymns, composed or translated by Messrs. H. Mugling, G. Weigle, J. Layer, F. Metz and others. The 7th revised edition (1881) contains 168 new hymns, or 270 in all. The translations are chiefly from the best German hymns, and are made to be sung to German tunes. Among the translators of the later hymns were Messrs. Ziegler, Graeter and A. A. Männer. The Basel missionaries have also pub. a collection of 48 Lyrics, composed by a native poet, and a book of 130 hymns for children, nearly all translations from the German by Messrs. Kittel and Mack.

2. Tulu.—Tulu is the prevailing language of South Canara, which is in consequence frequently called the Tulu country. Like the Canarese, it belongs to the Dravidian group of Indian languages, but has no existing literature, except the books prepared by the missionaries of the Basel Society, and printed in Canarese characters at Mangalore. Through the illiteracy of the people, Christian instruction hitherto has been of necessity chiefly oral, and the singing of hymns has been largely used as an evangelistic agency.

(1) The 4th edition of the Tulu Hymn-book (Mangalore, 1886) contains 166 hymns, principally prepared by the Rev. A. Männer, some, however, being composed by the missionaries Ammann, Cammerer and Wörtele. Most are translations of the best German hymns, such as "Ein feste Burg ist unser Gott," so only being original. They are in German metres, and are sung to German tunes.

(2) The Rev. A. Männer has also prepared in Tulu a collection of 115 hymns for children, and a translation of 32 of Sankey's Songs and Solos.

3. Malayalam.—To the south of the Tulu country are the provinces of Cochin and Travancore, on the Malabar coast, where the principal language spoken is Malayalam, another of the Dravidian group. (1) In the northern part of this region the Basel missionaries have several stations. They have pub. a large collection of hymns, chiefly translations from the German by the Rev. Mr. Fritz, of Cannanore, and others. (2) The middle portion of the region is occupied by the C. M. S., their principal station being Cottayam. The hymn-book used here was prepared in 1842 by the Rev. H. Baker, one of the founders of the mission. It has 125 hymns, and in its first form consisted exclusively of English metres, and English hymns, composed in English tunes. In the later editions additions have been made from the book of the Basel missionaries mentioned above, and also from a similar book, prepared by the Rev. S. Mateer, of the L. M. S., Trevandrum, towards the southern extremity of the Malayalam-speaking district. Besides the hymn-book pub. by the Rev. S. Mateer, Christian Songs native tunes, called Githas or lyrics, sometimes at the end, and throughout, and chorus. As an a very popular Justus Joseph, paraphrase of Christ, in the The refrain to each chap. of the Apocalypse.

"Praise! Praise! Alleluia, having O Jesus, our Lord!"

The 5th edit., contains 250 of lyrics, on such subjects as "Adoration of Jesus," "Agony in Gethsemane," "Call to Conversion," &c. The principal authors are the Rev. Justus Joseph and his brother Philipp, all of whose lyrics are original, and M. J. Hochanya and M. Walsalam, most of whose compositions are translations, chiefly from the Tamil.

The tunes to the lyrics are somewhat wild and irregular, and cannot usually be expressed in English notation, because the intervals in Hindu music differ from ours, several being less than a semitone. [See Tamil.]

It may be added that in Cottayam and the neighbourhood are found the so-called Syrian Christians, for a notice of whom see Syrian Hymnody.

4. Tamil.—The most important of the Dravidian or non-Brahmanical languages of India is the Tamil or Tamul, spoken by more than 13,000,000 of people in south India, as well as by probably 5,000,000 in the northern part of Ceylon, in Burma, and in the Straits Settlements. In India proper the Tamil country extends from about 20 miles north of Madras to Cape Comorin in the south, and from the sea coast, on the east, to the range of mountains called the Ghats, on the west. The first Protestant missionaries to India, sent in 1706 by the king of Denmark to Tranquebar, began their labours among the Tamils. Their names were Ziegenbalg and Plutchau. At the present time 14 English, German, Danish and American Societies have missions in this part of India.

(1) The first hymn-book printed in Tamil was a collection of 48 hymns translated by Ziegenbalg, and pub. in 1713. This was repeatedly enlarged, by the missionaries Schultze, Pressler, and Walther, until it contained 300 hymns. Fabricius, an eminent Lutheran missionary, who came to India in 1742, still further enlarged it. The 13th ed., with the title Hymnologica Germano-Tamulica (called also Fabricius's Hymn-book, 7th ed.), was printed in 1861 at Tranquebar, at the Evangelical Lutheran Mission Press. It contains 375 hymns, nearly all translations from Luther, Gerhardt, Freylinghausen, Heermann, and other German writers. The next volume now before us contains also 171 German tunes to the hymns (Tranquebar, 1878). This hymn-book is used at the stations of the Danish and Leipzig Lutheran Missions in Tanjore and elsewhere.

(2) In 1831 the Madras Religious Tract Society pub. a Coll. of 42 hymns in English metres, edited by the Rev. C. T. Rhénus, a German employed by the C. M. S. This was from time to time enlarged. Its present representative, pub. by the same Society (Madras, 5th edit., 1886), is entitled Tamil Hymn-book, compiled by the Hymn-book revision committee. It contains 310 hymns and doxologies, mostly adaptations or free renderings of English and German originals, and was edited by the Rev. Elias J. Gloria, a Tamilian, connected with the W. M. S. This book is in general use throughout the Tamil country, except in the Lutheran and some Anglican missions.

(3) In 1867 appeared the Tamil Church Hymn-book, containing 233 hymns, arranged according to the order of the festivals of the Church of England. It was compiled by Bishops Caldwell, of the S. P. G.; and Sargent, of the C. M. S. In this collection several English hymns appear in Tamil for the first time, such as, "Holy, holy, holy, Lord God Almighty;" "The Church's one foundation;" "Jesus Christ is risen today."

(4) Several other Tamil hymn-books have been pub., as the Nagercoil Coll., and one edited, in 1865, by the Rev. F. Baylis, but have been superseded by one or other of those last mentioned.

(5) The Christian Vernacular Education Society has also pub. Hymns for Children in Tamil. The 2nd edit. (Madras, 1893) contains 166 hymns, selected from Fabricius, and the Nagercoil Collection, or translated by Messrs. Spalding, Webb, Percival, Kilmer, S. Niles and other of D. P. Niles (Tamilians), and others.

All compositions called Hymns in South India are in European metres, and made to be sung to European tunes; but perfectly distinct from these are Christian songs known as Lyrics, answering to the Bhajans of Northern and Central India. These compositions are different in style from anything heard in Europe. The rhyme is at the beginning of the verse instead of the end. The substance of the Lyric is frequently given in a verse (venba) at the beginning and is not sung. Then follows a chorus (pallavi) which is sung after each verse, and sometimes a sort of second chorus (anapallavi), which is sung only once. Lyrics are written in a great variety of metres, and some of the tunes sung to them are such as have been used for ages past in the Hindu temples. The principal writer of Tamil Lyrics was a native Christian poet, named Vethanayagam, who lived at the beginning of this century. Many of the Tamil Christians have since written, but few of their productions have equalled his. Some have been composed by Mr. R. C. Caldwell, son of the Bishop, and by the Rev. E. Webb, or the A. B. C., at Madura.

There are several collections of Tamil Lyrics, pub. in Madras and Tranquebar, but the one most widely used was compiled by the Rev. E. Webb, just named. It was pub. in 1853, and contained 226 pieces. Recent editions have been revised by the Rev. G. T. Washburn, of the A. B. C. mission at Madura. The 9th edit., pub. in 1886 by the Madras R. Tract Society, contains 300 Lyrics. Two Selections from this book have also been pub. for use in village congregations.

The use of Lyrics in public worship was at first opposed by many missionaries, principally because the associations with the tunes were objectionable; but they are so much preferred by the people and suit so well the genius of the language, that the opposition has almost ceased, and in many village congregations they are used exclusively.

[For information concerning Tamil hymnody in India we would express our great obligations to the Revs. J. L. Wyatt (S. P. G.); G. O. Newport (L. M. S.); and G. M. Rae (P. C. S.). Concerning Tamil in Ceylon see section on Ceylon.]

5. Telugu.—Telingana, or the Telugu country, begins a few miles to the north of Madras and extends northward as far as the neighbourhood of Ganjam, in Orissa. It contains about 17,000,000 of people, most of whom speak Telugu, a language of the Dravidian group. In this region are missions, some very flourishing, of the S. P. G.; C. M. S.; L. M. S.; A. B. M.; F. C. S.; the Canadian Baptists; the Lutherans of America; the Hermannsburg Lutheran Society of Hanover, and the Brethren.

(1) A hymn-book extensively used throughout the Telugu country is the one compiled by the Rev. W. Dawson of the L. M. S. of Vizagapatam. The latest ed. was pub. in 1883, at the C. K. S. press in Madras. It contains 254 hymns, all in Telugu metres except the last six. In the preparation of the first 152 hymns Mr. Dawson was assisted by Purushottam Chowdry, a native minister now connected with the General Baptist Mission in Orissa. The 15 hymns from 153 to 167 inclusive were composed by the Rev. P. Jagganadham of the L. M. S. of Vizagapatam; the rest by various authors. At a recent conference of missionaries and others the opinion was expressed that this hymn-book needs revision and enlargement.

(2) The Brethren (represented in England by G. Müller, of Bristol) whose mission stations are in the Delta district of the river Godavery, have pub. a collection of 110 hymns, known as the Delta Hymn-book, of which 100 are in native metres and are sung to native tunes; the rest are in English metres.

(3) The collection pub. by the A. B. M. was first issued in 1869, and contained 60 hymns, the editors being Mrs. Lyman Jewett and Mrs. J. E. Clough. Three eds. have since appeared, but this book is now superseded by one pub. in 1887, the work of a committee appointed at the jubilee of the A. B. Telugu Mission held in Nellore, February 1886. The new hymnal contains 143 pieces, many being taken from the book of Mrs. Jewett and Mrs. Clough, others from the Delta-Mission collection, others from the Dawson hymn-book, the remainder being new and original compositions. A special feature of this book is a glossary at the foot of each page. Thirty-eight of the choicest hymns are by Purushottam Chowdry (named above), others by members of the native churches. The preface is signed on behalf of the Committee, by Mrs. Anna H. Downie, wife of the Rev. D. Downie, D.D., of the A. B. M.

(4) The Amer. Evangelical Lutheran Mission uses a hymn-book containing Dawson's hymns and 57 new ones, composed mainly by the Rev. H. John, of the same mission.

(5) The Rev. John Hay, D.D., of the L. M. S. pub. many years ago a collection of 35 hymns in English metres, composed by himself and the Rev. J. S. Wardlaw, M.A. This is now out of print, but some of the hymns appear in No. 7.

(6) Also, many years ago Mr. Newell, of the Madras Civil Service, prepared a book of about 50 hymns. This was thoroughly revised, and the number of hymns increased to 128, by the Rev. J. E. Sharkey, an able and devoted missionary of the C. M. S., who died in 1867. Several editions of the enlarged book appeared, but it is now out of print.

(7) Dr. Chamberlain's Hymn-book. This contains 46 Telugu hymns in English metres, edited by the Rev. J. Chamberlain, D.D., of the American (Old Dutch) Reformed Church, and printed at the C. K. S. press, Madras, in 1884 (2nd edit. 1888).

(8) Besides the above, 10 new hymns in Telugu metres were composed and printed, in 1887, by the Rev. P. Jagganadham, of Vizagapatam. One of these is a translation of Miss Havergal's hymn, "Take my life and let it be." Others, by the Rev. Dr. Chamberlain, have been printed, with music, as leaflets.

In regard to India generally it is to be noted that with the progress of years the use of English metres and tunes has been increasingly superseded by that of metres and tunes belonging to the country, which have come down to our time unwritten, but have been long used in festivals, at weddings and the like.

6. Ceylon.—In Ceylon, the name of which is so familiar to us from its occurrence in Heber's missionary hymn, three languages are spoken, besides English, viz., Tamil, Singhalese, and a patois of Portuguese. The S. P. G., C. M. S., W. M. S., B. M. S., and A. B. C., all have missions. For the use of the Tamil-speaking congregations the hymn-books are available which are prepared in connection with the various missions of South India. Besides these, however, may be mentioned:—

(1) A translation pub. in 1881 of the entire Wesleyan Hymn-book, as it is now used in England, the Supplementary hymns being included. The volume is beautiful in type and general appearance. The principal translators were the Revs. J. Kilner, E. Hoole, J. M. Osborn, P. Percival, W. M. Walton, J. V. Benjamin, J. Benjamin, E. S. Adams, D. P. Niles (a Tamilian), D. Valupillai, E. Rigg, &c. The metres are the same as in English, only that n, r's is substituted for r's.

(2) For the use of the Eurasian population, speaking the patois mentioned above, a hymn-book in Portuguese was prepared some time ago, and quite recently another, in which most of the hymns are translations by Advocate J. H. Eaton, of Colombo.

(3) The Singhalese hymn-book used by the Wesleyans contains 259 hymns, the last ed. being pub. in 1886, under the editorship of the Rev. John Scott. Nearly all the hymns are original compositions by native ministers.

(4) Two small S. School hymn-books, containing respectively 74 and 55 hymns, have been brought out by the same editor, under the auspices of the Ceylon Religious Tract Society. They consist almost entirely of translations of popular English hymns for children.

(5) Mr. Corea was a Baptist minister and author of Temperance and other moral poetry popular among the Singhalese. More than 40 years ago he pub. a book of hymns, some being set to native airs, others to English tunes. This book has passed out of use, its place being supplied by the Gitika Nidhana, or "Treasury of Song," prepared by the Rev. C. Carter, of the B. M. S., assisted by the Rev. J. S. Perera, a Singhalese minister, and pub. in 1876. It contains 125 hymns original and translated, among the latter being such hymns as "Rock of Ages," "Let us with a glad voice sing."

(6) A Union hymn-book has just been pub. (1888) by the Ceylon R. T. S., embodying a large number of the hymns in Mr. Carter's book with considerable additions.

iii. The Aboriginal and other scattered races of India.

1. Santal or Santalistan, may be described as a strip of the great province of Bengal, about 100 miles in breadth, extending southwards from Bhagalpur on the Ganges for about 250 miles, until it touches Orissa. Its inhabitants dwell for the most part in villages among the hills. They belong to one of the aboriginal races of India, are free from the bondage of caste, and speak a language entirely different from Bengali or Hindi.

(1) The C. M. S. has a very successful mission among them, whose headquarters are at Talghari, in the north of the Santal country. For their use a Hymnal was pub. in 1876, the Rev. F. T. Cole being the editor. The 3rd ed. (1884), entitled Dhorom Seren, contains 174 hymns and two litanies, and was printed at Bhowanipore. Most are translations of familiar English hymns, the principal translators being the Revs. F. T. Cole, H. Davis, W. T. Morris, A. Stark, J. Blatch, and J. Brown, with several native helpers. The hymns are supposed to rhyme and most of them are sung to English tunes. Twenty-eight are set to native melodies.

(2) Another remarkably interesting mission in Santalia has at its head a Norwegian and a Dane, Messrs. Skrefvud and Boerresen. For the use of their converts a new hymn-book has just been issued, composed chiefly of hymns set to native tunes.

(3) The R. C. S., whose principal station is at Pachamba, for a time used the hymnal of the C. M. S., but have now one of their own, containing, however, many of the C. M. S. translations.

(4) Among the Rajma hills, in the north of the Santal country, are a people speaking a language called Malto, belonging to the Dravidian group. For their use the Rev. E. Droese, a German missionary connected with the C. M. S., prepared a small collection of 27 hymns. A new collection is now (1887), in the press prepared by Miss Stark, which includes some of Mr. Droese's hymns and a large number of new ones.

(5) In the Midnapore district of northern Orissa are many Santals, among whom the Free Baptists of America have a mission. They have pub. a hymn-book containing 77 hymns, mostly translations, but also a good number of originals, some composed by Santal Christians. The book is printed at the mission press at Midnapore.

(6) The Helhet Santal mission, in the district of Talia and Azola, under the direction of Mr. A. Haegert, has also a hymn-book, partly original, partly compilation.

2. Kohls or Kundaris.—In the § Hindi, reference was made to the Kohls or Mundaris, one of the aboriginal races of India, inhabiting part of the province of Chota Nagpore. As was then stated, the S. P. G. and the German Evangelical Lutheran missions among these people, and three books for their use have been prepared in Hindi. But mention has still been made of a hymn-book by the G. E. L. or Kohl language, prepared by the Mundari to be used by the missionaries, containing 100 hymns. These are chiefly original, and were composed for the most part by Dr. A. Nottrott and the native pastor Nathaniel Tuagu and Mansidah Tassu. About one-fourth are set to native tunes. This book is used by many congregations of the Anglican mission.

The Rev. J. C. Whitley states that at the central station of the S. P. G. singing is regularly taught in the schools, and English tunes are sung in the schools, and English outlying parts with great accuracy; but in much more of the district native tunes are learned by the people.

3. Khasi.—In the south-west of Assam is a district known as the Khasia and Jaintia Hills, inhabited as the Khasia and Jaintia language is of a primitive people, whose language is of the Mongolian stock and of the Indo-Chinese branch—monosyllabic and agglutinative—having no close affinity with any other. Among these people the Welsh Calvinistic Methodists have had a successful mission since 1840. By their missionaries the language has been reduced to writing and a Christian literature has been created.

(1) The first hymn-book, printed in 1844, contained 30 hymns, translated by the Rev. T. Jones, of Berriew. In 1860 and 1865 additions were made to it by the Revs. Wm. Lewis, Robert Parry, and T. Jones, of Glyn.

(2) The book now in use was edited, in 1877, by the Rev. Hugh Roberts, and printed at Newport, Monmouthshire. It contains 342 hymns; two original, by the Rev. H. Roberts; the rest, translations of the Psalms, or of well-known English, Welsh, and American hymns, 18 being from I. Sankey's Sac. Songs & Solos. Among the translators, in addition to the missionaries above named, were the Revs. John Roberts and T. Jerman Jones.

The hymns are composed in English and Welsh metres, to which the language lends itself easily, and they are sung to English and Welsh tunes. The natives have no musical system of their own.

4. Assam (proper), with a population in 1881 of 2,225,271, is about 500 miles in length, but narrow, and is divided into two portions by the Brahmapootra river. The religion of the people of the valley is Hinduism; wild and savage tribes inhabit the mountains north and south, among whom are found forms of spirit worship. The A. B. M. has stations among the Garos, Nagas, and other tribes, as well as among the Kohls from Central India, who are employed as labourers in the tea gardens. The S. P. G. has also had a station at Tezapore since 1850.

In the early days of the A. B. M. the Rev. Nathan Brown, D.D., a man of most versatile genius (see § Japan and Burma), prepared a hymn-book, which was afterwards revised and greatly enlarged by the Rev. Dr. W. Ward. It now contains 352 hymns, with a supplement of 32 hymns for S. S. use. 80 hymns by Dr. Brown are included, 33 original and 47 translated. Many were composed by Mrs. Ward and M. Branson. Nidhi Levi, the first Assamese Christian convert, wrote 110, chiefly original; Batiram Das, a former preacher, wrote 28. The rest were by other missionaries and native converts. The hymn-book is now old, and the Rev. P. H. Moore, "a musical missionary," is at the present time (1888) engaged on the work of revision.

iv. Tibet.

On the further side of the vast chain of the Himalayas is Tibet, the stronghold of northern Buddhism, at present closed to the gospel. But the Tibetan language is spoken by some thousands of people in British territory, as well as by tribes inhabiting the provinces adjoining Tibet proper. For their spiritual benefit the M. M. have a station at Kyelang, in the Himalayas, and there a hymnal was prepared and printed by the late Rev. Heinrich A. Jäselike, one of the greatest of modern Tibetan scholars. It contains 136 hymns translated from the German.

v. Persia.

Fifty years ago a mission was commenced by the A. B. C. among the Nestorian Christians near lake Orocosh in Eastern Persia, and in 1860 a hymn-book was printed, in the Modern Syriac language spoken by these people. This book has passed through several editions, but we have been unable to obtain further particulars. The language, however, differs from Ancient Syriac less than Italian from Latin. In 1869 a small collection of Rerical Hymns was printed at Orromiah. In 1871 the mission among the Nestorians was transferred to the A. P. M., which has also stations at Tabriz, Salmas, Teheran, and Hamadan: whilst the Rev. Dr. Bruce and his colleagues of the C. M. S. have been labouring at Julfa, Baghdad, and Bushire. Dr. Bruce informs us that in Baghdad (in Turkey, but on the borders of Persia) they use the Arabic hymn-book printed at the American press at Beyrout (see Syria). In Julfa (Ispahan) only Armenian hymns are used (see Turkey in Asia). There is a small Persian hymn-book which has been made by the American Missionaries in Teheran, but it is very imperfect. "A good Persian hymn-book," says Dr. Bruce, "is much to be desired. It is a most poetic language and it would be comparatively easy for one who had the gift to compose hymns in it." [See Various.]

vi. Constantinople, Asia Minor, and Armenia.

We class these places together, because the missionary work in all of them is done chiefly by one society, the A. B. C., the head-quarters of whose Turkey mission are at Constantinople. This work is a very noble one, especially in the departments of Christian literature and education, but, owing to the religious jealousy of the Muhammadan rulers, it is confined in these regions chiefly to the Armenians and Greeks.

In 1861 a hymn-book in the Turkish language, printed in Arabic characters, was pub. by the missionaries. But in the year 1884, after the sale of 1200 copies, the remainder of the impression was destroyed by order of the Government. This was in pursuance of its determination to prevent, as far as possible, the publication of Christian literature in a form accessible to Muslims. The Arabic characters made the book accessible to them. The following hymnals have also been pub. by the agents of the A. B. C.:

- (1) An Armenian H. Bk., with 432 hymns.
- (2) An Armeno-Turkish H. Bk., with 247 hymns.
- (3) A Greco-Turkish H. Bk., with 247 hymns.

In explanation of these names it should be stated that the languages used in this region are Turkish, Armenian, and Greek, the latter being confined mainly to the parts along the sea-coast. In the interior of Asia Minor, and in Cilicia and Syria as far as Aleppo, the Armenians have largely lost their own language and use the Turkish, written with the Armenian alphabet. It is Turkish written or printed thus, which is called Armeno-Turkish. In like manner the Greeks of the interior have lost their language, and use Turkish, written in Greek letters. This latter is called Greco-Turkish, or sometimes Karamanlian. The words in Turkish, Armeno-Turkish, and Greco-Turkish are the same; only the characters are different.

The hymn-books mentioned above are pub. both with and without tunes, and the last ed. of each appeared in 1886. They have been the growth of nearly 40 years, the earliest Armenian Hymnal having been issued in 1849. Most of the hymns are translations of well-known English and American hymns, the few originals having been usually prepared for special occasions.

The chief translators into Armenian have been the Revs. Elias Riggs, D.D., LL.D., H. J. Van Lennep, D.D., H. O. Dwight, D.D., J. F. Pettibone, D.D., C. C. Tracy, M. Shemavonian, and Mrs. M. Shemavonian. The translators into Turkish were the Revs. Dr. Pratt, E. M. Dold, and P. O. Powers, all now deceased, and the Revs. Dr. Dwight and Avedis Constantian.

The tunes used are English and American, especially those "wedded" to the hymns in their original form. The Armenian hymn-books mentioned above are used by the A. P. M. in Persia; also, to some extent by the Lutheran Armenians in the Caucasus, and the Baptist and Campbellite missionaries in Asia Minor.

vii. Bulgaria.

In the Orthodox Bulgarian Church ancient hymns are used in the services, but are not sung by the congregation, only by the clergy and choristers: and it is rather chanting and intoning than singing. The Te Deum and various Doxologies are the most common, and there are also hymns for the following festivals:—

The Nativity of B. V. M.; Presentation B. V. M.; Circumcision; Epiphany; Candlemas; Annunciation B. V. M.; Palm Sunday; Passion Week; Easter; Ascension; Pentecost; Transfiguration; Assumption of B. V. M.; the Mass; Marriage, Baptismal and Burial Services; and Saints' Days, as St. Dimiter, John of Rilo, Nicolai, Vasilai, St. John Baptist, Cyril and Methodius, George, Elia, St. Peter and St. Paul, &c.

Two American Missionary Societies—the A. B. C. and the A. M. E.—are at work in Bulgaria, the former to the south, the latter to the north of the Balkan range of mountains. The same Hymnal is used by both, as well as by the agents of a native mission, known as the Bulgarian Evangelical Society. This book, called Seyashléennee Pénee ("Sacred Songs") was first pub. in 1872, and with music attached, in 1878. Several eds. have since appeared, each one an enlargement on its predecessor.

The present book contains 350 hymns, about four-fifths of which are translations of the best English and American hymns for both adults and children. The principal translators have been the Rev. Dr. Riggs of the A. B. C.—who did most of the work of preparation—the Rev. Dr. Long of the A. M. E., and a native pastor, the Rev. Mr. Tondjoroff. The same three persons have composed most of the original hymns forming the remainder of the volume. With few exceptions translated hymns have been so rendered as to appear in the same metre in Bulgarian as in English. The lines rhyme as in English, and the tunes used are English or American, none are native. Since the last ed. of the hymn-book appeared 50 additional hymns have been pub. in a Bulgarian periodical called the Youth's Paper and Smoker's Leaflet, most of which will in due time be incorporated in the hymnal.

viii. Syria.

In this land, from whose ancient capital, Antioch, the first missionaries were sent forth for the conversion of the heathen, a number of societies, both British and American, as well as Christian ladies from Great Britain and Germany, are at work with a view to its enlightenment and spiritual elevation. But the hymn-book everywhere used by Protestants is the Arabic Hymnal, with Tunes, pub. by the A. P. M. at Beyrout. From the beginning of the mission 50 years ago hymns were from time to time translated or composed, but remained in ms. or leaflet form, until about 15 years ago, when the Rev. E. B. Lewis, M.D., Professor in the Syrian Protestant College at Beyrout, collected them into a volume and pub. them as the first Arabic Hymnal.

The present book, though based on Mr. Lewis's, is much enlarged and greatly improved. It was edited by the Revs. Samuel Jenson and George A. Ford, both of the A. P. M., and was issued Dec. 25th, 1885. It is a handsome volume of 284 pp.—the tunes being printed in good musical type (European notation, but with notes running from right to left) and occupying the upper portion of each page, whilst the hymns, in clearly printed Arabic characters, appear on the lower portion.

The hymns are 326 in number, more than 80 of which are original. All except 8 have been translated or composed by native Syrians of the Arab race, viz., Sheikh Nasif Ul Yazigi (now dead), a learned grammarian of the Greek Catholic Church, employed as proof reader whilst the Bible was translated into Arabic; Ibrahim Sarkis, also deceased, a Maronite who became a Protestant; Assad Sheddady; Selim Kessab; Assad Abdallah; Ibrahim Nasif, and others. The translations are chiefly of well-known English and American hymns, or Bible psalms versified. The tunes are for the most part English and American, a few only being original.

ix. Palestine.

In Palestine Arabic is now the common language, and the hymnal used in Jerusalem, Jaffa, and other places is the one described above [Syria]. The report of the C. M. S. for 1887 states that the hymns in this book have proved a great attraction to the people. Travellers speak enthusiastically of the singing of Arabic hymns in Miss Walker-Arnett's Tabitha Mission School at Jaffa.

IV. Africa.

i. Egypt.

In passing from Asia to Africa it is natural to begin with Egypt. In this country the American United Presbyterian mission, with several stations; but they do not use hymns (commonly so called) in their public worship, but confine themselves to a metrical version of the Psalms. For others A. P. M. pub. at Beyrout, and already spoken of [Syria], is available.

ii. Eastern Equatorial Africa.

The region included under this name extends on the east coast, southward almost to Mozambique. In the interior it reaches to the great lakes Victoria Nyanza, Tanganyika, and Nyassa. The principal language spoken is Ki-swahili or Ki-sawahili (lit. coast language). Other languages are the Galla, Nyika, Gogo, and of the region the C. M. S. and United Methodist Free Churches have stations, one of which near L. Victoria Nyanza, was recently the scene of the martyrdom of Bishop Hannington. The L. M. S. has stations by Lake Tanganyika, and the F. C. S. and the K. S. M. in the south, near L. Nyassa. In this region also, encountering difficulties and perils, the English Universities' Mission is at work.

(1) Two hymnals have been prepared in Ki-swahili: one by missionaries (pub. 1881), of the C. M. S., containing 136 hymns. This was nearly all translations of English hymns, who remarked the book used at Freretown, near Mombasa, when visited by Bishop Hannington, as "delightfully hearty" character of the singing on the "delightfully hearty" character of the converts further south. The other was prepared for the converts of the U. M. Free Churches, containing 200 hymns, chiefly translations, the translators New and W. Hugh During.

(2) Two books in Ki-Nyika have been prepared, one by the Rev. T. Wakefield, the other by members of the C. M. S., the former containing about 30 hymns.

(3) The Rev. T. Wakefield has also prepared a collection of about 20 hymns in the Galla language.

(4) The Report of the C. M. S. for 1887 states that 17 hymns in the Luganda language have been prepared for use in the Uganda mission.

(5) The missionaries of the L. M. S. by Lake Tanganyika use the hymnal in Ki-swahili of the C. M. S.

(6) Translations of English hymns have been made by the missionaries of the K. S. M. at Hantyre, near Lake Nyassa, and also by Dr. Elmelle, of the P. C. S. at Livingstonia in the same region. Among the hymns translated by Dr. Elmelle are—"Just as I am;" "One there is above all others;" "Holy, holy, holy, Lord God Almighty."

iii. Madagascar.

It is well known that, during the last 60 years, Christianity and civilisation have made great progress in Madagascar, chiefly through the agency of the L. M. S.; and it is stated that "from the beginning of the mission Christian Hymnody has aided largely in the promotion of Christian life and knowledge among the people." The native Malagasy songs are without rhyme, and consist of passages resembling Hebrew poetry in their rhythmic flow and frequent parallelisms, followed by a refrain or chorus, often sung to a musical accompaniment.

The first Christian hymns probably appeared as leaflets, but in 1828 a small vol. was published. Another, containing 168 hymns, appeared in 1835, and was several times reprinted. These were chiefly translations of English hymns, and were sung to the English tunes of the period. The lines did not rhyme, —the fewness of firm ultimate syllables in the Malagasy language making rhyme difficult; and no regard was paid to accent. The only thing aimed at was to have the right number of syllables for Long, Common, Short, and Sevens metres. But harsh and rugged though these hymns were, they endeared themselves to the hearts of the Christian converts; and affecting stories are told of their sustaining influence on the martyrs in the dark days of persecution which presently followed.

After the recommencement of the mission in 1862 singing was for some time in an unsatisfactory state. New congregations were formed so rapidly that the missionaries had not time to train them properly in psalmody. The Rev. R. G. Hartley, in 1867, wrote the first rhythmical and rhymed Malagasy hymn, which was set to the tune—"Hail to the brightness of Zion's glad morning." This, and 11 other excellent hymns of his composition, were included in a new edition of the Hymn-book edited by him in 1870. Other missionaries also began to write, and the more popular of their productions were printed as leaflets and sold by thousands. A number of these were in course of time incorporated in the hymn-book; disused hymns were dropped, and the net result was the present book, containing 247 hymns: 30 of these were by the Rev. J. Richardson, to whom the Malagasy owe much for his efforts to improve their hymnody, and also for the thorough teaching of the Sol-fa system and the preparation of Tune Books and School Song Books. Other hymn-writers have been the Revs. W. E. Cousins, B. Toy, J. A. Houlder, G. Cousins, R. Baron, and C. T. Price; and among the natives, J. Andrianasvoravona.

It is remarkable that in the promotion of Christian hymnody the Madagascar press of the Society of Friends has scarcely been behind that of the L. M. S. Mr. Joseph S. Sewell, a leading member of their mission at Antananarivo, translated "Abide with me," and the popular children's hymn, "Whither, are you going, pilgrims?"

In connection with the S. P. G. the Rev. A. M. Hewlett, M.A., has striven to promote Psalmody according to the Anglican forms of worship. The Psalter is arranged for chanting, many of the Psalms are sung, and the Te Deum and Veni Creator Spiritus have been translated, —the latter by the Rev. W. E. Cousins, of the L. M. S. But in the country districts, more especially, the Malagasy at present prefer the style of hymn and tune popular in English village congregations 50 years ago, with many repeats, fugues, and responsive parts.

iv. Mauritius.

550 miles to the east of Madagascar, like a gem in the ocean, lies the fertile and remarkably picturesque island of Mauritius. Though only 36 miles long and 23 broad, it contains a polyglot population of 365,000. Two-thirds are natives of India, coolies working in the sugar plantations, under indentures, and so constantly coming and returning to their homes in India. The other third comprises a motley population of French, English, Negroes, Creoles, Malagasy, Parsees, Chinese, Singhalese and Malays. Both the S. P. G. and C. M. S. have interesting missions under the superintendence of Bishop Royston, D.D.

The Indian coolies belonging to at least five different nationalities, hymnals have been introduced, prepared by missionaries in India, in the Tamil, Malayalam, Telugu, Bengali and Hindi languages. In an account of these books supplied to us by the Rev. R. J. French, of the S. P. G., we recognize hymnals described by us in the sections of this article devoted to those languages. Doubtless a similar thing has been done in the mission of the C. M. S. to the Chinese immigrants. Nor are the spiritual wants of the French-speaking inhabitants of Mauritius overlooked. In services instituted for their use the French hymn-book of the S. P. C. K. and Cantiques Populaires of the McAll Mission are both employed. Finally, in religious services established for the benefit of English residents, Hymns A. & M. and other well-known hymnals of our own country are used.

v. Matabeland.

Twenty degrees south of the Equator, and about 400 miles from the eastern coast of Africa, is Matabeland, where are stations of the L. M. S. The language, called Amantebele, greatly resembles the Zulu. The first hymn-book prepared was very small and imperfect, and is now out of use. The second, prepared by the Rev. W. Sykes, and printed at Cape Town in 1883, contains about 50 hymns, about half original compositions, and the remainder translations of such hymns as "All people that on earth do dwell," "Come to the Saviour, make no delay." English metres and tunes are used, and as a rule the lines do not rhyme.

vi. Bechuanaland.

The language of the Bechuanaland bears the name of Sechuana. Six societies are labouring in this field, the L. M. S., S. P. G., W. M. S., the Berlin, the Hanoverian Lutheran, and the Dutch Reformed. The S. P. G. have a hymn-book prepared by the Revs. Canon Crisp, of Bloemfontein, and W. H. B. Bevan, M.A., of Phokane. A copy now before us, bearing date 1873, contains the translations of the Te Deum, the Magnificat, and various Psalms arranged for chanting, and 40 hymns, including, "Draw nigh, draw nigh, Emmanuel," "Abide with me," "The King of Love my Shepherd is," &c. Others have doubtless been added in later editions. The Wesleyans have a book edited by the late Rev. Mr. Ludorf, containing about 150 hymns. The Hanoverian missionaries have also a Sechuana hymn-book of their own. The Dutch Reformed, which is working in the Transvaal, and the Berlin missionaries use the hymn-book of the L. M. S., of which the Rev. Roger Price, of Kuruman, gives the following account.

"It now contains 327 hymns, having been reprinted and enlarged several times. The present edit. is dated 1883. In many instances the hymns are free translations from the English; in others, the sentiment of the English hymn is followed without any attempt at a verbal translation; a few, especially some by the late Rev. Dr. Moffat, are original compositions. English metres and tunes are used exclusively. Rhyme is attempted, but this is often very difficult, owing to the great paucity of monosyllabic words, which are not mere particles, and to the fact that, with but one exception, Sechuana words end in an open syllable and take the main accent on the penultimate."

Upwards of 250 hymns in this collection were translated or composed by Dr. Moffat. The remainder were contributed by the following missionaries:—the Revs. J. Hughes, Dr. Livingstone, J. Mackenzie, J. S. Moffat, R. Price, J. D. Hepburn, J. Good, A. J. Wesley, and Morolong, a native teacher.

Besides this collection a considerable number of hymns have been recently translated and printed at the Kuruman press, and will be included in the next edition of the hymn-book. These are chiefly translations of I. Sankey's Sac. Songs and Solos.

vii. Basutoland.

Basutoland is situated between Cape Colony to the south and south-east, Natal to the north-east, and the Orange Free State to the west and north-west. The language spoken, called Sesuto, is one of the Bantu group, and was first reduced to writing by missionaries of the Paris Evangelical Society, who for the last 50 years have laboured there with zeal and diligence, and latterly with great success. The S. P. G. has also a small mission in this country.

The Paris missionaries began to prepare hymns in 1840. The present collection is a goodly volume of 384 pp. 8vo, containing hymns and also tunes in Tonic Sol-fa, the title being Lifela tea Sione le Lipina tea Tsona, or "Sacred Hymns sung in the Churches of Basutoland, followed by some of the Songs and Solos of I. D. Sankey and P. Phillips" (London, 1881). It is a 5th ed. of the words, 2nd ed. of the music.

The first part of the book contains 283 hymns, mostly original. The translations are of well-known French and English hymns, and the following are the names of the authors and translators:—Eugene Cassin, Thomas Arhousset, Theophile Jousse, Samuel and Emile Roland, F. P. Lautre, Francois Collard, Louis Devotain, Fritz Ellenberger, François Dumas and Adolphe Mabille.

The second part of the work, containing 133 pieces, consists entirely of translations by the Rev. F. Collard of I. D. Sankey and P. Phillips. English is chiefly used, as suiting the language better than French. Sometimes the lines rhyme, though not always. The Rev. A. Mabille, to whom we are indebted for these particulars, is now preparing a new edition which will contain a few more hymns.

Among the Basutos some of the men have splendid bass voices and all sing heartily. Their favourite hymn is No. 108 in the book just described, set to the tune "French," and commencing "If you ask me what is my hope, I shall say, It is Jesus." This hymnal is in use not only in the French missions, but also in churches belonging to the S. P. G., L. M. S., W. M. S., the Dutch Reformed, the Sinas, the Berlin, and the English Primitive Methodist Societies.

viii. Zululand and Natal.

Returning from Bechuanaland towards the eastern coast, and crossing the Orange Free State, we come to Zululand and Natal, where are 500,000 people, speaking the dialect of the Bantu language, which is known as Zulu. In this region are missions of the S. P. G., A. B. C. F. C. S., W. M. S., and Evangelical Lutherans of Berlin, Hermannsburg and Norway.

(1) In 1863, the Rev. C. W. Poeschl, of the Berlin mission, pub. a small collection of 74 hymns, printed at the Esidumilimi Mission Press.

(2) Many years ago Bishop Colenso pub. a number of hymns, and was followed in this good work by Bishops Callaway and Wilkinson. The hymn-book of the last-named appeared in 1874, and contains 217 hymns translated from H. A. & M.

(3.) In 1883 appeared a small volume prepared by the Revs. Canon Greenstock, of Springvale, and H. T. A. Thompson, of Isandhlwana. It has 117 hymns, including 35 of Dr. Colenso's (some of them altered), 16 of Bp. Callaway's, a few from Bp. Wilkinson's volume, and other sources. Eight or ten are by native Christian deacons. The last is a temperance hymn, by J. W. Cross. The title of this book is Incwadi Yamagama Okukhabelela.

(4) In 1884 the present Bishop of Zululand, the Right Rev. Douglas McKenzie, pub. a small collection of 53 hymns, intended to be sung to tunes in H. A. & M. It includes four from Bp. Callaway's book, one translated by Mrs. Johnson ("Now the day is over"), and one (Ps. c.) by J. Blair.

(5) The missionaries of the A. B. C. have prepared a book, containing in its 7th ed., which has just been published (1887), 263 hymns. The title is Amagama Okukhabelela. The new ed. is in 3 forms, (a) words only; (b) with tunes in Tonic Sol-fa notation; (c) with tunes in Staff notation. Among the names of composers and translators are the following:—the Revs. J. C. Bryant, S. B. Stone, D. Rood, J. L. Döhne, and Mrs. C. B. Grout. Nineteen hymns are from Bp. Callaway's book, prepared by the Norwegian missionaries, and a good number from the Sixosa or Kafir hymn-book.

As in the case of the Sechuana language already noticed, as well as in the Kafir, the prevalence of the penultimate accent in Zulu has made the fitting of Zulu hymns to English tunes a work of difficulty. Iambic metres are almost inadmissible, but the language is well suited to chanting.

ix. Kafirland, or Kaffraria.

Kafirland extends from near Port Elizabeth in the south to Natal in the north, and from the ocean westward as far as Basutoland. It comprises missions of the Moravians, U. P. Church of Scotland, S. P. G., F. C. S., L. M. S., W. M. S., and Lutherans of Germany. The language is allied to the Zulu.

Untsikana, one of the earliest converts to Christianity, composed in pure Kafir rhythm the remarkable hymn, "Ulo-Tixo inkulu ngo-sezuiwini" ("Thou art the great God, He Who is in heaven"), which together with his music (traditional) is unique, all subsequent efforts in Kafir hymnody being subject to the trammels of European metres.

(1) Several editions of a hymn-book used at the Wesleyan stations throughout Kaffraria, and even in Natal, have been issued from the mission press at Mt Coke, near King William's Town.

(2) The Rev. Tyro Soga, a gifted Kafir missionary educated by the United Presbyterian Church, and early removed by death, compiled a book of hymns, which was printed in Scotland.

(3) The principal hymn-book in the Kafir language was prepared by a committee of Presbyterian and other missionaries, and pub. in 1873. It was printed at the mission press in Lovedale, and contains 219 hymns, and 30 psalms and passages of Holy Scripture arranged as chants. The hymns are in English metres, and, in most cases, rhymes are attempted.

(4) The first collection of hymns used at the stations of the M. M. was that of the Berlin Society, which contained some hymns translated by the Moravian Brethren. In 1869 a small supplement containing 186 hymns was pub. by the Rev. Th. Reichelt. But an entirely new hymnal, compiled by Revs. R. Raur and H. Welts, was printed at Herrnhut in 1885. With litanies, liturgical services, 416 hymns and indices, it forms a volume of 424 pages. Most of the hymns are translations from the German; the remainder being chiefly selected from the hymn-books of the Wesleyans and Presbyterians.

(5) The book used in the Anglican Missions, with the title Incwadi Yamaculo, was prepared by missionaries of the S. P. G. in the diocese of Graham's Town. An early ed. contained 102 hymns. That now in use has 130 hymns, and bears date 1881. The principal translators were Revs. A. J. Newton, W. M. Cameron, and C. F. Patten. The following also assisted:—B. S. Key, H. R. Woodroffe, D. W. Dohl, J. Ntsiko, W. Ngwenane, T. Liefeldt.

x. Cape Colony.

In the Cape Colony the English-speaking part of the community naturally use the hymn-books of their respective denominations in England. But since the hymnody of the coloured races, and other residents speaking the Dutch language, is due to missionary enterprise, a brief notice of it will not be inappropriate here. Colonial Dutch hymnals may be divided into two groups, according as German or English elements have chiefly predominated in their composition.

1. The books in which the hymns are for the most part translated from the German and sung to German tunes are found, are:—

(a) The earliest missions in South Africa were those of the Moravians, commenced in 1736 and renewed in 1792. Of their hymnody previous to 1836 we have no knowledge; but in that year a hymn-book was pub. for the use of the coloured races, of which a new edition appeared 20 years later with an Appendix containing new hymns. These new hymns were mostly translations by the Brethren Suhl, Kühn and Hartmann. The latest edition, revised and greatly improved, was pub. in 1880.

(b) The Rhenish Missionary Society, whose headquarters in Europe are at Barmen, commenced its African mission in 1829. A hymn-book was issued in 1844, revised in 1872, and is now in its 4th edition. It contains 290 hymns, taken chiefly from the Moravian and Dutch reformed hymnals, with 64 original compositions, or translations from the Barmen Georgsbuch.

(c) The Berlin Missionary Society, founded in 1827, issued its first S. African hymnal in 1852. This was compiled by Rev. P. Schultheiss, and the hymns are arranged in the order of the Church's seasons. A 2nd ed. prepared by the missionaries Schmidt and Howe, was pub. at Amsterdam in 1875, and contains 333 hymns, of which only 26 are original.

2. The books in which, though the German element largely enters, the English element is considerable, are:—

(a) The first Dutch hymnal in which translations of English hymns appeared was that of the L. M. S., in use as early as 1829, but reprinted in 1847. It contained 40 translations of the English hymns of Watts, Doddridge, Steele and Newton. Some of these were by the well-known Dr. Vandersemp, but the majority by the Rev. G. Barker, missionary at the Paarl. It was revised and enlarged in 1848, and after passing through 4 editions came, in 1862, under the editorship of the Rev. F. W. Kolbe (L. M. S.), through whose skill as a hymn-writer and translator it has in successive editions been enlarged to 412 hymns, and enriched by admirable translations of many of the best known in Hymns A. & M.

(b) Wesleyan missions in S. Africa were commenced in 1818, and in 1824 a cheap edition of the Dutch Reformed hymnal was pub., with a Supplement suited to the native congregations. This contained some translations of Wesley's hymns by the Rev. Barnabas Shaw. The entire book was superseded in 1840 by a collection of 392 hymns, including 160 translations from Wesley by the Rev. R. Haddy. These translations, however, being deemed unsatisfactory, a new hymnal was prepared in 1865. The compilers were the Revs. R. Ridgill and B. Riddale, the former of whom, together with the Rev. H. Tindall, has made some valuable contributions to the store of Dutch translations from the English. The 6th ed. (1882) contains 268 hymns, of which at least one fourth are versions of well-known English hymns.

(c) The Anglican Dutch hymnal was compiled by the Rev. J. A. Hewitt, now Rector of Worcester, Cape Colony, and printed by the S. P. C. K. in 1877. It contains 201 hymns, arranged in the order of H. A. & M., and includes 28 translations from the Latin, and a very large number from the English, many of the latter being taken, by permission, from the L. M. S. and Dutch hymnals. This is the hymnal authorized for use by the mission congregations of the English Church in the province of S. Africa.

Further information on this subject is contained in a series of articles by the Rev. J. A. Hewitt, D.C.L., Rector of Worcester (Cape Colony), in the S. African Church Chronicle, vol. vii., 1886, to which, and also to Dr. Hewitt personally, we are largely indebted for this outline of the Cape Colony hymnody.

xi. Great Namaqualand.

If from the Cape Colony we proceed northward, keeping to the western side of the African continent, one of the first regions we enter is Great Namaqualand, a missionary field of the Rhenish Society of Barmen. Hymns in the Nama (Hottentot) language were first prepared, about 1845, by Rev. J. G. Krönlein, who, in 1873, edited a hymn-book containing 60 hymns, translated from the German, and adapted to German tunes, the lines rhyming. Most of the translations were by Mr. Krönlein; the rest by the late Rev. H. C. Knudsen and the late Mrs. Kleinschmidt. Further north is a country, variously denominated—#### xii. Damaraland or Hereroland.

The first Herero hymns were prepared by the Revs. J. Rath and F. W. Kolbe (see § Cape Colony), and printed at Cape Town in 1849. The hymn-book now used was edited by the Rev. H. Brincker, and reached a 3rd ed. in 1879. It contains 123 hymns, some original, but chiefly translations from the German, and adapted to German tunes. The contributors were the Revs. J. Rath, F. W. Kolbe, C. H. Hahn, H. Brincker, G. Viebe, Mrs. Baumann, and other members of the Rhenish Mission.

xiii. Ovamboland.

As an interesting illustration of the fact that all the Protestant nations of Christendom are now engaged in missionary work among the heathen, reference may be made to the stations of the Finland Missionary Society in Ovamboland, a region of Western South Africa, to the north of the 20th degree south latitude. A small hymnal has been prepared in the language of this region, containing about 60 hymns, but we are unable to give particulars.

A few degrees further to the north is the country of Benguela, where the A. B. C. has recently planted stations. The language spoken is called Umbundu, but missionary work is at present in too elementary a stage for hymnody.

xiv. Congoland.

Few hymns as yet have been pub. in Kishi-Kongo, "the language of the Congo people." All are in Fiole, the particular language spoken in the region of which San Salvador is the centre. First, in 1884, in connection with the B. M. S., ten hymns were printed at Stanley Pool; then a collection of 21 was made by the missionaries of the Livingstone Inland Mission and printed in England; lastly, a collection of 20 hymns (including most of the first 10) was printed in 1887, at the B. M. S. Edwin Wade Press, Underhill Station.

With few exceptions the Congo hymns are all translations. The originals are by the Revs. T. J. Corns and W. H. Bentley. The translations include "When His salvation bringing," and other children's hymns; also, "Stand up, stand up for Jesus," and "Father, in high heaven dwelling." Besides the missionaries named, the Revs. J. H. Weeks, and H. Dixon, and two native converts, Kalendenda and Mantu, have translated hymns.

The Livingstone Inland Mission has been transferred to the A. B. M. In their collection are included several hymns from the book just described, and others translated by the Revs. C. H. Harvey, H. Craven, and H. Richards. Among these are "Abide with me," "Jesus sinners will receive," "A few more years shall roll." English metres and tunes are used. Besides the hymns in these collections, others are in use, printed on slips, which, when tested and improved, will be included in future editions.

xv. Old Calabar.

To the north of the island of Fernando Po, and about 100 miles to the east of the Niger, the Old Calabar river empties itself into the Gulf of Guinea. In this part of Africa the U. P. Church of Scotland has for the last 42 years had a mission, Creek Town and Duke Town being its principal stations. The language spoken is called Efik. Soon after the establishment of the mission a small hymn-book was prepared, which has been repeatedly enlarged, and now in its 7th edit. contains 309 hymns and 7 doxologies. The Rev. H. Goldie has been the editor and principal contributor, but the following have also assisted in the work: the Revs. Dr. Robb, and Messrs. Anderson, Campbell, Edgerley, Thomson and Waddell. Some of the hymns are original, others translations or paraphrases of portions of Holy Scripture. A collection of 39 children's hymns has also been prepared, under the same auspices as the larger book, and printed at Creek Town in 1885 by a native printer. It includes "Little travellers Zionward" (Nkpri mondi-aim enyön); "Jesus loves me" (Jiesus ama mi), and other well-known English hymns, and a few originals by the Rev. S. H. Edgerley.

The metres are English and the lines rhyme as with us. The larger book above named is also used in connection with an Undenominational mission in Old Calabar, supported by the friends of the Rev. H. Grattan Guinness.

xvi. Yoruba, Coast of Guinea.
The Yoruba country is to the east of Dahomey, Lagos being the principal coast town, and Abeokuta, Ibadan, and Oyo large towns in the interior. The C. M. S., W. M. S., and American Baptists of the Southern Convention, have missions there. (1) In the early years of the Church of England mission English hymn-books were used; but when, in 1850, Christian work began among the heathen, the need was felt of hymns in the language of the country. The Rev. D. Hinderer, a German missionary in the service of the C. M. S., translated a few and composed others, using them in his and increasing the number from time to time to 106, when in the year 1865 they were printed in London. About the same time as Mr. Hinderer, the Rev. H. Townsend in another part of the field commenced a similar work, and in 1854 printed a small collection of 20 hymns. This was presently increased to 120, and printed at Abeokuta, and several times reprinted in England. In 1867 the Rev. J. A. Maaser, of the C. M. S. and others, began to translate and compose additional hymns; and in 1877 a collection of more than 200 was printed, which has been in use for the last 10 years. A new collection of 355 hymns is now passing through the press, — a selection from previous books, made by a committee of native clergymen and teachers, and revised by the Rev. D. Hinderer. Mention may also be made of a collection of 99 hymns, chiefly for use in schools, prepared by the Rev. J. B. Wood, of the C. M. S. (2) The Wesleyans have a hymn-book of their own, containing about 150 hymns, and including many of the hymns in the above collection. The 2nd edit. was pub. in 1876. (3) It is believed that the American Baptists have also a hymn-book of their own, but we have no particulars.

In some of the Yoruba hymns rhyme has been attempted, but there is some difficulty arising from the fact that all words must end in vowels. Lively English tunes are preferred by the people to grave German ones; their own native songs abound in choruses.

xvii. Sierra Leone.

In Sierra Leone and the neighbouring districts of Western Africa several missionary societies are at work, but their religious services are conducted for the most part in English, and English hymn-books are used. But at Port Lokko is a small mission of the C. M. S., among a people called Temnes, and a small collection of 17 hymns in the Temne language has been prepared by the Rev. C. F. Schenke. These are partly original and partly translated. English metres and tunes are used, but the lines do not rhyme.

V. Conclusion.

With this brief notice of missionary Hymnody on the West Coast of the "Dark Continent" we close our paper. Beginning with Greenland, and proceeding westwards, we have made the tour of the world, and the reader will surely feel with us that the work we have looked upon—nearly all accomplished within the last 90 years—is great and marvellous, a work of most noble Christian devotion and industry. An examination of our pages will show that the languages and dialects in which Christian hymns in connection with Foreign Missions have been written, or into which they have been translated, are nearly one hundred and fifty, and that in many of them, several hymn-books of considerable size have been prepared. The list includes languages spoken by all the great divisions of the human race, Aryan, Semitic, Turanian; languages in all stages of formation, monosyllabic, as the Burman, agglutinative, as the Tamil and Turkish, inflexional, as the Sanscrit group of Northern India; languages of extreme antiquity, as the Chinese, and of comparatively recent formation, as the Urdu; languages harsh and guttural, as the speech of some African tribes, and soft and mellifluous, as that of the Polynesian islanders. All these by the energy and diligence of Christian missionaries have been mastered, their words have been arranged in tuneful measures, and in them God's praises are now sung, and His "wonderful works" declared. It will have been observed that in regard to some parts of the world our story is incomplete. This is in part due to the fact that a number of letters asking for information have not been answered, probably in some cases because they failed to reach their destination, and in others, because the good men to whom they were addressed were prevented from writing by more pressing engagements. We have, however, to thank very many friends,—mission-secretaries, missionaries, and others, both ladies and gentlemen of various professions,—for the extreme kindness with which they have sent us, from nearly all parts of the world, letters of information and specimens of hymnals. Want of space prevents the writer from appending a full list of their names, but he begs to assure them, should their eye fall on these pages, that for all their help he is most grateful. It was his original intention to include in each section a list of the principal translated hymns in each language, but he soon found that this would entail constant repetition. The fact is, that the best hymns of Watts, Doddridge, Cowper, Newton, Wesley, Heber, Lyte, Keble, Bonar, Miss Steele, Miss Havergal, and other English authors,—the best German hymns,—the best hymns of American composition,—are now sung in China and South Africa, in Japan and Syria, among the peoples of India, and in the isles of the Pacific Ocean,—indeed, in almost every place where Protestant missionaries have uplifted the Gospel banner and gathered Christian Churches. Missions, Home. [Various.]

Missum Redemptorem polo. C. Coffin. [Christmas.] Appeared in the Paris Breviary, 1736; in several modern French Breviaries; in J. Chandler's Hymns of the Prim. Church, 1837, p. 168; and in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. In Coffin's Hymni Sacri, 1736, p. 99, it is given amongst those hymns which are based upon older hymns. It is founded on the "A solis ortus cardine" of Sedulius (p. 4, 1). Tr. as:—

1. Behold from heaven a Saviour sent. By W. J. Blew, in his Church Hy. & Tune Bk., 1852-5, in 7 st. of 4 l., and in Rice's Sol. from the same, 1870.

Other trs. are:—

1. The Prince of Peace to sinners given. J. Chandler, 1837.
2. Let all the earth her King adore. I. Williams, 1839. [J. J.]

Mistaken souls that dream of heaven. I. Watts. [Living and dead Faith.] Appeared in his Hys. & Spiritual S., 1709, Bk. i., No. 140, in 7 st. of 4 l., and headed "A living and dead Faith, collected from several Scriptures." In its original form it is in limited use. The most popular form of the text is "Deluded souls that dream of heaven," which was given in the 8th ed. of Cotterill's Sol., 1819, No. 94, in 4 stanzas, being Watts's st. i.-iii. and vi. altered. These two forms of the hymn are in use in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

Mit Fried und Freud ich fahr dahin. M. Luther. [Nunc Dimittis.] This free rendering of the Song of Simeon (St. Luke ii. 29-32) was 1st pub. in the Geystliche gesangk Buchleyn, Wittenberg, 1524, and was included by Luther in 1542 as one of the six funeral hymns in Christliche Geseng. . . zum Begrebnis. In Wackernagel, iii. p. 17, in 4 st. of 6 l.; in Schircks's ed. of Luther's Geistl. Lieder, 1854, p. 88; and in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863.

This noble swan-song, as Bunsen calls it, has comforted many, princes and pious Christians, in their last hours. Lauxmann, in Koch, viii. 58, gives various instances of its consoling effects, stating, e.g., that Prince Charles of Anhalt, during his last illness in 1661, comforted himself with it, and if with trembling voice, yet with joyful heart, sung the whole hymn a quarter of an hour before his death.

The tr. in C. U. is:—

In peace and joy I now depart. According to. A full and good tr. by Miss Winkworth, in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 81, and her Christian Singers, 1869, p. 114. Considerably altered by Dr. Bacon, 1884, p. 41.

Other trs. are:—(1) "With peace and with joyfull gladness," by Bp. Coverdale, 1539 (Remains, 1846, p. 266). (2) "Lord, let Thy servant now depart," in the Gude and Godly Ballades, ed. 1567-68, folio 30 (1868, p. 61). (3) "According to Thy will I part," in the British Mag., March 1838, p. 260. (4) "With peace and joy from earth I go," by Miss Fry, 1848, p. 183. (5) "God's will be done! with joy of heart," by J. Anderson, 1846, p. 60. In his ed. 1847, p. 92, altered to "Thy will be done. With joyful heart." (6) "Gladly from earth and time I cease," by Dr. J. Hunt, 1853, p. 163. (7) "In peace and joy I now depart, it is," by R. Massie, 1854, p. 83. (8) "In peace and joy away I go," by Dr. G. Macdonald, in the Sunday Mag., 1867, p. 840. In his Ecoties, 1870, p. 109, beginning "In peace and joy I now depart, As." (9) "In joy and peace I onward fare," by N. L. Frothingham, 1870, p. 234. [J. M.]

Mittit ad Virginem. [Annunciation of the B. V. M.] This sequence has generally been ascribed to Peter Abelard, but is not found in the collection of hymns and sequences which he made for the convent of the Paraclete. Cousin, in his ed. of Abelard's Opera, Paris, 1849, vol. i. p. 328, gives the text from Clithoveus, &c., and says his authorship is uncertain; though the hymn is not unworthy of him. Mone, No. 343, prints from a 13th cent. ms. at St. Paul, in Carinthia, and other sources: and

Daniel, ii. p. 59, from a 13th cent. Munich ms., &c. It is also in the Sarum ms. in the Bodleian, c. 1370, Barlow, 5, page 450; Hereford (ms. in the Bodleian, c. 1370); York (ms. in the Bodleian, c. 1390); Magdeburg of 1480; Paris of 1481, and other Missals. The text is also in Wackernagel i., No. 182; Kehren, No. 199, &c. Tr. as:—

1. To the Virgin He sends no inferior angel. By J. M. Neale, in the enlarged ed. of the H. Notes, 1854, and the Altar Hymnal, 1884.

2. He sends to the Virgin no lowlier angel. By R. F. Littledale, in the People's H., 1867, under the signature of P. C. E., i.e. "Priest of the Church of England."

Another tr. is:—

"No one lower in grade To the Virgin," &c. C. B. Pearson, 1869. [J. M.]

Μῦθεο Χριστὲ. Synesius, Bp. of Ptolemais. [Lent.] This is the last of ten hymns written by Synesius at various periods of his life (375-430). [See Greek Hymnody, § v.] The full texts of the ten hymns are given in the Anthologia Græca Carminum Christianorum (Leipzig), 1871; and from that work they were translated by the Rev. A. W. Chatfield, and pub. in his Songs & Hys. of Earliest Greek Christian Poets, &c., 1876. The tr. of this hymn begins "Lord Jeau, think on me." It was given in H. A. & M., 1875, in 5 st. Subsequently 3 st. were added (i., iv., vi., viii.), and it was included in his Songs & Hys., &c., 1876, in 9 st. of 4 l. From this No. 338, in Thring's Coll., 1882, is taken. To his tr. Mr. Chatfield has added this note at p. 86:—

"In translating this Ode I have given my spirit more liberty. It may be considered as a paraphrase or amplification, rather than an exact translation of the original. A brief form of it appears in Hymns Ancient and Modern."

Another tr. was pub. by I. Williams in his Thoughts in Past Years, 1838. It begins:—

"Christ the Son Of God most high,"

is in 15 lines, but is not in C. U. [J. J.]

Möckhel, Johann Friedrich, was b. Jan. 16, 1661, at Culmbach in Franconia, and matriculated at the University of Jena in 1681. He was for some time private chaplain to Herr von Redwitz at Teisenort, and from 1685 to 1691 to Herr von Künzberg at Hayn near Bayreuth. In 1691 he became pastor at Neuhaus, and in 1693 at Steppach and Limpach, near Neustadt on the Aisch. He d. April 19, 1729 (Koch, v. 523, &c.). Of his 11 hymns one has been tr. into English, viz:—

Nun sich die Nacht geendet hat. Die Finsternisse zertheilt. Morning. Weszel, iv., 357-359, quotes at length from a letter in which Möckhel says this hymn was composed by himself in 1691 while at Hayn; and was written at the request of the widowed Frau von Künzberg (Kindenberg) in order that she might have a hymn for morning prayer as a companion to her favourite hymn for evening prayer, which was "Nun sich der Tag geendet hat" (p. 616, l.). A copy, he adds, was sent to a sister in Bayreuth, and so inserted in the Printzen G. B., Bayreuth, 1691. Included in Wagner's G. B., Leipzig, 1697, vol. iv. p. 1435, in 18 st. of 4 l., and in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1172. Tr. as:—

(1) "Thanks, dearest Jesus, for Thy love." A tr. of st. ix. as st. iii. of No. 886 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1801 (1886, No. 1174). (2) "Lo! Night's deep shades are scattered wide." By H. J. Bucknill, 1842, p. 39.

Mohr, Joseph, was born at Salzburg, Austria, on Dec. 11, 1792. After being ordained priest on Aug. 21, 1815, by the Roman Catholic Bishop of Salzburg, he was successively assistant at Ramsau and at Laufen; then at Kuchl, at Golling, at Adnet, and at Authering; then at Vigaun, at Hof and at Hintersee—Vicar-Substitute at Hof and at Hintersee—all in the diocese of Salzburg. In 1828 he was appointed Vicar at Hintersee, and in 1837 at Wagrain, near St. Johann. He d. at Wagrain, Dec. 4, 1848 (ms. from Archiv. Augustin Hilber, Salzburg, &c.). The only hymn by him tr. into English is:—

Stille Nacht! heilige Nacht! Christmas. This pretty little carol was written for Christmas, 1818, while Moir was assistant clergyman at Laufen, on the Salza, near Salzburg, and was set to music (as in the Garland of Songs) by Franz Gruber, then schoolmaster at the neighbouring village of Arnsdorf (b. Nov. 25, 1787, at Hochburg near Linz, d. June 7, 1863, as organist at Hallein, near Salzburg). What is apparently the original form is given by O. Kraus, 1879, p. 608, in 3 st. of 3 l., and in Dr. Wichern's Unsere Lieder, Hamburg, 1844, No. 111. Another form, also in 3 st. of 6 l., is in T. Fliedner's Lieder-Buch für Kleinkinder-Schulen, Kaiserswerth, 1842, No. 115, and the Evang. Kinder G. B., Basel, 1867. The trs. are from the text of 1841.

1. Holy night! peaceful night! All is dark. By Miss J. M. Campbell in C. S. Bere's Garland of Songs, 1863, and thence in Hys. & Carols, Lond., 1871.

2. Silent night! hallowed night. Land and deep. This is No. 131 in the Christian H. Bk., Cincinnati, 1865. It is suggested by, rather than a tr. of, the German.

3. Holy night! peaceful night! Through the darkness. This is No. 8 in J. Barnby's Original Tunes to Popular Hymns, Novello, N. D., 1869; repeated in Laudes Domini, N. Y., 1884, No. 340.

4. Silent night! holy night! All is calm. This is in C. L. Hutchins's Sunday School Hyl., 1871 (1878, p. 198), and the S. S. H. Bk. of the Gen. Council of the Evang. Luth. Church in America, 1873, No. 65.

5. Peaceful night, all things asleep. This is No. 17, in Carols for St. Stephen's Church, Kirkstall, Leeds, 1872.

6. Silent night, holiest night. All asleep. By Dr. A. Edernheim, in the Sunday at Home, Dec. 18, 1875, repeated in the Church S. S. H. Bk., 1879, No. 35.

7. Silent night! holy night! Slumber reigns. By W. T. Matson, as No. 132, in Dr. Allon's Children's Worship, 1878.

8. Still the night, holy the night! Sleeps the world. By Stopford A. Brooke, in his Christian Hys., 1881, No. 55.

Molbanus, Ambrosius, was b. at Breslau, April 4, 1494. After studying at Krakow and becoming a graduate M.A. at Vienna, he became, in 1518, rector of the Cathedral School at Breslau, and in 1520 rector of the

St. Mary Magdalene School. Incurring the displeasure of the clergy, he left Breslau in 1521, and, after studying Hebrew at Ingolstadt, under Johann Reuchlin, went to Wittenberg. After his return to Breslau he was, in April, 1525, appointed pastor of the St. Elizabeth Church, and in the same year became v.d. at Wittenberg. He d. at Breslau, Jan. 16, 1534 (Allg. Deutsche Biog., xlii. 81, &c.). The only hymn known by him is:—

Ach Vater unser der du bist. (Lord's Prayer.) 1st pub. in Eyn gesang Buchleyn, Zwickau, 1528, in 3 st. of 14 l., and thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 344. In some later books it begins "Vater unser, der du bist." Tr. as "O Father, ours celestiall," by Sp. Coverdale, 1539 (Remains, 1846, p. 548). [J. M.]

Moir, David Macbeth, was b. at Musselburgh, Jan. 5, 1798. After attending the medical classes in the University of Edinburgh, he settled down as a doctor in his native place. In June, 1851, he went to Dumfries to recruit, but d. there, July 6, and was buried at Inveresk, Musselburgh, July 10, 1851. His poems, selected and edited, with a memoir, by Thomas Aird, were pub. in 1852, in 2 vols., as The Poetical Works of David Macbeth Moir. He marked his graver contributions to Blackwood's Magazine with the signature "Delta" or Δ, and in the number for August, 1832, there appeared "Devotional Melodies by Delta." These were 3 in number:—

1. Return, once more return, O wanderer.
2. O who is like the Mighty One.
3. How pleasant is the opening year.

and seem to have been the only hymns suited for public worship that he ever wrote. [J. M.]

Molanus, Gerhard Walther (Wolter), D.D., s. of Wilcke Ludwig van der Muelen or Molanus, syndic and advocate at Hameln on the Weser, was b. at Hameln, Nov. 1, 1633 (Oct. 22, o. s.), and studied at the University of Helmstädt. In 1659 he was appointed Professor of Mathematics at the University of Bielefeld, but in 1664 extraordinary, and in 1665 ordinary Professor of Theology and d.d. In 1674 he was appointed Director of the Consistory at Hannover and General Superintendent of the Electorate of Brunswick-Lüneburg, and in 1677 (titular) Abbot of Loccum. He d. at Hannover, Sept. 7, 1722 (Allg. Deutsche Biog., xxii. 86, &c.). He was a man of extensive learning, and in his official position wielded a very great influence over the whole Electorate. He edited the Hannover G. B. of 1698. Of his five hymns one has passed into English:—

Ich trete frisch zu Gottes Tisch. Holy Communion. In the Bielefeld G. B., 1673, No. 124, in 11 st. of 5 l. Repeated in the Hannover G. B., 1740, and in Burg's G. B., Breslau, 1746, No. 1673. Tr. as:—

Thy Table I approach. This is No. 270, in the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880, and omits st. iii., iv., viii., ix. [J. M.]

Moller, Martin, son of Dionysius Moller, mason at Lieasnitz (now Kropstädt), near Wittenberg, was b. at Lieasnitz, Nov. 11, 1547. He attended the town school at Wittenberg and the gymnasium at Görlitz, but was too poor to go to any university. In 1568 he was appointed cantor at Löwenberg in Silesia, but in April, 1572, was ordained as pastor of Kesseldorf, near Löwenberg. In the autumn of 1872 he was appointed diaconus at Löwenberg, in 1875 pastor at Sprottau, and in July, 1900, became chief pastor at Görlitz. He preached his last sermon, Oct. 30, 1905, and d. at Görlitz, March 2, 1906 (Koch, ii. 211, iv. 552, &c.).

Moller's hymns appeared in his two very popular devotional books. (1) Meditationes sanctorum patrum, Görlitz, 1884; pt. II., Görlitz, 1891, and various later eds. This was mostly made up of meditations from St. Augustine, St. Bernard, and Tauler, selected and tr. into German by Moller. (2) Manuale de preparatione ad mortem, Görlitz, 1893 [Library of the Prediger-Seminar at Hannover]. Wackernagel, v., Nos. 71-76, gives only 5 hymns under Moller's name. Of these No. 72 ("Heiliger Geist, du Tröster mein") is from "Veni Sancte Spiritus, et mitte" (q.v.), and No. 73, "Nimm von uns Herr" from "Aufer Immensum" (see p. 92, li.). Two versions of the "Jesu dulcis memoria" have also often been ascribed to Moller, viz. "Ach Gott, wie manches Herzeleid" (see p. 10, i.), and, with less reason, "O Jesu altes, wer dein gedenkt" (see p. 539, li.). See also "Hilf, Herr, mein Gott," noted under Seisnaker, W. [J. M.]

Molther, Philipp Heinrich, was b. in Alsace, Dec. 28, 1714. At Jena, where he studied theology, he joined the [Moravian] Brethren in 1737, and went to London 1739. He was minister of the Brethren's congregation at Neuwied from 1750 to 1761, and spent the rest of his life, 1762-1780, in Dublin and in Bedford. He d. at Bedford, Sep. 9, 1780, five years after his consecration as a Bishop of the Brethren's Unity. See "At God's right hand," &c., p. 99, i. [G. A. C.]

Mone, Franz Joseph, was b. May 12, 1796, at Mingolsheim, near Bruchsal, Baden. He entered the University of Heidelberg in 1814, where in 1817 he became University lecturer, was in 1819 appointed extraordinary and in 1822 ordinary Professor of History, and in 1825 also director of the University library. In 1827 he became Professor of History and Statistics at the University of Louvain, but during the Belgian Revolution of 1831 resigned and retired to Heidelberg. In 1835 Duke Leopold of Baden appointed him Privy Recorder and Director of the General-State-Archives at Karlsruhe, and this post he held till his retirement on a pension in 1868. He d. at Karlsruhe, March 12, 1871 (Allg. Deutsche Biog., xxii. 165, &c.).

He interested himself specially in Celtic studies, in the history of the Upper Rhine, and in Liturgiology (Lateinische und Griechische Messen, 1850, &c.). He claims notice here specially on account of his Lateinische Hymnen des Mittelalters, pub. at Freiburg in Baden, in three vols., viz.:—(i.) Lateinische Hymnen des Mittelalters, aus Handschriften herausgegeben und erklärt von F. J. Mone, Director des Archives zu Karlsruhe, 1853, with Hymns on God and the Angels (Nos. 1-320); (ii.) Hymni Latini Medii Aevi, e Codic. MSS. editi et Annotationibus illustrati, 1854, on the B. V. M. (Nos. 321-620); (iii.) Same title as vol. ii. 1855, on the Saints (Nos. 621-1215). The interest of this work, now unfortunately out of print, consists in its texts rather than in its notes, and in the comparative ease with which, to one acquainted with German, it can be used. The information given is all printed together at the end of the individual hymns, and the abbreviations used are clear and intelligible, not symbols such as those employed by Daniel. The work throughout is arranged on a consistent plan, i.e., in order of subjects and not according to authors. Mone published no hymns except those found in manuscripts, of which he says he consulted "some hundreds from more than fifty libraries;" among the most valuable being those which formerly belonged to the Benedictine Abbey of Reichenau (not Rheinau), near Konstanz, and are now at Karlsruhe. A large proportion of the hymns were here first printed; many of those in the second and third volumes being however not of much value. In Daniel's fourth and fifth volumes a large amount of space is filled by texts and notes which he transferred from this work of Mone (see p. 279, i.). [J. M.]

Monseil, John Samuel Bewley, LL.D., s. of Thomas Bewley Monseil, Archdeacon of Londonderry, was b. at St. Columb's, Londonderry, March 2, 1811, and educated at Trinity College, Dublin (B.A. 1832, LL.D. 1856). Taking Holy Orders in 1834, he was successively Chaplain to Bp. Mant, Chancellor of the diocese of Connor, Rector of Ramoan, Vicar of Egham, diocese Worcester, and Rector of St. Nicholas's, Guildford. He d. in consequence of a fall from the roof of his church, which was in the course of rebuilding, April 9, 1875. His prose works include Our New Vicar, 1867; The Winton Church Catechist, &c. His poetical works are:—

(1) Hymns and Miscellaneous Poems, Dublin, W. Curry, Jun., & Co., 1837; (2) Parish Musings, or Devotional Poems, 1850; (3) Spiritual Songs for the Sundays and Holy Days throughout the Year, 1857 (People's Ed., 1875); (4) His Presence, not His Memory, 1858, 1859; (5) Hymns of Love and Praise for the Church's Year, 1863 (2nd ed. 1866); (6) The Passing Bell; Ode to The Nightingales, and Other Poems, 1867; (7) Litany Hymns, 1869; (8) The Parish Hymnal after the Order of The Book of Common Prayer, 1873; (9) Watches by the Cross, 1874; (10) Simon the Cyrenian; and Other Poems; (11) Nursery Carols.

In these works several hymns which appeared in the earlier books are repeated in the later, and thus at first sight his compositions seem to be more in number than they really are. The total amounts to nearly 300, and of these about one-fourth are in C. U. The most popular of these are, "God is love; that anthem olden"; "God of that glorious gift of grace"; "Holy offerings, rich and rare"; "Lord of the living harvest"; "Mighty Father, Blessed Son"; and "Sing to the Lord a joyful song." In addition to those which are annotated under their respective first lines, the following are in C. U.:—

Montgomery, Ignatius, younger brother of James Montgomery, was b. Sept. 4, 1776, at Gracehill, near Ballymena, county of Antrim, a settlement of the [Moravian] Brethren, to which his father, the Rev. John Montgomery, had removed in that year from Irvine, in Ayrshire. Ignatius Montgomery served as minister in four of the Brethren's congregations in England and Ireland. He d. at Ockbrook, near Derby, April 28, 1841. See "At God's right hand, &c.," p. 80, l. [G. A. C.]

Montgomery, James, s. of John Montgomery, a Moravian minister, was b. at Irvine, Ayrshire, Nov. 4, 1771. In 1776 he removed with his parents to the Moravian Settlement at Gracehill, near Ballymena, county of Antrim. Two years after he was sent to the Fulneck Seminary, Yorkshire. He left Fulneck in 1787, and entered a retail shop at Mirfield, near Wakefield. Soon tiring of that he entered upon a similar situation at Wath, near Rotherham, only to find it quite as unamiable to his taste as the former. A journey to London, with the hope of finding a publisher for his youthful poems ended in failure; and in 1792 he was glad to leave Wath for Sheffield to join Mr. Gales, an auctioneer, bookseller, and printer of the Sheffield Register newspaper, as his assistant. In 1794 Mr. Gales left England to avoid a political prosecution. Montgomery took the Sheffield Register in hand, changed its name to The Sheffield Iris, and continued to edit it for thirty-one years. During the next two years he was imprisoned twice, first for reprinting therein a song in commemoration of "The Fall of the Bastille," and the second for giving an account of a riot in Sheffield. The editing of his paper, the composition and publication of his poems and hymns, the delivery of lectures on poetry in Sheffield and at the Royal Institution, London, and the earnest advocacy of Foreign Missions and the Bible Society in many parts of the country, gave great variety but very little of stirring incident to his life. In 1833 he received a Royal pension of £200 a year. He d. in his sleep, at the Mount, Sheffield, April 30, 1834, and was honoured with a public funeral. A statue was erected to his memory in the Sheffield General Cemetery, and a stained glass window in the Parish Church. A Wesleyan chapel and a public hall are also named in his honour. Montgomery's principal poetical works, including those which he edited, were:—

(1) Prison Amusements, 1797; (2) The Wanderer of Switzerland, 1806; (3) The West Indies, 1807; (4) The World before the Flood, 1813; (5) Greenland and Other Poems, 1819; (6) Songs of Zion, 1822; (7) The Christian Psalmist, 1825; (8) The Christian Poet, 1925; (9) The Pelican Island, 1823; (10) The Poet's Portfolio, 1835; (11) Original Hymns for Public, Private, and Social Devotion, 1853. He also published minor pieces at various times, and four editions of his Poetical Works, the first in 1829, the second in 1836, the third in 1841, and the fourth in 1854. Most of these works contained original hymns. He also contributed largely to Collyer's Coll., 1812, and other hymn-books published during the next 40 years, amongst which the most noticeable was Cotterill's Sel. of 1819, in which more than 50 of his compositions appeared. In his Christian Psalmist, 1825, there are 100 of his hymns, and in his Original Hymns, 1853, 255 and 5 doxologies. His Songs of Zion, 1822, number 86. Deducting those which are repeated in the Original Hymns, there remain about 400 original compositions.

Of Montgomery's 400 hymns (including his versions of the Psalms) more than 100 are still in C. U. With the aid of Montgomery's mss. we have given a detailed account of a large number. The rest are as follows:—

i. Appeared in Collyer's Collection, 1812.

1. Jesus, our best beloved Friend. Personal Dedication to Christ.

2. When on Sinai's top I see. Sinai, Tubor, and Calvary.

ii. Appeared in Cotterill's Selection, 1819.

3. Come to Calvary's holy mountain. The Open Fountain.

4. God in the high and holy place. God in Nature. The cento in Com. Praise, 1879, and others, "If God hath made this world so fair," is from this hymn.

67. Come ye that fear the Lord. Confirmation.

68. Home, kindred, friends, and country, these. Farewell to a Missionary.

69. Let me go, the day is breaking. Jacob wrestling.

70. Not in Jerusalem alone. Consecration of a Church.

71. Praise the high and holy One. God the Creator.

In common with most poets and hymn-writers, Montgomery strongly objected to any correction or rearrangement of his compositions. At the same time he did not hesitate to alter, rearrange, and amend the productions of others. The altered texts which appeared in Cotterill's Sel., 1819, and which in numerous instances are still retained in some of the best hymn-books, as the "Rock of Agers," in its well-known form of three stanzas, and others of equal importance, were made principally by him for Cotterill's use. We have this confession under his own hand.

As a poet, Montgomery stands well to the front; and as a writer of hymns he ranks in popularity with Wesley, Watts, Doctordridge, Newton, and Cowper. His best hymns were written in his earlier years. In his old age he wrote much that was unworthy of his reputation. His finest lyrics are "Angels from the realms of glory," "Go to dark Gethsemane," "Hail to the Lord's Anointed," and "Songs of praise the angels sang." His "Prayer is the soul's sincere desire," is an expanded definition of prayer of great beauty; and his "For ever with the Lord" is full of lyric fire and deep feeling. The secrets of his power as a writer of hymns were manifold. His poetic genius was of a high order, higher than most who stand with him in the front rank of Christian poets. His ear for rhythm was exceedingly accurate and refined. His knowledge of Holy Scripture was most extensive. His religious views were broad and charitable. His devotional spirit was of the holiest type. With the faith of a strong man he united the beauty and simplicity of a child. Richly poetic without exuberance, dogmatic without uncharacteristic elaborateness, tender without sentimentality, and without diffusiveness, he has richly musical without apparent effort, he has bequeathed to the Church of Christ wealth which could only have come from a true genius and a sanctified heart. [J. J.]

Moore, Thomas, s. of John Moore, a small tradesman at Dublin, was b. in that city, May 28, 1779, educated at a private school and Trinity College, Dublin; read at the Middle Temple for the Bar; held a post under the Government in Bermuda for a short time, and d. Feb. 26, 1852. His Memoirs, Journal, and Correspondence were pub. by Lord John Russell in 1855. In that work every detail concerning himself and his numerous publications, most of them of high poetical merit, will be found. His connection with hymnody is confined to his Sacred Songs, which were pub. in 1816, and again in his Collected Works, 1866. These Songs were 32 in all, and were written to popular airs of various nations. Of these Songs the following have passed into a few hymn-books, mainly in America:—

1. As down in the sunless retreats of the ocean. Private Prayer.
2. But who shall see the glorious day. The Final Bliss of Man.
3. Come, ye disconsolate, where'er you languish. Relief in Prayer. In American hymn-books the text is sometimes as in T. Hastings and Lowell Mason's Spiritual Songs, 1831. This may be distinguished from the original by the third stanza, which reads, "Here see the Bread of life; see waters flowing," &c.
4. Fallen is thy throne, O Israel. Israel in Exile.
5. Like morning when her early breeze. Power of Divine Grace.
6. O Thou Who driest the mourner's tear. Lent.
7. Since first Thy word [grace] awaked my heart. God All and in All.
8. Sound the loud timbrel o'er Egypt's dark sea. Deliverance of Israel.
9. The bird [dove] let loose in eastern skies. Prayer for Constancy.
10. The turf shall be my fragrant shrine. The Temple of Nature. From this "There's nothing bright above, below" is taken.
11. Thou art, O God, the Life and Light. God, the Light and Life of Men.
12. Were not the sinful Mary's tears? Lent.

Of these hymns No. 11 has attained the greatest popularity. [J. J.]

Morant, Adolph, PH.D., s. of J. D. M. Morant, merchant in Hamburg, was b. at Hamburg, Nov. 28, 1805. From 1825 to 1828 he was a student of theology at the Universities of Halle, Göttingen, and Berlin, graduating PH.D. at Göttingen in 1828. He was then resident for nine years as a candidate of Theology (licensed preacher) at Hamburg, teaching in private schools, and devoting his spare time to the work of Home Missions. At Easter, 1838, he was appointed second pastor at Möllen, in Lauenburg, and in 1846 chief pastor. He d. at Möllen, Dec. 6, 1884 (Koch vii. 236; ms. from his daughter, &c.).

His hymns appeared principally in his (1) Harfenklänge (90), Lüneburg, 1840; 2nd ed. (107), Hamburg, 1865. (2) Zweite Sammlung der Harfenklänge (73), Hamburg, 1880. Some of them first appeared in various papers and collections. The best are his hymns of Love to Christ, which are sweet in tone and the fruits of ripe Christian experience. Those which have passed into English are:—

1. Ich bleib bei dir! Rest in the Lord. 1840, as above, p. 111, in 5 st.; and in O. Kraus, 1879, p. 360, omitting st. v. Fr. as "I rest with Thee, Lord! whither should I go," by Miss Northwick in H. L. L., 1855, p. 63 (1884, p. 130), and in Miss Warner's Hymns of the Church Militant, 1858, p. 69.

 II. Je kleiner ich, je grösser du. Humility. Founded on St. John iii. 30. 1840, as above (1865, p. 121), in 7 st., and in O. Kraus, 1879, p. 361. Fr. as "The less I am, the more Thou art," by J. Kelly, 1883, p. 31.
 III. Wo ist dein Bethel, wo die Himmelsporte. Secret Prayer. 1840, as above, p. 101, in 4 st., and in F. Selnecke's Evangel. Liederbogen, 1862, No. 192. Fr. as (1) "Where is thy Bethel, where the world's control," by C. T. Astley, 1860, p. 22. (2) "Where is thy Bethel? where the gate of heaven," by J. Kelly, 1883, p. 11. [J. M.]

Moravian Hymnody. By the name of the Moravian Church is signified the Church of the ancient Bohemian Brethren renewed in 1722 at Herrnhut in Saxony [see Bohemian Hymnody, § 1.-iv. 3.] The ancient Brethren lived in Moravia and Poland as well as in Bohemia, but because their main settlements were situated in Bohemia (until 1547), and the Bohemian language the one they employed in their writings, they received the general name Bohemian Brethren. They called themselves in Bohemian jednota bratrská, and in Latin Unitas Fratrum. In like manner the Brethren of the Renewed Church are commonly called Moravians, because the first founders of Herrnhut immigrated from Moravia. They assumed this name in England and America, but in the Act of Parliament under the 12th May, 1749, they are acknowledged as the Protestant Episcopal Church known by the name of Unitas Fratrum or the United Brethren, and therefore their official name is: Unitas Fratrum (Brethren's Unity), or the United Brethren.

i. History of the Moravians.

The history of the Moravians is required in an article on the Moravian Hymnody only so far as it may help to further the better understanding of their hymns and hymn-books, their special character being modified by that Church from whose midst they originated, and for whose use they were written and compiled. The most prolific Moravian hymn-writer is Count N. L. von Zinzendorf, and nearly all the other Moravian hymn-writers were influenced by him. After his death there arose but few Moravian hymn-writers, as Gregor, Garve, Albertini; and the hymn-book now in use among the Moravians is for the most part the same, which was edited towards the close of the last century. Therefore it may suffice to give a brief account of Moravian history up to Zinzendorf's death in 1760.

Introduction. From the commencement of the Bohemian Brethren's Unity, some of its members existed in Moravia, deputies from this land having already been sent as representatives to the constitutive Synod held at Lihotka (146:). About 1480 several hundred Waldenses emigrated to Moravia from the Mark Brandenburg and joined the Unity. These, settled in Fulnek and Landskron, formed the only German-speaking part of the Unity, for whom Welme edited the first German hymn-book. Nevertheless the Moravian branch of the Unity was fully incorporated with the whole body, stood under the same direction, and had the same doctrines, institutions, &c. After the persecutions in Bohemia in the fatal year 1547, the fugitive Brethren chiefly found a refuge in Moravia, but in consequence of the battle of the White Mountain, near Prague, Nov. 8, 1620, the Unity in Moravia was destroyed, as it was in Bohemia, by a cruel and bloody Anti-reformation.

The ancient Brethren's Church was already dissolved in 1627, and three different sections of it can afterwards be distinguished, each of which has its particular fate. (1) The Polish Brethren's Church. It developed itself independently and joined with the Reformed Church in their contest with the Lutherans, so much so that at first the brethren had the upper hand, and their constitution was accepted by the Reformed Church in Poland. Later, however, matters were reversed, and the Brethren had to give up more and more of their peculiarities. With the Union of the Evangelical Churches in 1817, the Brethren's Unity in Poland ceased altogether. (2) A second branch, in existence since 1627, is the Bohemian-Moravian Brethren's Church. This migrated formally into Poland, Hungary, Silesia, and Prussia. Altogether there are said to have been, till 1656, about 100 congregations of the Brethren in these countries. After the destruction of Lissa (in Poland) in 1656, this second branch, the Azile Church, which has no importance for the Renewed Brethren's Church, disappears. (3) Of great importance is the third branch, composed of those members of the Brethren's Church who remained in Bohemia and Moravia, whom Comenius calls the "hidden seed." Amos Comenius, born at Comna, in Moravia, March 29, 1592, was the last bishop of the Bohemian and Moravian branches, and he consecrated "in spirit contra spirit" his son-in-law, Peter Figulus, or Jablonsky, bishop of the Unity. To his death he maintained the hope that the expelled Brethren would be allowed to return to their fatherland, and that the Unity would be re-established. Therefore when Cromwell, after having crushed Ireland, intended to settle the homeless Bohemians and Moravians there as a Protestant colony, Comenius could not agree to it: "Ego quidem a nostris dispersis nondum in hoc puncto responsum habeo at, quid sit, facile intelligi, nempe spes recollectionis in patria, quam plerique persequuntur, et in his (ut verum fatear) ego quoque" (see Vaughan's The Protectorate of Cromwell, II. 447). Soon afterwards the Restoration of the Stuarts put an end to all such plans. Some of the Brethren, however, settled in England and Ireland, and their Bohemian names attest their descent to this day, as John Cennick (properly Cennik), well known in hymnody and in Moravian history. In addition to his celebrated activity as teacher, Comenius was untiring in strengthening the courage and faith of the emigrant Brethren, and even that of the remnant in their fatherland, by means of letters and writings. For example, he wrote a German catechism for the Moravians in those villages from which 60 years later the founders of Herrnhut emigrated. They used it secretly in their homes the whole time, through it preserving their inward Evangelical views although externally Roman Catholics. (One of the only two extant copies was brought by them to Herrnhut.)

2. A revival of the Brethren's tradition among the German-speaking part of that "hidden seed" seems to have been called forth by the change in Church affairs in the neighbouring country of Silesia. Charles XII. by the Altranstädter Convention, 1707, had compelled the Emperor to restore 121 churches which had been taken from the Protestants. In connection with this Convention, six other churches ("Gnaden-Kirchen") were granted to them in 1709. The ministers who were appointed to these churches were mostly excellent persons. Their sermons had great effect, and as some of these churches were not far from the boundaries of Moravia, some of the "hidden" Protestants (the "hidden seed") made use of the opportunity and often attended the services, especially in Teschen.

In Moravia the Brethren's traditions were kept alive particularly in the so-called "Kuhländchen." One circle was in the villages of Schlen and Seitendorf. George Jäschke in Schlen was the bearer of these traditions. His forefathers had fled in the 16th century from Bohemia to Moravia. He was a true descendant of the ancient Brethren, and is described as a real patriarch in appearance. In constant intercourse with this circle (formed by the families Jäschke, Neisser, &c.) was another in the neighbourhood of Fulnek, in the villages of Zauchenthal and Kunewalde, where Samuel Schneider played the same part as G. Jäschke. To the secret assemblies held by Schneider belonged the families Kuns, Beyer, Stach, Zeisberger, Tannenberger in Zauchenthal, and Nitschmann in Kunewalde.

In these circles Christian David appeared twice in succession. This remarkable man was a carpenter from Bohemia, who, not content with his Roman Catholic faith, had after long wanderings through Germany in search for true children of God, become a Lutheran, at Berlin. With the year 1717 he began to take journeys to Moravia and Bohemia, on which he sought out the hidden Protestants on his own account. During this time he made the acquaintance of the Count of Zinzendorf, who was already widely famed for his willingness to receive all oppressed people. With Zinzendorf's permission David guided the first three emigrants with wife and child from Schlen in Moravia, to Zinzendorf's estate, Berthelsdorf in Saxony, which they reached on June 4th, 1722. Zinzendorf was in Dresden, but his steward Heiz received the poor people. He would not allow them, however, as they had contemplated, to build a house in the village, but directed them to a place at some distance, in the wood between Löbau and Zittau. Here Christian David felled the first tree for building a house, on the 17th June, 1722. Heiz called this place the "Herrnhut," meaning that these homeless families stood under the direct "protection of the Lord" (German Hut des Herrn).

3. The Count of Zinzendorf, who had afforded a refuge to these poor persecuted people, was born on the 20th May, 1700, in Dresden, and was descended from one of the most ancient noble families of the Archduchy of Austria. His father, Saxon Minister of State, died six weeks after the birth of his son. The latter, after the second marriage of his mother in 1704 to the Prussian Field-Marshal von Natzmer, was brought up by his grandmother Henriette Catharine von Gersdorf (p. 418, I.), on her estate of Hennersdorf. His education was exclusively Pietistic. (We designate by the name of Pietism a religious movement which took place in Germany about the end of the 17th century. As Puritanism appeared in strong contrast to the High Church party in England, so Pietism opposed a cessation or retrogression of the Reformation in Germany by the awakening of "true piety." Spener, a main representative of that tendency, was Zinzendorf's godfather.) He would have liked to study theology, but his family wished him to prepare himself for State service. After having finished his study of law in 1719, he travelled in Holland and France, everywhere giving his attention to the condition of the Church and religious life. He sought the company of Catholic and Reformed, of Pietists, Mystics, and Socinians, and everywhere made the observation that to all these different denominations one thing was common, namely, that true Christianity consisted in personal religion, or, as he expressed it, in Christianity of the heart. He felt himself at home wherever he found personal faith, even with the most extreme sects. In contrast to the confessional views, he named this "pure religion." Returned from his travels, Zinzendorf undertook the sole management of his paternal property. Once again he attempted to enter the ministry, but in consideration for his family was again obliged to relinquish his wish, and took a situation as Councillor in the Saxony Government in Dresden. At any rate he had the firm resolution to employ his religious ideas and opinions for the benefit of his fellow-men even in this situation, heedless of the offence which he might give thereby. This has proved, not only by the meetings which he held in his own house in Dresden, but also by editing his first four collections of hymns, 1725-31 (see II., 1. 1-4.). They have no connection with Herrnhut and the Moravians, for he writes in the preface to the first Moravian hymn-book of 1735 (see II., 2. 1): "Until now four editions of hymns have been published. The first one (II., 1. 1, 1st and 2nd editions) were intended for use in the Church at Berthelsdorf (his own estate), the other for that of the children (II., 1. 2). In 1731 Mr. Marhe published a collection of ancient and modern hymns, which were to be useful to the children of God scattered hither and thither." It can be ascertained to a certainty that the congregation at Herrnhut availed itself of no part of these collections.

4. In 1722 Zinzendorf, as already stated, permitted the carpenter, Chr. David, to bring some emigrants from Moravia to his estate at Berthelsdorf. From this year the emigration went on uninterruptedly till 1733. But besides these Moravian emigrants there came other people from all parts of Germany, attracted by the report of religious freedom on the Zinzendorf estates. This led to sharp doctrinal and confessional disputes among the inhabitants of Herrnhut, so that Zinzendorf found himself, in 1727, compelled to give up his post in Dresden and to reside in Berthelsdorf. Zinzendorf wished that the Brethren should attach themselves to the Lutheran Church, but they wished to re-establish their old constitution as it was described by Comenius in his "Ratio disciplinae." And they gave him plainly to understand that "they would rather take up their staff and wander further, and doubted not that they would find places where this freedom would be granted them, on which they laid so much stress." Zinzendorf could not for conscience sake let them go, and formed on the ground of the "Ratio disciplinae," "Congregation Regulations" which on May 12, 1727, were accepted and signed by all the inhabitants of Herrnhut. The renewal of the Brethren's Church was completed by the Ancient Brethren's Episcopal Consecration being conferred on David Nitschmann by Jablonsky. This David Ernst Jablonsky, the son of the above-mentioned Petrus Figulus or Jablonsky, then Court Chaplain in Berlin, had, in 1699, received from his father the Episcopal Consecration for the Bohemian and Moravian branch. With the consent of the Polish Brethren's Bishop, Sitkovius, he consecrated David Nitschmann a Bishop on March 13, 1735.

5. Prior to this event, in 1732, when the colony at Herrnhut numbered but six hundred souls, the first two missionaries to foreign lands had been sent forth. On that year, David Nitschmann, afterwards the first Bishop of the Renewed Church, and Leonard Daber, set out for the Island of St. Thomas, each with six dollars in his pocket, determined to sell themselves as slaves if there were no other way of preaching the Gospel to the negroes. The missionary work grew out of this humble beginning, and has always remained the chief undertaking of the Moravian Church. We ennumerate the Moravian Missions as they exist at the present time, because the Brethren translated their hymn-books into the languages of most of those nations to whom they were preaching the Gospel. (The first year in the following list indicates the time of commencement, the second date the baptism of the first convert.)

1. Greenland, 1733 (March 29, 1739), 6 Stations.
2. Labrador, 1752, 1764, 1770 (Feb. 19, 1776), 6 Stations.
3. North America among the Indians, 1740 (Feb. 11, 1742), 4 Stations.
4. St. Thomas and St. John, 1732 (Sept. 30, 1736), 8 Stations.
5. St. Croix, 1733 (July 12, 1744), 3 Stations.
6. Jamaica, 1754 (April 27, 1755), 17 Stations.
7. Antigua, 1756 (1758), 8 Stations.
8. St. Kitts, 1777 (Nov. 14, 1779), 4 Stations.
9. Barbados, 1767 (1768), 4 Stations.
10. Tobago, 1787, renewed 1827 (1799), 3 Stations.
11. Mosquito, 1849 (Oct. 28, 1849), 8 Stations.
12. Demerara, 1878, 2 Stations.
13. Surinam among the Arrawak Indians, 1736, abandoned 1808; among the Negroes (slaves), 1776 (1776), and among the (free) Bush-negroes, 1765 (1771), 16 Stations.
14. South African Western District (among the Hottentots), 1736 (1741), renewed 1792, 10 Stations.
15. South African Eastern District (among the Caffres), 1818 (Jan. 6, 1830), 6 Stations.
16. Australia, 1849, renewed 1858 (Jan. 18, 1860), 2 Stations.
17. West Himalaya, 1853 (1865), 3 Stations.

6. Partly through their travels to the heathen, partly through their fame which spread unconsciously to them, the Moravians became known in other European lands. In 1728, the Countess of Schaumburg-Lippe then in London, asked for nearer accounts of the Moravian settlement in Herrnhut. She was a German lady attached to the retinue of the Queen of the British monarch George II., and had previously corresponded with Zinzendorf. The reply of the Moravian Church was taken by three exiles, who were kindly received by the Countess of Lippe, but they did not obtain an audience of the Queen. In January, 1735, 10 Brethren came to London, and, in August, 20 others followed. They were all destined for mainly with the object of bringing the Gospel to the Creek and Cherokee Indians. Br. Spangenberg had been previously sent to London to make the needful arrangements with the Georgia Trustees. His stay at London was of much importance for the future, as Spangenberg, who had been introduced to Mr. Vernon (the Secretary of the fifty Georgia Trustees), also to General Oglethorpe (the Governor of the colony), and to the Bishop of London, was greatly respected. Some of the Brethren not only expressed a wish to see the Brethren settled in the English colonies, but of their own accord offered to confer other company, which had left Herrnhut in August of the same year for Georgia, sailed in the very ship which conveyed General Oglethorpe, the Revs. John and Charles Wesley, B. Ingham, as well as the colonial officials. It was therefore on this voyage the Brethren which in its results became acquainted—an acquaintance, both as concerned Christendom and heathen lands. In the following years the Moravians hired Lindsey House, Chelsea, and began to hold meetings in London and also in Yorkshire. On the 12th May, 1738, certain statutes were drawn up conjointly by P. Boehler (Moravian minister) and J. Wesley for the guidance and edification of the small Religious Society meeting in the house of J. Hutton in Little Wyld Street. A part of this Society constituted itself as a distinct congregation in Union with the Brethren's Church on Nov. 10, 1742. Until this date two English Moravian hymn-books had been published. The first was put to press Oct. 24, 1741, and was ready for use Nov. 24. It consisted almost exclusively of translations from the German. The second left the press Aug. 4, 1742. (had some English hymns in addition to the contents of the first edition. All the editions till 1754 must be regarded as the undertaking of private individuals, having no sanction from the Church as such. On the 12th May, 1749, the Moravians were acknowledged by a Bill of the English Parliament as a "Protestant Episcopal Church known by the name of Unitas Fratrum or The United Brethren."

7. In the meantime the Moravians founded new settlements in Germany, of which Herrnhag in Wetteravia (founded 1748) was the most important. In the year 1738, the Count of Zinzendorf had been exiled from Saxony, by which means his adversaries had aimed at the destruction of the settlement at Herrnhut. But although Herrnhut during the next years suffered from the Count's exile, yet this misfortune laid the foundation-stone of several new settlements in Germany. The Count, accompanied by his family and some of his most able fellow-labourers, left Saxony, and this "pilgrims' congregation" sought refuge with a friend of Zinzendorf's, the Count of Bidingen, in Wetteravia. Here they bought land, and founded Herrnhag, which became the centre of the Brethren's Unity for the next 12 years. Here the pilgrims' congregation was stationed, visitors from all parts of Germany came and went continually, news from the Missions arrived every week from all parts of the world, while missionaries themselves, accompanied by converted negroes, or Esquimaux, or Indians, &c., gave accounts of their work. Every inhabitant of this little colony, homeless on this earth, was every day prepared to be sent to any part of the world. No wonder that this remarkable congregation felt itself standing above all national, ecclesiastical or other distinctions, that it lost sight of the real relations of this life, and that in its midst a fantastic and sentimental form of religious thought grew up. This is proved by the hymn-books, which were published in the years 1741-49, and which were later suppressed by the Moravians themselves. In 1750, a new Count of Bidingen, who was jealous of Zinzendorf, commanded the inhabitants of Herrnhag to renounce Zinzendorf by signing an edict; but they all, without exception, refused, preferring to leave Herrnhag, and settled, partly in Niesky (Silesia), founded 1742, partly in Pennsylvania. Herrnhag thus deserted, fell to ruins, which stand to this day. In 1747, Zinzendorf was allowed to return to Saxony, and spent the last years of his life (1756-60) at Herrnhut, where he died May 9, 1760. With his death the original history of the Moravian history regarding their hymn-books ends, the next 40 years (1760-1800) being devoted to the constitutional and financial affairs of the Brethren's Church.

ii. Moravian Hymn-books.

(1) Zinzendorf's Collections of Hymns.

The following books are sometimes but falsely taken for the first Moravian books. They have no further connection with Herrnhut than that Zinzendorf edited them, and that most of the hymns in the Moravian H. Bk., 1735, are taken from them. (See i. § 3.)

1. Sammlung geistlicher und lieblicher Lieder (a collection of hymns and spiritual songs), Leipzig, dedicated to his grandmother, Henriette Catharine von Zinzendorf. The dedication is dated: Dresden, May 24, 1728. It contains 889 hymns (28 by Zinzendorf). 2nd ed. unaltered, besides an "Anhang" (No. 890-1078), and a "Zugabe" (addition), No. 1079-1149 (17 hymns by Zinzendorf).

2. Einfältige oder theure Wahrheiten . . . . . aus verschiedenen geistlichen und lieblichen Liedern denen Einfältigen und Kindern vorgelegt durch Graf Ludwig von Zinzendorf (i.e. Simple but precious truths . . . collected from various hymns and spiritual songs produced for simple folk and children by Count L. von Z.), 1727, dedicated to B. W. Marperger. 2 parts, 379 and 363 short hymns in alphabetical order, an extract from the preceding for the children, 2nd ed. 1728. Later hymn-books for the Moravian children, 1754, 1757 (London); 1789 (Barby).

3. Christ-catholisches Singe und Bet-Büchlein nebst einem Anhang (a small Christian Catholic Song and Prayer Book with an Appendix), 1727. Contains 70 hymns from the Heilige Selenlust, of J. Scheffler (q.v.). The "Anhang" contains 147 hymns, an extract from No. 1 for the Roman Catholics.

4. Sammlung geist- und lieblicher Lieder (a collection of hymns and spiritual songs) pub. by M. Marcke at Gürlitz. The dedication to the Princess of Denmark Charlotte Amalie is dated Aug. 27, 1731. Contains 1402 hymns, and an "Anhang," No. 1403-1416. 1009 hymns are taken from the H. Bk. No. 1 (with all the 45 by Zinzendorf), 407 new hymns (among these 81 by Zinzendorf), therefore in all 126 hymns written by Zinzendorf.

5. Graf Ludwig von Zinzendorf, Deutsche Gedichte (German poems by Count Ludwig von Zinzendorf), Herrnhut, 1735, 128 hymns (from the years 1713-35); 2nd ed., Barby, 1766, 130 hymns.

(2) The German Moravian Hymn-books.

1. Das Gesang-Buch der Gemeine in Herrnhut, 1735 (the hymn-book of the congregation at Herrnhut), 972 hymns and an "Anhang," Nos. 973-999. The numeration of the hymns is very defective; the Nos. 814, 869, 894, 948, 977, 978, 982, are all to be found repeated twice; and between Nos. 942 and 943 is one unnumbered hymn. Therefore the book contains 999 hymns, although the last hymn is numbered 991. 841 hymns are taken from Märche's H. Bk. (1. 4), in which 121 are by Zinzendorf (5 are omitted). 158 hymns are new; 87 by Zinzendorf (in all 208); 8 by Rothe; 4 by Erdmuth von Zinzendorf; 2 by M. Dober; 2 by Gutbier; 2 from the Bohemian Brethren's H. Bk.; 7 by non-Moravians; 46 by anonymous authors.

2. The same, 2nd ed., 1737, unaltered with exception of corrected numeration of the hymns. 5 new "Anhänge" (appendices) are added (3. b.). In the following years appeared: 7th "Anhang" hymns, No. 1197-1264, printed most likely 1738. 8th "Anhang" hymns, No. 1265-1370, with a preface by Zinzendorf; "Written on board of the ship Aletta, off Ushant, Apr. 16, 1739." A reprint of No. 2 appeared, 1741, without place of publication:—Das Gesangbuch der Herrnhut; und anderer Brüder-Gemeinen mit denen Cölnischen Liedern vermehrt.

3. a. Christliches Gesangbuch der Evangelischen Brüder-Gemeinen von 1735 zum drittenmal aufgelegt und durchaus revidiert 1741 (i.e. A Christian hymn-book of the Evangelical Brethren's congregations of 1735, edited for the third time and newly revised throughout). The hymns 164-170 are omitted; No. 171 follows on No. 163. In the preface stands: "The whole rubric on the 'anointing' is intentionally omitted, because some hymns in that rubric did not exactly express the meaning of the Holy Scripture, others contained some doctrines which we could never defend." All other deviations from 2. No. 1 consist only in single words and expressions.

b. Anhang als ein zweyter Theil zu dem Gesang-Buche der Evangelischen Brüder-Gemeinen (i.e. Appendix as a second part to the Hymn-book of the Evangelical Brethren's congregations). It contains: Anhang 1-8, 9th (hymns No. 1371-1527); 10th (hymns No. 1528-1681). In the following years appeared:—

c. "Anhang" 11th, hymns No. 1682-1791, with a preface by Zinzendorf, dated "From the tent before Wayomick in the great plain Shehantowáno, in Canada, Oct. 15, 1742." Printed 1743. "Zugabe" (suppl.) to the 11th appendix hymns No. 1792-1862. Printed 1744.

d. "Anhang" 12th, hymns No. 1863-2166, printed 1745. 1st suppl. to the 12th appendix hymns No. 2167-2201. 2nd suppl. hymns No. 2202-2276. 3rd suppl. hymns No. 2277-2313, with a preface dated July 11, 1747. 4th suppl. hymns No. 2314-2357. All the four suppl. were printed in the years 1746-48.

4. The following extracts from the preceding were published:—

a. Ein kleines Gesang-Büchlein zum Gebrauch der Pilger (i.e. A small hymn-book for the use of pilgrims), Frankfurt, 1736.

b. Hirtensieder von Bethlehem (i.e. Pastoral songs from Bethlehem), Germantown (North America), 1742.

5. Wort vom Liede Moses des Knechts Gottes und dem Liede des Lammes, das ist: Alt- und neuer Brüder-Gesang von den Tagen Henocks bisher, für alle Kinder und Seelen Gottes . . . grammelt . . . London, 1753 (i.e. Part of the song of Moses the servant of God and of the song of the Lamb (Revel. 18, 3), i.e. ancient and modern Brethren's song from the days of Enoch till now, collected for all Children and Souls of God . . .). The preface is dated "Westminster Abbey, 1753" (Zinzendorf lived at that time in Hutton's former house opposite Westminster.) The book was printed in Zinzendorf's private press at Lindsey House, Chelsea, which he bought 1750, and entered into 1752. This book is the first chronologically arranged collection of German hymns of all ages. Vol. I. contains 2166 hymns, divided as follows:—(1) Anthems out of the Bible. (2) Scripture hymns. (3) Hys. of the primitive church. (4) Hys. of the ancient Brethren. (5) Hys. after the Reformation. (a) Hys. of the xvi. century; (b) of the xvii. century; (c) those written by the "viri desideriorum" (the so-called Pietists, 1670-1735), and (6) An enchiridion of the hymns of the Brethren's congregation in the xviii. century. Vol. II., London, 1754. It contains 1696 hymns "of the Evangelical Brethren's Church in the xviii. century." The preface is dated "Lindsey House, Jan. 13, 1755."

6. Anhang der übrigen Brüder-Lieder seit 1749 (i.e. Appendix of the Brethren's hymns written since 1749). The preface is dated "Emmaus, 1755." Part I. contains 53 hymns written by Christian Renatus von Zinzendorf (1752). Part II. 310 hymns. Second enlarged ed. 1760. Part I. Nos. 1-73; part II. Nos. 74-243; and a supplement ("Zugabe"), with 55 hymns.

7. Extract from (2) Nos. 6 and 6. Kleines Brüder-Gesang-Buch. Part I. Hirtensieder von Bethlehem (2nd ed. of 2. No. 4, b.) 368 hymns. Part II. Der Gesang des Reipens zu Saron (i.e. The song of the dance at Saron), London, 1754 (parts I. and II., 2nd edition, Barby, 1761, 2397 hymns; 3rd edition, Barby, 1763; 4th ed., Barby, 1767; 5th ed., Barby, 1772 (3rd-4th edition unaltered). Part III., Barby, 1767, 812 hymns.

8. Gesangbuch zum Gebrauch der evangelischen Brüdergemeinen, Barby, 1778 (i.e. Hymn-book for the use of the Evangelical Brethren's congregations). It contains 1760 hymns taken from all the earlier Brethren's hymn-books, and several new. 1227 hymns are written by Moravians (96 hymn-writers), and 127 are mixed, i.e. composed of single verses of Moravian and non-Moravian hymns. 1778-1870, this hymn-book was several times reprinted unaltered. An appendix was added 1806, containing 256 new hymns.

9. Kleines Gesangbuch der evangelischen Brüdergemeine (Small hymn-book of the Evangelical Brethren's Church), Gnadau, 1870. It contains 1212 hymns, 1134 of them are taken from 2. No. 6. 88 are new (12 from the appendix of 1806), of which 15 are written by Moravians. 384 Moravian and 39 mixed hymns are omitted. Therefore this hymn-book contains 556 Moravian and 68 mixed hymns.

(3) The English Moravian Hymn-books.

1. A Collection of Hymns with several translations from the hymn-book of the Moravian Brethren, London, 1742, 187 hymns. 2nd ed., London, 1743, with an appendix hymns No. 198-239; 3rd ed., London, 1746.

2. The same, part II., London, 1746, hymns No. 240-403. At pp. 764-818 a collection of unnumbered hymns and single verses.

3. Part III., London, 1748, 126 hymns and several "single verses out of several German hymns." The same 2nd ed., London, 1749, 126 hymns and additions, No. 127-161.

4. Some other hymns and poems, consisting chiefly of translations from the German, London, 1752.

5. A collection of hymns of the Children of God in all Ages, from the Beginning till now. In two parts, London, 1754. Part I., 695 hymns; part II., "containing hymns of the present Congregation of the Brethren, 460 hymns and several 'single verses'."

6. A collection of hymns chiefly extracted from the larger hymn-book of the Brethren's congregations, London, 1769, 257 hymns.

7. A collection of hymns for the use of the Protestant Church of the United Brethren, London, 1769, 667 hymns. This became the normal hymn-book.

The editions are:—

8. The same, revised and enlarged; Manchester, 1801, with 1000 hymns.

9. Supplement to the edition of 1801; Manchester, 1808, with hymns 1001-1200.

10. New edition with supplement incorporated and revised; Ashton-under-Lyne, 1826, 1200 hymns. In the reprints of this edition it was entitled Laurgy and Hymns for the use of the Protestant Church of the United Brethren.

11. New and revised issue of the 1826, edited by James Montgomery and others; London, 1849, 1260 (1261) hymns. Many of the Brethren's hymns were in this edition replaced by standard English non-Moravian hymns.

12. Appendix to the hymn-book; London, 1876, with 82 mostly modern English non-Moravian hymns.

13. A new and revised edition of No. 11, London, 1896 (Preface, Christmas, 1895), with 1322 hymns. This edition is greatly improved, contains many recent English non-Moravian hymns, and for the first time affixes authors' names. The larger edition also gives the first lines of the originals of the translated hymns.

More, Henry, D.D., was b. at Grantham in 1614, and educated at Eton and Christ's College, Cambridge, where he graduated in 1635, and became a Fellow of his College in 1639. He declined various offers of high preferment. He spent his time mainly in the study of philosophy and as a private tutor. He d. in 1687. In 1640 he pub. his Psychologia, or the First Part of the Song of the Soul, containing a Christiano-Platonic display of Life. In 1647 this was re-published with additions as Philosophical Poems. His poems, collected and edited by Dr. Grouart, are included in the Chertsey Worthies Library. His "Philosopher's Devotion," beginning "Sing aloud! His praise rehearse," is given in Macdonald's England's Antiphon. His Memoirs were pub. in 1710. His Divine Dialogues with Divine Hymns added thereto were pub. in 1668. From a hymn in this work, beginning "When Christ His body up had borne," J. Wesley took 10 st. and moulded them into two hymns, which he included in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, as "Father, if justly still we claim" (The Holy Spirit desired), No. 444; and "On all the earth Thy Spirit shower," No. 445. These hymns are in C. U. in G. Britain and America. [W. T. B.]

Morell, Thomas, was b. in 1781, and educated at Homerton College for the Congregational ministry. About 1800 he became Pastor of a Congregational church at St. Neots, Huntingdonshire, where he remained till 1821, when he was appointed divinity tutor at Wymondley Academy (subsequently removed to London, and known in later years as the Coward Academy). He retained this appointment till his death in 1840. His Studies of History were pub. in a series of volumes; and his Christian Pastor (a poem in three books) in 1809. His hymns are not widely known. The best are:—

1. Father of mercies, condescend. Departure of a Missionary.
2. Go, and the Saviour's grace proclaim. Departure of a Missionary.

These hymns were given in the Evangelical Magazine, Dec., 1818, p. 544, as "Hymns composed for a Missionary Ordination Service. Sung at the Rev. Mr. Morell's Chapel, St. Neots, Oct. 28, 1818, at the ordination of Mr. C. Mault, Missionary to India." Both hymns are signed "M." They were included in Conder's Cong. H. Bk., 1836, and from thence have passed into other collections. [J. J.]

Morison, John, D.D., was b. in Aberdeenshire in 1749. He studied at the University of Aberdeen (King's College), where he graduated M.A. in 1771. In 1780 he became parish minister of Canisbay, Caithness. He received the degree of D.D. from the University of Edinburgh in 1792. He d. at Canisbay, June 12, 1798. He was one of the members added on May 26, 1781, to the Committee appointed by the General Assembly of 1775 to revise the Translations and Paraphrases of 1745. To him are ascribed Nos. 19, 21, 29, 30 and 35, in the 1781 collection, and he is said to have been joint author with John Logan of Nos. 27 and 28. [See Scottish Translations and Paraphrases.] [J. M.]

Morn hath brightened slowly. T. Davis. [Sunday. Autumn.] The author has published this hymn in two forms. The first form is a hymn for Sunday, and was given in his Hys. Old and New, 1864, No. 6, in 6 st. of 6 l., and the second, for Autumn, in his Annus Sanctus, 1877, p. 221. The only difference in these two forms of the hymn is in st. i., l. 4:—

For Sunday. "Calm, and sweet, and holy,
Be our Sabbath Day."
For Autumn. "Calm and sweet and holy,
Be our Autumn day."

The first form only is in C. U. [J. J.]

Morning breaks upon the tomb. W. B. Collyer. [Easter.] 1st pub. in his Hys. partly Collected and partly Original, 1812, No. 960, in 4 st. of 4 l., entitled "Jesus rising—An Easter Hymn," and signed "W. B. C." Its modern use is mainly confined to America. [J. J.]

Morris, Alfred John, was b. at Hampstead, London, March 6, 1814. Educated privately at Cheltenham. Ministered to Congregational Churches at Warrington (1833 to 1839), Manchester (1839 to 1842), Holloway (1842 to 1862), and Bowdon, Cheshire (1862). He d. Nov. 15, 1868. His principal works were Glimpses of Great Men, Religion and Business, Words for the Heart and Life, The Shepherd and his Lambs, and a posthumous volume of sermons, The Open Secret. He was an extensive contributor to the Congregational periodicals. He wrote a large number of hymns for friends which appeared in various magazines. The one hymn by which he will be remembered is "Blest Saviour, let me be a child" (A Child's Prayer), which was appended to one of the discourses in The Shepherd and His Lambs, 1868. This is a hymn of great distinctiveness both of thought and expression, and has been included in many hymnals, especially those for children. [W. G. H.]

Morris, Eliza Fanny, née Goffe, was b. in London in 1821, and married in 1849 to Josiah Morris. She gained the prize for a poem on Kindness to Animals offered by the Band of Hope. Her pub. works are The Voice and the Reply, Worcester, 1858, and Life Lyrics. She also edited a Bible Class Hymn Book, and contributed the words to School Harmonies, pub. by her husband. Her hymns in C. U. include:—

1. Come unto Me and rest. Christ's Invitation. From The Voice and the Reply, 1858, into the 1876 Suppl. to the New Cong. in an altered form.
2. God of pity. God of grace. Lent. This hymn in Litany form appeared in Pt. II. of The Voice and the Reply, 1858, entitled "The Prayer in the Temple." From Miller's Singers and Songs of the Church, 1869, we gather that this hymn was written on the 4th of Sept., 1867. It is in extensive use.
3. O Thou, blest Lamb of God. Love for and trust in Jesus desired. From The Voice and the Reply, 1858, into the Anglican H. Bk., 2nd ed., 1871. [W. G. H.]

Morris, George Perkins, was b. in Philadelphia, Oct. 10, 1802. In early life he removed to New York, where, in 1822, he became the editor of the New York Mirror magazine. On that magazine, together with the Home Journal, he was associated with N. P. Willis. His works include The Deserted Bride, and Other Poems, 1843; Poems, 1853; American Melodies; and some prose pieces. He is best known as a writer of songs, one of which, "Woodman, spare that tree," is very popular. His hymns, "Man clothed and wasteful away" (Victory over Death); and "Searcher of hearts! from mine erase" (Lent), are in a few American collections, as the Songs for the Sanctuary, 1865, and the Methodist Hymnal, 1878. Mr. Morris d. in New York July 6, 1864. [F. M. B.]

Mote, Edward, was b. in Upper Thames Street, London, Jan. 21, 1797. Through the preaching of the Rev. J. Hyatt, of Tottenham Court Road Chapel, he underwent a great spiritual change; and ultimately he became a Baptist minister. For the last 26 years of his life he was pastor at Horsham, Sussex, where he d. Nov. 13, 1874. Mr. Mote published several small pamphlets; and also:—

Hymns of Praise. A New Selection of Gospel Hymns, combining all the Excellencies of our spiritual Poets, with many Originals. By E. Mote. London. J. Nichols, 1836. The Originals number nearly 100.

Concerning the authorship of one of these original hymns much uncertainty has existed. The hymn is:—

1. Nor earth, nor hell my soul can move. (Jesus All in All.) In 6 st. of 4 l., with a refrain. Mr. Mote's explanation, communicated to the Gospel Herald, is:—

"One morning it came into my mind as I went to labour, to write an hymn on the 'Gracious Experience of a Christian.' As I went up Holborn I had the chorus,

'On Christ the solid Rock I stand,
All other ground is sinking sand.'

In the day I had four first verses complete, and wrote them off. On the Sabbath following I met brother King as I came out of Lisle Street Meeting... who informed me that his wife was very ill, and asked me to call and see her. I had an early tea, and called afterwards. He said that it was his usual custom to sing a hymn, read a portion, and engage in prayer, before he went to meeting. He looked for his hymn-book but could find it nowhere. I said, 'I have some verses in my pocket; if he liked, we would sing them.' We did; and his wife enjoyed them so much, that after service he asked me, as a favour, to leave a copy of them for his wife. I went home, and by the fire-side composed the last two verses, wrote the whole off, and took them to sister King... As these verses so met the dying woman's case, my attention to them was the more arrested, and I had a thousand printed for distribution. I sent one to the Spiritual Magazine, without my initials, which appeared some time after this. Brother Rees, of Crown Street, Soho, brought out an edition of hymns (1836), and this hymn was in it. David Denham introduced it [1837] with Rees's name, and others after... Your inserting this brief outline may in future shield me from the charge of stealth, and be a vindication of truthfulness in my connection with the Church of God."

The form in which the hymn is usually found is:—

2. My hope is built on nothing less (st. II.), sometimes in 4 st., and at others in 5 st., and usually without the refrain. The original in the author's Hys. of Praise, 1836, is No. 465, and entitled, "The immutable Basis of a sinner's hope." Bishop Rickersteth calls it a "grand hymn of faith." (H. Comp. Notes.) It dates circa 1834, and is in extensive use. [W. R. S.]

Motte, de la. [Fouqué, F. H. C.]

Moule, Henry, M.A. b. Jan. 27, 1801, bridge, B.A. 1821, at St. John's College, Cambridge. In 1824, M.A. 1828. Taking Holy Orders in 1824, he was successively Curate of Melksham, and of Gillingham, Dorset; and vicar of Fordington, Dorset. He d. at Fordington, Feb. 3, 1880. His publications in small prose works, and the following in verse:—Scraps of Sacred Verse, 1846, and in C. U. we have, "Lord God, in Thee con-fiding" (1863), "Faith and Hope"; and "For Burial." In addition to these there are 29 hymns by Mr. Moule in the Appendix to the

Fordington H. Bk., Dorchester, H. Ling, 1878, all of which are signed Rev. Henry Moule. [J. J.]

Moule, Handley Carr Glyn, M.A., s. of the Rev. H. Moule, was b. at Fordington, Dec. 23, 1841, and educated at home and at Trinity College, Cambridge, B.A. in 1st class Classical and Theological honours, 1864-65. He was Carus prizeman, 1862; Browne's Medallist, 1863; and gained the Seatonian Prize, 1869-73 and 1876. Taking Holy Orders in 1867, he was curate of Fordington, Dorset, 1867-73, and 1877-80; Dean, Trinity College, Cambridge, 1874-77; and Principal of Ridley Hall, Cambridge, 1880. He was Fellow of his College, 1865; Select Preacher at Cambridge, 1880-81, 87; and Chaplain to the Bishop of Liverpool, 1880. His works include:—

(1) The Seatonian Prize Poems as above; (2) Poems on the Acts of the Apostles, 1869; (3) Sermons on the Litanies, 1870; Dorchester Poems, 1878; (4) Commentaries on the Epistles to the Romans, Ephesians, and Philip-pians, in the Cambridge Bible for Schools, 1880-89; (5) Christianus and Other Poems, 1883; (6) Thoughts on Christian Sanctity, 1885 (with hymns appended); (7) On Union with Christ, 1885 (with hymns appended); On Spiritual Life, 1887 (with hymns appended); and others. Mr. Moule was also a contributor to Smith's Dict. of Christian Biography.

Of Mr. Moule's hymns the following appeared in the Appendix to the Fordington H. Bk., 1878:—

1. Chief Shepherd of Thy people. Missions.
2. Jesus, such His love and power. A present Saviour.
3. Lift heart and voice above. Christmas.

In the same Appendix there is a paraphrase of the Benedicite in metre, "Bless the Lord of glory," by H. M. Moule, M.A., of Queen's College, Cambridge, brother of the above, b. 1832, d. 1873. [J. J.]

Moultrie, Gerard, M.A., s. of the Rev. John Moultrie, was b. at Rugby Rectory, Sept. 16, 1829, and educated at Rugby and Exeter College, Oxford (B.A. 1851, M.A. 1856). Taking Holy Orders, he became Third Master and Chaplain in Shrewsbury School; Chaplain to the Dowager Marchioness of Londonderry, 1855-59; curate of Brightwalham, 1859; and of Brinsford, Berks, 1860; Chaplain of the Donative of Barrow Gurney, Bristol, 1864; Vicar of Southleigh, 1869, and Warden of St. James's College, Southleigh, 1873. He d. April 25, 1885. His publications include:

(1) The Primer set forth at large for the use of the Faithful. In Family and Private Prayer. Edited from the Post Reformation editions, 1864. (2) Hymns and Lyrics for the Seasons and Saints' Days of the Church, 1867. The hymns of his sister, Mary Dunlop Moultrie (q.v.), were included in this volume. (3) The Epistles of S. Dorothea and Other Verses, 1870. (4) The Devout Communicant, 1867. (5) Six Years' work in Southleigh, 1875. (6) Canticles Sanctiorum, or Hymns for the Black Letter Saints Days in the English and Scottish Calendars, to which are added a few Hymns for Special Occasions, 1880.

Mr. Moultrie's hymns include trs. from the Greek, Latin, and German, in addition to original compositions. A large number appeared in the Church Times, and other papers; and many were written for special Saints' Days, and Other Festivals, for the People's Hymnal, 1867, in which some were signed "D. P." (i.e. Desiderius Pastor). In addition to those annotated elsewhere in this work (see Index) the following are in C. U.:—

i. In The Primer, 1864.

1. Father of all, to Thee we pray. Lord's Prayer.
2. In the Name of God the Father. Laying Foundation Stone. (2nd st.: "And as on the morning stillness.") 1st appeared in the Church Times, Oct. 1, 1864, and again (as rewritten for the laying of the foundation stone of St. Margaret's, East Grinstead), July 29, 1866.

ii. In Hymns and Lyrics, 1867.

3. Bishop of the souls of men. St. Matthias.
4. Come, faithful people, come away. Palm Sunday.

8. O Jesu, O Redeemer. St. Luke.
9. Mary, maiden undefiled. Visitation of the B. V. M.
10. Silence reigns at eventide. Whitsuntide. In the Altar Hymnal, 1884, it begins with st. iii., "Hark, a rushing mighty sound."
11. The Marriage feast is ready. All Saints. Usually given in an abbreviated form.
12. Virgin-born the King of heaven. Christmas Midnight Hymn. ("To be sung at the Midnight Celebration.") In the Church Times, Nov. 26, 1864, and revised for Hys. & Lyrics.
13. We march, we march to victory. Processional. In the Church Times, Aug. 19, 1865, and headed "Processional hymn before service (written expressly for use during present troubles)."
14. Who is this that shines so bright! St. Lawrence. In the People's H., 1867.
15. Who keeps his birthday feast to-night! Re-reading of St. John Baptist. In the People's H., 1867.

iii. In The People's Hymnal, 1867.

16. Heart to heart, and side by side. Holy Matrimony.
17. I know that my Redeemer liveth. Burial. A paraphrase of the Responsory in the Roman Office for the Dead.
18. Jesus Christ, we humbly pray. Opening of a School House.
19. Lord of heaven, Whose faithful love. Ember Days.
20. Lord, to-day we bring to Thee. Reception of a Privately Baptized Child.
21. Lord, we come to-day to Thee. Choir Festival.
22. O God, Who had'st Thine angel sheathe. National Thanksgiving for restored Public Health. This is given in the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871, as "O God, Whose angel stay'd his hand," and in the Hymnary, 1872, as "Lord, Who didst bid Thine angel sheathe."
23. O Lord of Hosts, Thou God of might. National Thanksgiving for Peace. In several collections.
24. Sevenfold Spirit, Lord of life. Consecration of a Bishop. First sung at the consecration of an American bishop at New York, in 1867. Included in the author's Exposuials of St. Dorothy, 1879.
25. Sounds the bell in solemn cadence. Burial. In The Exposuials of St. Dorothy, 1879, p. 82, the note is added, "This hymn was first sung at the funeral of the Rev. Warwick Wroth of Clerkenwell." It is headed "Funeral Hymn for a Priest."

iv. In Cantica Sanctorum, 1880.

26. In the midst of gladness, sorrow. Annunciation (in Holy Week).
27. Jesus, tender Shepherd. Holy Communion.
28. Swing the censer, wave the banner. Processional.

v. In The Altar Hymnal, 1884.

29. Our great High Priest is standing. Holy Communion.
30. Lo, the Sacrifice atoning. Holy Communion.

vi. Various.

31. Forward, Christians, forward. Processional. Written for the Church of England Working Men's Society in 1879, and issued as a leaflet, of which 40,000 copies were sold during the first year.
32. Laid in this garden full of bloom. Easter Eve. In the Churchman's Companion, April, 1879.
33. On the wings of the wind fell a hymn from the sky. Christmas. In Husband's Supplemental Hys., N.D. [1873].
34. Shades of night are falling round us. Evening. Novello & Co., with Music by Shad From.
35. There is a sound of rejoicing around the great throne. Processional. Written for St. Michael's Church, Folkestone, and pub. in E. Husband's Appendix to H. A.

& M., N.D. [1873]. It was set to music by Mr. Husband, and is commonly known as "The Folkestone Processional."

36. This is the festival day of jubilation. Sunday 8. Anniversary. A hymn to be sung alternately by men and boys during the collection, written in 1877 for St. Agnes's, Kennington, London.

37. This is the hour of peace and blest communion. Holy Communion. Written for the English Church Union Commemoration held at St. Agnes's, Kennington Park, London, June 9, 1880.

From the subjects of the hymns noted above it will be seen that Mr. Moultrie wrote principally on matters not usually dealt with by hymn-writers. This is especially the case with his Cantica Sanctorum, in which most of the 103 hymns are for "Black Letter Saints' Days." [J. J.]

Moultrie, John, M.A., father of Gerard and Mary D. Moultrie, was b. Dec. 31, 1799, at London, and educated at Trinity College, Cambridge (B.A. 1823), where he was Bells University Scholar, 1820, and Trinity College Scholar, 1822. Taking Holy Orders in 1825, he was presented the same year by the Earl of Craven to the Rectory of Rugby, where he remained till his death, on Dec. 26, 1874.

His publications included:—

- (1) My Brother's Grave, and other Poems, 1837;
- (2) Dream of Life, Lays of the English Church, &c., 1843;
- (3) Memoir and Poetical Remains of W. S. Walker, 1852;
- (4) Sermons, 1852;
- (5) Altars, Hearths, and Graves, 1854;
- (6) Psalm and Hymns as Sung in the Parish Church, Rugby, 1851.

In his Preface Mr. Moultrie says of the Ps. & Hys., 1851:—

"The present collection of Psalm & Hymns is founded on the basis of that which has been in use during the last twelve years in the Parish Church of Rugby, and for which the congregation of that Church are indebted to the kindness and taste of the Rev. H. J. Bucknoll."

Further on in the same preface he says:—

"More than twenty original compositions—some altered or abridged from my former publications, others written expressly for the present collection, and (I am sorry to add) on the spur of the moment—have thus been introduced into company with which they have perhaps but slender claims to associate. Several of these are little more than paraphrases of the Epistles or Gospel for the day."

These hymns, most of which are in Kennedy, 1863, include the following:—

1. Blest are the eyes of those. Gospel, 13 & after Trinity. (The Good Samaritan.)
2. Bring the infant to the font. Holy Baptism.
3. Christ His own Apostles chooseth. St. Andrew.
4. Dear Lord, a lonely life was Thine. Gospel, 4 S. after Epiphany. (Still the Tempest.)
5. Friends and parents lingered weeping. Gospel, 24 S. after Trinity. (Raising the Ruler's daughter.)
6. God, Who dost the increase grant. Seragima. (The Sower.)
7. In patient faith till Christ shall come. Gospel, 6 S. after Epiphany.
8. In the beaming brow of Moses. Epistle, 12 S. after Trinity.
9. Lord, with glad and grateful spirits. Epistle, 1 S. after Trinity. (Perfect Love.)
10. Meek to suffer, strong to save. St. Mark.
11. Mysterious to the Christian heart. St. Michael and All Angels.
12. No act of sin our Saviour wrought. Collect, 2 S. after Easter. (Christ the Example.)
13. O Lord, a wondrous story. For Sunday Schools.
14. Our mortal eyes are all too dim. St. Stephen.
15. Source of wisdom, past and present. For Sunday Schools.
16. The world may look serene and bright. Circumcision.
17. Thou gavest, Lord, the life we live. Holy Communion.
18. When our hearts with grief are sore. Epistle. Ash Wednesday.
19. Wondrous was Thy path on earth. Gospel, 3 S. after Epiphany. (Marriage in Cana of Galilee.)

These hymns, from the special subjects of which they treat, are of more than ordinary interest to hymnal compilers, and are worthy of attention. Nos. 4, 6, 7, 12, 16, 18, 19, are from his Lays of the English Church, 1843; the rest were written expressly for the Ps. & Hys., 1851 (s. 188.). [J. J.]

Moultrie, Mary Dunlop, dau. of John and sister of Gerard Moultrie, was b. at the Rectory, Rugby, July, 1837, and d. there, June 15, 1866. Her hymns were included in her brother's Hymns and Lyrics, 1867, with her initials "M. D. M." [J. J.]

Μούνη μοι πάτρη περιλείπετο.
[Ποῦ δὲ λόγοι πτερόεντες.]

Möwen, Heinrich, was b. Feb. 25, 1793, at Magdeburg. After passing through the Cathedral school at Magdeburg, he entered the University of Göttingen in 1812, and in 1814 volunteered for service against Napoleon and fought in a Westphalian Jäger Battalion at the battles of Ligny and Waterloo and before Paris, gaining the Iron Cross for his bravery. Thereafter he resumed his studies (now at the University of Halle), and was then for a year assistant master in the Cathedral school at Magdeburg. In 1818 he was appointed pastor at Angern and Wenddorf; and in 1822 at Altenhausen and Ivenrode near Magdeburg. On account of a weak chest, and bleeding from the lungs, in January, 1829 he was compelled to cease preaching for a time, and finally had to resign his charge in June, 1830, retiring to Magdeburg. Failing to obtain suitable work, he returned, in July, 1832, to Altenhausen, where he remained ever after. In January, 1834, he had so far recovered that he began to try to obtain preferment; and in the beginning of October was offered the appointment of Pastor and Superintendent at Weferlingen, near Neuhaldeusenleben. But meantime, in April, his illness had returned with redoubled violence, and, after great suffering, he d. Oct. 14, 1834 (Koch, vii. 247; Allg. Deutsche Biog. xxii.; biographical sketch prefixed to his Gedichte, 1836, &c.).

After the spiritual change which Möwen experienced in his first pastorate he became a most earnest and devoted pastor and preacher, and greatly interested himself in the work of Foreign Missions. He bore his long continued sufferings with great fortitude and patience. His hymns, not numbering more than ten, and all written after the beginning of his illness, bear the stamp of heroic Christian faith, childlike submission, and deep affection for the Almighty Hand that loves even when it wounds. They are great favourites in Germany with the sick and sorrowing; but are too subjective, and too unfinished in style to be employed otherwise than for private use. Only one or two have passed into German hymn-books. They appeared, along with his other poems, and with a prefatory memoir by Friedrich Arndt of Berlin, as his Gedichte, at Magdeburg, 1836.

Nine of Möwen's hymns have passed into English, viz. —

i. Der Himmel hängt voll Wolken schwer. Cross and Consolation. Written Oct. 9, 1831, at Magdeburg under sufferings during which the period of his death seemed to have come; and when his daughter Mary seemed also in peril of death. In a letter to a friend he says:—

"My soul strove with all her might to soar away from the tortured body, and rent the clouds with her prayers, to obtain by entreaty the order for departure from the Heavenly Master. . . But, while my body would succumb, my soul arose, she sang what I end to you" (Life prefixed to his Gedichte, 1836, pp. 81-84).

The text of the hymn is included in the Gedichte, 1836, p. 72, in 7 st. of 4 l., as a "prayer in distress and in death." In the Württemberg U. H., 1842, No. 46a. The trs. are (1) "The heavens are cloth'd in sable shrouds." By Dr. G. Walker, 1840, p. 91. (2) "The heavens are foul with wind and clouds." By E. Massie, 1846, p. 92.

ii. Du sollst, so sprach der Herr, du sollst ermatten. Submission. Written July 12, 1832. Gedichte, 1836, p. 78, in 6 st. Tr. as "Thus said the Lord—Thy days of health are over." By Miss Borthwick, in H. L. L., 1854, p. 35 (1884, p. 157).

iii. Ich glaube! Hallelujah. Joy in Believing. Written in July, 1831. Gedichte, 1836, p. 43, in 5 st. of 9 l. The tr. in C. U. is: "Hallelujah! I believe!" In full by Miss Borthwick in H. L. L., 3rd Ser., 1854, p. 8 (1884, p. 133). Included in full in Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869, p. 337, Bp. Kyle's Coll., 1860, and Held's Praise Bk., 1872; and, omitting st. ii., iii. in the Christian Hyl., Adelaide, 1872.

iv. Ich hatte der Kinder viere. Death of Children. Written Oct. 4, 1830, on the death of his daughter Eliza. Gedichte, 1836, p. 40, in 9 st. Tr. as "I had once four lovely children." By Miss Borthwick in H. L. L., 1862, p. 28 (1884, p. 199).

v. Ich stehe noch auf heimatlichem Strande. The Missionary's Farewell. Written at Magdeburg in 1831, and included in the third Jahresbericht ed. in 1831, by Möwen, for the Evangelical Missionary Society at Magdeburg. Gedichte, 1836, p. 49, in 10 st. The trs. are: (1) "Still on the shores of home my feet are standing." By Miss Borthwick, in H. L. L., 1862, p. 14 (1884, p. 187). (2) "Still on my native shore my feet are standing." By Miss Burlingham in the British Herald, Sept. 1866, p. 141. (3) "Albeit my steps are on my native strand." In L. Rehfuss's Church at Sea, 1868, p. 2.

vi. Ist genug für deinen Namen. Christian Work. Written Feb. 2, 1829. Gedichte, 1836, p. 18, in 7 st. Tr. as "Is Thy work all ended, Lord?" By Miss Borthwick, in H. L. L., 1862, p. 67 (1884, p. 229).

vii. Merkt Ihrs. Freundel—Mein Auge wird müde. A Pastor's parting words. Written Feb. 26, 1829. Gedichte, 1836, p. 14, in 8 st. According to his wish three lines of st. vii. were inscribed on his tombstone. Tr. as "Hear me, my friends! the hour has come." By Miss Borthwick, in H. L. L., 1864, p. 39 (1884, p. 161).

viii. Thatest sonst uns nichts zu Leide. Cross and Consolation. Written June 13, 1829, on the death of his mother-in-law. Gedichte, 1836, p. 27, in 6 st. entitled "Grief and Consolation on a mother's homegoing." Tr. as "Never couldst thou bear to grieve us." By Miss Borthwick, in H. L. L., 1854, p. 46 (1884, p. 46).

ix. Wohin! Wohin! The Two Journeys. Written Feb. 21, 1829. Gedichte, 1836, p. 12, in 8 st. Tr. as "Whither, oh, whither?—With blindfolded eyes." By Miss Borthwick, in H. L. L., 1854, p. 19 (1884, p. 144).

Much in sorrow, oft in woe. H. K. White. [Christian Soldier encouraged.] In Collyer's Hys. partly Collected and partly Original, &c., 1812, No. 867, the following lines were given together with the note added thereto:—

"The Christian Soldier encouraged.

1 Tim. vi. 12. H. K. WHITE.

"1. Much in sorrow, oft in woe,
Onward, Christians, onward go,
Fight the fight, and worn with strife,
Sleep with tears the bread of life.

"2. Onward, Christians, onward go,
Join the war, and face the foe:
Faint not—much doth yet remain,
Dreary is the long campaign.

"3. Shrink not, Christians—will ye yield?
Will ye quit the painful field?
• Fight till all the conflict's o'er,
Nor your foes rally more.

"4. But when loud the trumpet blow Speaks their forces overthrow,
Christ, your Captain, shall bestow
Crown to grace the conqueror's brow."

• • The mutilated state of this hymn, which was written on the back of one of the mathematical papers of this excellent young man, and which came into my hands a mere fragment, rendered it necessary for something to be added—and I am answerable for the last six lines."

In 1827 Mrs. Bethia Fuller-Maitland compiled and published Hymns for Private Devotion, Selected and Original (Lond., Hatchards). In this work an enlarged form of "Much in sorrow, oft in woe," made by her daughter Frances Sara Fuller-Maitland, then but 14 years of age, was given as No. 106. White's st. i., ii., iii., ll. 1, 2, were given as above, and the following lines were added thereto:—

- Will ye flee in danger's hour?
Know ye not your Captain's power?
- "4. Let your drooping hearts be glad;
March in heavenly armour clad;
Fight, nor think the battle long,
Victory soon shall tune your song.
- "5. Let not sorrow dim your eye,
Soon shall every tear be dry;
Let not fears your course impede,
Great your strength, if great your need.
- "6. Onward then to battle move,
More than conquerors ye shall prove;
Though opposed by many a foe,
Christian soldiers, onward go."

This text was republished by Mrs. Colquhoun, née Fuller-Maitland, in her Rhymes and Chimes (Lond., Macmillan), 1876. We may add that of the "original" compositions in the 1827 Hys. for Private Devotion, &c., one was by Miss F. S. Fuller-Maitland, and two others were by her sister Esther.

In his Christian Psalmody, 1833, No. 125, E. Bickersteth gave the White-Fuller-Maitland text in 4 st., with several alterations, the most important being in st. 1, which read:—

- "Oft in sorrow, oft in woe,
Onward, Christians, onward go;
Fight the fight, maintain the strife,
Strengthen'd with the bread of life."

Another version of the same text was given in Hall's Mitre H. Bk., 1836, the opening lines of which are:—

- "Oft in danger, oft in woe, Onward, Christians, onward go."

From these four sources H. K. White, 1806; W. B. Collyer, 1812; F. S. Fuller-Maitland, 1827; E. Bickersteth, 1833; and W. J. Hall, 1836, the popular modern form of this hymn has been manipulated. In translating the hymn varying texts have been used. Those in Latin are (1) "Ito sepe per dolorem," by Bingham, in his Hymno. Christ. Lat., 1871, is from the S. P. C. K. Ps. & Hys., No. 273; and (2) "Vos dolores tolerantia," by Macgill in his Songs of the Christian Creed and Life, is from the Kirke White Fuller-Maitland version. [J. J.]

Mudie, Charles Edward, the founder of the well-known library which bears his name, was b. at Cheyne Walk, Chelsea, Oct. 18, 1818. In 1872 he collected his poems and pub. them as Stray Leaves (2nd ed., 1873). Several poems on Scriptural subjects, and a few hymns are included in the volume. The hymn by which he is best known is "I lift my heart to Thee, Saviour divine" (His and Mine). It is from the Stray Leaves, and is in several hymn-books, including the Scottish Evang. Union Hymnal, 1878; Order's Cong. Hys., 1884, and many others. It is marked by great beauty and tenderness of expression. Several of Mr. Mudie's hymns, which are not in C. U. are worthy of attention. [W. G. H.]

Mühlenberg, William Augustus, D.D., s. of the Rev. Dr. Mühlenberg, and grandson of Henry Melchior Mühlenberg, the patriarch of Lutheranism in America, was b. in Philadelphia Sept. 16, 1796. He graduated at the University of Pennsylvania in 1814. Entering Holy Orders in 1817, he was successively Assistant Rector of St. James's Lancaster, 1823; Rector of the Church of the Holy Communion New York, 1843; St. Paul's College, Flushing (1828); St. Luke's Hospital, New York (1855); St. John's and Long Island (1865), were established by him. He d. April 6, 1877. His poetical gift was genuine, but not largely used. In 1826 he contributed 4 hymns to the Prayer Book Coll. (of which he was one of the Committee). His Poems appeared in 1859. He had previously pub. Church Poetry, 1823; and The People's Psalter, 1858. I would not live alway followed in 1859 (revised in 1871). This last contains 26 pieces, the hymns in the Prayer Book Coll., 1826, with the exception of "I would not live alway," being omitted. The following are his principal lyrics:—

1. Carol. brothers, carol. Christmas Carol. "Made for the boys of St. Paul's College—the Chorus adapted from one of the Rev. [Bp.] A. C. Coxe's Christian Ballads"—in 1840.

2. How short the race our friend has run. Death of a Young Person. Contributed to the Prayer Bk. Coll., 1826.

3. I would not live alway. Eternal rest desired. Four texts of this poem are extant: 1st the Original; 2nd the version given in the Prayer Bk. Coll., 1826; 3rd the author's revised version of 1859; and 4th his rewritten text of 1871, the second of these being that known to the hymn-books. The history of the poem is somewhat complicated. We quote it here as given by us in the History of the American Episcopal Church, 1885, p. 637, as we have nothing further to add thereto:—

"The most famous of these (Dr. Mühlenberg's) hymns) was probably first written. 'I will not live alway' has an intricate history, which was not simplified by the author's lapse of memory in his later years. In his brief 'story of the hymn,' printed with its 'evangelized' text in 1871, every date is wrong by two or three years; and his assertion, 'The legend that it was written on an occasion of private grief is a fancy, barely agrees with the clear and minute recollections of persons of the highest character, still living, and who knew the circumstances thoroughly. The date of composition assigned, 1824, is probably (not certainly) correct; it was written at Lancaster, in a lady's album, and began:—

- 'I would not live alway; no, no, holy man,
Not a day, not an hour, should lengthen my span.'

In this shape it seems to have had six eight-line stanzas. The album was still extant in 1876, at Pottstown, Pa., and professed to contain the original manuscript. Said the owner's sister, 'It was an impromptu. He had no copy, and, wanting it for some occasion, he went for the album.' In 1826 he entrusted his copy to a friend, who called on him on the way from Harrisburg to Philadelphia, to carry to the Episcopal Recorder, and in that paper it appeared June 3, 1826 (not 1824). For these facts we have the detailed statement of Dr. John B. Clemson, of Claymont, Del., the Ambassador mentioned, who also chances to have preserved that volume of the paper. Thus appearing (without name) it was adopted by the sub-committee [of the Prayer Bk. Coll., 1826]. When their report was presented to the entire committee in 1826—not 1829, as Dr. Mühlenberg has it—each of the hymns was passed upon. When this came up one of the members remarked that it was very sweet and pretty, but rather sentimental, upon which it was unanimously thrown out. Not suspected as the author, I voted against myself. That, I supposed, was the end of it. The committee, which sat until late at night at the house of Bishop White, agreed upon their report to the Convention, and adjourned. But the next morning Dr. Onderdonk (who was not one of their number, but who, on invitation, had acted with the sub-committee, which in fact consisted of him and myself), called on me to inquire what had been done. Upon my telling him that among the rejected hymns was this one of mine, he said, 'That will never do,' and went about among the members of the committee soliciting them to restore the hymn in their report, which accordingly they did; so that to him is due the credit of giving it to the Church.' As thus adopted it was a small and altered selection from the original lines, made by Dr. Onderdonk 'with some revision' by the author. He was never satisfied with these texts, but revised the poem in 1859, and rewrote it in 1871. . . . The authorship of this, as of many another popular lyric, has been disputed. The claim of Henry Ward, a printer of Litchfield, Conn., has been vehemently urged, and revived but a few years ago. Of course it is unsupported by adequate evidence. When Dr. Mühlmann was asked to assure 'some of his brethren, editors of Church papers,' of his paternity, his manly reply was, 'If they thought I was capable of letting the work of another pass for so many years as my own, they would not be sure of anything I might say.'

4. Jesus' Name shall ever be. The Holy Name, Jesus. This is entitled "The Blessed Name of Jesus. An Evangelical Rosary." It was written in 1842, and revised for Schaff's Christ in Song in Aug., 1868.

5. King of kings, and wilt Thou deign. Submission to Jesus. Appeared in his Poems, 1859.

6. Like Noah's wary dove. The Ark of the Church. Contributed to the Prayer Bk. Coll., 1826, No. 24, in 5 st. of 4 l. It sometimes begins with st. ii., "O cease, my wandering soul;" and again with st. iii., "Behold the Ark of God."

7. Saviour, Who Thy flock art feeding. Holy Baptism. This is the most widely known of Dr. Mühlmann's hymns. It was contributed to the Prayer Bk. Coll., 1826, No. 86, in 4 st. of 4 l. It is sometimes given as "Jesus, Who Thy flock art feeding."

8. Shout the glad tidings, exultingly sing. Christmas. Contributed to the Prayer Bk. Coll., 1826, No. 46, in 3 st. of 4 l., with the chorus:—

"Shout the glad tidings, exultingly sing, Jerusalem triumphs, Messiah is King;"

the opening lines, followed by the first stanza, and a repetition of the chorus, and so on to the end. Sometimes the hymn opens with st. i.: "Zion, the marvellous story be telling," or as "Sion the marvellous story be telling," instead of the chorus. Dr. Mühlmann says that the hymn was written—

"at the particular request of Bishop Hobart, who wanted something that would go to the tune by Arlson, then popular, to the words of Moore, 'Sound the loud timbrel,' &c. He liked the verses I made so well that he had them struck off before the hymns [Prayer Bk. Coll.] were published, and sung in Trinity Church on Christmas day."

9. Since e'er Thy footstep here below. Earth and Heaven. Appeared in the Episcopal Register, 1824, and in his Poems, 1859.

10. The mellow eve is gliding. Evening. Dated 1825 (?) and pub. in his Poems, 1859.

11. The throne of his glory—as snow it is white. Advent. Dated 1839, and pub. in his Poems, 1859.

12. Thine handmaid, Saviour, can it be! Admission of a Nursing Sister. Written on the words, "Come, follow me," for the reception of a Sister at St. Luke's Hospital, New York, 1859.

Mühlmann, Johannes, a. of Hieronymus Mühlmann or Mülmann, pastor at Pegau, near Leipzig, was b. at Pegau, July 28, 1573. He studied at the Universities of Leipzig (M.A. January, 1597) and Jena, and was then for some time Saturday preacher at St. Thomas's Church in Leipzig. In 1599 he was appointed diaconus of the St. Wenzel Church in Naumburg, and in 1604 pastor at Laucha on the Unstrut. In the end of 1604 he became archidiaconus of the St. Nicholas Church at Leipzig, and, in 1607, was also appointed Professor of Theology in the University, and b.d. in 1612. He d., of typhus, at Leipzig, Nov. 14, 1613. (Allg. Deutsche Biog. xxii. 483; Goedeke's Grundriss, vol. iii., 1887, p. 151, &c.)

Mühlmann was a staunch upholder of Lutheran orthodoxy, alike against Romanists and Calvinists. He was a great lover of the Psalms; his published sermons, as well as his hymns, are based on them, and almost his last words were Ps. lxxiii., 3, "Thy lovingkindness is better than life." Wackernagel v. pp. 443-447, gives five hymns under his name, all of which are found in the Geistliche Psalmen, &c., pub. at Nürnberg in 1618, by J. Lauer. (The only known copy, in the Royal Library, Berlin, has lost its titlepage.)

Two of Mühlmann's hymns have passed into English, viz.:—

1. Dank sei Gott in der Höhe. Morning. The most popular of his hymns. Appeared 1618 as above, with his initials, and thence in Wackernagel v. p. 444, in 7 st. of 8 l. Also in the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 443. Tr. as:—

While yet the morn is breaking. A good tr. of st. i., ii., v., vii. by Miss Winkworth, as No. 163 in her C. B. for England, 1863. Repeated in full in the Ohio Luth. Hymnal, 1880, and abridged in the Marlborough College H. Bk., 1869.

Another tr. "Christ is the vine, we branches are" (st. vii.). By J. Swertner, as No. 438, in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789 (1849, No. 612).

II. O Lebens-Brünnlein tief und gross. Ps. lxxv. Appeared 1618 as above, with his initials, in 9 st. of 9 l., entitled "a hymn from the 65th Psalm." Thence in Wackernagel v. p. 446; also in the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 426. It is really a hymn on Christ as the Fountain of Life here and in Eternity, and with Ps. lxxv. 10 as its motto. Tr. as:—

O spring of Life, so deep, so great. A good tr. of st. i., ii., v., vi., ix. by A. T. Russell, as No. 166 in his Ps. & Hys., 1851.

For the hymn "Wer Gott vertraut" sometimes ascribed to Mühlmann, see Magdeburg. J. [J. M.]

Müller, Heinrich, was a native of Nürnberg. About 1526 or 1527 he was imprisoned as a Lutheran by Duke Georg of Saxony, but was released after the Duke d. on April 17, 1539. Thereafter, till about 1580, he kept a school for writing and arithmetic at Annaberg in Saxony. Bartholomäus Müller, sometime schoolmaster at Zwickau in Saxony, in a petition presented to the Elector Christian I. in 1587, and in another petition presented to the Elector Christian II. in 1601, described himself as the son of this Heinrich Müller, and declared that the hymn noted below was written by his father during his imprisonment (see Koch i. 417; Wetzels A. H. ii. 720, &c.). The hymn in question is:—

Hilf Gott, dass mir gelinge. History of the Passion. In his Bibliographie, 1858, p. 10, Wackernagel cites two broadsheets as of 1527. In his D. Kirchenlied iii. p. 85, the earliest source from which he prints the text, is however the Bergkreyen, Nürnberg, 1536, though he says it had appeared in print in 1524 (apparently a misprint for 1527). He speaks of the Magdeburg G. B., 1534, as the earliest hymn-book in which it is included,

This is however an oversight, as it is found in the Roßtock G. B., 1531, where it is entitled "A new hymn on the Word of God and His bitter sufferings," and begins "Help God mi mach gelingen." It is in 13 st. of 7 l., the initial letters of the stanzas giving the name Heinrich Müller, and the two concluding lines being "Hat Heinrich Müller gesungen In dem Gefängnis sein."

From the above note it is clear that the hymn was written by a Heinrich Müller, during an imprisonment, and was in print at least as early as 1531. The ascription to Heinrich Müller, professor at Wittenberg, is therefore impossible, seeing he was only b. in 1530. The ascription to Heinrich von Zütphen (b. at Zütphen in Gelderland, c. 1488, became an Augustinian monk, and in 1515 prior of the Augustinian monastery at Dordrecht; began to preach as a Reformer in Bremen, Nov. 9, 1522; murdered at Heide near Meldorf, in Holstein, Dec. 10, 1524) is also untenable, for neither by himself nor by his contemporaries was he ever styled Heinrich Müller, and there was during his life no period of imprisonment during which he might have written this hymn. The history of the Nürnberg Müller noted above is not indeed very clear, but his claim has at least much more appearance of truth than that of any other.

The hymn was a great favourite during the Reformation period, was included by Luther in V. Babst's G. B., 1548, and passed into many later books. It is a ballad rather than a hymn properly so called, and has now fallen out of use in Germany. The only tr. is: "Help, God, the form of all thing." In the Guide and Godlie Ballades, ed. 1568, f. 22 (1868, p. 37).

See also note under Geenius, J., p. 419, ii. [J. M.]

Müller, Ludwig Ernst Siegmund, was b. Nov. 23, 1766, at Stroppen, in the Principality of Oels, and in 1796 became diaconus of the Frauenkirche at Liegnitz. He was then, in 1808, appointed archidiaconus of the Church of SS. Peter and Paul, at Liegnitz, in 1814 pastor primarius, and in 1818 superintendent. He d. at Liegnitz, Nov. 7, 1850 (ms. from H. Ziegler, pastor primarius of SS. Peter and Paul, Liegnitz, &c.). His hymn "Trauernd und mit bangem Sehnen" is noted under Neunharts, J. [J. M.]

Müller, Michael, s. of Zacharias Müller, brewer at Blankenburg, in the Saxon Harz, was b. at Blankenburg, January 12, 1673, studied theology at Halle under Francke and Breithaupt, and received license as a Candidate of Theology (general preacher). Just after completing his university course, in 1697, he was seized with violent hæmorrhage. He so far recovered as to be able to accept the position of house tutor in the family of Gaisberg (Geyssberg) at Schaubeck, near Klein-Bottwar in Württemberg, but after a time his illness returned and he d. there March 13, 1701 (Koch iv. 405; Blätter für Hymnologie, 1886, p. 146; ms. from General Superintendent G. Schönermark, Blankenburg, &c.).

Müller's principal work is his excellent version of the Psalter (Die Psalmen Davids, &c., Stuttgart, Paul Treuer, 1700), noted under Psalters, German, § 5. To the copy of this work in the Royal Library at Berlin there is appended (without separate title-page or date, but by the same printer) his Auffmunternder Neu-Jahrs-Zuruff an die Braut, &c. This contains 5 hymns which are repeated in his Geistliche Erquickstunden, dated 1706, but without name of publisher [Wernigerode Library]. This last work contains 61 hymns on the Gospels for Sundays and Festivals, followed by hymns 62-83, on miscellaneous subjects. The first lines of all these hymns are given in the Blätter as above. Many of Müller's psalm versions came deservedly into favour in Germany, but of his hymns few are found except in the hymn-books of the Separatists from 1710 to 1750. In Freylinghausen's G. B., 1704 and 1714, there are 21 of his psalms and 2 of his hymns.

Those of Müller's hymns which have passed into English are—

i. Auf, Seele, auf, und skume nicht. Epiphany.

1st pub. as No. 4 in his Zuruff as above, in 34 st. of 4 l. entitled "The way to Life. On the Gospel for the Three Holy Kings Day, Luke ii." In Freylinghausen's G. B., 1704, No. 68, st. vii., x.-xvi. were omitted, and the same form is No. 205 in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863. The tr. in C. U. is—

Up, up, new light upon thee break. A free tr. of st. i.-iv., xvii., xviii., xxii., xxxi., xxxii., by Dr. Kennedy, in his Hymn. Christ., 1863.

ii. Sieh wie lieblich und wie fein. Brotherly love. The original form of this hymn is a version of Ps. cxxxiii. by Müller, in his Psalmen Davids, 1700, p. 244, in 4 st. of 4 l. In Freylinghausen's G. B., 1704, No. 390, these st. are i.-iv., while st. v.-xiv. (on the subject of brotherly love) are added from the ms. of J. C. Nehring (q.v.). This text, in 14 st., is No. 1045 in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863. The form tr. into English is that in Bunsen's Versuch, 1833, No. 534, being st. i., iv., viii., x. of the above text and the following three st.:—

Sonne der Gerechtigkeit,
Gehe auf zu unsrer Zeit,
Brich in deiner Kirche an Dass die Welt es sehen kann.

2.
Jesu, Haupt der Kreuzgemein,
Mach uns alle, gross und klein,
Durch dein Evangelium
Ganz zu deinem Eigenthum.

3.
Lass die ganze Brüd'rschaar,
Lieben, loben immerdar,
In dir ruhen allezeit,
Immer und in Ewigkeit.

These three st. are from the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 711, and are by Christian David (see Moravian Hymnody, § iii. 9). The first and third had previously appeared in the Kleine Brüder G. B., London, 1754, pt. ii., Bk. ii., on the Church of God, section 7. The only tr. in C. U. is:—

Good and pleasant 'tis to see. A good tr. from Bunsen, by Miss Cox, in her Sacred Hys. from the German, 1841, p. 143, repeated in Abridged in Alford's Ps. & Hys, 1844, and Year of Praise, 1867, and in the Rev. F. Pott's Coll., 1861.

Other trs. are, both from Bunsen's text:—(1) "Behold how sweet it is to see," by Lady E. Forster-Leslie, 1843, p. 64. (2) "Lo! how sweet it is to see," by W. Arnold, in the Family Treasury, 1872, p. 204. [J. M.]

Müllmann, J. [Mühlmann, J.]

Mundi renovatio. Adam of St. Victor. [Easter.] A beautiful poem on the coincidence of the Easter of Nature and the Easter of the Church; and on the joys of returning Spring. L. Gautier, in his Oeuvres poetiques d'Adam de Saint Victor, 1881, p. 388, gives it from a Gradual of St. Victor before 1239 (Bibl. Nat. Paris, No. 14,452); a Missal of St. Genevieve also apparently before 1239; a 13th cent. Paris Gradual (B. N. Paris, No. 15,615), &c. It is in two early 14th cent. French Missals in the British Museum, both apparently of the Paris use (Add. 16,905, f. 154; Harl. 2891, f. 345b). The printed text will be found in Daniel, ii. p. 68; Morel, No. 70; Trench, ed. 1864, p. 153; Kehren, No. 90; Macgill, 1876-9, and Wingham, 1881. The use of St. Victor and of Paris was on Saturday in Easter Week, that of St. Genevieve on the Friday. Tr. as:—

Let the world from slumber rouse. By Mrs. Harriet M. Chester, in the Hymnary, 1872, under the signature of "H. M. C."

Other trs. are:—

1. The renewal of the world. Mrs. Charles, 1858.
2. Now the world's fresh dawn of birth. P. S. Worcester, in Lays Americana, 1864.
3. Spring's renewal of earth's plain. D. S. Wagoner, 1861.

[J. M.]

Mundi salus affutura. [Initiation of the B. V. M.] This is the hymn at Matins in the Office of the Visitation of the B. V. M. in the Sarum and Aberdeen Breviaries. The Office was sanctioned by Convocation in 1480, was printed by Caxton in the same year, and was incorporated in the Sarum Breviary, Venice, 1495, para Estrie, pt. ii., where this hymn is given at f. 189b. The text of the hymn is also in Carl Newman's Hymni Ecclesie, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as:—

1. What the past by faith believed. By W. J. Bliss, in his Church H. and Tune Bk., 1852-55. This tr. begins with st. tr. ("sic in mundo praeiter morem"), and adds trs. of st. v., vi.; and of stanza tr. of "Festum matris gloriose" (p. 378, L.).

2. Let the Feast of earth's salvation. By J. D. Chambers, in his Lauds, Spm. Pt. ii., 1866, p. 84, in 7 st. of 6 l. in the Antiphoner and Oratio, 1880, p. 126, and again in the Hymner, 1882, it is given in an altered form of 5 st. as "Portal of the world's salvation." [J. M.]

Mundi salus qui nascitur. C. Coffin. [Christus.] Given in the Paris Breviary, 1736, and again in Coffin's Hymni Sacri, 1736, p. 94. It is also in J. Chandler's Hys. of the Prim. Church, 1837, No. 13, and Carl Newman's Hymni Ecclesie, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as:—

Infant, born the world to free. By I. Williams, in the British Magazine, Jan., 1833 (vol. v. p. 31), and in his Hys. tr. from the Parisian Breviary, 1839, p. 50. In 1864 it was repeated in Skinner's Daily Service Hymnal, No. 48.

Other trs. are:—

1. O holy Babe, our prayer receive. J. Chandler, 1837.
2. Lord of all, Thy glory writing. B. Campbell, 1850.

[J. J.]

Mundus effusus redemptus. [Holy Communion.] In the Clusiae Breviary, Paris, 1686, p. 556, this is the hymn at First Vespers for the Octave of Corpus Christi, and consists of 5 st. and a doxology. Also in the Norbonne, 1709: the Sessa, 1726; and other French breviaries. Tr. as:—

Sing, O earth, for thy redemption. By E. Caswall, in his Musae of Mary, &c., 1858, p. 364, and his Hys. & Tunes, 1873, p. 157, in 5 st. of 6 l. In the Hymner, 1872, it is given for "Ascensiontide," and in others as a general hymn. [J. M.]

Münster, Balthasar, s. of Lorenz Münster, merchant in Lübeck, was b. at Lübeck, March 24, 1735. He entered the University of Jena as a student of theology in 1754, graduated M.A. in 1757, and thereafter became lecturer and adjunct of the philosophical faculty. In 1760, Duke Friedrich III., of Gotha, appointed him assistant court preacher, and preacher at the Orphanage in Gotha, and then, in 1763, Superintendent at Tonna (Gräfen-Tonna) near Gotha. In 1765 he became first preacher at the German Church of St. Peter in Copenhagen, receiving, in 1767, the degree of D.D. from the University. He d. at Copenhagen, Oct. 5, 1798 (Kock vi. 348; Allg. Deutsche Biog. xliii. 33, &c.).

Münster was a very popular and influential preacher, a true pastor and teacher of practical Christianity, a successful religious instructor of children, an active friend of the poor, a man of culture and one of the most prominent figures in the literary society of Copenhagen. His hymns, 106 in number, are among the best of the period, were highly esteemed by his contemporaries, and many still survive in German hymnals compiled before 1816 and still in use. They appeared in his two works: (1) Gesungliche Lieder, Leipzig, 1772, (2) Neue Sammlung Geistlicher Lieder, Leipzig, 1774. [Both in Royal Library, Berlin.] In 1773, the first 50 were republished at Leipzig set to melodies composed for them by the most famous musicians of the day; and the second 50 were republished at Leipzig in 1774 set to melodies composed for them by J. C. F. Bach, of Bückeburg.

Of Münster's hymns the following have passed into English:—

1. Sieht welch' ein Mensch! Wie lag so schwer. Christ before Pilate, 1774, No. 6, p. 21, in 10 st. of 7 l. Included in full in the Schleswig Volkslieder G. B., 1780; and, reduced to 5 st., in the Berlin G. B., 1829, Tr. as:—

Behold the Man! How heavy lay. In full, by Dr. H. Mills, in his House Ger., 1845 (1856, p. 307), repeated, abridged, in the Amer. Luth. Gen. Synod's Coll., 1850, and the Ohio Luth. Hymnal, 1880.

2. Eittered, doch voll sanfter Freuden. Holy Communion, 1772, No. 19, p. 67, in 9 st. of 8 l., entitled "Communion Hymn." In the Berlin G. B., 1780, No. 126, st. ii., was omitted, and the text considerably altered, beginning "Voller Ehrfurcht, Dank und Freuden." Tr. as:—
Full of reverence at Thy Word, Lord, I stand. In full from the text of 1780, as No. 271 in the Ohio Luth. Hymnal, 1880.

Hymns not in English C. U.—

3. Ach, wenn wär ich von der Hinde. Christian Warfare, 1774, No. 24, p. 136, in 9 st. Tr. as "Ah! when shall I be, from staining." By Dr. H. Mills, 1845 (1856, p. 147).
4. Der letzte mitter Tag. Prospect of Death, 1778, No. 25, p. 14, in 9 st. Tr. as "My day without a sorrow." By X. L. Procter, in Prose, 1870, p. 187.
5. Von Fürst dachungenen. St. Peter's Denial, 1774, No. 8, p. 28, in 9 st., entitled "Prayer for Christians who feel themselves guilty of the sin of Peter." Tr. as "Urged, Lord, by sinful terror." By Dr. M. Müller, 1845 (1856, p. 203).

6. Wie ich der mit Himmelreich. Easter, 1774, No. 44, p. 146, in 1 st. Tr. as "Who is this with glory gleaming." By Dr. M. Müller, 1845 (1856, p. 220).

[J. M.]

Mure, Sir William, eldest s. of Sir William Mure of Rowallan Castle, Ayrshire, was b. at Rowallan in 1594. In the Civil War he sided against the king; and in 1644, accompanying those sent under the Solemn League and Covenant to the help of the Parliament, was wounded at the battle of Marston Moor. He d. at Rowallan in 1657. In 1628 he pub. a tr. of Robert Boyd's Heavenly Christianism, at Edinburgh, in a volume containing also an original poem entitled Domestication, and three sonnets entitled Fancies Persuaded. His [unclear] version of the Psalm, which seems to have been begun in 1629 and completed in 1639, was recommended to the use of the committee who compiled the Scottish Psalter of 1650. A complete as of this version was found about 1825, with various other poetical mss. by him, among the old family papers in Rowallan Castle. These mss. were kindly searched for by Lord Donington in 1884, but could not be discovered among the family papers now in Loudoun Castle, Ayrshire. [J. M.]

Μυστήριον ξένον. [Χριστός γεννᾷται.]

My blessed Saviour, is Thy love. J. Stennett. [Holy Communion.] Appeared in his Hys. on the Lord's Supper, 1697, No. 22, in 10 st. of 4 l., and again in his Works, 1732, vol. iv. p. 111. It is usually given in 3 stanzas (st. i.-iii.) somewhat altered, as in the Leeds H. Bk., 1853, and others. Another arrangement is, "O blessed Saviour, is Thy love." In some collections this extends to 6 stanzas, as in Snapp's Songs of G. & G., 1872, but a shorter form is in more frequent use. [J. J.]

My Father, for another night. Sir H. W. Baker. [Morning.] Contributed to the revised ed. of H. A. & M., 1875. It is repeated in a few collections, including the Additional Hys., added to the Leeds S. S. H. Bk., 1878. In this last case it is ascribed to "Oakes" in error. [J. J.]

My former hopes are fled. W. Cooper. [Seeking God.] Appeared in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. iii., No. 8, in 5 st. of 4 l., and headed "The Shining Light." It was passed into C. U. in G. Britain and America, its use in the latter being somewhat extensive. [J. J.]

My God, accept my heart this day. M. Bridges. [Confirmation.] 1st pub. in his Hys. of the Heart for the Use of Catholics, 1848, in 5 st. of 4 l., and entitled "Confirmation." In some collections it begins, "My God, accept my heart, I pray," in others, "O God, accept my heart, &c." and in others, including the Unitarian Hymn [ & Tune ] Bk. for the Church and the Home, Boston, U. S. A., 1868, it opens with st. ii., "Before the Cross of Him Who died." In these various forms it is in extensive use in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

My God and Father! while I stray. Charlotte Elliott. [Resignation.] The uncertainties with regard to the text of this popular hymn have arisen out of the fact that four forms of the text were pub. by Miss Elliott, and each of these has been taken in turn as the original. The facts and texts are as follows:—

i. The original hymn was pub. in the Appendix to the 1st ed. of the Invalid's Hymn Book, 1834, No. 17, as follows:—

- "1. My God and Father! while I stray
Far from my home in life's rough way,
Oh! teach me from my heart to say,
'Thy will be done!'"
- "2. Though dark my path, and sad my lot,
Let me 'be still,' and murmur not,
Or breathe the prayer divinely taught,
'Thy will be done!'"
- "3. What though in lonely grief I sigh
For friends beloved, no longer nigh,
Submissive still would I reply,
'Thy will be done!'"
- "4. If thou shouldst call me to resign
What most I prize, it ne'er was mine;
I only yield thee what was thine;
'Thy will be done!'"

- "5. Should pining sickness waste away,
My life in premature decay,
My Father! still I strive to say,
'Thy will be done!'"
- "6. If but my fainting heart be blest
With thy sweet spirit for its guest,
My God! to thee I leave the rest—
'Thy will be done!'"
- "7. Renew my will from day to day,
Blend it with thine, and take away
All now that makes it hard to say,
'Thy will be done!'"
- "8. Then when on earth I breathe no more
The prayer oft mixed with tears before,
I'll sing upon a happier shore,
'Thy will be done!'"

ii. The second form of the hymn appeared in Miss Elliott's brother's (H. V. Elliott), Ps. and Hys., 1835, as follows:—

- "1. My God and Father, while I stray
Far from my home, on life's rough way,
O teach me from my heart to say,
'Thy will be done!'"
- "2. If thou shouldst call me to resign
What most I prize, — it ne'er was mine;
I only yield thee what was thine;—
'Thy will be done!'"
- "3. E'en if again I ne'er should see
The friend more dear than life to me,
Ere long we both shall be with thee;—
'Thy will be done!'"
- "4. Should pining sickness waste away
My life in premature decay,
My Father, still I strive to say,
'Thy will be done!'"
- "5. If but my fainting heart be blest
With thy sweet Spirit for its guest,
My God, to thee I leave the rest;—
'Thy will be done!'"
- "6. Renew my will from day to day;
Blend it with thine, and take away
All that now makes it hard to say
'Thy will be done!'"
- "7. Then when on earth I breathe no more
The prayer oft mix'd with tears before,
I'll sing, upon a happier shore,
'Thy will be done!'"

iii. The third form of the hymn was given in Miss Elliott's Hours of Sorrow, &c., 1836, pp. 130-1, as follows:—

- "My God and Father! while I stray
Far from my home in life's rough way,
O! teach me from my heart to say,
'Thy will be done!'"
- "Though dark my path and sad my lot,
Let me 'be still' and murmur not;
Or breathe the prayer divinely taught,
'Thy will be done!'"
- "What though in lonely grief I sigh
For friends beloved, no longer nigh,
Submissive still would I reply,
'Thy will be done!'"
- "Though thou hast call'd me to resign
What most I priz'd, it ne'er was mine:
I have but yield'd what was thine;—
'Thy will be done!'"
- "Should grief or sickness waste away
My life in premature decay;
My Father! still I'll strive to say,
'Thy will be done!'"
- "Let but my fainting heart be blest,
With thy sweet Spirit for its guest,
My God! to thee I leave the rest:
'Thy will be done!'"
- "Renew my will from day to day!
Blend it with thine, and take away
All that now makes it hard to say,
'Thy will be done!'"

iv. The fourth form is in the 1839 ed. of Elliott's Ps. & Hys. and later editions. In this the text of the Ps. and Hys., 1835, has undergone one change only, and this in the opening line, which reads, "My God, my Father, while I stray."

The great diversity in these texts, and all pub. by Miss Elliott, or with her sanction, accounts for the curious anomaly that Lord Selborne, in his Bk. of Praise, gives one form as the original, Bp. Bickersteth, in his H. Comp., another, and some one else a third. In varying forms it is in extensive use in all English-speaking countries, and of all Miss Elliott's hymns it ranks next to her "Just as I am" in popularity. It has also been tr. into several languages, including Latin, German, French, &c. [J. J.]

My God, and is Thy table spread? P. Doddridge. [Holy Communion.] Pub. in Job Orton's posthumous edition of Doddridge's Hymns, &c., 1755, No. 171, in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed "God's Name profaned, when his Table is treated with Contempt. Malachi i. 12. Applied to the Lord's Supper." The same text was repeated in J. D. Humphreys's ed. of Doddridge's Hymns, &c., 1839. The extensive use of this hymn, and especially in the Church of England, is due to a great extent to the fact that it, with a few others, was appended to Tate and Brady's Version of the Psalms. The history of that circumstance is given in the article on the New Version (q.v.). The only changes in the text are st. i., l. 2, of "does" into "doth," and l. 3 of the same stanza of "its" into "thy." In addition to its use in this form, and in the original (often abbreviated), it is also found as:—

1. Father, and is Thy table spread. This is adopted by some of the American Unitarian collections.

2. Lord Jesus, is Thy table spread. This is as early as the 1816 Appendix to Cotterill's Sol., and is found in Bickersteth's Christian Psalmody, 1833, and later hymn-books of the same type.

3. O God, and is Thy table spread. This is in the Hymnary, 1872, in 4 st., together with a doxology which is not in the original.

The only alterations of any moment which have crept into the text, and are sometimes adopted, are:—

"Rich banquet of His Flesh and Blood!"

to:—

"Memorial of His Flesh and Blood!"

and:—

"Why are its dainties all in vain?"

to:—

"Why are its bounties all in vain?"

In full or in part this hymn has been tr. into several languages. One in Latin (of 4 st., the fourth being very much altered), by Bingham, in his Hymno. Christ. Lat., 1871, is "O Deus, anne patet nobis Tua mensa referta?" [see English Hymnody, Early, § XIV.] [J. J.]

My God, how endless is Thy love. I. Watts. [Morning or Evening.] Pub. in his Hys. and Spiritual S., 1709, Bk. i., No. 81, in 3 st. of 4 l., and headed "A Song for Morning or Evening." It was included in J. Wesley's Ps. & Hys., Charles-town, 1736-37, and subsequently in a large number of hymn-books. In addition to its use under its original first line, sometimes with slight changes, but usually unaltered, it is also found as:—

1. O God, how endless is Thy love. This form appeared in G. Whitefield's Hymns, &c., 1733, No. 17; M. Madan's Ps. & Hys., 1760, No. 103, and many later collections.

2. O God, how constant is Thy love. This was given in the 1819 ed. of Cotterill's Sol., p. 2, in 4 st., the 3rd stanza being an addition by Cotterill or Montgomery.

3. O God, how boundless is Thy love. This form is in the Irvingite Hys. for the Use of the Churches, 1864 and 1871.

Through the original and in these various forms this hymn is in use in all English-speaking countries. It is a beautiful example of Watts's tender style, but somewhat tinged with sadness. [See English Hymnody, Early, § VI. 3, XIII.] [J. J.]

My God, how perfect are Thy ways. W. Cowper. [The Lord our Righteousness.] Appeared in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. i., No. 67, in 5 st. of 4 l., and entitled "Jehovah our Righteousness." It is generally given in its original form, but its use is limited. [J. J.]

My God, how wonderful Thou art. F. W. Faber. [The Eternal Father.] 1st pub. in his Jesus and Mary, &c., 1848, No. 2, in 9 st. of 4 l., and entitled, "The Eternal Father," and again in his Hymns, 1862, p. 22. Its use is very extensive both in G. Britain and America, but it is often given in an abridged form. In some of the American collections, including H. W. Beecher's Plymouth Coll., 1855, The Baptist Praise Bk., 1871, it begins with st. ii., "How dread are Thine eternal years," but this does not equal the original in popularity in America, and is almost unknown in G. Britain. Another cento in C. U. in America begins with st. iv., "O how I fear Thee, living God." [J. J.]

My God, I am Thine; What a comfort divine. C. Wesley. [Peace with God.] Appeared in Hys. and Sac. Poems, 1749, vol. i., as No. 16 of "Hymns for Believers," in 6 st. of 3 l. (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. v. p. 24). It was republished in the Wea. H. Bk., 1780, No. 197, and thence passed into most of the Methodist hymn-books throughout all English-speaking countries. Few hymns amongst the Methodists have equalled it in the influence which it has had upon the sick and dying. Numerous instances of great interest are given in G. J. Stevenson's Meth. H. Bk. Notes, 1883, p. 167. The stanzas most frequently quoted are, i. "My God, I am Thine," and iv., "My Jesus to know; And feel His blood flow." Outside of the Methodist bodies its use is limited. [J. J.]

My God, I know, I feel Thee mine. C. Wesley. [Peace and Holiness desired.] Pub. in Hys. & Sac. Poems, 1740, p. 156, in 12 st. of 4 l., and entitled, "Against Hope, Believing in Hope" (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i. p. 328). In the Wea. H. Bk., 1780, No. 351, st. x. is omitted, and slight changes in the text are introduced. This form is repeated in the revised ed., 1875, and has passed into several collections. In addition there are also the following arrangements of the hymn in C. U.:—

1. Father, Thy all-victorious love. This opens with st. iv. altered, and is in use in American Unitarian hymn-books.

2. Jesus, Thine all-victorious love. This also begins with st. iv. altered, and is in American C. U.

3. My God, I humbly call Thee mine. This is in Mercer's Church Psalter & H. Bk., Oxford ed., 1864, in 9 stanzas.

4. O that is me the sacred fire. In the Primitive Methodist Hymnal, 1887, and a few American collections. This opens with st. vii. [J. J.]

My God, I love and I adore. I. Watts. [God, the Creator and Preserver.] This poem of 63 lines, appended to an essay on "Searching after God," is in Watts's Reliquiæ Juveniles: Miscellaneous Thoughts in Prose and Verse, &c., 1734. In the Coll. of Hys. & Ps., &c., by Kippis, Rees, and others, 1795, a hymn in 4 st. of 4 l. appeared as No. 62, beginning "Who can by searching find out God?" The opening stanza is based on ll. 1-4 of the poem, whilst st. ii.-iv. are almost word for word from ll. 5-20. This same hymn, with the substitution of ll. 1-4 of the poem for the first stanza as in Kippis, is No. 148 in The Bap. Praise Bk., N. Y., 1871. This, together with the text as in Kippis, is in other collections. Another arrangement, beginning with the same first line, in 4 st. is No. 177 in H. W. Beecher's Plymouth Coll., 1855, but it is not equal to either of the former in purity or beauty. The hymn, in either of those forms, is very poetical and of more than usual excellence. [J. J.]

My God, in Whom are all the springs. I. Watts. [Ps. lvi.] 1st pub. in his Psalms of David, 1719, in 6 st. of 4 l., and entitled, "Praise for Protection, Grace and Truth." In some collections, as in Dr. Alexander's Augustine H. Bk., 1849 and 1865, it begins with st. iii., "Be Thou exalted, O my God." Both the original and the abridged form are in limited use. [J. J.]

My God, is any hour so sweet. Charlotte Elliott. [The Hour of Prayer.] Pub. in her Hours of Sorrow, &c., 1836, p. 45, in 7 st. of 4 l., and entitled "The Hour of Prayer"; again in her brother's Ps. & Hys., 2nd thousand, 1837, in 6 st., and again in her Morning and Evening Hys. for a Week, 1839. The text in each of these works is different from that in the rest. The text in the H. Comp., 1876, which is generally received as the original, differs slightly from each of the above. The 1836 text is in Lyra Brit., 1867, p. 219, with "There for," changed to "Here for," in st. v. l. 2. In Kennedy, 1863, and in Thring's Coll., 1882, it is altered to "Sweet is the morning light to me." The use of this hymn in one or the other of these two forms is extensive. [J. J.]

My God, my Father, blissful Name. Anne Steele. [Humility and Trust.] Appeared in her Poems on Subjects chiefly Devotional, 1760, vol. i. p. 114, in 8 st. of 4 l., and headed "Humble Reliance." It was repeated in the 2nd ed. of the Poems, 1780, and in Sedgwick's reprint of her Hymns, 1863, p. 70. In its full original form it is not usually found in C. U.; but the following centos therefrom are given in several hymn-books in G. Britain and America:—

1. My God, my Father, blissful Name. Composed of st. i.-iv., vi.-viii. in the Bap. New Selection, 1828; the Bap. Ps. & Hys., 1858; the New Cong., 1859, &c.

2. My God, my Father, charming Name. This is usually No. 1, with the alteration of the opening line.

3. Lord, what Thy providence denies. Composed of st. iii., iv., vii., viii. in the 1883 Appendix to the S. P. C. K. Ps. & Hys., and others.

4. My God, whatever Thy will ordains. In Kennedy, 1863, No. 1211, is a cento from this hymn and Miss Steele's "Dear Refuge of my weary soul." [J. J.]

My God, my Father, dost Thou call? Bp. E. H. Bickersteth. [Home Missions.] Written for the London Church Mission, 1874, and printed in the Guardian, and afterwards pub. in his H. Comp., 1876. It has since passed into several hymn-books, including the Prim. Methodist Hymnal, 1887, &c. [J. J.]

My God, my Portion and my Love. I. Watts. [God Man's only Happiness.] Pub. in the 1st ed. of his Hys. and Spiritual S., 1707 (ed. 1709, Bk. ii., No. 94), in 8 st. of 4 l., and headed "God my only Happiness." It is in C. U. both in full and in an abridged form. In Dale's English H. Bk., 1874, No. 689, "My God, my life is in Thy love," is also from this hymn, and is composed of st. i., ii., v., vii., viii. slightly altered. [J. J.]

My God, the Covenant of Thy love. P. Doddridge. [The Divine Covenant.] This hymn is No. 86 in the D. mss., but is undated. The latest date in the mss. is given to No. 83, as "Jan. 9, 1738." This hymn is, we judge, circa 1740. It was included, unaltered, in Job Orton's posthumous ed. of Doddridge's Hymns, &c., 1755, No. 21, in 5 st. of 4 l., and headed "Support in God's Covenant under domestic troubles;" and again in J. D. Humphreys's ed. of the same, 1839, No. 26. It is in extensive use in G. Britain and America, but usually with the omission of st. ii., "What tho' my house be not with Thee." [J. J.]

My God, the Spring of all my joys. I. Watts. [God, Light in darkness.] 1st pub. in his Hys. & Spiritual S., 1707 (ed. 1709, Bk. ii., No. 54), in 5 st. of 4 l., and headed "God's presence is Light in darkness." In 1741, J. Wesley included it with alterations in his Ps. & Hys., p. 118, but did not introduce it into the Wes. H. Bk. in 1780. It is in the 18th ed., 1805, as No. 87, with an asterisk to denote that it was not placed there by Wesley. In its original form the hymn is about God, and He is spoken of in the third person thus:

"In darkest shades if He appear."

The Wesley version is an address to God:

"In darkest shades if Thou appear."

Both versions are in extensive use in all English-speaking countries; the original, however, being the more popular of the two. In a few collections it is altered to: "My God, the Source of all my joys." [J. J.]

My God, Thy service well demands. P. Doddridge. [Thanksgiving for Recovery from Sickness.] In the D. mss. this hymn is No. 55, is dated "Nov. 14, 1737," and headed,

"A Thought on recovery from Sickness in which much of the Presence of God had been experienced. Particularly intended for the use of Miss Nanney Bliss."

This heading is altered in Doddridge's handwriting to

"Thought on recovery from a dangerous sickness in which much of the presence of God had been experienced. Particularly intended for the use of a friend who had been in extreme danger by the bursting of an artery in her stomach."

It was included in Job Orton's posthumous ed. of Doddridge's Hymns, &c., 1755, No. 364, in 7 st. of 4 l., as one of the "Hymns on Particular Occasions, and in Uncommon Measures." It is headed therein "On Recovery from Sickness, during which much of the Divine Favour had been experienced." In J. D. Humphreys's ed. of the Hymns, &c., the text and heading as in Orton's ed. were repeated. When the nature of the sickness is remembered, the original ms. is more intensely vivid than the printed text. In the Ms. st. ii., ll. 3, 4, read:—

"When life in purple torrents flowed From every gushing vein;"

st. iii., l. 3:—

"And teach me with my quivering lips;"

and st. v., l. 4:—

"That made salvation mine."

The special personal character of this hymn has limited its use. It might, however, be easily adapted for special or general thanksgiving after sickness. [J. J.]

My God, 'tis to Thy Mercy-seat. Anne Steele. [The Mercy-Seat.] 1st pub. in her Poems on Subjects chiefly Devotional, &c., 1760, vol. i. p. 133, in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed: "Refuge and Strength in the Mercy of God." It was repeated in the 2nd ed. of the Poems, &c., 1780, and in Sedgwick's reprint of her Hymns, 1863. It is in C. U. both in its original form and as "Dear Father, to Thy Mercy-seat." The latter form is chiefly in use in America. [J. J.]

My God, what silken cords are Thine. P. Doddridge. [Gratitude.] 1st pub. in Job Orton's posthumous ed. of Doddridge's Hymns, &c., 1755, No. 152, in 5 st. of 4 l., and entitled "Gratitude the Spring of true Religion;" and again in J. D. Humphreys's ed. of the same, 1839, No. 171. It is in C. U. in its original form, and as "My God, what cords of love are Thine," in the London H. Bk. (enlarged) 1873, and others. [J. J.]

My gracious Lord, I own Thy right. P. Doddridge. [The Service of Christ a delight.] Pub. by Job Orton in his posthumous ed. of Doddridge's Hymns, 1755, No. 294, in 5 st. of 4 l., and headed "Christ's Service the fruit of our Labours on earth;" also given in J. D. Humphreys's ed. of the same, 1839, No. 320. Its use, especially in America, is extensive. Sometimes it is given as "All-gracious Lord, I own Thy right," as in the Unitarian Hys. of The Spirit, Boston, U.S.A., 1864. [J. J.]

My heart is resting, O my God. Anna L. Waring. [The Lord the Portion of his people.] Appeared in the 4th ed. of her Hys. and Meditations, 1854, p. 65, in 11 st. of 8 l., and based upon Lam. iii. 24, "The Lord is my Portion, saith my soul; therefore will I hope in Him" (ed. 1871, p. 62). It is also in her Additional Hys., 1858. Being too long to be used in full, various arrangements of lines and stanzas have been adopted for C. U. Most of these begin with the opening line of the hymn. One exception is, "I have a heritage of joy," in the American Unitarian Hy. [de Tune] Bk. for Church & Home, Boston, 1868, which begins with st. iii., l. 5. [J. J.]

My Helper, God, I bless His name. P. Doddridge. [New Year.] This hymn is almost entirely unknown under its original first line, but altered as "Our Helper, God, we bless His [Thy] name," it is found in several collections, including Horner's Cong. Hys., 1884. It was 1st pub. in Job Orton's posthumous ed. of Doddridge's Hymns, &c., 1755, No. 19, in 4 st. of 4 l., and headed, "Ebenzer, or God's helping hand review'd and acknowledged. 1 Sam. vii. 12. For New-Year's day." It is also in J. D. Humphreys's ed. of the same, 1839, No. 23. [J. J.]

My Hope, my All, my Saviour Thou. [Jesus, All in All.] This hymn has been traced to A Pocket Hymn Book designed as a constant Companion for the Pious, collected from Various Authors. York, R. Spence, 1774 (5th ed., 1786, No. 114), in 5 st. of 4 l. Through this Pocket H. Bk., which, in a reprint, was the first Methodist hymn-book used in America [American Hymnody, § v.], it came into use in that country. The full and unaltered text is in Dr. Hatfield's Church H. Bk., N. Y., 1872, No. 964. In the Meth. Episco. Hymnal, 1878, it is given in 4 st., and ascribed to "Thomas Coke." As the hymn was published in a Methodist Pocket H. Bk., in 1774, and Dr. Coke did not make the acquaintance of J. Wesley until August 13, 1776, this can hardly be so. Moreover, there is no mention of his having written hymns at that time, or at any time, in Dr. Etheridge's authorised edition of his Life, 1860. We are obliged therefore to say it is Anonymous. [J. J.]

My Jesus, while in mortal flesh. P. Doddridge. [Abidings—Faith in Christ.] This is No. 280 in Job Orton's posthumous ed. of Doddridge's Hymns, &c., 1755, and No. 306 in J. D. Humphreys's ed. of the same, 1839. It is in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed "Living while in the flesh by faith in Christ, Who loved us, &c. Galat. ii. 26." It is in C. U. in its original form, and as "Blest Jesus, while in mortal flesh." The latter form is mainly in use in America. [J. J.]

My Lord, my Love was crucified. J. Mason. [Sunday.] Appeared in his Spiritual Songs, or Songs of Praise, &c., 1683, No. 19, in 3 st. of 8 l., and 1 st. of 4 l., and entitled "A Song of Praise for the Lord's Day." It is also in Sedgwick's reprint of Mason's Spiritual S., 1859, p. 30. It is in use in three forms: (1) The original abbreviated; (2) "My Lord, my Life, was crucified;" and (3) "Come, dearest Lord, and feed Thy sheep." The altered forms are principally in use in America.

The opening line of this hymn is well known in Church history and song. St. Ignatius used it in the first century: it was common throughout the middle ages, and the prefatory plate to Luke Boileau's Reformed Monastery, 1677, has the motto "Amor meus crucifixus est." The refrain to each stanza of C. Wesley's "O Love divine, what hast Thou done?" is "My Lord, my Love is crucified;" to each stanza of Faber's "O come and mourn with me awhile, it is 'Jesus, our Love, is crucified';" and in H. A. & M., and most modern collections which have copied Faber's hymn, it is "Jesus, our Lord, is crucified." It is a beautiful thought, and full of spiritual meaning. Its tenderness is not intensified by the change of "our Love" to "our Lord." [W. T. B.]

My Maker, and my King; to Thee my whole I owe. Anne Steele. [God, Creator and Benefactor.] 1st pub. in her Poems on Subjects chiefly Devotional, &c., 1760, vol. i. p. 48, in 6 st. of 4 l., and entitled,

"God my Creator and Benefactor." It was repeated in her Poems, &c., 1780; and in Sedgwick's reprint of her Hymns, 1863. Two forms of this hymn are in C. U. (1) The first is the original in its full or abridged form. This came into C. U. through the Bristol Bap. Coll. of Ash & Evans, 1769, where it is No. 25, and sign d "r." (2) The second is:—

"My Maker and my King!
What thanks to Thee I owe."

This appeared in Hall's Mitre H. Bk., 1836, No. 286, in 4 st. of 4 l.; and again in E. Oslor's Church and King, June 1, 1837. It was rewritten from Miss Steele's hymn by Oslor for the Mitre H. Bk., and should be given as Anne Steele, 1760; E. Oslor, 1836. [J. J.]

My Saviour, be Thou near me,
Through life's night. Mary Duncan, née Lundie. [Supplication.] 1st pub. in her Memoir, 1841, in 2 st. of 8 l., and thus introduced:—

"To a Greek air, which a dear friend loved to hear her sing, she composed, at the pianoforte, the annexed stanzas, not being satisfied with the trifling words attached to it. They bear date the 20th December (1839), the last effusion of her muse, and the prayer of their petition was about to be answered speedily" (ed. 1843, p. 294).

The hymn is included, set to this air, in the Rev. J. H. Wilson's Songs of Zion, 1877, and, without the air, in other collections. [J. M.]

My song shall be of mercy. H. Dowdton. [Ps. ci.] Written for his congregation at St. John's Church, Chatham, and first printed at the close of his Sermon, preached in 1832, on "God, the Refuge of His people" (Chatham, A. Etherington); and then in Barry's Ps. & Hys., 1867. It was also included in his Hys. & Verses, 1873. [W. T. B.]

My song shall bless the Lord of all. W. Cowper. [The Godhead of Christ.] 1st pub. in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. ii., No. 38, in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed "Jehovah Jesus." Although not in extensive use, it is a dogmatic hymn of more than usual merit, and is worthy of greater attention. [J. J.]

My soul and spirit fill'd with joy. N. Tate. [Magnificat.] This metrical version of the Song of the Blessed Virgin was given in the Appendix to the New Version of the Psalms appended to the Book of Common Prayer, 1702 (licensed 1703). It is not found in modern collections of hymns (full text in old P. Books). In the Draft of the Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, 1745, it was given with very slight alterations as No. ii. Before its adoption, however, in the authorised issue of the Translations, &c., of 1781, it underwent further revision, and as No. xxxvi. stands thus:—

St. i., N. Tate; st. ii., rewritten, 1781; st. iii., rewritten, 1781, with 1st line from 1745; st. iv., N. Tate; st. v., l. 1, 1716; l. 2 altered; ll. 3, 4, N. Tate.

This recast, which has been in use in the Church of Scotland for more than 100 years, is claimed for W. Cameron (p. 300. ii.) by his daughter in her list of authors and revisers of the 1781 issue. Full recast text in modern editions of the Scottish Trs. and Paraphrases. [J. J.]

My soul doth magnify the Lord. J. Mason. [Whitsuntide.] 1st pub. in his Spiritual Songs, or Songs of Praise, 1683, p. 52, in 5 st. of 8 l., and 1 st. of 4 l., and entitled "A Song of Praise for Joy in the Holy Ghost"; and again, in Sedgwick's reprint of the Spiritual Songs, 1851, p. 38. The hymn in its full form is not in C. U. The following centos however are in C. U.:—

1. A living stream as crystal clear. This begins with st. iii., and, as altered by J. Keble, it appeared in the Salisbury H. Bk., 1867, and subsequently in other collections.

2. My soul doth magnify the Lord. This, as No. 384 in the Dutch Reformed Hys. of the Church, N. Y., 1869, is composed of st. i., ii., ll. 1-4, and a doxology not in the original.

3. There is a stream which issues forth. This, as No. 104 in Lord Selborne's Book of Praise, 1862, is st. v. to the end of the hymn unaltered.

These centos, especially No. 1, are in several collections; but their use is not equal to their merits. [See English Hymnody, Early, § xi.] [J. J.]

My soul, go boldly forth. R. Baxter. [Death Anticipated.] This poem appeared in Baxter's Additions to the Poetical Fragments of Richard Baxter, Written for himself and Communicated to such as are more for serious Verse than smooth. London: Printed for B. Simmons, &c., 1683, p. 62, in 31 st. of 6 l., dated "Decemb. 19, 1682," and headed "The Exit." In the American Plymouth Coll., 1855, st. i., iv. and xxxi. were given as No. 887, and in Kennedy, 1863, st. i., iv. xiii. and xxxi. as No. 1375. Both the original and these centos are admirably adapted for private use. [W. T. B.]

My soul, inspired with sacred love. C. Wesley. [Ps. cxlvi.] 1st pub. in The Arminian Magazine, 1798; again in Fish's collection of C. Wesley's Psalms, 1854; and again in the P. Works, 1868-72, vol. viii. p. 260, in 8 st. of 6 l. In 1830, it was given in the Supp. of the Wes. H. Bk., with the omission of st. iii. and vi., and retained in the revised ed., 1875. [J. J.]

My soul, repeat His praise. I. Watts. [Ps. ciii.] 1st pub. in his Ps. of David, &c., 1719, p. 267, in 8 st. of 4 l., and headed, "Abounding Compassion of God; or, Mercy in the Midst of Judgment." It was given with the omission of st. ii., iv. and vi., in G. Whitefield's Hys. for Social Worship, &c., 1753, No. 9. This abbreviated form was repeated in M. Madan's Ps. & Hys., 1760, No. 117, and others, and thus came into C. U. in the Church of England. It is also given in full in some collections, and again, altered in another way, in others. Its use is extensive. [J. J.]

My soul, there is a country. H. Vaughan. [Heaven—Peace.] This poem on "Peace" appeared in 20 lines in his Siles Scintillans, or Sacred Poems, Pt. i., 1650 (2nd ed. 1655); in Lyte's reprint of the same, 1847, and in the Bell and Daldy reprint, 1858. In the reduced form of 4 st. of 4 l., it was given in the People's H., 1867; and in its full and unaltered form, as a hymn for "Private Use," in Thring's Coll., 1882. [J. J.]

My soul, thy great Creator praise. Sir J. Denham and I. Watts. [Ps. 104.] 1st pub. in Watts's Psalms of David, &c., 1719.

in 28 st. of 4 l., and headed "The glory of God in Creation and Providence." In a note he says:—

"Several Lines in this Psalm I have borrow'd of Sir John Denham; if I have made the Connection more evident, and the Sense more easy and useful to an ordinary Reader, I have attained my End, and leave others to judge whether I have dishonour'd his Verse, or improved it," p. 274.

The lines borrowed from Sir J. Denham's version of 1714 are st. i., ii., iii., vii., ll. 1, 2; xxviii., ll. 3, 4. The paraphrase naturally from its great length is not in C. U., but the following centos therefrom are in several hymn-books in G. Britain and America:—

1. Great is the Lord, what tongue can frame! This cento, in the Andover Sabbath H. Bk., 1858, and other American collections, is made up of odd lines from Watts's portion of the paraphrase somewhat freely altered. In some hymnals st. ii. of this cento is omitted.

2. My soul, thy great Creator praise. This cento in the Leeds H. Bk., 1853, 4 stanzas, is thus composed: st. i., ii. Sir John Denham, and the rest by Watts; in the New Cong., 1859, 8 stanzas, st. i., ii. are by Denham, and the rest by Watts; and in Dale's English H. Bk., 1874, st. i.-iii., are by Sir J. Denham, and iv., v. by Watts.

3. Vast are Thy works, Almighty Lord. Of this cento in Martineau's Hymns, 1840, No. 127, ll. 1, 2 of st. iii. are by Sir J. Denham, and the rest by Watts.

These centos, taken together, are in somewhat extensive use. [J. J.]

My soul, with joy attend. P. Doddridge. [The Security of Christ's Sheep.] This is No. 97 of the D. Mes., but is undated [circa 1740]. It was pub. by J. Orton in his posthumous ed. of Doddridge's Hymns, &c., 1753, No. 231, in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed, "The Happiness and Security of Christ's Sheep, John x. 28." It was also repeated in J. D. Humphreys's ed. of the same, 1839, No. 255. It is in C. U. in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

My soul, with sacred joy survey. T. Kelly. [Missions.] 1st pub. in his Coll. of Ps. & Hys., &c., Dublin, 1802, No. 264 (there are two hymns in the collection with this number), in 7 stanzas of 4 l., and based on Isa. xliii. 5, 6. It was repeated in the 1st ed. of his Hymns, &c., 1804, and again in all later editions (ed. 1853, No. 575). In addition to appearing in a few collections under its opening line, two centos therefrom are in C. U., both beginning: "Arise, arise; with joy survey." These are: (1) In Hatfield's Church H. Bk., N. Y., 1872, No. 1219, composed of st. i., iii., ii., vi. and vii. in the order named; (2) In the Bap. Praise Bk., N. Y., 1871, where st. i., iv. form No. 1204. [J. J.]

My spirit longeth for Thee. J. Byron. [No Rest but in God.] Pub. in his Miscellaneous Poems, 1773, in two parts, Pt. i. being "The desponding Soul's wish"; and Pt. ii. "The Answer." The "Wish" is in 4 st. of 4 l.; and the "Answer" in 4 st. of 4 l. Both parts are in C. U., the first, usually as, "My spirit longs for Thee; and the second, "Cheer up, desponding soul. The full text was reprinted in Byron's Works, 1814, vol. ii. p. 140. [W. T. B.]

My stock lies dead, and no increase. G. Herbert. [Divine Grace Desired.] Appeared in his posthumous work The Temple, 1633 (ed. Chandos Classics, 1887, p. 107), in 4 st. of 3 l., with the refrain "Drop from above!" It is given in its original form in a few collections, and again in several American hymnals, as "My heart lies dead, and no increase." It is a sweetly pathetic hymn for private devotion. [J. J.]

My times of sorrow and of joy. B. Beddome. [Resignation.] Written on Jan. 4, 1778, and pub. in Rippon's Bap. Sel., 1787, No. 276, in 5 st. of 4 l., and headed "Resignation: or God's Portion." In R. Hall's posthumous edition of Beddome's Hymns, &c., 1817, No. 222, it is simply entitled "Resignation." It is a striking coincidence that, unknown to Beddome, his son, Dr. Benjamin Beddome, died of a fever in Edinburgh on the day that this hymn was written. Dr. Rippon says, in the Baptist Register, 1794, that the father preached on that day (Sunday) from Ps. xxxi. 15, "My times are in Thy hand," and that this hymn was sung at the close of the Sermon. It is very plaintive, and well suited for private use. It is in several modern collections, including the Bap. Ps. & Hys., 1858 and 1880. [J. J.]

My whole, though broken heart, O Lord. R. Baxter. [Resignation.] Appeared in his Poetical Fragments, 1681, p. 81, in 8 st. of 8 l., and entitled, "The Covenant and Confidence of Faith." To it is appended the note: "This Covenant, my dear wife, in her former sickness, subscribed with a cheerful will." The hymn was republished in Pickering's reprint of the Poetical Fragments, 1821. In its complete form it is not found in modern hymn-books. The following centos therefrom are in C. U.:—

1. Christ leads me through no darker rooms. This is in the Cooke and Denton Hymnal, 1853, and several American collections.

2. Come, Lord, when grace has made me meet. In The Church Praise Book, N. Y., 1852.

3. Lord, it belongs not to my care. This is the most popular of the centos. It is in extensive use in all English-speaking countries.

4. Lord, it is not for us to care. This ranks in popularity next to No. 3.

5. Lord, may we feel no anxious care. This appeared in Hall's Mitre H. Bk., 1836, No. 248, and is found in a few modern collections.

6. Now it belongs not to my care. This also is somewhat limited in use.

When all these centos are taken into account the popularity and acceptableness of this hymn are very marked. [J. J.]

Myddleton, William, an eminent poet and grammarian, was the third s. of Richard Myddleton, of Denbigh, an elder brother of Sir Hugh Myddleton. W. Myddleton was educated at Oxford, and served as a soldier in the armies of Elizabeth. He subsequently joined the navy. He was the means of saving the English fleet which was sent in 1591 to the Azores to intercept the Spanish galleons when Philip II. sent another fleet of ten times the English force to defeat the design.

Myddleton's first publication was Barddoniaeth; or, the Art of Welsh Poetry, London, 1593. His chief work is an elegant version of the Psalms in the higher kind of Welsh metres, or "Cynganedd." It was finished January 24, 1595, and pub. in London by T. Salusbury in 1603. A 2nd ed. was pub. by the Rev.

W. Davies, M.A., in 1827. It was not intended for public worship, and was never used in that form. [W. G. T.]

Mysterium mirabile, Hac luce nobis panditur. [Passiontide.] This is the hymn at Matins in the Office of the Most Holy Winding Sheet of our Lord Jesus Christ—an office added to the Roman Breviary since 1740. In the Roman Breviary, Bologna, 1827, Pars Verna, Supplement, it is assigned to Saturday after the 2nd S. in Lent, and marked as a Greater Double; the text of this hymn being given at p. 274. It is also found in later eds. of the Roman Breviary. Tr. as:—

This day the wondrous mystery. By E. Caswall. 1st pub. in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 80, in 7 st. of 4 l.; and again in his Hym. & Poems, 1873, p. 45. It is in several collections, including the Hymnary, 1872, &c., but usually in an abridged form.

Other trs. are:—

1. O Miracle of mystery. W. J. Bliss, 1882-6.
2. A wondrous mystery this day. J. Wallace, 1874.

N. The signature of Dr. N. Cotton in Dr. Dodd's Christians' Magazine, 1761.

N., in Bristol Bap. Coll. of Ash & Evans, 1769, i.e. James Newton.

N. N. F., in the Church Times, i.e. G. Moultrie, being the initials of his family motto, "Nunquam non fidelis."

N. T. P. R., in the Clunias Brev., 1686, i.e. Nicholas le Tourneaux.

Nachtenhöfer, Caspar Friedrich, a. of Caspar Nachtenhöfer, advocate at Halle, was b. at Halle, March 5, 1624. He entered the University of Leipzig in 1647, as a student of theology (M.A. 1651). He was then for a few months tutor in the house of the Chancellor August Carpsow at Coburg. In the end of 1651 he was appointed diaconus, and in 1655 pastor, at Meeder near Coburg. He was then, in 1671, called to Coburg as pastor of the Holy Cross Church, and diaconus of the St. Moritz Church. He afterwards devoted himself wholly to St. Moritz, and d. as second senior in charge Nov. 23, 1685 (Wetzel ii. 203; Allg. Deutsche Biog. xxiii. 192, &c.) He pub. a metrical history of the Passion under the title of Erklärung des Leidens- und Sterbens-Geschichte Jesu Christi, at Coburg in 1685. Four hymns are ascribed to him, two of which have been tr. viz.:—

i. Dies ist die Nacht, da mir erschienen. Christmas. This is in J. H. Hävecker's Kirchencho, 1695, No. 406, in 5 st. of 6 l., marked as by M. C. F. N. It had previously appeared in the Coburg G. B., 1663 (Coburg Gymnasium Library), and is included in the Uns. L. S., 1851, No. 31. The tr. in C. U. is:—

This is the night wherein appeared. A good and full tr. by A. T. Russell, as No. 58 in his Ps. & Hym., 1851.

ii. So gehst du dann, mein Jesu, hin. Passiontide. This appears in the Neu-Vollständigers Marggräfl. Brandenburgisches Gesang-Buch, Culmbach and Bayreuth, 1668, p. 81, in 4 st. of 6 l., entitled "A beautiful hymn for Lent." It is also in the Coburg G. B., 1666, Appendix, p. 4, entitled "Christ's Death the sinner's life." In both books it is without name of author. Wetzel ii. 206, ascribes it to Nachtenhöfer, and says it was written in 1651, while he was tutor at Coburg. It is a hymn on Christ's way to the Cross, and in the form of a dialogue between the soul and Christ. In order to complete the sense an additional stanza was inserted between the original iii. and iv., and this is the form in the Uns. L. S., 1851, No. 781. This new st., according to Wetzel ii. 210, is by Magnus Daniel Omelin, Professor at Altdorf (b. at Nürnberg, Sept. 6, 1646; d. at Altdorf Nov. 22, 1708), and was included in the Altdorf G. B. of 1699. The tr. in C. U. is:—

So, Lord, Thou goest forth to die. A good tr. of st. i., v. by A. T. Russell, as No. 92 in his Ps. & Hym., 1851.

[J. M.]

Ναὶὼν Ἰωῆς ἐν μυχοῖς. [Esse Λαβν.]

Naked as from the earth we came. I. Watts. [Submission.] 1st pub. in his Hym. and Spiritual S., 1707 (ed. 1709, Bk. i., N. o. v.), on Job i. 21, in 5 st. of 4 l., and entitled "Submission to afflictive Providence." In this form its use is limited. In the 1745 Draft Translations and Paraphrases of the Church of Scotland it was included, unaltered; but in the authorized ed. of 1781, No. iii., it was given in a recast form, in which st. i.-iii. were Watts's rewritten, and st. iv. was new. This recast, which has been in use in the Church of Scotland for more than one hundred years, is claimed for W. Cameron (p. 290. i.) in the markings by his daughter of the 1781 Tr. & Paraphrases. [J. J.]

Nason, Elias, a Congregational minister, lecturer, and writer, was b. at Wrentham, Massachusetts, April 21, 1811, and was educated at Brown University, where he graduated in 1835. He was a teacher in Georgia for some time, and from 1840 to 1849 in Newburyport, Massachusetts. Subsequently he entered the Congregational ministry. He is the author of several biographies. In 1855 he pub. Songs for the School Room; in 1857 his Congregational Hymn Book; and in 1863, in conjunction with Dr. Edward Kirk, Songs for Social and Public Worship. His hymn, "Jesus only, when the morning" (Jesus always), was written at Natick, Massachusetts, about 1856, and was pub. with music by the author in the Boston Wellspring. [F. M. B.]

Nato canunt omnia. [Christmas.] This sequence is found in the Boullian ms., No. 775, written about the year 1000 (f. 139 b); in an 11th cent. Winchester Sequentiary, now at Corpus Christi, Cambridge (ms. No. 4733); an 11th cent. ms. at Munich (Lat. 14083, f. 7), &c. In the Sarum, Hereford and York Missals it is placed in the Midnight Mass ("Missa in Gallicantu") of Christmas Day. The printed text is also found in Daniel ii. p. 563, and Kehren, No. 9. Cllichtovaeus represents it as describing the joy of Christmas, announced by the angel to the shepherds, and sung by the angelic choir; and as inviting the whole human race to rejoice in God made Man. [J. M.]

Translations in C. U.:—

1. Hark, the hosts of heaven are singing. By E. H. Plumptre, made for and first pub. in the Hymnary, 1872. Also in a few American collections.

2. To Him God's only Son. By E. A. Dayman, also made for and first pub. in the Hymnary, 1872.

Translations not in C. U.:—

1. Unto the new-born Deity. J. D. Chambers, 1866.

2. All hearts with one accord. C. S. Pearson, in the Sacramentalist in English, 1868.
 3. All hearts above, beulah. C. S. Pearson, in Sequences from the Sacramentalist, 1871. [J. J.]

Nato nobis Salvatore. Adieu of St. Victor. [Christmas.] This fine acquire is given by L. Gautier in his Général poétique Adieu de Saint-Victor, 1881, p. 257, among the "Poèmes attribués à Adam." According to Gautier it is not found in the Graduals of St. Victor or of St. Genesieve; but is in a 13th cent. Paris Gradual in the Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris (No. 15,615), and other sources. He says the inscription is at least "very probable," and so prints the text in full. The text is also in Daniel, ii. p. 222; Neale's Hymns Revisited, 1851, p. 64; Kehris, No. 255; Wrightson, 1881, i. 54, etc. St. i., ll. 4-6, of this acquire:—

"Nobis datus, nobis tatus,
 Ex insensata carnis Luce et nata gentium."

appear in the "Pango lingua" of St. Thomas of Aquino as "Nobis nata, nobis datus ex insensata virgine, Ex in mundo conversatus, spursus verbi semine." Tr. as:—

Christ has come for our salvation. By E. A. Day man, made for and put in the Hymnary, 1871.

Other tr. are:—

1. Now is born our great Salvation. A. M. Morgan, in Laysa, 1881, 1884, p. 85, and his Light, 1887.
2. Come, let us celebrate the morn. B. T. Morgan, 1880.
3. Since a Saviour is born for us. D. S. Wrightson, 1881, i. p. 55. [J. M.]

Neale, John Mason, D.D. was b. in Conduit Street, London, on Jan. 24, 1818. He inherited intellectual power on both sides: his father, the Rev. Cornelius Neale, having been Senior Warden, Second Chancellor's Medallist, and Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge, and his mother being the daughter of John Mason Good, a man of considerable learning. Both father and mother are said to have been "very pronounced Evangelicals." The father died in 1825, and the boy's early training was entirely under the direction of his mother, his deep attachment for whom is shown by the fact that, not long before his death, he wrote of her as "a mother to whom I owe more than I can express." He was educated at Sturborne Grammar School, and was afterwards a private pupil, first of the Rev. William Russell, Rector of Shepperton, and then of Professor Challis. In 1836 he went up to Cambridge, where he gained a scholarship at Trinity College, and was considered the best man of his year. But he did not inherit his father's mathematical tastes, and had, in fact, the greatest antipathy to the study; and as the strange role then prevailed that none might aspire to Classical Honours unless his name had appeared in the Mathematics list, he was forced to be content with an ordinary degree. This he took in 1840; but he became one year later, he might have taken a brilliant degree, for in 1841 the rule mentioned above was rescinded. He gained, however, what distinctions he could, winning the Members' Prize, and being elected Fellow and Tutor of Downing College; while, as a graduate, he won the Newtonian Prize no fewer than eleven times.

At Cambridge he identified himself with the Church movement, which was spreading there in a quiet, but no less real, way than in the sister University. He became one of the founders of the Ecclesiastical, or, as it was commonly called, the Cambridge Camden Society, in conjunction with Mr. E. J. Boyce, his future brother-in-law, and Mr. Benjamin Webb, afterwards the well-known Vicar of St. Andrew's, Wells Street, and editor of The Church Quarterly Review. In 1842 he married Miss Sarah Newman Webster, the daughter of an evangelical clergyman, and in 1843 he was presented to the small incumbency of Crawley in Sussex. Ill-health, however, prevented him from being instituted to the living. His lungs were found to be badly affected; and, as the only chance of saving his life, he was obliged to go to Madeira, where he stayed until the summer of 1844. In 1846 he was presented by Lord Delawarr to the Wardenship of Sackville College, East Grinstead. This can hardly be considered as an ecclesiastical preferment, for both his predecessor and his successor were laymen. In fact the only ecclesiastical preferment that ever was offered to him was the Provostship of St. Ninian's, Perth. This was an honorific office, for the Provostship is equivalent to a Denary in England, but it was not a lucrative one, being worth only £100 a year. He was obliged to decline it, as the climate was thought too cold for his delicate health. In the quiet retreat of East Grinstead, therefore, Dr. Neale spent the remainder of his comparatively short life, dividing his time between literary work, which all tended, directly or indirectly, to the advancement of that great Church revival of which he was so able and courageous a champion, and the unrelenting care of that sisterhood of which he was the founder. He commenced a sisterhood at Rotherfield on a very small scale, in conjunction with Miss S. A. Groom, daughter of the rector of the parish; but in 1856 he transferred it to East Grinstead, where, under the name of St. Margaret's, it has attained its present proportions. Various other institutions gradually arose in connection with this Sisterhood of St. Margaret's, viz., an Orphanage, a Middle Class School for girls, and a House at Aldershot for the reformation of fallen women. The blessing which the East Grinstead Sisters have been to thousands of the sick and suffering cannot here be told. But it must be mentioned that Dr. Neale met with many difficulties, and great opposition from the outside, which, on one occasion, if not more, culminated in actual violence. In 1857 he was attending the funeral of one of the Sisters at Lewes, when a report was spread that the deceased had been drowned into St. Margaret's Home, persuaded to leave all her money to the sisterhood, and then purposely sent to a post in which she might catch the scarlet fever of which she died. To those who knew anything of the scrupulously delicate and honorable character of Dr. Neale, such a charge would seem absurd on the face of it; but moles are not apt to reflect, and it was very easy to excite a mob against the unpopular practices and sentiments rife at East Grinstead; and Dr. Neale and some Sisters who were attending the funeral were attacked and roughly handled. He also found opponents in higher quarters. He was inhibited by the Bishop of the Diocese for fourteen years, and the Anti-sloth House was obliged to be abandoned, after having done useful work for some years, in consequence of the prejudice of officials against the religious system pursued. Dr. Neale's character, however, was a happy mixture of gentleness and firmness; he had in the highest degree the courage of his convictions, which were remarkably definite and strong; while at the same time he maintained the greatest charity towards, and forbearance with, others who did not agree with him. It is not surprising, therefore, that he lived all opposition down; and that, while from first to last his relations with the community at East Grinstead were of the happiest description, he was also, after a time, spared any molestation from without. The institution grew upon his hands, and he became anxious to provide it with a permanent and fitting home. His last public act was to lay the foundation of a new convent for the Sisters on St. Margaret's Day (July 20), 1865. He lived long enough to see the building progress, but not to see it completed. In the following spring his health, which had always been delicate, completely broke down, and after five months of acute suffering he passed away on the Feast of the Transfiguration (Aug. 6), 1866, to the bitter regret of the little community at East Grinstead and of numberless friends outside that circle. One trait of his singularly lovable character must not pass unnoticed. His clarity, both in the popular and in the true Christian sense of the word, was unbounded; he was liberal and almost lavish with his money, and his liberality extended to men of all creeds and opinions; while it is pleasing to record that his relations with his ecclesiastical superiors so much improved that he dedicated his volume of Seventeenth Poems to the bishop of the diocese. If however success in life depended upon worldly advantages, Dr. Neale's life would have to be pronounced a failure; for, as his old friend, Dr. Littledale, justly complains, "he spent nearly half his life where he died, in the position of warden of an obscure almshouse on a salary of £27 a year." But, measured by a different standard, his short life assumes very different proportions. Not only did he win the love and gratitude of those with whom he was immediately connected, but he acquired a world-wide reputation as a writer, and he lived to see that Church revival, to promote which was the great object of his whole career, already advancing to the position which it now occupies in the land of his birth.

Dr. Neale was an industrious and voluminous writer both in prose and verse; it is of course with the latter class of his writings that this sketch is chiefly concerned; but a few words must first be said about the former.

I.—Prose Writings.—His first compositions were in the form of contributions to The Ecclesiologist, and were written during his graduate career at Cambridge. Whilst he was in Madeira he began to write his Commentary on the Psalms, part of which was published in 1860. It was afterwards given to the world, partly written by him and partly by his friend, Dr. Littledale, in 4 vols. in 1874, under the title of A Commentary on the Psalms, from Primitive and Modern Writers. This work has been criticised as pushing the mystical interpretation to an extravagant extent. But Dr. Neale has anticipated and disarmed such criticism by distinctly stating at the commencement that "not one single mystical interpretation throughout the present Commentary is original;" and surely such a collection has a special value as a wholesome correction of the materialistic and rationalistic tendencies of the age. His next great work, written at Sackville College, was The History of the Holy Eastern Church, The General Introduction was published in 1847; then followed part of the History itself, The Patriarchate of Alexandria, in 2 vols.; and after his death another fragment was published, The History of the Patriarchate of Antioch, to which was added, Constantine's Memoirs of the Patriarch of Antioch, translated from the Greek, edited by the Rev. G. Williams, 1 vol. The whole fragment was published in 2 vols. (1847-1878). The work is spoken very highly of, and constantly referred to, by Dean Stanley in his Lectures on the History of the Eastern Church. Dr. Neale was naturally in strong sympathy with the struggling Episcopal Church of Scotland, and to show that sympathy he published, in 1856, The Life and Times of Patrick Torry, D.D., Bishop of St. Andrews, &c., with an Appendix on the Scottish Liturgy. In the same direction was his History of the so-called Jesuit Church in Holland, 1858. Next followed Essays on Liturgiology and Church History, with an Appendix on Liturgical Quotations from the Apostolical Fathers by the Rev. G. Moultrie, 1863, a 2nd edition of which, with an interesting Preface by Dr. Littledale, was published in 1867. It would be foreign to the purpose of this article to dwell on his other prose works, such as his published sermons preached in Sackville College Chapel, his admirable little devotional work, Readings for the Aged, which was a selection from these sermons; the various works he edited, such as the Tetralogia Liturgica, the Sequentie ex Monumentis Germanicis, Anglicis, Gallicis, aliisque Medii Ævi Collecta; his edition of The Primitive Liturgies of S. Mark, S. Clement, S. James, S. Chrysostom and S. Basil, with a Preface by Dr. Littledale; his Translation of the same; his many stories from Church History, his Voices from the East, translated from the Russ, and his various articles contributed to the Eccelesiologist, The Christian Remembrancer, The Morning Chronicle, and The Churchman's Companion. It is time to pass on to that with which we are directly concerned.

II.—Poetical Writings.—As a sacred poet, Dr. Neale may be regarded under two aspects, as an original writer and as a translator.

1.—Original Writer.—Of his original poetry, the first specimen is Hymns for Children, pub. in 1842, which reached its 10th edition the year after his death. It consists of 3 short hymns, the first 19 for the different days of the week and different parts of the day, the last 14 for the different Church Seasons. This little volume was followed in 1844 by Hymns for the Young, which was intended to be a sequel to the former, its alternative title being A Second Series of Hymns for Children; but it is designed for an older class than the former, for young people rather than for children. The first 7 hymns are "for special occasions," as "on going to work," "leaving home," &c.; the next 8 on "Church Duties and Privileges," "Confirmation," "First Holy Communion," &c., the last 13 on "Church Festivals," which, oddly enough, include the Four Ember Seasons, Rogation Days, and the Sundays in Advent. In both these works the severe and rigid style, copied, no doubt, from the old Latin hymns, is very observable. Perhaps this has prevented them from being such popular favourites as they otherwise might have been; but they are quite free from faults into which a writer of hymns for children is apt to fall. They never degenerate into mere prose in rhyme; and in every case the purity as well as the simplicity of their diction is very remarkable. In the same year (1844) he also pub. Songs and Ballads for Manufacturers, which were written during his sojourn in Madeira, and the aim of which (he tells us) was "to set forth good and sound principles in metaphors which might, from their familiarity, come home to the hearts of those to whom they were addressed." They are wonderfully spirited both in matter and manner, and their freedom of style is as remarkable as the rigidity of the former works. They were followed eleven years later (1855) by a similar little work entitled Songs and Ballads for the People. This is of a more aggressive and controversial character than the previous ones, dealing boldly with such burning questions as "The Teetotalers," "Why don't you go to Meeting?" &c. Passing over the Seatonian Poems, most of which were of course written before those noticed above, we next come to the Hymns for the Sick, which is a fitting companion to the Readings for the Aged, and then to Sequences, Hymns, and other Ecclesiastical Verses, which was published just after the author's death (1866), and may be regarded as a sort of dying legacy to the world. In fact, the writer almost intimates as much in the preface, where he speaks of himself as "one who might soon be called to have done with earthly composition for ever." Many of the verses, indeed, were written earlier, "forty years ago," he says, which is evidently intended for twenty. The preface is dated "In the Octave of St. James, 1866," and within a fortnight, on the Feast of the Transfiguration, "the veil" (to use the touching words of his old friend, Dr. Littledale) "was withdrawn from before his eyes, and the song hushed on earth is now swelling the chorus of Paradise." Was it an accident that these verses dwell so much on death and the life beyond the grave? or did the coming event cast its shadow before? Not that there is any sadness of tone about them; quite the reverse. He contemplates death, but it is with the eye of a Christian from whom the sting of death has been removed. Most of the verses are on subjects connected with the Church Seasons, especially with what are called the "Minor Festivals;" but the first and last poems are on different subjects. The first, the "Prologue," is "in dear memory of John Keble, who departed on Maundy Thursday, 1866," and is a most touching tribute from one sacred poet to another whom he was about to follow within a few months to the "land that is very far off." The last is a poetical version of the legend of "the Seven Sleepers of Ephesus," and is, the writer thinks, "the first attempt to apply to primitive Christianity that which is, to his mind, the noblest of our measures." That measure is the hexameter, and undoubtedly Dr. Neale employed it, as he did all his measures, with great skill and effect; but it may be doubted whether the English language, in which the quantities of syllables are not so clearly defined as in Latin and Greek, is quite adapted for that measure. Throughout this volume, Dr. Neale rises to a far higher strain than he had ever reached before.

ii. Translations.—It is in this species of composition that Dr. Neale's success was pre-eminent, one might almost say unique. He had all the qualifications of a good translator. He was not only an excellent classical scholar in the ordinary sense of the term, but he was also positively steeped in mediæval Latin. An anecdote given in an appreciative notice by "G. M." [Moultrie] happily illustrates this:—

Dr. Neale "was invited by Mr. Keble and the Bishop of Salisbury to assist them with their new hymnal, and for this purpose he paid a visit to Hursley Parsonage." On one occasion Mr. Keble "having to go to another room to find some papers was detained a short time. On his return Dr. Neale said, 'Why, Keble, I thought you told me that the "Christian Year" was entirely original.' 'Yes,' he answered, 'it certainly is.' 'Then how comes this?' and Dr. Neale placed before him the Latin of one of Keble's hymns. Keble professed himself utterly confounded. He protested that he had never seen this 'original,' no, not in all his life. After a few minutes Neale relieved him by avowing that he had just turned it into Latin in his absence."

Again, Dr. Neale's exquisite ear for melody prevented him from spoiling the rhythm by too servile an imitation of the original; while the spiritedness which is a marked feature of all his poetry preserved that spring and dash which is so often wanting in a translation.

(i) Latin.—Dr. Neale's translations from the Latin include (1) Mediæval Hymns and Sequences (1851). He was the first to introduce to the English reader Sequences, that is, as he himself describes them, "hymns sung between the Epistle and Gospel in the Mass," or, as he explains more definitely, "hymns whose origin is to be looked for in the Alleluia of the Gradual sung between the Epistle and the Gospel." He was quite an enthusiast about this subject:—

"It is a magnificent thing," he says, "to pass along the far-stretching vista of hymns, from the sublime self-containedness of St. Ambrose to the more fervid inspiration of St. Gregory, the exquisite typology of Venantius Fortunatus, the lovely painting of St. Peter Damiani, the crystal-like simplicity of St. Notker, the scriptural calm of Godscalcus, the subjective loveliness of St. Bernard, till all culminate in the full blaze of glory which surrounds Adam of St. Victor, the greatest of them all."

Feeling thus what a noble task he had before him, it is no wonder that he spared no pains over it, or that he felt it his duty to adopt "the exact measure and rhyme of the original, at whatever inconvenience or cramping." That he succeeded in his difficult work, the verdict of the public has sufficiently proved. Of all the translations in the English language no one has ever been so popular as that of the Hora Novissima, in this volume, afterwards (1858) published separately, under the title of the Rhythm of Bernard de Morlatz, Monk of Cluny. Some original hymns may be as well known as "Jerusalem the Golden," "For thee, O dear, dear country," or "Brief life is here our portion," but it would be hard to find any translations which come near them for extensive use. A second edition of the Medieval Hymns, much improved, came out in 1863, and a third, "with very numerous additions and corrections," in 1867.

(2.) We next come to the Hymnal Noted, in which 94 out of the 105 hymns are the work of Dr. Neale. These are all translations from the Latin. The first part appeared in 1852, the second in 1854. Dr. Neale has himself given us an interesting account of his connection with this work:—

"Some," he writes, "of the happiest and most instructive hours of my life were spent in the Sub-Committee of the Ecclesiological Society, appointed for the purpose of bringing out the Second Part of the Hymnal Noted. It was my business to lay before them the translations I had prepared, and their's to correct. The study which this required drew out the beauties of the original in a way which nothing else could have done, and the friendly collisions of various minds elicited ideas which a single translator would in all probability have missed." Preface, Med. Hys.

(3.) The last volume of translations from the Latin published by Dr. Neale appeared in 1865, under the title of Hymns, chiefly Medieval, on the Joys and Glories of Paradise. It was intended to be a companion volume to the Rhythm of Bernard of Cluny. In this work the writer gives the general reader an opportunity of comparing the translation with the original by printing the two together in parallel pages. Two specimens may be given:—

Nec Quisquam.

Eye hath never seen the glory,	Nec quisquam oculis vidit,
Ear hath never heard the song,	Neque ullis sensibus,
Heart of man can never image	Nec quis cogitare acivit
What good things to them belong	De mundo viventibus
Who have loved the Lord of beauty	Quam bona Deus promittit
While they dwell in this world's throng.	Hic se diligentibus.

If there be that skills to reckon	Quisquis valet numerare
All the number of the Blest,	Beatorum numerum,
He, perchance, can weigh the gladness	Horum poterit pensare
Of the everlasting Rest	Sempiternum gaudium,
Which, their earthly exile finished,	Quod meruerunt intrare
They by merit have possess.	Mundi post exilium.

These two stanzas have been chosen because they illustrate, the first the freer, the second the more literal method of translation. The second is especially noteworthy. It will be seen that, while the English runs quite smoothly and might easily be mistaken for a stanza in an original hymn, there is not one single idea, or even one single turn of phrase in the original, which is not faithfully reproduced in the translation; and the same is observable in many of his other translations. Dr. Neale included in this work two hymns (xviii. and xix.) which have a biographical interest. "They are," he says, "two choruses of a Tragedy, written by my father, on the Greek Model, and founded on the death of Saji," and they show that, if he did not inherit mathematical, he may have inherited poetical, tastes from his father.

Before quitting the subject of Dr. Neale's translations from the Latin, it is only fair to notice that while they have been almost universally accepted by the English Church, and some of them adopted by dissenting congregations, they called down upon the translator a storm of indignation from an opposite quarter. The Roman Catholics accused him of deliberate deception because he took no pains to point out that he had either softened down or entirely ignored the Roman doctrines in those hymns. So far, they said, as the originals were concerned, these translations were deliberate misrepresentations. As however the translations were intended for the use of the Anglican Church, it was only to be expected that Neale should omit such hymns or portions of hymns as would be at variance with her doctrines and discipline.

(ii.) Greek.—Dr. Neale conferred even a greater boon upon the lovers of hymnology than by his translations from the Latin, when he published, in 1862, his Hymns of the Eastern Church. In his translations from the Latin he did what others had done before; but in his translations from the Greek he was opening entirely new ground. "It is," he says in his preface to the first edition, "a most remarkable fact, and one which shows how very little interest has been hitherto felt in the Eastern Church, that these are literally, I believe, the only English versions of any part of the treasures of Oriental Hymnology." As early as 1838 he had printed a few of his versions in The Ecclesiastic, but it was not till the appearance of the complete volume that the interest of the general public was awakened in them. Then they became wonderfully popular. His tra, "Christian, dost thou see them?" "The day is past and over," "Tis the day of Resurrection," and his Greek-inspired "Art thou weary," and "O happy band of pilgrims," are almost as great favourites as "Jerusalem the golden," and the first in his Hys. of the E. Church, "Fierce was the wild billow," deserves to be. Dr. Neale had a far more difficult task before him when he undertook these Greek hymns than he had with the Latin, and he appeals to the reader "not to forget the immense difficulty of an attempt so perfectly new as the present, when I have had no predecessors and therefore could have no master." That difficulty in comparison with the Latin cannot be better stated than in his own words:—

"Though the superior terseness and brevity of the Latin hymns renders a translation which shall represent those qualities a work of great labour, yet still the versifier has the help of the same metre; his version may be line for line; and there is a great analogy between the collects and the hymns, most h<sub>ymns</sub> the translator. Above all, we have examples enough of former translation by which we may take pattern. But in attempting a Greek canon, from the fact of its being in prose (metrical hymns are unknown) one is all at sea. What measure shall we employ? Why this more than that? Might we attempt the rhythmical prose of the original, and design it to be chanted? Again, the great length of the canons renders them unsuitable for our churches as schools. Is it better simply to form centos of the more beautiful passages? or can separate odes, each necessarily imperfect, be employed as separate hymns? . . . My own belief is, that the best way to employ Greek hymnology for the uses of the English Church would be by centos."

That, in spite of these difficulties, Dr. Neale succeeded, is obvious. His Greek hymns are, indeed, adaptations rather than translations; but, besides their intrinsic beauty, they at any rate give some idea of what the Greek hymn-writers were. In this case, as in his translations from the Latin, he omitted what he held was not good from his Anglican point of view, e.g., the Doxologies to the B. V. M.

One point strikes us as very remarkable in these hymns, and indeed in all Dr. Neale's poetry, viz., its thorough manliness of tone. Considering what his surroundings were, one might have expected a feminine tone in his writings. Dr. Littledale, in his most vivid and interesting sketch of Dr. Neale's life, to which the present writer is largely indebted, has remarked the same with regard to his teaching: "Instead of committing the grave error of feminising his sermons and counsels [at St. Margaret's] because he had only women to deal with, he aimed at showing them the masculine side of Christianity also, to teach them its strength as well as its beauty."

In conclusion, it may be observed that no one had a higher opinion of the value of Dr. Neale's labours in the field of ancient and mediæval hymnology than the one man whose competency to speak with authority on such a point Dr. Neale himself would assuredly have rated above that of all others. Over and over again Dr. Neale pays a tribute to the services rendered by Archbishop Trench in this domain; and the present sketch cannot more fitly close than with the testimony which Archbishop Trench has given of his sense of the services rendered by Dr. Neale. The last words of his preface to his Sacred Latin Poetry (ed. 1864) are:—"I will only, therefore, mention that by patient researches in almost all European lands, he [Dr. Neale] has brought to light a multitude of hymns unknown before: in a treatise on sequences, properly so-called, has for the first time explained their essential character; while to him the English reader owes versions of some of the best hymns, such as often successfully overcome the almost insuperable difficulties which many among them present to the translator."

[J. H. O.]

Dr. Neale's original hymns and translations appeared in the following works, most of which are referred to in the preceding article, and all of which are grouped together here to facilitate reference:—

(1) Hymns for Children. Intended chiefly for Village Schools. Lond., Masters, 1842. (2) Hymns for the Sick. Lond., Masters, 1843, improved ed. 1849. (3) Hymns for the Young. A Second Series of Hymns for Children. Lond., Masters, 1844. (4) Songs and Ballads for Manufacturers. Lond., Masters, 1844. (5) Hymns for Children. A Third Series. Lond., Masters, 1846. (6) Mediæval Hymns and Sequences. Lond., Masters, 1851; 2nd ed. 1861; 3rd ed. 1863. (7) Hymnal Noted. Lond., Masters & Novello, 1852; enlarged 1854. Several of the translations were by other hands. Musical editions edited by the Rev. T. Helmore. It is from this work that a large number of Dr. Neale's trs. from the Latin are taken. (8) Carols for Christmas and Eastertide. 1853. (9) Songs and Ballads for the People. 1855. (10) The Rhythm of Bernard de Morlaix, Monk of Cluny, on the Celestial Country. Lond., Hayes, 1st ed. 1858; 3rd ed., with revision of text, 1861. It contains both the Latin and the English translation. (11) Hymns of The Eastern Church, Translated with Notes and an Introduction. Lond., Hayes, 1862; 2nd ed. 1862; 3rd ed. 1866; 4th ed., with Music and additional notes, edited by The Very Rev. S. G. Hatherly, Mus. B., Archpriest of the Patriarchal (Ecumenical) Throne. Lond., Hayes, 1892. Several of these translations and notes appeared in The Ecclesiastic and Theologian, in 1853. (12) Hymns, Chiefly Mediæval, on the Joys and Glories of Paradise. Lond., Hayes, 1865. This work contains notes on the hymns, and the Latin texts of the older amongst them. (13) Original Sequences, Hymns, and other Ecclesiastical Verses. Lond., Hayes, 1866. This collection of Original verse was published posthumously by Dr. Littledale.

In addition to these works Dr. Neale published collections of Latin verse as:—

(1.) Hymni Ecclesiæ e Breviariis quibusdam et Missalibus Gallicanis, Germanis, Hispanis, Lusitanis, desumpti. Oxford & Lond. J. H. Parker, 1861; and (2) Sequentiæ e Missalibus Germanicis, Anglicis, Gallicis, aliisque Mediævi collectæ. Oxford & Lond. J. H. Parker, 1862.

A few of his translations appeared from time to time in The Ecclesiastic; and a few of his original hymns in The Christian Renewancer. In the collection compiled for use at St. Margaret's, East Grinstead, St. Margaret's Hymnal, Printed Privately for the use of the Community only, 1875, there are several of his hymns not traceable elsewhere.

Most of Dr. Neale's translations are annotated elsewhere in this Dictionary under their respective original first lines, as are also several of his original compositions. Those original hymns in C. U. which remain to be noted are:—

i. From Hymns for Children, 1842.

1. No more sadness now, nor fasting. Christmas.
2. O Thou, Who through this holy week. Paschaltide.
3. The day, O Lord, is spent. Evening.

31. By pain, and weariness, and doubt. St. Stephen.

32. First of the twelvefold band that trod. St. James.

33. Four streams through happy Eden flow'd. St. Mark.

34. Is there one who sets his face. St. Bartholomew. From this "He, for man who suffered woe," is taken.

35. Not a single sight we view. St. Matthias.

36. O Great Physician of the soul. St. Luke.

37. O Heavenly Wisdom, hear our cry. Christmas. "O Sapientia."

38. O Key of David, hailed by those. Christmas. "O Clavis David."

39. O Root of Jesse, Thou on Whom. Christmas. "O Radix Jesse."

40. O Thou, on Whom the nations [Gentiles] wait. Christmas. "O Rex Gentium."

41. O Thou, Who camest down of old [to call]. Christmas. "O Adonai."

42. O Thou, Whose Name is God with us. Christmas. "O Emmanuel."

43. O Very God of Very God. Christmas. "O Oriens."

44. Saints of God, whom faith united. SS. Simon and Jude.

45. Since the time that first we came. St. Andrew. From this, "Every bird that upward springs," is taken.

46. That love is mighty love indeed. St. Barnabas.

47. We cannot plead, as others may. St. Matthew.

48. We have not seen, we cannot see. St. Thomas.

49. Would we go when life is o'er? St. Peter.

v. Carols for Christmas and Eastertide, 1853.

50. Gabriel's message does away. Christmas.

51. Joy and gladness be to king and peasant. Christmas.

52. Joy to thee, joy to thee, Day of our victory. Easter.

53. Sing Alleluia, all ye lands. Easter.

54. The world itself keeps Easter Day. Easter. From this "There stood three Marys by the tomb," is taken.

55. With Christ we share a mystic grave. Easter or Holy Baptism.

vi. From Sequences, Hymns, &c., 1886.

56. Can it, Master, can it be? Maundy Thursday.

57. Need it is we raise our eyes. All Saints.

58. Prostrate fell the Lord of all things. Maundy Thursday.

59. Bear the column, high and stately. All Saints.

60. The Paschal moonlight almost past. Easter.

61. Though the Octave-rainbow sometimes. Low Sunday.

62. When the earth was full of darkness. St. Margaret.

63. Young and old must raise the lay. Christmas Carol.

vi. From the St. Margaret's Hymnal, 1875.

64. O gracious God, Who bid'st me now. On Leaving Home.

65. Thou Who came to save Thy people. For a School.

66. Thy praise the holy Infants shewed. Holy Innocents.

These 66 hymns now in C.U. by no means represent Dr. Neale's position in modern hymnody. Those tabulated in the Index of Authors and Translators must be added thereto. Even then, although the total is very large, it but feebly represents and emphasises the enormous influence which Dr. Neale has exercised over modern hymnody. [J. J.]

Neander, Joachim, was b. at Bremen, in 1650, as the eldest child of the marriage of Johann Joachim Neander and Catharina Knipping, which took place on Sept. 18, 1649, the father being then master of the Third Form in the Paedagogium at Bremen. The family name was originally Neumann (= Newman) or Niemann, but the grandfather of the poet* had assumed the Greek form of the name, i.e. Neander. After passing through the Paedagogium he entered himself as a student at the Gymnasium illustre (Academic Gymnasium) of Bremen in Oct. 1666. German student life in the 17th cent. was anything but refined, and Neander seems to have been as riotous and as fond of questionable pleasures as most of his fellows. In July 1670, Theodore Under-Eyck came to Bremen as pastor of St. Martin's Church, with the reputation of a Pietist and holder of conventicles. Not long after Neander, with two like-minded comrades, went to service there one Sunday, in order to criticise and find matter of amusement. But the earnest words of Under-Eyck touched his heart; and this, with his subsequent conversations with Under-Eyck, proved the turning-point of his spiritual life. In the spring of 1671 he became tutor to five young men, mostly, if not all, sons of wealthy merchants at Frankfurt-am-Main, and accompanied them to the University of Heidelberg, where they seem to have remained till the autumn of 1673, and where Neander learned to know and love the beauties of Nature. The winter of 1673-74 he spent at Frankfurt with the friends of his pupils, and here he became acquainted with P. J. Spener (q.v.) and J. J. Schütz (q.v.). In the spring of 1674 he was appointed Rector of the Latin school at Düsseldorf (see further below). Finally, in 1679, he was invited to Bremen as unordained assistant to Under-Eyck at St. Martin's Church, and began his duties about the middle of July. The post was not inviting, and was regarded merely as a stepping stone to further preferment, the remuneration being a free house and 40 thalers a-year, and the Sunday duty being a service with sermon at the extraordinary hour of 5 A.M. Had he lived, Under-Eyck would doubtless have done his best to get him appointed to St. Stephen's Church, the pastorate of which became vacant in Sept., 1680. But meantime Neander himself fell into a decline, and d. at Bremen May 31, 1680 (Joachim Neander, sein Leben und seine Lieder. With a Portrait. By J. F. Iken, Bremen 1880; Allg. Deutsche Biog. xxiii. 327, &c.)

Neander was the first important hymn-writer of the German Reformed Church since the * Joachim Neander, pastor at Lochem, near Zutphen in Holland, where he d. in 1661. His father (d. 1627), and grandfather (d. 1656), were both named Joachim Neander, and were both pastors.]

Many of Neander's hymns were speedily received into the Lutheran hymn-books, and are still in universal use. The finest are the jubilant hymns of Praise and Thanksgiving, such as his "Lobe den Herren" (p. 333, 1.).

iii. Auf. auf. mein Geist. erhebe dich zum Himmel.
Holy Communion. Founded on Ps. xliii. 6. 1860, as above, p. 27, in 5 st., entitled, "The soul strengthened and refreshed. After the reception of the Holy Communion." In Forster's G. B., ed. 1855, No. 318. In the Moravian London G. B., 1753, No. 697, it begins, "Oen Himmels-Vorsmack hab' ich auf der Erde," and in the Bruder G. B., 1778, No. 1178, it was further recast (by C. Gregor) and altered to "hab' ich schon hienieden."

Tr. as. "Heav'n's foretaste I may here already have." By F. W. Foster & J. Miller, as No. 596, in the Moravian H. Bk., 1749. In the 1801 ed. (1849, No. 1003) it begins, "Since Jesus dy'd, my guilty soul to save."

iv. Der Tag ist hin, mein Jesu, bei mir bleibe. Evening. Founded on St. Luke xxiv. 29. 1880, p. 15, in 6 st., entitled, "The Christian returning thanks at eventide." In the Une. L. S., 1851, No. 512. The trs. are: (1) "The Day is gone, come Jesu my Protector." In the Supp. to German Psalms, ed. 1765, p. 72. (2) "The day is past, Thou Saviour dear, still dwell my breast within." By H. J. Buckoll, 1842, p. 82. (3) "The day is gone, abide with me to-night." By K. Massie, 1861, p. 192. (4) "The day is gone, abide with me, O Jesus." By R. Massie, in the Day of Rest, 1877.

xi. Wunderbarer König. Thanksgiving. Founded on Ps. cl. 8. 1680, p. 159, in 4 st., entitled, "Inciting one self to the Praise of God." In the Une. L. S., 1851, No. 787. The melody, a very fine one (called by Mr. Mercer Groningen), is also by Neander, and appeared along with the hymn. The trs. are: (1) "Wonderful Creator." By J. C. Jacobi, 1722, p. 88. (2) "Wonderful and blessed." By J. D. Burns in his Memoir and Remains, 1869, p. 230. (3) "Wonderous King Almighty." By N. L. Prothingham, 1870, p. 266. [J. M.]

Nearer, my God, to Thee, Hear Thou my prayer. Bp. W. W. How. [Nearness to God desired.] This was written for the 1864 ed. of Morrell & How's Ps. & Hys., where it was given as No. 154, a somewhat slightly different version of the same having appeared in Kennedy (1863) a short time before, as:—

"Nearer to Thee, my God, Still would I rise."

The 1864 text has been repeated in several collections in G. Britain and America. In the N. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871, it begins:—

"Nearer, O God, to Thee! Hear Thou my prayer," and is accompanied in the folio ed., 1881, with the note:—

"A paraphrase of Mrs. Adams's hymn, expressing more definitely Christian faith, and better adapted for congregational worship."

Although in somewhat extensive use, it is the least musical of Bp. How's hymns. [J. J.]

Nearer, my God, to Thee, Nearer to Thee! Sarah Adams, née Flower. [Nearness to God desired.] Contributed to W. J. Fox's Hymns and Anthems, 1841, No. lxxiv, as follows:—

"Nearer, my God, to thee,
Nearer to thee!
E'en though it be a cross
That raiseth me:
Still all my song would be,
Nearer, my God, to thee—
Nearer to thee!
"Though like the wanderer,
The sun gone down,
Darkness be over me,
My rest a stone;
Yet in my dreams I'd be,
Nearer, my God, to thee—
Nearer to thee.
"There let the way appear,
Steps unto heaven;
All that thou send'st to me
In mercy given:
Angels to beckon me
Nearer, my God, to thee—
Nearer to thee!
"Then with my waking thoughts,
Bright with thy praise,
Out of my stony griefs,
Bethel I'll raise:
So by my woes to be
Nearer, my God, to thee—
Nearer to thee!
"Or if on joyful wing
Cleaving the sky,
Sun, moon, and stars forgot,
Upwards I fly:
Still all my song shall be,
Nearer, my God, to thee—
Nearer to thee!"

The use of this hymn, generally with very slight alterations, but often with the omission of the last stanza, is very considerable in all English-speaking countries. It has also been translated into many European and other languages.

This hymn is a curious illustration of the colouring which is given to a hymn by the antecedents of its author. In the case of Addison's "When all Thy mercies, O my God," and many other hymns of a like kind, no attempt has ever been made to alter its distinctive character as a hymn to the FATHER alone. With Mrs. Adams, being an Unitarian, the treatment is changed, notwithstanding the redeeming lines,

"E'en though it be a Cross
That raiseth me:"

in the opening stanza. The following alterations and additions have been made to bring the hymn more in harmony with the views of the editors by whom it has been adopted.

1. The first change with which we are acquainted was the addition of the following stanza:—

"Christ alone beareth me
Where Thou dost shine;
Joint heir He maketh me
Of the Divine:
In Christ my soul shall be,
Nearest, my God, to Thee—
Nearest to Thee!"

This is by the Rev. A. T. Russell, and was given in his Ps. & Hys., 1851, from whence it passed into the Bap. Ps. & Hys., 1858, Snapp, 1872, and others.

2. The second change and addition are:—

"Though by Thy bitter Cross We raised be."

and the doxology:—

"Glorious, O God, to Thee;
Glorious to Thee,
Almighty Trinity
In Unity
Glorious Mystery,
Through all Eternity
Glorious to Thee!"

This addition is given in Skinner's Daily Service Hymnal, 1864, No. 280.

3. Another change in the same direction is:—

"And when on joyful wing,
Cleaving the sky,
Upward I fly." (St. v. ll. 1-4.)

by Dr. Monsell in his Parish Hymnal, 1873.
4. In Kennedy, 1863, the following is substituted for st. v.:—

"And when my Lord again
Glorious shall come,
Mine be a dwelling-place
In Thy bright home,
There evermore to be
Nearer to Thee, my God!
Nearer to Thee!"

This same stanza is repeated in the Hymns for the Church Catholic, 1882, with line 6 as "Nearer my God! to Thee."

5. In Bp. Bickersteth's note to this hymn in his annotated ed. of the H. Comp., 1876, No. 312, he says:—

"The Editor shrunk from appending a closing verse of his own to a hymn so generally esteemed complete as this, or he would have suggested the following:—

"There, in my Father's home,
Safe and at rest,
There in my Saviour's love
Perfectly blest;
Age after age to be
Nearer, my God to Thee,
Nearer to Thee."

In addition to these alterations and changes, it has been entirely rewritten, by Bp. How, as "Nearer, my God to Thee. Hear Thou my prayer." See above. G. J. Stevenson's note in his Meth. H. Bk. Notes, 1883, p. 497, is worthy of attention as dealing with the spiritual uses of this hymn. [J. J.]

Nec quisquam oculis vidit. [Eternal Life.] This is from a poem lat. pub. by Mone, Nos. 303-305, from a 15th cent. ms. at Karlsruhe (see Jerusalem luminosa, p. 579, ll.). It is the third and concluding part, consists of 84 lines, and is entitled, "On the glory of the Heavenly Jerusalem as concerning the endowments of the glorified soul." In Pastor O. Kempis, Utrecht, 1881, p. 72, it is given as a second part; the first part beginning "Jerusalem luminosa" (in see p. 579, ll.). Both parts are cited as in a ms. circa 1480 which belonged to the Brethren of the Common Life at Zwolle, and is now in the library of the Emmanuel-shuizen there. The only fr. is "Eye hath never seen the glory," by J. M. Neale, in his Hymns, chiefly Mediaeval, on the Joys and Glories of Paradise, 1865, p. 62; omitting ll. 13-24, 43-66, 79-84. [J. M.]

Needham, John, was the son of John Needham, Baptist Minister, of Hitchin, Herts, but the date of his birth is unknown. He would doubtless be educated by his father, who was a tutor and in repute as a learned man. In 1750 Needham became co-pastor with John Beidome at the Baptist meeting-house in the Pithay, Bristol; but, two years later, Beidome having retired through age, a violent controversy arose in the Church with regard to a continuance of the plan of co-pastorship. As the result, Needham and a number of his friends removed to a Baptist meeting-house in Callowhill Street, where a Mr. Foot was pastor. For a time the two societies used the same building at different hours, but in 1755 they were united, with Mr. Needham and Mr. Foot as co-pastors. It is known that up to 1774 this arrangement continued, and it is also known that in 1787, both Mr. Needham and Mr. Foot having died, the Callowhill Street Church became extinct, but which of the two pastors was the survivor is not known. The date of Needham's death is unknown. It was probably circa 1786. In 1768 he pub. Hymns Devotional and Moral on various Subjects, collected chiefly from the Holy Scriptures, &c., Bristol, S. Farley, 1768. These hymns are 263 in all, and whilst none of them possess great excellence, yet several are of a pleasing and useful character. During the past 120 years several have appeared in Nonconformist hymn-books, and specially in those of the Baptists. Of these the following are still in C. U.:—

1. Ashamed of Christ! my soul disdains. Not ashamed of Christ.
2. Awake, my tongue, thy tribute bring. The Divine Perfections.
3. Glory to God, Who reigns above. Jesus, the Messiah.
4. Great author of the immortal mind. Imitation of God's Moral Perfections. From "How matchless, Lord, Thy glories are."
5. Happy the man whose cautious steps. Christian Moderation.
6. Holy and reverend is the Name. Reverence in Worship.
7. Kind are the words that Jesus speaks. Christ the Strengtheners.
8. Lord, ere (Now Lord) the heavenly seed is sown. Parable of the Sower.
9. Methinks the last great day is come. The Judgment.
10. Rise, O my soul, pursue the path. The Example of the Saints.
11. See how the little tolling ant. Youth for Christ.
12. Thou art, O God, a Spirit pure. God a Spirit.
13. To praise the ever bounteous Lord. Harvest.
14. When some kind shepherd from his fold. The Lost Sheep. From this "O how divine, how sweet the joy," in Hatfield's Church H. Bk., New York, 1872, is taken. [W. R. S.]

Neale, Henry, a. of a map and heraldic engraver in the Strand, London, was b. in London, Jan. 29, 1798. He was educated for the Law, and practised as a solicitor. In 1817 he published a volume of Poems, and in 1823 a volume of Dramatic and Miscellaneous Poetry. There were followed by contributions to several magazines; the delivery of Lectures on English Poetry at the Russell, and again at the Western Literary Institution, in 1827; and the publication of his largest work, The Romance of English History, 1827. His mind gave way under the pressure of work, and he died by his own hand, Feb. 7, 1828. His Lectures on English Poetry, with Miscellaneous Tales and Poems, were pub. posthumously, in 1829. In this work the following "Hymns for Children" (p. 330) are found:—

1. O Thou! Who sittest enthroned on high. Child's Prayer.
2. O Thou! Who makest the sun to shine. Child's Prayer.
3. God of mercy, throned on high. Child's Prayer. Usually given with the same first line but altered as in F. Bickersteth's Christian Psalms, 1833. No. 439

4. Remember Him, for He is great. Remember thy Creator.

Of these hymns No. 3 is widely used. [J. J.]

Nehring, Johann Christian, s. of J. C. Nehring, lawyer in Gotha, was b. at Gotha, Dec. 29, 1671. He studied at first medicine and afterwards theology at the University of Halle. In 1700 he became rector of the school at Essen, and, in 1703, inspector of the foundation scholars in the Orphanage at Halle. He was then, in 1706, appointed pastor of Neuendorf (or Naundorf) on the Petersberg, near Halle, and in the end of 1715 pastor at Morl, near Halle, on the Bernburg road. He d. at Morl, April 29, 1736 (Allg. Deutsche Biog. xxiii. 394, &c.) Five hymns by Nehring are in Freylinghausen's G. B., 1704. A sixth is noted under Müller, N., p. 776, ll. [J. M.]

Νεκρώσας τον θάνατον. [Ἀνίστησι τρέμμερος.]

Nelson, David, M.D., s. of Henry Nelson, was b. near Jonesborough, East Tennessee, Sept. 24, 1793. He graduated at Washington College, Virginia, in 1810, and took his M.D. degree at Philadelphia in 1812. He acted for some time as a surgeon in the war against Great Britain. During that time he became an infidel, but returning to the faith, he, in 1823, resigned medicine and took up theology, and subsequently became a Presbyterian Minister. He held several appointments, and founded two manual-labour colleges, one at Greenfield, and the second near Quincy, Illinois. He d. Oct. 17, 1844. His hymn, "My days are gliding swiftly by" (Death Anticipated), was written in 1835, to be sung to the tune of "Lord Ullin's Daughter." It is exceedingly popular. [F. M. B.]

Nelson, Horatio, 3rd Earl Nelson, s. of Mr. Thomas Bolton, of Burnham, Norfolk (nephew of the celebrated Admiral Viscount Nelson, whose name he assumed on succeeding to the title as 2nd Earl); was b. Aug. 7, 1823, and educated at Eton, and at Trinity College, Cambridge. He succeeded to the title Nov. 1, 1835. In 1857 he edited the Salisbury Hymn-Book. In this work he was assisted by J. Keble, who re-wrote some of the older hymns and translated others from the Latin. This collection was remodelled and published as the Sarum Hymnal in 1868. In the preparation of this work Earl Nelson was assisted by the Revs. J. B. Woodford (afterwards Bishop of Ely) and F. A. Dayman. In 1864 he pub. his Hymn for Saints Days, and other Hymns. In this appeared the hymn by which he is most widely known, "From all Thy saints in warfare, for all Thy saints at rest" (p. 393, ll.). He has also pub. A Form of Family Prayer, with Special Offices for the Seasons, 1852; and A Calendar of Lessons for Every Day in the Year, 1857. He is also an active member of the Home Reunion Society, and writes extensively on the subject. [J. J.]

Nettleton, Asahel, D.D., a well-known Connecticut evangelist, was b. at North Killingworth, Connecticut, April 21, 1783, and educated at Yale College, graduating in 1803. In 1811 he was licenced to preach, receiving ordination in 1817. He never settled as a pastor with any congregation, but preached in Western Massachusetts, Connecticut, and New York; in Virginia, 1827-28; and also in Great Britain in 1831. He died in 1843. His Memoirs, Sermons and Remains were pub. in 1844. Dr. Hattfield ascribes to him a hymn:—

"Come, Holy Ghost, my soul inspire—
This one great gift impart;"

apparently on no other ground than that it appeared anonymously (as did many others) in his Village Hymns, in 1824, and has been traced no further. Nettleton's hymnological work centred in the compiling of his Village Hymns, from which more hymns of the older American writers have passed into English collections than from any other source. He knew and could appreciate a good hymn, but it is doubtful if he ever did or ever could have written one. [F. M. B.]

Neumann, Caspar, s. of Martin Neumann, city tax-collector at Breslau, was b. at Breslau, Sept. 14, 1648. He entered the University of Jena in Sept. 1667, graduated M.A. in August 1670, and was for some time one of the University lecturers. On Nov. 30, 1673, he was ordained at the request of Duke Ernst of Gotha as travelling chaplain to his son, Prince Christian, whom he accompanied through Western Germany, Switzerland, Northern Italy, and Southern France; returning to Gotha in 1675. In 1676 he became court preacher at Altenburg, but in Dec. 1678 was appointed diaconus of the St. Mary Magdalene Church at Breslau, and pastor there in 1689. Finally, in Feb. 1697 he became pastor of St. Elizabeth's at Breslau, inspector of the churches and schools of the district, and first professor of theology in the two Gymnasias at Breslau. He d. at Breslau, Jan. 27, 1715 (S. J. Ehrhardt's Presbyterologie Schlesiens i. 211; Allg. Deutsche Biog. xxiii. 532, &c.). Neumann was a celebrated preacher, and edited a well-known prayer-book, entitled Kern aller Gebete (Breslau, 1680; complete ed. Breslau, 1697) which passed through many editions. He wrote over thirty hymns, simple, heartfelt and useful, which became very popular in Silesia, and almost all of which passed into Burg's G. B., Breslau, 1746, and later eds. They mostly appeared, with his initials, in the 9th ed., x. v., but about 1700, of the Breslau Vollständige Kirchen- und Haus-Music. Those which have been tr. are:—

1. Adam hat im Paradiese. Christmas. 1700, as above, p. 71, in 8 st. In the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 23. Tr. as "Adam did, in Paradise." By Miss Manington, 1864, p. 21.

2. Grosser Gott, von alten Zeiten. Sunday Morning. 1700, p. 886, in 6 st. of 6 l. as "for Sundays and Festivals." Thence in many Silesian hymn-books, and in the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 481. The trs. in C. U. are:—

1. God of Ages never ending. Ruling. A good tr., omitting st. iii., by H. J. Buckoll in his Hys. from the German, 1842, p. 5. His trs. of st. i., ii., vi. were repeated in the Dalston Hospital H. Bk., 1848; the Rugby School H. Bk., 1850 and 1876, and others.

2. Great God of Ages! by whose power. A tr. of st. i., ii., vi. as No. 10 in J. F. Thrupp's Ps. & Hys., 1853.

3. God of Ages never ending! All creation. A good tr. of st. i., ii., vi., based on Buckoll, contributed by A. T. Russell to P. Maurice's Choral H. Bk., 1861, No. 466.

4. God of Ages, great and mighty. A tr. of st. i., ii., v., vi. by C. H. L. Schnette, as No. 291 in the Ohio Luth. Hymnal, 1880.

iii. Herr! auf Erden muss ich leiden. Ascension. 1700 as above, p. 1098, in 6 st. of 8 l., and in the Univ. L. S., 1851, No. 159. The tr. in C. U. is:—

(1) Lord, on earth I dwell sad-hearted. A good tr., omitting st. iv., v., by Miss Winkworth, as No. 66 in her C. B. for England, 1863; repeated in the Ohio Luth. Hymnal, 1880. Another tr. is (2) "Lord, on earth I dwell in pain." By Miss Winkworth, 1855, p. 106.

iv. Mein Gott, nun ist es wieder Morgen. Morning. 1700, as above, p. 871, in 6 st., and in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1119. Tr. as "My God, again the morning breaketh." By Miss Manington, 1863, p. 118.

v. Nun bricht die Andre Nacht herein. Sunday Evening. 1700 as above, p. 982, in 11 st. In the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1177. Tr. as "Soon night the world in gloom will steep." By Miss Manington, 1863, p. 152. [J. M.]

Neumann, Gottfried, was b. at Hohenheida, near Leipzig, apparently Nov. 30, 1686. He studied at the University of Leipzig, and thereafter was licensed as a candidate of theology (i.e. general preacher). In 1710 he joined the staff of the Halle Orphanage, but was expelled from Halle as a Separatist, and went to Hanau. He was then for a number of years receiver of rents (Fruchtschreiber) at Bergheim in Wetteravia, Hesse, to the Count Isenburgh Meerholz, living later at Himbach, and at Marienborn (1736-39). Himbach was the headquarters of Johann Friedrich Rock, one of the principal leaders of the sect of the "Inspired," and between 1714 and 1734 Neumann generally speaking belonged to this sect. During the visits which Count N. L. von Zinzendorf paid to Wetteravia, about 1730, Neumann felt drawn to the Moravian Brethren. He joined the Moravian Community at Marienborn, Hesse, in 1738. In 1747 he was living at Meerholz, where he remained till his death. In the Weekly Reports of the Unitys-Elders Conference in Barby, No. xix. for May 9-15, 1779, is the entry, "7. We are advised from Wetteravia, that the aged brother Gottfried Neumann at Meerholz has recently entered into his rest." Neumann therefore probably d. in the end of April or beginning of May, 1779 (Allg. Deutsche Biog. xxiii. 519; ms. from Diaconus J. T. Müller, Herrnhut, &c.) Three of his hymns, all written in 1736, are in the Brüder G. B., 1778. One has passed into English, viz.:—

1. Ei, wie so selig schlaifest du. Burial. Written on the death of Christian Ludwig, s. of Count N. L. von Zinzendorf. This child died in his third year, at Ronneburg, Aug. 31, 1736. In the first printed copy of Neumann's hymn (preserved in the Archives at Herrnhut, along with the original ms., which is dated Sept. 3, 1736) is the footnote:—

"In the evening of the night, during which the young Count Zinzendorf blessedly fell asleep, on opening the hymn-book [the Herrnhut G. B., 1736] with reference to that noble child, I chanced upon the hymn, 'Ei, wie so selig schlaifest du,' (p. 322, ll.) which I referred to his death."

When Neumann's hymn was included as No. 1284 in Appendix viii., circa 1739, to the Herrnhut G. B., 1735, it appears in 5 st. of 4 l., beginning "Ei, wie so sanft verschlaifest du." In the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 1728, it begins: "Ei, wie so sanft entschlaifest du," and in Bunsen's Versuch, 1833, is further altered to "Ach wie so sanft." The trs. in C. U. are:—

1. Blast soul, how sweetly dost thou rest. A tr. of st. i., ii., and of the anonymous 17th cent. st. described under "Ei, wie so selig" (p. 322, ll.), as No. 961 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1801 (1886, No. 1259), and in J. A. Latrobe's Coll., 1841.

2. At length releas'd from many woes. A full and good tr. by Miss Cox, in her Sacred Hys. from the German, 1841, p. 75. Included in full in the Pennsylvania Luth. Ch. Bk., 1868; and, abridged, in Alford's Ps. & Hys., 1844, his Year of Praise, 1867, and others.

Another tr. is: "Sweet slumbers now thine eyelids close." By Lady E. Portecuse, 1843, p. 34 [J. M.]

Neumark, Georg, s. of Michael Neumark, clothier at Langensalza, in Thuringia (after 1623 at Mühlhausen in Thuringia), was b. at Langensalza, March 16, 1621; and educated at the Gymnasium at Schleusingen, and at the Gymnasium at Gotha. He received his certificate of dimission from the latter in Sept. 1641 (not 1640). He left Gotha in the autumn of 1641 along with a number of merchants who were going to the Michaelmas Fair at Leipzig. He then joined a similar party who were going from Leipzig to Lübeck; his intention being to proceed to Königsberg and matriculate at the University there. After passing through Magdeburg they were plundered by a band of highwaymen on the Gardelagen Heath, who robbed Neumark of all he had with him, save his prayer-book and a little money sewed up in the clothes he was wearing. He returned to Magdeburg, but could obtain no employment there, nor in Lüneburg, nor in Winsen, nor in Hamburg, to which in succession the friends he made passed him on. In the beginning of December he went to Kiel, where he found a friend in the person of Nicolaus Becker, a native of Thuringia, and then chief pastor at Kiel. Day after day passed by without an opening, till about the end of the month the tutor in the family of the Judge Stephan Henning fell into disgrace and took sudden flight from Kiel. By Becker's recommendation Neumark received the vacant position, and this sudden end of his anxieties was the occasion of the writing of his hymn as noted below. In Henning's house the time passed happily till he had saved enough to proceed to Königsberg, where he matriculated June 21, 1643, as a student of law. He remained five years, studying also poetry under Duch (p. 276, ll.), and maintaining himself as a family tutor. During this time (in 1646) he again lost all his property, and this time by fire. In 1648 he left Königsberg, was for a short time at Warsaw, and spent 1649-50 at Thorn. He was then in Danzig, and in Sept. 1651 we find him in Hamburg. In the end of 1651 he returned to Thuringia, and brought himself under the notice of Duke Wilhelm II. of Sachse-

Weimar, the chief or president of the Fruit-bearing Society, the principal German literary union of the 17th cent. The Duke, apparently in 1652, appointed him court poet, librarian and registrar of the administration at Weimar: and finally secretary of the Ducal Archives. In Sept. 1653 he was admitted as a member of the Fruit-bearing Society, of which he became secretary in 1656, and of which he wrote a history (Der Neu-Sprossende Teutsche Palmbaum, Nürnberg and Weimar, 1668); and, in 1679, became also a member of the Pegnitz Order (see p. 143, l.). In 1681 he became blind, but was permitted to retain his emoluments till his death, at Weimar, July 18, 1681. [K. Goedeke's Grundriss, vol. iii., 1887, p. 74; Allg. Deutsche Biog. xxiii. 539; Weimarisches Jahrbuch, vol. iii., 1855, p. 176, &c. The dates given by the different authorities vary exceedingly, and are quite irreconcilable. In the registers at Schlensingen Neumark is last mentioned in 1636, and then as in the Third Form. Dr. von Bamberg, director of the Gymnasium at Gotha, informs me that Neumark's name appears in the matriculation book there under January 31, 1641; and as one of the "newly entered" scholars.]

A long list of Neumark's poetical works is given by Goedeke. A large proportion of his secular poems are pastorals, or else occasional poems written to order at Weimar; and in all there is little freshness, or happiness in expression, or glow of feeling. As a musician, and as a hymn-writer, he is of more importance. His hymns appeared in his (1) Poetisch- und Musikalisches Lustwäldchen, Hamburg, 1652; the enlarged ed., entitled (2) Fortgeplanteter Musikalisch-Poetischer Lustwald, Jena, 1657; and (3) Unterschiedliche, so wol gottseliger Andacht; als auch zu christlichen Tugenden aufmunternde Lieder, Weimar, 1675. Of the 34 hymns in these three works a few are found in the German hymn-books of the 17th cent., and three or four still survive. The best of Neumark's hymns are those of Trust in God, and patient waiting for His help under trial and suffering; and one of these may be fairly called classical and imperishable. It is:—

Wer nur den lieben Gott lässt walten. Trust in God. 1st pub. in his Fortgeplanteter musikalisch-poetischer Lustwald, Jena, 1657, p. 26, in 7 st. of 6 l., entitled "A hymn of consolation. That God will care for and preserve His own in His own time. After the saying 'Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and He shall sustain thee' (Ps. lv. 22). This, his finest hymn, was written in 1641, at Kiel, when after unsuccessful attempts to procure employment he became a tutor in the family of the judge Stephan Henning. Of this appointment Neumark, in his Thüringisches Haus-Kreutz, Weimar, 1681, speaks thus:—

"Which good fortune coming suddenly, and as if fallen from heaven, greatly rejoiced me, and on that very day I composed to the honour of my beloved Lord the here and there well-known hymn 'Wer nur den lieben Gott lässt walten'; and had certainly cause enough to thank the Divine compassion for such unlooked for grace shown to me." &c.

As the date of its composition is thus December, 1641, or at latest Jan. 1642, it is certainly strange that it was not pub. in his Lustwäldchen, Hamburg, 1652. In that volume he does give, at p. 32, a piece entitled, "a hymn of consolation, when, in 1646, through a dreadful fire I came to my last farthing." The apocryphal story, according to which the hymn was written at Hamburg, about 1653 (see Miller's Singers and Songs, 1869, p. 91), has not been traced earlier than 1744. The hymn speedily became popular, and passed into hymn-books all over Germany (Leipzig Vorrath, 1673, No. 1169), and still holds its place as in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 73.

Lauxmann, in Koch, viii. 306-309, relates that it was the favourite hymn of Magdalena Sibylla (d. 1687), wife of the Elector Johann Georg II. of Saxony; was sung, by his command, at the funeral, in 1740, of King Friedrich Wilhelm I. of Prussia; was sung, or rather played, by the first band of missionaries from Herrmannsburg as they set sail from Brunsbüttel on the Elbe (near Stade) on Oct. 28, 1853, &c.

The beautiful melody by Neumark was probably composed in 1641 along with the hymn, and was pub. with it in 1657. On it J. S. Bach composed a cantata. It is well known in England through its use by Mendelssohn in his St. Paul ("To Thee, O Lord, I yield my spirit"), and from its introduction into H. A. & M. (as Bremen), and many other collections.

Translations in C. U.:—

1. Who leaves th' Almighty God to reign. A full but free tr. by Sir John Bowring in his Hymns, 1825, No. 58. His trs. of st. ii., iv.-vi. beginning "How vain are sighs! how vain regret," are included in Curtis's Union Coll., 1827.

2. Who all his will to God resigneth. A good and full tr. by A. T. Russell, as No. 236 in his Ps. & Hys., 1851. His trs. of st. v.-vii. beginning "Say not, I am of God forsaken," are in Dr. Pagenstecher's Coll., 1864.

3. Leave God to order all thy ways. A full and good tr. by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 1st Ser. 1855, p. 152. This is given in full in M. W. Stryker's Christian Chorals, 1885, and, omitting st. vi., in W. F. Stevenson's Hys. for Church and Home, 1873, and the Bapt. Hyl., 1879. Further abridged forms are in the Bapt. Ps. & Hys., 1858; Harrow School H. Bk., 1866; Holy Song, 1869, and others. In the Pennsylvania Luth. Church Bk., 1868; and the Amer. Pres. Hyl., 1874, st. v., vi. are omitted, and the rest altered to 6 8's, beginning "My God, I leave to Thee my ways."

4. Him who the blessed God trusts ever. A good and full tr. by Dr. John Ker in the Juvenile Missionary Magazine, of the U. P. Church, 1857. It was revised, and st. iii., v., vi. omitted, for the Ibraz Hyl., 1871, where it begins: "He who." &c.

5. If thou but suffer God to guide thee. A full and good tr. by Miss Winkworth (based on her Lyra Ger. version and set to the original melody), as No. 134 in her C. R. for England, 1863. Repeated in full in the Bapt. Psalmist, 1878, and in America in the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880. It is found, in various abridged forms, in J. Robinson's Coll., 1869; Horder's Cong. Hys., 1884; the Evangelical Hyl., N. Y., 1880, and others.

6. He, who the living God hath chosen. A tr. of st. i., ii., vii. by Miss Borthwick, as No. 237 in Dr. Pagenstecher's Coll., 1864.

7. He who doth glad submission render. A good tr. omitting st. vi., by J. M. Sloan, as No. 284 in J. H. Wilson's Service of Praise, 1865, repeated, omitting the trs. of st. ii., vii., in Flett's Coll., Paisley, 1871.

Other trs. are:—

(1) "He that confides in his Creator." By J. C. Jacobi, 1720, p. 13 (1722, p. 36; 1732, p. 61). Repeated in the Moravian H. Bk., 1754, and later eds. (1886, No. 183). (2) "O Christian! let the Lord direct." By Miss Knight in her Trs from the German in Prose and Verse, 1812, p. 85. (3) "To let God rule who's but contented." By H. W. Dulcken in his Bk. of German

Those of Neumeister's hymns which have passed into English are:—

The hymn "Jesus sinners will receive. When they fail," by E. Cronenwets, li 5 st., in the Ohio Luth. Hym., 1880, is marked as a tr. of Neumeister. It follows Neumeister in metre, but seems rather a paraphrase of the hymn "Jesus nimmt die Sünder an, Drum so will ich nicht verzagen." This hymn is by Ludwig Heinrich Schlösser (b. Sept. 7, 1683, at Darmstadt; d. Aug. 18, 1723, as pastor at Frankfurt am Main), and appeared in the Appendix to the Frankfurt ed., 1693, of Crüger's

Praxis, and in his own Stilles Lob Gottes in dem geistlichen Leben, Frankfurt a. M., 1724 (see Wetzel, iv. 433; Rambach's Anthologie, vi. p. xl., &c.). In Burg's G. B., Breslau, 1746, the Neumeister hymn is given as No. 1593 and marked as by G. G. Hofmann, and the Schöner hymn as No. 1592 and marked as by Neumeister. Hence perhaps the confusion.

Hymns not in English C.U.

iv. Reich, Jesu, bleib bei mir. For the Dying. In his Evang. Nachklang, 1718, No. 31, p. 64, in 7 st., entitled "For the Second Day of Easter." In the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1431. Tr. as "Jesus, near me still abide." By Miss Dunn, 1857, p. 117.

v. Herr Jesu Christ, mein höchstes Gut. Love to Christ. One of his best and most popular hymns, apparently written for use at the Sunday celebration of Holy Communion in the castle at Weissenfels. It seems to have appeared in his Zugang, 1705 (Wetzel, ii. 232, cites it as in the 5th ed. 1717. In the 6th ed. 1724, p. 17, entitled "Hymn of Consolation from Ps. lxxviii. 23-24"), and is included in the Halle Stadt G. B., 1711, No. 524 in 6 st. In Freylinghausen, 1714, it begins "Herr Jesu Christ, mein Fleisch und Blut." In Porst's G. B., ed. 1855, No. 546. The trs. are (1) "All my desires are fix'd on Thee" (st. iii.). By P. H. Moltzer as pt. of No. 401 in the Moravian H. Bk. 1801 (1846, No. 449). (2) "Lord Jesus Christ, my spirit's health." By Dr. H. Mills, 1845 (1856, p. 115).

vi. Herr Jesu, meines Lebens Heil. Evening. Apparently in his Zugang, 1705 (Wetzel, ii. 232, as in ed. 1717. In ed. 1724, p. 284 in 10 st.), and included in the Halle Stadt G. B., 1711, No. 426. In Burg's G. B., Breslau, 1746, No. 1844. Tr. as (1) "Now I'll lie down and sleep in Thee" (st. vi.), as pt. of No. 750 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789 (1849, No. 1137). (2) "Lord Jesu! Thou my life's true health." By H. J. Buckoll, 1842, p. 92.

vii. Ich bin bei allem Kummer stille. Trust in God. Included in the 5th ed. 1717 of his Zugang (Wetzel, ii. 232), and in the ed. 1724, p. 594, in 6 st., founded on Ps. lxxvii. 11. In the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 911. It has been tr. into English through the recast by J. S. Interich "Herr, mache meine Seele stille," which is No. 169, in 7 st., in the Berlin G. B., 1746 (Berlin G. B., 1829, No. 399). Tr. as "Lord, make my spirit still." By Miss Warner, 1869, p. 26.

viii. Ich weiss dass mein Erlöser lebet. For the Dying. In his Evang. Nachklang, 1718, No. 32, in 5 st., entitled "On the Third Day of Easter." In Bunnen's Allg. G. B., 1846, No. 437, in 4 st. Tr. as "I know that my Redeemer liveth, And as he lives." A good tr. from Bunnen in Reid's Praise Bk., 1872.

ix. Ob Menschen klug und weise sein. Spiritual Wisdom. In his Evang. Nachklang, 1718, No. 12, p. 24, in 6 st., for the 1st S. after Epiphany. In the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863. Tr. as "Here many wise and prudent grow." By Dr. H. Mills, 1845 (1856, p. 109).

x. So ist die Woche nun geschlossen. Saturday Evening. Apparently in his Zugang, 1705 (Wetzel, ii. 233, cites it as in ed. 1717. In the ed. 1724, p. 352, in 9 st., entitled "Hymn for the close of the Week"). In the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863. Tr. as "Thou, Lord, Thy love art still bestowing." By H. J. Buckoll, 1842.

xi. Wie Gott will, also will ich sagen. Trust in God. Wetzel, ii. 234, cites this as in his Zugang, 1717 (ed. 1724, p. 570, in 8 st.). In the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 919. Tr. as "As Thou wilt, my God! I ever say." By Miss Borthwick, in H. L. L., 1859, p. 14 (1864, p. 166), and thence in Bp. Ryle's Coll., 1867, No. 163. [J. M.]

Neunhertz, Johannes. s. of Johannes Neunhertz, weaver at Waltersdorf, near Kupferberg, in Silesia, was b. at Waltersdorf Aug. 16, 1653, and entered the University of Leipzig in June, 1673 (M.A. 1676). In 1678 he was appointed assistant preacher at Lauban, in Silesia; in 1680 pastor at Kiesslingewalde; and in 1686 pastor at Geibsdorf, both near Lauban. He then became, in 1706, diaconus of the Holy Trinity Church, and also morning preacher at the Holy Cross Church in Lauban. Finally, in 1709, he was appointed chief pastor at Hirschberg, in Silesia, and d. there Nov. 26, 1737 (S. J. Ehrhardt's Presbyterologie Schlesiens, 1780-89, iii. pt. ii. p. 187; Koch, v. 450; Allg. Deutsche Biog. xxiii. 549; Bode, p. 121—the first dating his birth 1652). Neunhertz was the author of a large number of hymns, good and flowing in style, but often lengthy and with little power or concentration. They appeared in his various works:—

(1) Evangelische Sabbaths-Freude, Zittau, 1690. (2) Christliche Leid-Andachten, Lauban, 1696. (3) Evangelische Hertz-Armunterung, Leipzig, 1701. (4) Tröstliche . . . Andachten, Lauban, 1709; 2nd ed. as Andachts-Flammen, Budissin, 1717; and in the Silesian hymn-books of the period. A large number are given in the Hirschberg G. B., 1741, a few in Burg's G. B., Breslau, 1746, and some still survive in modern collections.

The only hymn by him which seems to have passed into English is:—

Zwezo Jünger gehn mit Sehnen. Eastertide. A hymn on the Two Disciples on their way to Emmaus (St. Luke xxiv. 13-35). Included in the Lauban G. B., 1707, p. 163 (Wernigerode Library), as No. 5 of the Easter Hymns, in 9 st. of 4 l., and marked as by M. J. Neunhertz. Also in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 326. The form tr. into English is: "Trauernd und mit bangem Sehnen." This appeared in the Liegnitz G. B., 1806 (ed. 1819, No. 153), and is repeated in the Württemberg G. B., 1842, No. 176, in 7 st. It is a recast by L. E. S. Müller (see p. 776, l.). The tr. in C. U. is:—

Sad with longing, sick with fears. A full and good tr. from the 1842 text by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 2nd Ser. 1858, p. 43. In the Pennsylvania Luth. Church Bk., 1868, the trs. of st. iv.-vii. altered and beginning, "Truest Friend, Who canst not fail," were given as No. 440. [J. M.]

Νεῦσον πρὸς ὕμνους. [Εἰσαγε λανδν.]

Neuss, Heinrich Georg. s. of Andreas Neuss, surgeon at Elbingerode in the Harz, was b. at E., March 11, 1634, and entered the University of Erfurt in 1677 as a student of theology. In 1680 he became a private tutor at Heimbürg, near Blankenburg, and then in 1683 conrector, and in 1684 rector of the school at Blankenburg in the Harz. In 1690 he was appointed assistant preacher at Wolfenbüttel, and soon afterwards diaconus of the Heinrichstadt church there. For holding prayer meetings, &c., he was denounced as a Pietist, and chose to resign rather than desist. In the same year, 1692, he became preacher at Hedwigsburg, and travelling Chaplain to Duke Rudolph August of Brunswick, who, at Easter, 1695, appointed him superintendent at Remlingen for the district of Asseburg. In 1696 he received the degree of D.D. from the University of Giessen, and became superintendent, consistorialrath, and chief pastor of the Church of SS. Sylvester and George at Wernigerode, being instituted on Feb. 6. His appointment there was at first unpopular, for he was suspected of Separatist tendencies, but he soon gained the love of the people by his earnest and loving practical Christianity, and by the interest he took in the development of Church music, for which under his care Wernigerode became famous in all the district. He d. at Wernigerode, Sept. 30, 1716 (Koch, iv. 425; Allg. Deutsche Biog. xxiii. 556; Heinrich Georg Neuss. By Ed. Jacobs. In the Zeitschrift des Harz-Vereins, vol. xxi. 1888, p. 159, &c.).

The hymns of Neuss appeared principally in his Heffer zum Bau der Hütten Gottes, das ist, Geistliche Lieder, &c.; of this the 1st ed. with 100 hymns was pub. at Lüneburg, 1692; and the 2nd ed., with 34 additional, at Wernigerode, 1703 (both in Berlin), most of the pieces bearing the dates of their composition. They were received with great favour in Pietist circles, and Freylinghausen in his Geistreiches G. B. included no less than 38 (8 in pt. i., 1704; 33 in pt. ii., 1714). In the Wernigerode G. B., 1712, edited by Neuss, 5 are included, and 6 more in the ed. of 1736. Only a few are found in recent German collections. The 1703 ed. of the Heb-Opfer had also 46 melodies, of which some 75 were by Neuss, and of these 15 passed into Freylinghausen's G. B. In 1706 Neuss also pub. a collection of Brannenlieder at Pyrmont, for the frequenters of the Baths there.

Only one of his hymns has passed into English, viz. :—

Ein reines Herz. Herr, schaff in mir. Sanctification. A simple and beautiful hymn, 1st pub. in the 2nd ed., 1703, of his Heb-Opfer, p. 217, in 5 st. of 4 l. In the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 340. Tr. as:—

A new and contrite heart create. A good and full tr. by Miss Cox, in her Sacred Hymns from the German, 1841, p. 153 (1864, p. 177), repeated in the Bapt. Hym., 1879.

Another tr. is:—“Lord! grant a new-born heart to me.” by Lady E. Fortescue, 1843, p. 58. [J. M.]

Nevin, Edwin Henry, D.D., s. of Major David Nevin, was b. at Shippensburg, Pennsylvania, May 9, 1814. He graduated in Arts at Jefferson College, 1833; and in Theology at Princeton Seminary, in 1836. He held several pastorates as a Presbyterian Minister from 1836 to 1857; then as a Congregational Minister from 1857 to 1868; and then, after a rest of six years through ill health, as a Minister of the Reformed Church, first at Lancaster, Pennsylvania, and then in Philadelphia. Dr. Nevin is the author of several hymns, the more important of which are:—

1. Always with me [us], always with [us] me. Jesus always present.

2. Come up hither, come away. Invitation Heavenward.

3. Happy, Saviour, would I be. Trust. This is given in the Lyra Sac. Americana as “Saviour! happy should I be.” This change was made by the editor “with the consent and approbation of the author.” (Note, p. 299).

4. O heaven, sweet heaven. Heaven. Written and pub. in 1862 “after the death of a beloved son, which made heaven nearer and dearer from the conviction that now a member of his family was one of its inhabitants” (Schaff's Christ in Song, 1870, p. 539).

5. Live on the field of battle. Duty. Appeared in the Bap. Devotional H. Bk., 1864.

6. I have read of a world of beauty. Heaven.

7. Mount up on high! as if on eagle's wings. Divine Aspirations.

Of these hymns, Nos. 1, 2, 3 appeared in Nason's Congregational H. Bk., 1857; and all, except No. 5, are in the Lyra Sacra Americana, 1868. [F. M. B.]

New England Psalter, or Bay Psalm Book. [Psalter, English, § vii.]

New Version, The. This Version of the Psalms of David, commonly known as Tate and Brady, is fully set forth, so far as it is a part of the general history of English Psalters, in the article Psalter, English, § XIII. That article must be read for its history, the value of its authorization, its character and merits, and for biographical notices of its authors. It remains for us here to give (1) the history of the Version from 1696 to the present time; (2) an account of its Supplement; and (3) a list of the contents of each.

i. History of the N. V. As stated in the article referred to, it was first published in its complete form in 1696, and the second edition, with somewhat extensive corrections, in 1698, although it had been “allowed” by the King in Council, “December 3, 1696.” Soon after “The Second Edition corrected” was issued in 1698, another version of the original text was published which differed considerably both from “The second edition corrected” and the original of 1696. The copy before us is dated 1698. The titlepages of the three books are:—

(1) A New Version of the Psalms of David, Fitted to the Tunes Used in Churches. By N. Tate and N. Brady. London, Printed by M. Clark: for the Company of Stationers, 1696. This has a Dedication to King William signed by “N. Brady; N. Tate.”

(2) A New Version of the Psalms of David, Fitted to the Tunes Used in Churches. By N. Tate and N. Brady. The Second Edition corrected. London: Printed by M. Clark, for the Company of Stationers, 1698. This also has a Dedication to the King signed by “N. Brady, N. Tate.”

(3) A New Version of the Psalms of David, Fitted to the Tunes Used in Churches. By N. Tate and N. Brady. London, Printed by T. Hodgkin, for the Company of Stationers, 1698. And are to be sold at Stationers-Hall, near Ludgate, and by most Booksellers. This has the same Dedication as Nos. 1 and 2, and, in addition, the Authorization dated “At the Court at Kensington, December 3, 1696. Present the King's Most Excellent Majesty in Council.”

As examples of the changes made in the text of the New Version we will give quotations from Ps. xviii., verse 7.

(1) From the Original edition, 1696

“When God arose to take my part,
The trembling Earth did quake for fear;
From their firm Posts the Hills did start,
Nor durst his dreadful Fury bear.”

(2) From “The Second Edition corrected,” London, M. Clark, 1698.

“When God arose to take my part,
The conscious Earth did quake for fear;
From their firm Posts the Hills did start,
Nor could his dreadful Fury bear.”

(3) From the Edition of 1698. London, J. Hodgkin.

“When God arose my part to take,
the conscious Earth was struck with fear;
The Hills did at his presence shake,
nor could his dreadful fury bear.”

In these quotations the italics represent the changes made in the 1698 (Hodgkin) edition when compared with “The Second Edition corrected” of 1698 (Clark). This is but one of hundreds of instances of changes in the text. The text of the Original of 1696 was not again reprinted, and it was natural to expect that the publication of one of the other two would cease. This, however, did not take place for over a hundred years. We have before us two copies of the New Version, both of which have been in use at public worship, and both dated 1796, as follows:—

(1) A New Version of the Psalms of David Fitted to the Tunes used in Churches. By N. Brady, D.D., Chaplain in Ordinary, And N. Tate, Esquire, Post-Laureat to His Majesty. London, Printed. MDCCLXVI.

This edition is a reprint of No. 2, “The Second Edition corrected,” pub. by Clark in 1698. The next is:—

(2) A New Version of the Psalms of David, Fitted to the Tunes used in Churches. By N. Brady, D.D., Chaplain in Ordinary, and N. Tate, Esq., Post-Laureat to His Majesty. London, Printed by M. Brown, for the Company of Stationers, and are to be sold at Stationers-Hall, near Ludgate-Street, and by most Booksellers. MDCCXCVI.

This is a reprint of the edition pub. by Hodgkin in 1698 (No. 3 above). It has the Authorization of the King dated Dec. 3, 1696, and the Bishop of London's approval and good wishes for success, dated May 23, 1698. From this it is clear that these two texts were reprinted, and were used side by side in public worship for more than one hundred years, as it was only when the printing of the New Version was undertaken by the University Press that the reprinting of Clark's ed. No. 2 above, "The Second Edition corrected," 1698, was gradually suspended, and the text approved by the Bishop of London, on "May 23, 1698" (No. 3 above, printed by J. Hodgkin), became the absolute Tate & Brady of the future. The issue of this Tate & Brady continued for many years, and is that usually quoted by hymnologists as the "original text." In the "Selection of Psalms," which was given in the American Prayer Bk. Coll., 1826, those taken from the New Version were from this text.

The following list of first lines are from this text of 1698—the sub-lines being the first lines of centos in C. U. which have been taken from the paraphrase of any given Psalm:—

Psalm.	First Line.
i.	How blest is he who ne'er consents.
ii.	With restless and ungovern'd rage. (1) Thus God declares His sovereign will.
iii.	How many, Lord, of late are grown. (1) Thou gracious God [Lord] art my Defence. (2) O Lord, Thou art my sure Defence.
iv.	O Lord, that art my righteous Judge. (1) God of my life, my hopes, my joys. (2) While worldly minds impatient grow.
v.	Lord, hear the voice of my complaint. Accept.
vi.	Thy dreadful anger, Lord, restrain.
vii.	O Lord, my God, since I have plac'd.
viii.	O Thou, to Whom all creatures bow.
ix.	To celebrate Thy praise, O Lord.
x.	Thy presence why withdraw'st Thou, Lord.
xi.	Since I have plac'd my trust in God.
xii.	Since godly men decay, O Lord.
xiii.	How long wilt Thou forget me, Lord?
xiv.	Sure, wicked fools must needs suppose.
xv.	Lord, who's the happy man that may.

14. Thou God, all Glory, Honour, Power. Holy Com-

16. All ye who faithful servants are. Holy Communion.

16. To God be glory, peace on earth. Holy Communion

Following these hymns are the versions of the Psalms in peculiar metres referred to in the advertisement:—

Psalm.	First line.
xlvii.	O clap your hands, ye people, shout and sing.
actii.	With glory crown'd and matchless strength array'd.
cxvii.	In praise to God, let all the people join.
lxvii.	Our God bless us all with mercy and love.
cxvii.	The praise of our God, all people repeat.
cxl.	With my whole heart Thy fame.

cxvii.	In vain we build with vast expense.
cxvii.	From the lowest depths of woe.
cxvii.	Save me, Lord, for Thy Name's sake.
cxvii.	O praise the Lord, for He is good.

These Psalms are all in peculiar metres, and are given in full. Then the following Psalms from the New Version as above, first lines only being printed:—XLIV., XXVII., IV., V., XXIII., XXXVIII., XIX., XVI., CXLVII. After these 28 tunes are given with references to the Psalms only. Then are given the following Psalms, also from the New Version as above:—CXIX., ICH., C., XXV., CXXII., CXLVIII., LXXXVIII.

The 6th ed. of the Supplement, 1708, contained the same psalms in peculiar metres and hymns, together with the addition of "O Lord, turn not Thy face from me" (in a re-written form), and "O all ye works of God the Lord," from the Old Version; and "We sing to Thee Whose wisdom formed," from Playford. (This arrangement was repeated with the exception of "O Lord, turn not," as late as the Savoy ed., 1717.)

As this 6th ed. of the Supplement, 1708, is of special importance to the musical student, we append the title and some details concerning its musical contents. The title is:—

A Supplement to the New Version of Psalms by Dr. Brady and Mr. Tate; containing, The Psalms in Peculiar Measures; the usual Hymns, Creed, Lord's Prayer, Ten Commandments, for the Holy Sacrament, &c., with Gloria Patri, and Tunes (Treble and Bass), proper to each of them, and all the rest of the Psalms. The Sixth Edition Corrected; and much Enlarged: With the Addition of Plain Instructions for all those who are desirous to Learn or Improve themselves in Psalmody: near 30 New Tunes, composed by several of the Best Masters; and a Table of Psalms suited to the Seasons and Parts of the Church, &c. With Tables of all the Psalms of the Old, New, and Dr. Patrick's Versions, directing what tunes are fitted for each Psalm. The whole forming a Complete Psalmody. Useful for Teachers and being a Complete Psalmody. In the Sanctuary: Printed by J. K.

by John Nutt; and Sold by James Holland, at the Bible and Ball, at the West-End of St. Paul's, MDCCLVIII.

This edition contains 63 psalm tunes, and 12 tunes for the Hymns of the Church, 75 in all. Of these tunes 28 are marked thus *, as being new. These are:—

St. Paul's.	St. Martin's.	New Tune to Ps.
St. Andrew's.	St. Giles's.	121, 129 [Jersey].
Nion.	St. Mark's.	New Tune to Ps.
St. James's.	St. Thomas's.	114, 126.
St. Matthew's.	New Tune to Ps.	New Tune to Ps.
All Saints.	46, 93, 117.	136.
The Penitent's	New Tune to Ps.	Another new
Tune.	117, 149. [Haver-	Tune to the
St. Anne's.	over.]	same.
St. John's.	New Tune to Ps.
St. Luke's.	111, 131.

There were also New Tunes to the Magnificat, The Creed, The Lord's Prayer (1st metre), the Ten Commandments, the Benedicite, and the Hymn on the Divine Use of Music. How far the word new with regard to these 28 tunes means newly composed for this edition of the Supplement, or, published therein for the first time, is doubtful. Courteville's tune, St. James's, for instance, is in the 7th ed. of Playford's Psalter, 1701, and was not absolutely new then.

The earliest association of the New Version with what is known as the University Press with which we are acquainted, is the following:—

New Version of the Psalms of David, fitted to the Tunes used in Churches. By N. Brady, D.D., Chaplain in Ordinary, and N. Tate, Esq., Poet-Laureat to His Majesty. Cambridge. Printed by J. Archdeacon, Printer to the University; and sold by John, Francis, and Charles Rivington, Benjamin White, Charles Dilly, and John Fielding in London; and J. & J. Merrill, in Cambridge. 1782. Cham Privilegio. Price 6d. unbound.

At the end, after the Gloria Patri, are the following Hymns:—

1. High let us swell our tuneful notes.
2. Hark, the herald angels sing.
3. Christ from the dead is rais'd and made.
4. My God, and in Thy table spread.
5. Awake my soul, and with the sun.

These 5 hymns, and no more, are in a 1791 Cambridge edition of the N. V. printed by "J. Archdeacon, Printer to the University"; and the 1802 edition printed by "J. Burges," printer to the University. These hymns are also given in an Oxford edition "Printed by Dawson & Co., 1803; and in an 1807 edition "Printed at the Clarendon Press by Dawson, Bensley, and Cooke, Printers to the University."

Some time after 1807, two additional hymns were added, viz.:—

6. Jesus Christ is risen to-day, Our triumphant.
7. Glory to Thee, my God, this night.

But the exact date at which they were inserted we have been unable to determine.

In addition to these University editions of the N. V. and the 2 Hymns, we find J., F. and C. Rivington issued the following in 1779:—

Hymns taken from the Supplement to Tate and Brady's Psalms.

In this, and subsequent editions, including 1787, the 5 hymns in the University edition of 1782 are not found. These hymns are thus distinctly associated with the Cambridge and Oxford University issues of the N. Version.

Miller, in his Singers and Songs, &c., 1869, p. 173, says concerning these hymns:—

"My God, and in Thy table spread?" "This is inserted as a Communion Hymn in the 'Prayer Book of the Church of England.' It was introduced by a University printer about half a century ago. He was a Dissenter, and filled up the blank leaves at the end of the Prayer Book with hymns he thought would be acceptable. The authorities did not interfere, and the hymns thus took their place. In some books there are two hymns by Doddridge, one probably by Wesley, one by Sternhold or J. Marley, and Bishop Ken's Morning and Evening Hymns, altered and abridged."

In the Oxford Essays for 1858, in an article on "Hymns and Hymn-writers," by C. B. Pearson, he speaks of the introduction of hymns to Tate and Brady as being due to the "University printers in modern times more particularly to one about half a century back [i.e. 1808], who being a Dissenter, thought fit to fill up the blank leaves at the end of the Prayer Book with hymns suggested by himself."

This is doubtless the source of Miller's information. Both Pearson and Miller are very vague in their dates. Pearson's date is circa 1808; and Miller's circa 1819. Whereas the hymns appeared in the Cambridge edition of the N. Version in 1782, printed by "J. Archdeacon, Printer to the University." Was "J. Archdeacon" a Dissenter? We cannot say. [J. J.]

Newman, John Henry, D.D. The hymnological side of Cardinal Newman's life and work is so small when compared with the causes which have ruled and the events which have accompanied his life as a whole, that the barest outline of biographical facts and summary of poetical works comprise all that properly belongs to this work. Cardinal Newman was the eldest son of John Newman, and was b. in London, Feb. 21, 1801. He was educated at Ealing under Dr. John Nicholas, and at Trinity College, Oxford, where he graduated in honours in 1820, and became a Fellow of Oriel in 1822. Taking Holy Orders in 1824, he was for a short time Vice-Principal of St. Alban's Hall, and then Tutor of Oriel. His appointment to St. Mary's, Oxford, was in the spring of 1828. In 1827 he was Public Examiner, and in 1830 one of the Select University Preachers. His association with Keble, Pusey, and others, in what is known as "The Oxford Movement," together with the periodical publication of the Tracts for the Times, are matters of history. It is well known how that Tract 90, entitled Remarks on Certain Passages in the Thirty-nine Articles, in 1841, was followed by his retirement to Littlemore; his formal recantation, in February, 1843, of all that he had said against Rome; his resignation in September of the same year of St. Mary's and Littlemore; and of his formal application to be received into the communion of the Church of Rome, Oct. 8, 1845. In 1848 he became Father Superior of the Oratory of St. Philip Neri, at Birmingham; in 1854 Rector of the newly founded Roman Catholic University at Dublin; and in 1858 he removed to the Edgbaston Oratory, Birmingham. In 1879 he was created a Cardinal, and thus received the highest dignity it is in the power of the Pope to bestow. Cardinal Newman's prose works are numerous, and his Parochial Sermons especially being very popular. His Apologia pro Vita Sua, 1864, is a lucid exposition and masterly defence of his life and work.

Cardinal Newman's poetical work began with poems and lyrical pieces which he contributed to the British Magazine, in 1832-4 (with other pieces by Keble and others), under the title of Lyra Apostolica. In 1836 these poems were collected and published under the same title, and Greek letters were added to distinguish the authorship of each piece, his being 3. Only a few of his poems from this work have come into use as hymns. The most notable is, "Lead, kindly Light" (p. 667, i.). His Tract for the Times, No. 75, On the Roman Breviary, 1836, contained translations of 14 Latin hymns. Of these 10 were repeated in his Verses on Religious Subjects, 1833, and his Verses on Various Occasions, 1868, and translations of 24 additional Latin hymns were added. Several of these translations are in C. U., the most widely known being "Nunc Sancte nobis" ("Come, Holy Ghost, Who ever One"). His collection of Latin hymns from the Roman and Paris Breviaries, and other sources, was pub. as Hymni Ecclesiarum, in 1838, and again in 1865. His Dream of Gerontius, a poem from which his fine hymn, "Praise to the Holiest in the height," is taken, appeared in his Verses on Various Occasions, in 1868. Cardinal Newman's influence on hymnology has not been of a marked character. Two brilliant original pieces, and little more than half a dozen translations from the Latin, are all that can claim to rank with his inimitable prose. [J. J.]

Newton, James, A.M., was b. at Chonies, in Bucks, in the year 1732. At the age of 17 he went to London, where he joined the Baptist church under the care of the Rev. B. Wallin [Wallis, B.]. In 1757 he became assistant minister to the Rev. J. Thomas, pastor of the Baptist church in the Pithay, Bristol; and in 1770, classical tutor at the Baptist College in that city. He filled both these offices with honour and usefulness until his death in 1790. As a hymn-writer he is known by one hymn only, "Proclaim, saith Christ, my wondrous grace" (Holy Baptism), which appeared in 3rd. in the Bristol Coll. of Ask & Evans, 1769, No. 381; Rippon's Bap. Sel., 1787, and others of the older hymn-books. In the Bap. New Sel., 1828; the Bap. Ps. & Hys., 1858; the New Cong., 1859, and others, it begins with st. ii.:—"Let plenteous grace descend on those." In this form it is widely used. [W. R. S.]

Newton, John, who was b. in London, July 24, 1725, and d. there Dec. 21, 1807, occupied an unique position among the founders of the Evangelical School, due as much to the romance of his young life and the striking history of his conversion, as to his force of character. His mother, a pious Dissenter, stored his childish mind with Scripture, but died when he was seven years old. At the age of eleven, after two years' schooling, during which he learned the rudiments of Latin, he went to sea with his father. His life at sea teems with wonderful escapes, vivid dreams, and sailor recklessness. He grew into an abandoned and godless sailor. The religious fits of his boyhood changed into settled infidelity, through the study of Shaftesbury and the instruction of one of his comrades.

Disappointing repeatedly the plans of his father, he was flogged as a deserter from the navy, and for fifteen months lived, half-starved and ill-treated, in abject degradation under a slave-dealer in Africa. The one restraining influence of his life was his faithful love for his future wife, Mary Catlett, formed when he was seventeen, and she only in her fourteenth year. A chance reading of Thomas à Kempis sowed the seed of his conversion; which quickened under the awful contemplations of a night spent in steering a water-logged vessel in the face of apparent death (1748). He was then twenty-three. The six following years, during which he commanded a slave ship, matured his Christian belief. Nine years more, spent chiefly at Liverpool, in intercourse with Whitefield, Wesley, and Nonconformists, in the study of Hebrew and Greek, in exercises of devotion and occasional preaching among the Dissenters, elapsed before his ordination to the curacy of Olney, Bucks (1764). The Olney period was the most fruitful of his life. His zeal in pastoral visiting, preaching and prayer-meetings was unwearied. He formed his lifelong friendship with Cowper [see Cowper, William], and became the spiritual father of Scott the commentator. At Olney his best works—Omicron's Letters (1774); Olney Hymns (1779); Cardiphonia, written from Olney, though pub. 1781—were composed. As rector of St. Mary Woolnoth, London, in the centre of the Evangelical movement (1780-1807) his zeal was as ardent as before. In 1805, when no longer able to read his text, his reply when pressed to discontinue preaching, was, "What, shall the old African blasphemer stop while he can speak!" The story of his sins and his conversion, published by himself, and the subject of lifelong allusion, was the base of his influence; but it would have been little but for the vigour of his mind (shown even in Africa by his reading Euclid drawing its figures on the sand), his warm heart, candour, tolerance, and piety. These qualities gained him the friendship of Hannah More, Cecil, Wilberforce, and others; and his renown as a guide in experimental religion made him the centre of a host of inquirers, with whom he maintained patient, loving, and generally judicious correspondence, of which a monument remains in the often beautiful letters of Cardiphonia. As a hymn-writer, Montgomery says that he was distanced by Cowper. But Lord Selborne's contrast of the "unulinesness" of Newton and the "tenderness" of Cowper is far juster. A comparison of the hymns of both in The Book of Praise will show no great inequality between them. Amid much that is bald, tame, and matter-of-fact, his rich acquaintance with Scripture, knowledge of the heart, directness and force, and a certain sailor imagination, tell strongly. The one splendid hymn of praise, "Glorious things of thee are spoken," in the Olney collection, is his. "One there is above all others" has a depth of realizing love, sustained excellence of expression, and ease of development. "How sweet the name of Jesus sounds" is in Scriptural richness superior, and in structure, cadence, and almost tenderness, equal to Cowper's "Oh! for a closer walk with God." The most characteristic hymns are those which depict in the language of intense humiliation his mourning for the abiding sins of his regenerate life, and the sense of the withdrawal of God's face, coincident with the never-failing conviction of acceptance in 'The Beloved'. The feeling may be seen in the speeches, writings, and diaries of his whole life. For its bearing on his relations with Cowper, see Olney Hymns and Cowper, William. [H. L. B.]

A large number of Newton's hymns have some personal history connected with them, or were associated with circumstances of importance. These are annotated under their respective first lines. Of the rest, the known history of which is confined to the fact that they appeared in the Olney Hymns, 1779, the following are in C. U. :—

1. Be still, my heart, these anxious cares. Con-Aict.
2. Begone, unbelief, my Saviour is near. Trust.
3. By the poor widow's oil and meal. Providence.
4. Chief Shepherd of Thy chosen sheep. On behalf of Ministers.
5. Darkness overspreads us here. Hope.

Nicholas, Tressilian George, M.A., s. of the Rev. George Nicholas, LL.D., was b. in London, April 14, 1822, and educated at Wadham College, Oxford. (B.A. in honours, 1843, M.A. 1846.) On taking Holy Orders he became Curate of St. Lawrence, Reading, 1845; Incumbent of West Molesey, 1846; and Vicar of Lower Halstow, 1859. In 1863 he returned to West Molesey. He contributed several poetical pieces to the Church of England Magazine. These were collected and pub. as Poems in 1851. From this work his well-known and extensively used hymn for Holy Communion, "Lord, when before Thy throne we meet," was taken. It is part of a poem which was printed in the Church of England Mag. for Jan. 6, 1838. It is usually given in 3 st. of 6 l., and often as anonymous. [J. J.]

Nicholson, Horatio Langrishe, D.D., was educated at Trinity College, Dublin (B.A. in honours 1855, D.D. 1880). After taking Holy Orders in 1856, he held several appointments in Ireland to 1859, when he became Lecturer of Holy Trinity, Newington, London. Subsequently he was Incumbent of St. James's, Kennington, 1862, and then of other parishes, the last being the Vicarage of St. James's, Forest Gate, Stratford, Essex. During his Incumbency of St. Saviour's, Brockley Hill, London, he pub. :—

The Appendix Hymnal compiled as an Appendix to Hymns Ancient and Modern, to Chopin's Hymnal, and that published by the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, 1866.

To this Appendix he contributed several hymns for Special Services and occasions which were not then fully provided for in those collections. These are :—

1. Alone, yet not alone, so spake. Gethsemane.
2. Father of Spirits, Thee we pray. Harvest.
3. Gently I breathe to Thee, Jesus, my prayer. Lent.
4. Happy matron, though for years. St. Anna.
5. Hark the loud Hosannas! Processional for Palm Sunday.
6. Heard ye holy women say. Processional for Easter Day.

7. I will not leave Thee, Jesus Lord. Fidelity to Jesus.
 8. In the hour of doubt and sorrow. In affliction or distress.
 9. Lord, upon our knees we fall. Lent.
 10. On this Passecostal morning. Processional for Whitsunday.
 11. Prostrate in the dust before Him. Lent.
 12. Remember, Lord, Thy servants. Processional for Advent-Sunday.
 13. See, her hasting steps are best. Variation of R. V. M.
 14. Shades of evening gather round us. Evening.
 15. Starlight of Bethlehem. Life of Jesus.
 16. Sunlight from the heaven departed. Processional for the Ascension.
 17. Take up the Crosses, and bear it. Processional for Trinity-Sunday.
 18. We saw Thee, Virgin born. Processional for Ascension Day.
 19. How these sounds that fall. Processional for Christmas Day. [J. J.]

Nicolai, Philipp, D.D., s. of Dietrich Nicolai, sometime Lutheran pastor at Herdecke, in Westphalia, and after 1552, at Mengersinghausen 32 Waldeck, was b. at Mengersinghausen, August 10, 1556. (The Mengersinghausen, near Hagen, in Westphalia, and in Hagen, had adopted the Latinised form later life of his father's Christian name as his Nicolai surname.) In 1575 Nicolai entered the University of Erfurt, and in 1576 he went to Wittenberg. After completing his University course in 1579 (D.B. at Wittenberg July 4, 1594), he lived for some time at Volkhardinghausen, near Mengersinghausen, and frequently near his father. In August 1580, he preached for a Lutheran preacher at Herdecke, was appointed many difficulties there, the members of the Town Council being Roman Catholics. After the invasion by the Spanish troops in April, 1586, his colleague re-introduced the Mass, and Nicolai resigned his post. In the end of 1586 he was appointed diocesan at Niederwillungen, near Waldeck, and in 1587 he became pastor there. He then became, in Nov. 1588, chief pastor at Altwildungen, and also court preacher to the widowed Countess Margaretha of Waldeck, and tutor to her son, Count Wilhelm Ernst. Here in the Sacramentarian controversy, and was, in Sept. 1592, inhibited from preaching by Count Franz of Waldeck, but the prohibition was soon removed, and in the Synod of 1593 held at Mengersinghausen, he found all the clergy of the principality of Waldeck willing to agree to the Formula of Concord. In October, 1596, he became pastor at Unna, in Westphalia, where he again became engaged in heated controversy with the Calvinists; paused there a frightful pestilence (see below); and then, on Dec. 27, 1598, had to flee before the invasion of the Spaniards, and did not return till the end of April, 1599. Finally, in April 1601, he was elected chief pastor of St. Katharine's Church, at Hamburg, where he entered on his duties Aug. 6, 1601. On Oct. 22, 1608, he took part in the ordination of a colleague in the St. Katharine's Church, the diocesan Peschorn, and returned home feeling unwell. A violent fever developed itself, under which he sank, and d. Oct. 26, 1608 (D. Philipp Nicolai's Leben und Lieder, by L. Curtze, 1859; Koch, ii. 324; Allg. Deutsche Biog. xliii. 607, &c.).

In Hamburg Nicolai was universally esteemed, was a most popular and influential preacher, and was regarded as a "pillar" of the Lutheran church. In his private life he seems to have been most lovable and estimable. Besides his fame as a preacher, his reputation rests mainly on his hymns. His printed works are mostly polemical, often very violent and scolding, and such as the undoubted sincerity of his aim to preserve pure and unadulterated Lutheranism may explain, but cannot be said to justify. Of his hymns only four seem to have been printed.

Three of Nicolai's hymns were first pub. in his devotional work entitled Friedens-Spiegel des ewigen Lebens, pub. at Frankfurt-am-Main, 1599 (see further below). The two noted here ("Wachet auf" and "Wie schön") rank as classical and epoch-making. The former is the last of the long series of Watchmen's Songs. The latter marks the transition from the objective and experimental period of German hymn writing; and begins the long series of Hymns of Love to Christ as the Bridegroom of the Soul, to which Franck and Scheffler contributed such beautiful examples. Both are also worthy of note for their unusual and perfect rhythm, and for their splendid melodies. They are:—

1. Wachet auf, ruft uns die Stimme. Eternal Life. This beautiful hymn, one of the first hymn, is founded on St. Matt. xvi. 1-13; Rev. xix. 9-13, and xxi. 21; 1 Cor. ii. 9; Ezek. ii. 17; and Is. lii. 8. It first appeared in the Appendix to his Friedens-Spiegel, 1599, in 3 st. of 10 l. entitled "O the Voice at Midnight, and the Wise Virgins who meet their Heavenly betrothed," Matt. 25. Thence in Wackernagel's p. 259, the Ure. L. S. 1834, No. 680, and most German collections.

It is a reversed acrostic, W. Z. G. for the Gross of Waldeck, viz. his former pupil Count Wilhelm Ernst, who d. at Ellingen Sept. 16, 1599, in his fifteenth year. It seems to have been written in 1597 at Unna, in Westphalia, where Nicolai was then pastor; and during the terrible pestilence which raged there from July, 1597, to January, 1599, to which in July 1599, in one week in August 1599, and in all over 1000 victims. Nicolai's personage overlooked the churchyard, and there daily alternately took place, often to the number of thirty. In these days of distress he saw every morning, in the morning, Nicolai's thoughts turned to death, and thence to God in Heaven, and to the Eternal Fatherland. In the preface (dated Aug. 16, 1597) to his Friedens-Spiegel he says: "There seemed to me nothing more sacred, more useful and agreeable, than the contemplation of the noble, sublime doctrine of Eternal Life obtained through the Blood of Christ. This I allowed to dwell in my heart day and night, and searched the Scriptures as to what they revealed on this matter, read also the sweet treatise of the ancient doctor Saint Augustine (de Civitate Dei)." Then day by day I wrote on my meditation, I found myself, thank God! wonderfully well, comforted in heart, joyful in spirit, and truly content; save to my manuscript the name and title of a Mirror of Love, and took this as composed Friedens-Spiegel to have belated me (if God should call me from this world) as the token of my parental, joyful, Christian departure, as if I should spare me in heaven to comfort other souls whom He should also visit with the pestilence. . . . Now has the gracious, holy God most mercifully preserved me until the dying hour the dreadful pestilence, and wonderfully spared me beyond all my thoughts and hopes, so that with the Prophet David I can say to Him: "How great is Thy goodness, which Thou hast laid up for them that fear Thee." &c.

The hymn composed under these circumstances (it may be stated that Curtze thinks both hymns were written in 1599, while Nicolai was still at Altwildungen) soon became popular, and still retains its place, though often altered in the 3rd stanza. Probably the opening lines:—

"Wachet auf, ruft uns die Stimme" hat Wackernagel sehr schön auf der Zunge" are borrowed from one of the Wächter Lieder, a form of lyric popular in the Middle Ages, introduced by Wolfram von Eschenbach. (See K. Goedeke's Deutsche Dichtung im Mittelalter, 1871, p. 918.) But while in the Songs the voice of the Watchman from his turret summons the workers of darkness to flee from discovery, with Nicolai it is a summons to the children of light to awaken to their promised reward and full felicity.

The melody appeared first along with the hymn, and is also apparently by Nicolai, though portions of it (e.g. l. 1 by the Gregorian Fifth Tone) may have been suggested by earlier tunes. It has been called the King of Chorales, and by its majestic simplicity and dignity it well deserves the title. Since its use by Mendelssohn in his St. Paul it has become well known in England, and, in its original form, is given in Miss Winkworth's C. B. for England, 1863 (see below).

Translations in C. U. :—

1. Sleepers wake, a voice is calling. This is an unrhymed tr. of st. i. by W. Ball in his book of words to Mendelssohn's oratorio of St. Paul, 1836. This form is in Horder's Cong. Hymns, 1884, and others. In the South Place [London] Coll., 1873, it is a recast by A. J. Ellis, but opens with the same first line. In the Purish H. Bk., 1875, a tr. of st. ii., also unrhymed, is added.

2. Wake ye holy maidens, wake ye. A good tr. contributed by Philip Pusey to A. R. Reinagle's Col. of Ps. and Hy. Tunes, Oxford, 1840, p. 134. It was considerably altered, beginning "Wake, ye holy maidens, fearing" in the Salisbury H. Bk., 1857, and this is repeated, with further alterations, in Kennedy, 1863, and the Sarum Hyl., 1868.

3. Wake, arise! the call obeying. A good tr. by A. T. Russell, as No. 110 in the Dalston Hospital H. Bk., 1848.

4. Wake, oh wake; around are flying. This is a recast, by A. T. Russell, not for the better, from his 1848 tr., as No. 268 in his Ps. & Hys. 1851, st. iii. being omitted. Thence, unaltered, in the New Zealand Hyl., 1872.

5. Wake, awake, for night is flying. A very good tr. by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 2nd Ser., 1858, p. 225, repeated in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 200, with st. ii., ll. 7, 8, rewritten. Included in the Eng. Pres. Ps. & Hys., 1867; Scottish Pres. Hyl., 1876, &c.; and in America, in Laudes Domini, 1884, and others. In the Cantate Domino, Boston, U. S., 1859, it begins "Awake, awake, for night is flying."

6. Wake! the startling watch-ory pealoth. By Miss Cox, in Lyra Messianica, 1864, p. 4, and her Hys. from the German, 1864, p. 27; repeated in W. F. Stevenson's H. for Church and Home, 1873. The version in J. L. Porter's Coll., 1876, takes st. i., ll. 1-4 from Miss Cox. The rest is mainly from R. C. Singleton's tr. in the Anglican H. Bk., but borrows lines also from Miss Winkworth, and from the Hymnary text.

7. Wake! the watchman's voice is sounding. By R. C. Singleton. This is No. 259 in the Anglican H. Bk., 1868, where it is marked as a "versification by R. C. Singleton, 1867."

8. Wake, awake, for night is flying. This is by Canon W. Cooke, in the Hymnary, 1871, and signed A. C. C. In the ed. of 1872, ll. 7, 8 of st. ii. are recast, and the whole is marked as "based on E. A. Dayman." It is really a cento, four lines of the 1872 text (i., l. 5; ii., ll. 7, 8; iii., l. 9) being by Canon Cooke; and the rest being adapted from the versions of P. Pusey as altered in the Sarum Hyl., of Miss Winkworth, of Miss Cox, and of R. C. Singleton. It may be regarded as a success, and as passed into the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871; the 1874 Appx. to the N. Cong.; Horder's Cong. Hys., 1884, and others.

9. Wake, arise! the voice is calling. This is an anonymous tr. in the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880.

10. Sleepers, wake, the Bridegroom cometh. A spirited version, based on Miss Winkworth (and with an original st. as iv.), by J. H. Hopkins in his Carols, Hys. & Songs, 3rd ed., 1882, p. 88, and dated 1866. Repeated in the Hyl. Comp. (Reformed Epis.) Philadelphia, U. S., 1885.

Other trs. are :—

(1) "Awake, the voice is crying." In Lyra Davidica, 1764, p. 73. (2) "Awake! awake! the watchman calls." By Miss Fry, 1845, p. 33. (3) "Hark! the trumpet of God is sounding." By Dr. H. Mills, 1845 (1860, p. 269). This is from the altered form by F. G. Klopstock, in his Geistliche Lieder, 1759, p. 246, as further altered in Zöllhofer's G. B., 1766, No. 303, where it begins "Wachet auf! so ruft." (4) "Awake, arise, the voice gives warning." In the U. P. Juvenile Missionary Mag., 1857, p. 193; repeated in 1859, p. 171, beginning "Awake, arise, it is the warning." (5) "Waken! From the tower it soundeth." By Mrs. Revan, 1858, p. 1. (6) "Up! awake! his summons hurrieth." By J. D. Burns, in the Family Treasury, 1860, p. 64, and his Memoir & Remains, 1869, p. 234.

11. Wie schön leuchtet der Morgenstern, Voll Gnad und Wahrheit von dem Herrn. Love to Christ. 1st pub. in the Appendix to his Freuden-Spiegel, 1599, in 7 st. of 10 l. entitled "A spiritual bridal song of the believing soul concerning Jesus Christ, her heavenly Bridegroom, founded on the 45th Psalm of the prophet David." Lauxmann, in Kock, viii. 271, thus gives an account of it as written during the Pestilence of 1597. He says Nicolai was "One morning in great distress and tribulation in his quiet study. He rose in spirit from the distress and death which surrounded him to his Redeemer and Saviour, and while he clasped Him in ardent love there welled forth from the innermost depths of his heart this precious hymn of the Saviour's love and of the joys of Heaven. He was so entirely absorbed in this holy exaltation that he forgot all around him, even his midday meal, and allowed nothing to disturb him in his poetical labours till the hymn was completed"—three hours after midday.

As Nicolai was closely connected with Waldeck he formed with the initial letters of his stanzas the acrostic W. E. G. U. H. Z. W., viz. Wilhelm Ernst Graf Und Herr Zu Waldeck—his former pupil.

The hymn has reminiscences of Eph. v., of Canticles, and of the Mediæval Hymns to the B. V. M. It became at once a favourite in Germany, was reckoned indispensable at weddings, was often sung around death beds, &c. The original form is in Wachernagel v. p. 258, and the Unr. L. S., 1851, No. 437; but this (as will be seen by comparing Miss Winkworth's version of 1869) is hardly suited for present day congregational use. In Bunsen's Versuch, 1833, No. 554, it is slightly altered. The form in Knapp's Er. L. S., 1837, No. 2074 (1865, No. 1810) is a recast by Knapp made on Jan. 14, 1832, and pub. in his Christoterpe, 1833, p. 285, preceded by a recast of "Wachet auf!"; both being marked as "rewritten according to the requirements of our times."

The popularity of the hymn was greatly aided by its beautiful chorale (named by Mr. Mercer, Frankfort), which has been called "The Queen of Chorales," and to which many city chimes in Germany were soon set. It was pub. with the hymn, and is probably an original tune by Nicolai, though portions may have been suggested by earlier melodies, especially by the "Requies in laudibus," which is probably of the 14th cent. (Baumker L.

No. 48, cites it from the Obsequiale, Ingolstadt, 1670. In Allon's Cong. Psalmist named Armathea).

Translations in C. U. :—

1. How bright appears the Morning Star! This is a full and fairly close version by J. C. Jacobi, in his Psal. Ger., 1722, p. 90 (1732, p. 162); repeated, with alterations, in the Moravian H. Bk., 1754, pt. i., No. 317 (1886, No. 360). The versions of st. v., vii. beginning, "The Father from eternity," are included in Aids to the Service of Song, Edin. N.D., but since 1860. In 1855 Mercer gave in his C. P. & H. Bk., as No. 15, a hymn in 4 st. of 10 l., of which five lines are exactly from Jacobi. St. i., ll. 1-3; ii., ll. 8, 9; iii., ll. 2, 3, 6; iv., l. 10, are exactly; and l. 1, 9; ii., ll. 2, 3, 6, 10; iii., ll. 1, 4, 5; iv., ll. 7, 9 are nearly from the Moravian H. Bk., 1801. The interjected lines are by Mercer, but bear very slight resemblance either to Nicolai's original text, or to any version of the German that we have seen. In his 1859 ed. he further recast it, leaving only the first line unaltered from Jacobi; and this form is in his Ox. ed., 1864, No. 121, in the Irish Church Hyl., 1869 and 1873, and in the Hyl. Comp., 1870 and 1876. In Kennedy, 1863, the text of 1859 is given with alterations, and begins "How brightly dawns the Morning Star"; and this form is in the People's Hyl., 1867; Dale's Eng. H. Bk., 1874, &c.

2. How graciously doth shine afar. By A. T. Russell, as No. 8 in the Dulston Hospital H. Bk., 1848, and repeated in the Cheltenham College H. Bk., No. 37. It is a free tr. of st. i., vi., v.

3. How lovely shines the Morning Star! A good and full tr. by Dr. H. Harbaugh (from the text in Dr. Schaff's Deutsches G. B., 1860), in the German Reformed Guardian, May, 1860, p. 157. Repeated in full in Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869, and abridged in Adams's Church Pastorals, Boston, U.S.A., 1864.

4. O Morning Star! how fair and bright. A somewhat free tr. of st. i., iii., iv., vii., by Miss Winkworth, as No. 149 in her C. B. for England, 1863. Repeated in the Pennsylvania Luth. Church Bk., 1868; Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880, &c.

5. How brightly shines the Morning Star, In truth and mercy from afar. A tr. of st. i., iii., iv., vii., by Miss Borthwick, as No. 239 in Dr. Pagenstecher's Coll., 1864.

6. How brightly glows the Morning Star. In full, from Knapp's German recast, by M. W. Stryker, in his Hym. & Verses, 1883, p. 52; repeated, omitting st. ii., iv., in his Christian Chorals, 1885, No. 145.

Other tr. are :—

(1) "How fairly shines the Morning Star." In Lyr. Davidica, 1708, p. 40. (2) "As bright the star of morning gleams" (st. i.) By W. Bartholomew, in his book of words to Mendelssohn's oratorio of Christus, 1852, p. 11. (3) "How lovely now the Morning Star." By Miss Cox, 1864, p. 229. (4) "How beautiful shines the Morning Star." By Miss Burlingham, in the British Herald, Oct. 1865, p. 152, and Reid's Praise Bk., 1872. (5) "O Morning Star, how fair and bright." By Miss Winkworth, 1868, p. 160. (6) "How bright appears our Morning Star." By J. H. Hopkins, in his Carols, Hym. and Songs, 3rd ed., 1882, p. 168, and dated 1866.

There are also three hymns in C. U., which have generally been regarded as trs. from Nicolai. They are noted as follows:—i. "Behold how glorious is your sky" (see p. 127, ll.). ii. "How beautiful the Morning Star" (see Stegmann, J.). iii. "How brightly shines the Morning Star! What eye describes it from afar" (see Schlegel, J. A.)

Night is on the unransomed nations. J. M. Neale. [Passiontide.] This Sequence for Passiontide appeared in his posthumous Sequences, Hym., and other Ecclesiastical Verses, 1866, p. 11, in 20 st. of 4 l. From it three centos have come into C. U.: (1) "Night is on the unransomed nations"; (2) "Till His warfare be accomplished"; and (3) "We have heard, O Son of David." [J. J.]

Nil laudibus nostris egos. C. Coffin. [Monday.] Appeared in the Paris Breviary, 1746, for Monday at Lauds, and his Hymni Sacri, 1736, p. 12. It is also in the Lynne and other modern French Breviaries; Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1898 and 1895; Chandler's Hym. of the Prim. Church, 1837, No. 18; Macgill's Songs of the Christian Creed and Life, 1876, &c. It has been tr. as:—

1. Our praises, Lord, Thou dost not need. J. Chandler, 1837, No. 18, and 1841, No. 73.

2. Our praise Thou need'st not, but Thy love. 1. Williams, in his Hym. tr. from the Persian Brev., 1839.

3. Father! Thou needest not our praise. W. J. Blew, 1852-53.

4. Though throned our highest praise above. J. D. Chambers, 1867.

5. Thou needest not our feeble praise. H. M. Macgill, 1876.

6. Father in heaven! Thy glory. D. T. Morgan, 1880.

[J. J.]

Nitschmann, Anna, daughter of David Nitschmann, cartwright, at Kunewald, near Fulnek, Moravia, was b. at Kunewald, Nov. 24, 1715. Her cousin, David Nitschmann (the first Bishop, 1735, of the renewed Brethren's Unity) while on a visit to Kunewald in the beginning of 1725, persuaded her father to remove to Herrnhut, where the family arrived on Feb. 25, 1725. On March 17, 1730, Anna was appointed Unity-Elder, with the care of the unmarried sisters; on May 4, 1730, joined with Anna Dober in founding the Jungfrauenbund (see p. 304, ll.); and in 1733 entered the unmarried sisters' house at Herrnhut. In 1735 she became companion to Zinzendorf's daughter, the Countess Benigna, and accompanied her, in 1737, to England. During the summer of 1740 she went with her own father to America, arriving in Pennsylvania Dec. 5, 1740. After the arrival of Zinzendorf and the Countess Benigna, in 1741, Anna joined with them in work among the Indians. She returned to Germany in 1743. After the death of his first wife on June 19, 1756, Zinzendorf married Anna at Berthelsdorf on June 27, 1757. When on May 5, 1760, Zinzendorf felt his fatal illness, she also succumbed, and after his death, on May 9, gradually sank and d., May 21, 1760, at Herrnhut (Ally Deutsche Biog. xxiii. 709; ms. from Diaconus J. T. Müller, Herrnhut, &c.). Her hymns were written 1735-1748; the earlier in Herrnhut, some in Pennsylvania, others from 1743 to 1748. They appeared in the various Appendices to the Herrnhut G. B. of 1735. Only two have passed into use outside of the English Moravian H. Bk. These are:—

1. Ich bin das arme Würllein dein. Hawthity, 1st pub. as No. 1592 in Appendix x. circa 1741 to the Herrnhut G. B., 1738, in 12 st. of 4 l. When repeated in the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 851, st. i., ll. 1, 2; iv., ll. 1, 2; ii., ll. 3; xii. were selected with alterations, and a stanza by C. Gregor (which begins "Mein Heiland! daas ich ohne dich") was prefixed. The tr. in C. U. is:— My Saviour, that I without Thee. Tr. in full by F. W. Foster, from the text of 1778, and given as No. 480 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1780 (1886, No. 580). Included, omitting st. v., in J. A. Latrobe's Coll., 1841.

ii. Mein König, deine Liebe. Christian Work. Appeared as No. 1233 in Appendix vii. circa 1737 to the Herrnhut G. B., 1735, in 14 st. of 6 l. in the Brüder G. B., 1778, No. 1355, reduced to 6 stanzas (st. v. in 1778 is by N. L. Zinzendorf). The only tr. in C. U. is noted at p. 558.

Another tr. is: "Thou our exalted first-born Brother." This is a tr. of st. xiv. in the Moravian H. Bk., pt. II., 1746, p. 798. In 1754, pt. II., p. 365, altered to "O Thou our first-born Brother" (1849, No. 552, st. II.). [J. M.]

Nitschmann, Johann, brother of Anna Nitschmann, was b. Sept. 25, 1712, at Kunevald, and came to Herrnhut in 1725. In 1726 the Count von Promnitz took him into the Orphanage at Sorau, and in 1728 sent him to study theology at Halle. In 1731 he became a tutor in the Orphanage at Herrnhut, in 1732 went to Halle to study medicine, but returned to Herrnhut in 1733, and spent a year as private secretary to Count Zinzendorf. Thereafter up to 1745 he was principally engaged in mission work in Swedish Lapland, and in forming communities in Livonia. He was then appointed, in 1745, diaconus and Gemeinhelfer at Herrnhag in Wetteravia, and in 1750 to the same position at Herrnhut. Consecrated Bishop of the Brethren's Unity in 1758, he took in 1761 the superintendence of the communities in England and Ireland. In 1766, he was appointed to the charge of the new settlement of Sarepta on the Volga in Asiatic Russia, and d. there June 30, 1783 (Allg. Deutsche Biog. xxiii. 714; ms. from Diaconus J. T. Müller, Herrnhut, &c.). His hymns are few in number, and not of much importance. Only one has passed into use outside the English Moravian H. Bk. It is:—

Der blutige Versöhner. The Lamb of God. Appeared as No. 1210 in Appendix vi., c. 1737 to the Herrnhut G. B., 1735, in 5 st. of 6 l. In the Brüder G. B., 1778, it is No. 575, and in the Historische Nachricht thereto st. iv. is ascribed to N. L. von Zinzendorf. The tr. in C. U. is noted at p. 558, i.

Another tr. is "I bear Lamb, from everlasting slain," as No. 21 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1742. In the 1749 and later eds. (1849, No. 441), it begins "Gracious Redeemer, Who for us." [J. M.]

No Gospel like this Feast. Elizabeth Charles, née Rundle. [Holy Communion.] Pub. in her The Three Wakings and Other Poems, 1859, p. 149. It has passed into a large number of hymnals, including the Universal H. Bk., 1885, the American Laudes Domini, 1884, and others. [J. J.]

No prophet, nor dreamer of dreams. J. Hart. [Adoration.] 1st pub. in his Hymns composed on Various Subjects, &c., 1759, in 7 st. of 8 l., and based upon the words "If there arise among you a prophet, or a dreamer of dreams, and giveth the sign or wonder," &c., Deut. xiii. 1, &c. In its original form it is not in common use; but the following centos have been compiled therefrom:—

1. This God is the God we adore. This is the last stanza of the hymn, and was given in M. Madan's Supp. to Ps. and Hym., 1763, No. 182, broken into 2 st. of 4 l. The same arrangement was repeated by A. M. Toplady in his Ps. & Hym., 1776, No. 127. From these collections it descended as an individual hymn to the modern hymnals. The same stanza, but altered to:—

2. This, this is the God we adore, was given in the Supp. of the Wes. H. Bk., 1830, is continued in the revised ed., 1875, and also found in other collections. In the Bap. Mel. of Ps. and Hym., 1838, No. 380, a cento is given, the first stanza of which we have not traced; but

st. II., III., are composed of Hart's "This God is the God we adore." It begins:—

3. The God Who created the skies, and is repeated in the Bap. Ps. & Hym., 1858, No. 290.

4. How good is the God we adore. In The Enlarged London H. Bk., 1873. [J. J.]

No sleep, no slumber, to his eyes. I. Watts. [Ps. cxxiii.] 1st pub. in his Psalms of David, &c., 1719, in 8 st. of 4 l., and headed "A Church Established." In its full form it is not in general use; but as "Arise, O King of grace, arise" (st. iii.-v.), as in the Leeds H. Bk., 1853, it is in somewhat extensive use, especially in America. [J. J.]

No songs shall break our gloom to-day. W. C. Dix. [Good Friday.] Pub. in Lyra Messianica, 1864, p. 244, in 7 st. of 4 l., and entitled "Calvary." It was also included in the author's Hymns and Carols for Children, 1869. In the S. P. C. K. Church Hym., 1871, "O Thou the Eternal Son of God" is composed of st. II., iv.-vii. of this hymn. [J. J.]

No track is on the sunny sky. F. W. Faber. [Whitsuntide.] Appeared in his Jesus and Mary, &c., 1849, in 18 st. of 4 l., on "The Mission of the Holy Ghost." From it three centos have come into C. U.: (1) "No track is on the sunny sky;" (2) "The Mother prays her mighty prayer;" and (3) "The Mother sits all worshipful." In these various forms its use is somewhat extensive. [J. J.]

Nobis, Olympo redditus. Jean Baptiste de Santeuil. [Ascension.] This hymn appeared in the Cluniae Breviary, 1686, p. 503, as "Nostris, Olympo redditus." It was repeated in Santeuil's Hymni Sacri et Novi, 1689, p. 24 (ed. 1698, p. 106), in 5 st. of 4 l. In the Paris Breviary, 1736, st. II. is omitted, and another was added as the concluding stanza, beginning, "Venture Julex succuli." The 1736 text is in J. Chandler's Hymns of the Prim. Church, 1837, and Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as:—

1. O Christ, Who hast prepared a place. By J. Chandler, from the Paris Brev. text, in his Hymns of the Prim. Church, 1837, p. 86. It was soon introduced into the hymn-books, sometimes with slight alterations, as in Murray's Hymnal, 1852; and at other times with the omission of st. v., as in Mercer, Oxford ed., 1864, and others. In H. A. & M., 1861, it reads: "O Christ, Who dost prepare a place," but it is omitted from the revised ed., 1875. This tr. in various forms is in extensive use. In Martineau's Hymns, 1873, 3 st. are given as "The Crucified is gone before."

2. Thou Who dost build for us on high. By I. Williams. 1st printed in the British Magazine, Dec. 1834 (vol. vi. p. 621, with the Latin). It was also included in his Hymns from the Parisian Breviary, 1839, p. 145. It is given, with alterations, in the Hymnary, 1872.

3. O Christ, Who, lifted to the sky. By R. C. Singleton. Written in 1867, and pub. in his Anglican H. Bk., 1868.

Other trs. are:—

1. Jesus! Thou from earth hast vanished. W. J. How., 1852-55.

2. Enthroned in heaven, Thy mansions fair. J. D. Chambers, 1867. [J. J.]

Nocte mox diem fugata. [Holy Communion.] In the Cluniae Breviary, 1686, p. 563, this is the hymn at Matins for the Octave of Corpus Christi, and consists of 5 st. and a doxology. Tr. 86:—

Soon the stars are ascending. By E. Caswell, 1st. pub. in his Musque of Mary, 1858, p. 305, in 5 st. of 6 l.; and again in his Hymns, &c., 1873, p. 158. It is given in the People's H., 1867; the Hymnary, 1872; and others, including some Roman Catholic collections. [J. M.]

Nocte surgentes vigilemus omnes. St. Gregory the Great. [Early morning.] This is one of the eight hymns which the Benedictine editors assign to St. Gregory (Opera, Paris, 1705, iii., col. 879). It is found in three 11th cent. Hymnaries of the English Church, now in the British Museum (Vesp. D. xii., f. 6b; Jul. A. vi., f. 29b; Harl. 2061, f. 219), and in an 11th cent. Breviary of the Spanish Church (Add. 30848, f. 67 and f. 70b). It is in an 11th cent. ms. at Corpus Christi, Cambridge (391, p. 229), and in the Latin Hys. of the Anglo-Saxon Ch. (Surtees Society), 1851, is printed from an 11th cent. ms. at Durham (B. ii. 32, t. 3 b). Also in a tenth cent. ms. at Bern, No. 455, and an 11th cent. ms. at St. Gall, No. 387. It is the companion hymn to and in the same metre as "Ecce jam totius," (p. 320, l.) It was included in the Romans (Venice 1478, and Rome, 1632), Sarum, York, Aberdeen, and other Breviaries, generally assigned to Sunday Matins or Nocturns from Trinity 8, to Advent. The text is also in Isidori l. No. 146; Wackernagel l. No. 95; Hymnarium Norwiche., 1851, p. 127; Königsfeld l., p. 76, and Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. [J. M.]

The translations of this hymn are:—

1. Let us arise and watch by night. Card. Newman in Prayers for the Times, 1836, No. 75, p. 271. Versus, &c., 1863 and 1868.
2. Throughout the hours of darkness dim. Hymnarium Anglicanum, 1844.
3. Rising at midnight, one and all awaiting. W. J. Copeland, 1849.
4. Let us arise and watch ere dawn of light. E. Caswell, 1858.
5. Up rising with the morning light. W. J. Allee, 1852-53.
6. Arise we in the nightly watches waking. J. D. Chambers, 1852.
7. Let us arise from night and slumber waking. J. D. Chambers, 1857.
8. Rising ere-day-break, let us all be watchful. J. W. Russell, 1859.
9. Watch we by night, with one accord arising. J. Kettle, 1859.
10. Come let us arise, and keep the watches of the night. J. Wallace, 1874.
11. Mid evening shadows in all be watching. Hymnary, 1872. Dated 1869.
12. Now from the slumbers of the night arising. Annals in the Antiphona and Grad., 1880, and the Hymner, 1882. [J. J.]

Noel, Hon. Baptist Wriothesley, M.A., youngest s. of Sir Gerard Noel Noel, Bart., and brother of the Earl of Gainsborough, was b. at Leimouth, near Leith, July 19, 1759, and educated at Trinity College, Cambridge. Taking Holy Orders he was for some time Incumbent of St. John's Episcopal Chapel, Bedford Row, London, and Chaplain to the Queen; but in 1808 he seceded from the Church of England, and subsequently became a Baptist Minister. He was pastor of St. John's Street Chapel, Bedford Row, until 1868. He d. Jan. 19, 1873. His prose works, about twelve in all, were pub. between 1847 and 1863. His association with hymnology is through:—

(1) A Selection of Psalms and Hymns adapted chiefly for Congregational and Social Worship by Baptist Wriothesley Noel, M.A. (2) Hymns about Jesus, by Baptist Wriothesley Noel, M.A. A collection of 119 hymns, the greater part of which are his own or recasts by him of older hymns.

The Sel. appeared in 1832. It passed through several editions (2nd ed., 1838; 3rd, 1848, &c.), that for 1853 being enlarged, and having also an Appendix of 38 original "Hymns to be used at the Baptism of Believers." From this Sel. the following hymns are still in C. U.:—

1. Devoted unto Thee. Holy Baptism. From "O God, Who art our Friend."
2. Glory to God, Whose Spirit draws. Holy Baptism.
3. Jesus, the Lord of glory died. Jesus the Guide.
4. Lord, Thou hast promised to baptize. Holy Baptism.
5. We gave [give] ourselves to Thee. Holy Baptism. [J. J.]

Noel, Hon. Gerard Thomas, M.A., elder brother of the Hon. Baptist W. Noel, was b. Dec. 2, 1782, and educated at Edinburgh and Cambridge. Taking Holy Orders, he held successively the curacy of Redwile, Hertfordshire, the Vicarages of Rainham and Homsey, and a Canonry in Winchester Cathedral. He died at Remsey, Feb. 24, 1851. His published works include Fifty Sermons for the Use of Families, 1830; Sermons preached in Remsey, 1853; and Archeological Sketches in Italy and Switzerland, 1813. In this last work some of his earlier hymns appeared. He also compiled:—A Selection of Psalms and Hymns from the New Version of the Church of England and others; corrected and revised for Public Worship, London, J. Hatchard, 1810. In this Sel. he gave a few hymns of his own, but anonymously. The 3rd ed., 1829, is enlarged, and has an Appendix of 17 hymns. Three of his hymns are in C. U.:—

1. If human kindness meets return. Jesus the Priest. This appeared in its Archeol., &c., and the Sel. of 19, & Hys., 1810, No. 48. It is in existence also.
2. Stagnated as the purpose of the skies. Stanzas. This is found in the February number of the Christian Observer, 1816, in 8 st. of 4 l., and is signed "N." In the Sel. of 19, & Hys., 1810, No. 48, and in the 2nd ed., 1829, No. 174, it begins "Mark'd as the purpose of the skies." In this form it is known to the modern collection.
3. When mourning sorrow weeps (mourns) the past. Devoting Stanzas. Given in the 2nd ed. of his Sel., 1813, No. 48. [J. J.]

Νόμος ἢ ὑπερίκος τοῦ πατρὸς ὁ πρῶτοςτος υἱός. [Moses.] The.]

Non abluunt lymphae Deum. Nicolas le Tourneur. [Epiphany.] This hymn, on the Baptism of our Lord, appeared in the Christine Brev., 1686, p. 229, beginning, "Lavacra puri gurgitis," and signed "N. T. P. R." When included in the Paris Brev., 1736, as the hymn for Compline during the Octave of the Epiphany, it began with 4 l., "Non abluunt lymphae Deum," and in this form it is known to the present time, both in Latin and in the tra. into English. This text is in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as:—

1. It is not that the wave can wash our God. By J. Williams, in the British Magazine, 1835 (vol. viii. p. 152), and his Hys. tr. from the Parvian Breviary, 1839, p. 90.
2. Since the heavenly Lamb hath stood. By W. J. Blew, in his Church Hys. and Tran B4., 1852-

55, and Rice's Sol. from the same, 1870, No. 19. The opening stanza of this hymn is original, by Mr. Blew. The fr. of "Non ablunt" begins with st. ii., "Water washes not our God."

Other tra. are:—

1. God needeth not the cleansing wave. R. Campbell. 1860.
2. The waters cleanse not Thee, O Lord. J. D. Chambers. 1867. [J. J.]

Non ce n'est pas mourir. C. Malan. [Hope in Death.] Pub. in his Chants de Sion, ou Recueil de Cantiques, 1832, No. 233. It was tr. into German by A. Knapp, and included in his Christoterpe (an annual), 1836, p. 116. It is No. 2 of "Hymns by Caesar Malan of Geneva. Translated from the French by the Editor" [Knapp]. It is also in Knapp's Gedichte, Neueste Folge, 1843, p. 301, and begins, "Nein, nein, das ist kein Sterben." It was tr. from the German into English by Dr. G. W. Bethune (p. 139, l.), as "It is not death to die," and by Dr. R. P. Dunn (p. 316, ll.) as "No, no, it is not dying." The latter is in Sacred Lyrics from the German, Philadelphia, U.S., 1859, p. 153; in Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869, p. 661 (1870, p. 531), and several hymn-books. [J. M.]

Non parva solo sanguine. Jean Baptiste de Santeuil. [Saints, not Martyrs.] Appeared in the Cluniae Breviary, 1686, p. lvii., and his Hymni Sacri et Novi, 1689, p. 214 (ed. 1698, p. 252). In the Paris Breviary, 1736, it is given for the "Common of Just Persons." The text is also in J. Chandler's Hys. of the Prim. Church, 1837; and Carl. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as:—

1. Not by the martyr's death alone. By I. Williams, in the British Magazine, Dec., 1833, p. 622, and again in his Hys. tr. from the Parisian Breviary, 1839, p. 315, in 6 st. of 4 l. This text is rarely given in its original form in the hymn-books. That in H. A. & M. is very considerably altered by the compilers; and that in the Hymnary by the editors. Thring takes the H. A. & M. text, and adds thereto emendations by himself. Others adopt a somewhat similar plan, so much so that it is almost always safe to say that any given text beginning "Not by the martyr's, &c." is based upon I. Williams.

2. No purple with his life-blood stained. By R. F. Littledale, made for, and first pub. in the People's H. 1867, and signed "F. R."

Other tra. are:—

1. 'Tis not the blood-stained vest alone. J. Chandler. 1837.
2. Not always earned by wounds and pain. J. D. Chambers. 1866. [J. J.]

None is like Jeshurun's God. C. Wesley. [Safety in God.] Appeared in Hys. and Sacred Poems, 1742, p. 248, in 9 st. of 8 l., and based on Deut. xxxiii. 26, &c. (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. ii. p. 205.) It was included in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 395, with the omission of st. vii.-ix., and the alteration in st. ii. of:—

"God hath underneath thee spread His everlasting arms;"

to:—

"Round thee and beneath are spread
The everlasting arms."

The alteration in the same st. of "Sinner! what hast thou to dread?" to "Israel, what hast thou," &c., has been traced to a copy of the Wes. H. Bk. of 1797. The hymn, usually with these changes, is in C. U. in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

Norris, John, b. at Collingbourne, Kingston, Wilts, 1637, his father being clergyman of the parish. He was educated at Winchester, and Exeter College, Oxford, subsequently becoming a Fellow of All Souls. From Oxford he passed, in 1689, to the Rectory of Newton St. Loe, Somersetshire, and thence, in 1691, to Bemerton, near Salisbury (and once the home of George Herbert), where he d. and was buried, in 1711. He was noted as a theologian, and as a metaphysical writer, his works on those subjects being many. In 1687 he published A Collection of Miscellanies, in prose and verse, in which four versions of individual psalms were given. A specimen from these is found in Holland's British Psalmists, and the whole were reprinted in 1871 with Norris's other poems in Dr. Grosart's Fuller Worthies' Miscellanies. From his Coll. of Miscellanies, 1687, two hymns have passed into Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1873:—

1. In vain, great God, in vain I cry. God Omnipotent.
2. Long have I viewed, long have I thought. Resignation.

[W. T. B.]

Norton, Andrews, D.D., s. of Samuel Norton, was b. at Higham, Massachusetts, Dec. 31, 1786, and was educated at Higham, and at Harvard College. After being engaged there for a short time as a tutor, he was appointed Librarian, and subsequently Lecturer on Biblical Criticism, as successor to Dr. Channing. When the Theological School was opened in 1819 he became Dexter Professor of Literature. This position he held until 1830. He d. at Newport, Rhode Island, Sept. 18, 1853. He was for some time editor of the General Repository and Review, and pub. several prose works, one of the most extensive being The Genuineness of the Gospels, in 4 vols. His hymns are few in number, and are mainly meditations in verse. They were contributed to various periodicals, and after his death were collected and pub. in a small volume. Of these hymns the following are in C. U.:—

1. Another year, another year. The unceasing rush, &c. Close of the Year. Appeared in the Christian Examiner in Nov. and Dec., 1827, in 11 st. of 4 l. It is used in an abbreviated form. In the American Boston Unitarian Hymn [& Tune] Bk., 1868, it begins with st. vi., "O what concerns it him whose way."

2. Faint not, poor traveller, though thy way. Fortitude. Printed in the Christian Disciple, July and Aug., 1822, in 7 st. of 4 l., and again in the West Boston Coll., 1823.

3. He has gone to his God, he has gone to his home. Burial. Printed in the Christian Examiner, Jan. and Feb., 1824.

4. My God, I thank Thee! may no thought. Trust and Submission. Appeared in the Monthly Anthology and Boston Review, Sept., 1809. This is his earliest and best known hymn.

5. O stay thy tears: for they are blest. Burial of the Young. Printed in the General Repository and Review, April, 1812, in 5 st. of 4 l. In 1855, st. iii.-v. were given in Beecher's Plymouth Coll., No. 1094, as "How blest are they whose transient years."

6. Where ancient forests round us spread. Dedication of a Church. This "Hymn for the Dedication of a Church," is dated 1833.

These hymns are in some of the American hymnals. Nos. 1, 4, 5 are in Martineau's Hymns, 1873, and the full texts of all are in Putnam's Singers and Songs of the Liberal Faith, Boston, U.S.A., 1875. [F. M. B.]

Norton, Thomas. [Old Version, § ix. 7.]

Not all the blood of beasts. I. Watts. [Christ the Heavenly Sacrifice.] 1st pub. in his Hys. and Spiritual Songs, enlarged ed., 1709, Bk. ii., No. 142, in 5 st. of 4 l., and headed "Faith in Christ our Sacrifice." It was brought into use in the Church of England through M. Madan's Ps. & Hys., 1760; and A. M. Toplady's Ps. & Hys., 1776. In these collections alterations were introduced which, with additions from other sources, have been handed down to modern hymn-books. These changes in the text are the outcome of religious convictions and controversy. The most striking instance of this fact is given in the Wes. H. Bk. new ed., 1875. The outlook of Watts, which is that of hope, and the outlook of Methodism, which is that of absolute knowledge, is strikingly set forth in st. iv. and v. as follows:—

I. Watts , 1709.	Wes. H. Bk. 1875.
"My soul looks back to see The burdens Thou didst bear, When hanging on the cursed tree, And hopes her guilt was there.	"My soul looks back to see The burden Thou didst bear, When hanging on the accursed tree, And knows her guilt was there.
"Believing we rejoice To see the curse re- move; We bless the Lamb with cheerful voice, And sing His bleeding love."	"Believing, we rejoice To feel the curse re- move; We bless the Lamb with cheerful voice, And trust His bleeding love."

In addition to these, other alterations have crept into the text. The following list will assist in tracing these out:—

St. i. . . . . our stain	Wes. H. Bk. , 1836.
St. ii. . . . . one stain	Stowell's Ps. &amp; Hys. , 1831.
St. iii. Upon that head Divine . . . . .	Elliott's Ps. &amp; Hys. , 1835.
.. On that meek head . . .	Wes. H. Bk. , 1875.
.. while as a penitent . .	Wes. H. Bk. , 1875.
.. lay its hand . . . . .	Madan's Ps. &amp; Hys. , 1760.
St. iv. . . . . th' accursed tree	Madan's Ps. &amp; Hys. , 1760.
.. And knows her . . . .	Mercer's Coll. , 1864.
.. And trusts our guilt	Cotterill's Sel. , 1815
.. And finds her safety there . . . . .	U. Presb. H. Bk. , 1862.
St. v. To feel the curse . .	Wes. H. Bk. , 1830.
.. And trust His . . . .	Wes. H. Bk. , 1875.
.. And sing redeeming	Stowell's Ps. &amp; Hys. , 1831.
.. And sing His dying	U. Presb. H. Bk. , 1862.

In some American collections the hymn begins, "No blood of bird or beast;" but its use in this form is limited. With one or more of the above alterations in the text, it is in extensive use in all English-speaking countries. It has also been translated into several languages. The Latin tr. by R. Bingham in his Hymno. Christ. Lat., 1871, is "Omnis sanguis bestiarum." [J. J.]

Not for three or four transgressions.

G. Phillips. [Cattle Plague.] Written for and pub. in the Parish H. Bk., as an addition to the edition of 1863, circa 1866, in 7 st. of 4 l., and again in the new ed. 1875, No. 271. In the Sarum Hyl., 1868, st. i.-iv., vii., were given with slight alterations as No. 95. [J. J.]

Not from the dust affliction grows.

I. Watts. [Affliction of God.] Pub. in his Hymns, &c., 1709, Bk. i., No. 83, in 4 st. of 4 l., and from thence has passed into a few hymnals. In the Translations and Paraphrases of the Church of Scotland, which were authorized in 1781, this hymn (No. 5) is included in a new form as, "Tho' trouble springs not from the dust." In this form Watts is reproduced in everything but the actual words. By whom this recast was made is not known. In the marked copy of the Trs. & Paraphs. by the daughter of W. Cameron (p. 200, ll.) it is left a blank. [J. J.]

Not here as to the prophet's eye.

J. Montgomery. [Opening of a Place of Worship.] Written for the opening of the Methodist New Connexion Chapel, South Street, Moor, Sheffield, June 8, 1828, and printed as a flyleaf for the occasion. [M. MSS.] It was included in Conder's Cong. H. Bk., 1836, No. 463, and in Montgomery's Original Hymns, 1853, No. 297, in 5 st. of 4 l. It is in C. U. in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

Not to the terrors of the Lord. I.

Watts. [Whitsuntide.] Appeared in his Hys. and Spiritual Songs, 1709, Bk. ii., No. 152, in 6 st. of 4 l., and entitled "Smai and Sion." It is in C. U. in G. Britain and America. It is also in use in the following forms:—

1. Not to the terrors of the Lord. In the Mitre H. Bk., 1836, No. 203; Kennedy, 1863, and others. This is composed of st. i., ii., from Watts, and a third stanza probably by E. Cister, who assisted W. J. Hall in compiling the Mitre H. Bk.

2. Behold the radiant, countless host. Composed of st. iii., v. altered, in The Church Hymnal, Philadelphia, 1869.

3. The saints on earth and those above (q.v.). The opening stanza of this cento is st. v. of this hymn.

[J. J.]

Not unto us, but to Thy Name. [Sal- vation through Grace.] The first stanza of this cento is from J. Cennick's hymn, "Let us the sheep in Jesus named" (p. 673, ll.), somewhat altered, and the rest of the cento is by T. Cotterill. It appeared in the Uttoxeter Collection [see Staffordshire Hymn-books], 1805, and again in Cotterill's Sel., 1810-20. It is given in several modern collections in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

Not what these hands have done.

H. Bonar. [Salvation through Christ alone.] Pub. in his Hys. of Faith and Hope, 2nd Ser., 1864, in 12 st. of 4 l. In its full form it is not in C. U.; but the following centos are in several hymnals in G. Britain and America:—

1. Not what these hands have done. In the Cong. Church Hymnal, 1867, and others.

2. Not what I feel or do. Beginning with st. ii. in the American Bap. Hymn and Tune Bk., Philadelphia, 1871, &c.

3. I bless the Christ of God. Opening with st. vii. This is the most popular of the centos, and is given in a great number of hymn-books in G. Brit. and America.

4. I praise the God of grace. This begins with st. ix., and is in several collections.

Through these various forms this hymn is in extensive use. [J. J.]

Not worthy, Lord, to gather up the crumbs. Bp. E. H. Bickersteth. [Holy Communion.] Written in 1872, and included in the revised ed. of his H. Companion, 1876. It is also in several other collections. [J. J.]

Notker Balbulus, so called from his slight stuttering, was b. in Switzerland about 840. Ekkehard V. in the 2nd Chapter of his Vita Sancti Notkeri (written about 1220), says he was b. at Heiligau, now Elgg, in the Canton of Zürich; but Meyer von Knonau (see below), seeing that his family were closely connected with Jonawil in the Canton of St. Gall, thinks that Notker was probably b. at Jonawil. He entered the school of the famous Benedictine Abbey of St. Gall at an early age, and spent the rest of his life there. In due course he was admitted as one of the brethren of the monastery; in 890 is marked as librarian, and in 892 and 894 as guest-master (hospitarius); his principal employment being in scholastic and literary work. He became eventually one of the foremost in the monastery at that its most flourishing period; but was never abbot there (Notker the Abbot of St. Gall, who d. 975, was of a younger generation), and declined various offers of preferment elsewhere. He d. at St. Gall, April 6, 912. In 1513 he was beatified by Pope Julius II., but does not seem to have been formally canonized, nor does an office in his honour appear to have been authorised for use except at St. Gall (Lebensbild des heiligen Notker von St. Gallen, by G. Meyer von Knonau, Zürich, 1877; Allg. Deutsche Biog., xxiv. 35, &c.).

Ekkehard IV. (d. 1060), in his Casus Sancti Galli, chapter iii., thus lovingly characterises Notker (a fr. would not express the conciseness of the original):—

"Corpore, non animo, gracile; voce, non spiritu, balbulus; in divinis erectus, in adversis patiens, ad omnia mitis, in nostratium acer erat exactor disciplinis; ad repentina timidulus et inopinatus, præter daemones infestantes, erat; quibus quidem se audenter opponere solebat. In orando, legendo, dictando, creberrimus. Et ut omnis sanctitatis ejus in brevi complectar dotes, sancti spiritus erat vasculum, quo suo tempore abundantius nullum."

Notker was a favourite of the Emperor Charles the Fat, who paid him special attention during his visit to St. Gall, Dec. 4-6, 883. His claim to notice here is as the first important writer of sequences; and as indeed the practical inventor of this species of compositions. He seems to have begun writing sequences about 862, and in 885 collected them into a volume (the Liber Sequentiarum Notkeri, hereafter in this article entitled the L. S. N.), which he dedicated to Luitward, who was Bishop of Verceili, and Chancellor (till 887) to Charles the Fat. In the dedicatory epistle prefixed (reprinted by Daniel, v. p. 5, from the St. Gall ms., No. 381) Notker gives an account of his first essays, of which the following is a summary:—

ii. Origin of Notker's Sequences.—In his youth he says he found great difficulty in remembering the cadences of the neumes [or musical notes which were set to the final a of the word Alleluia in the Gradual, between the Epistle and the Gospel; see p. 646, and p. 653]. When one of the monks of the Abbey of Jumièges (near Rouen, destroyed by the Normans in 851), after wandering from place to place came to St. Gall (about 862), he brought with him his Antiphony. There, to his delight, Notker found words set to these troublesome neumes, but the words seem to have been merely strung together for mnemonic purposes. Incited by this example, Notker determined to try to compose something more worthy of the occasion, and wrote the sequence "Laudes Deo concinat" to one of these sets of neumes. He showed his work to his master Iso,

[the first important teacher at St. Gall, where he was in residence 852-878; and, finally, as head of the outer school, which was meant for those who did not intend to become monks of St. Gall], who was delighted with it, but suggested various improvements, and especially that each syllable should go to one note. Following these instructions, Notker wrote a second sequence beginning "Pallat Ecclesia, mater illibata," and showed both to his other master Marcellus, [an Irishman, originally called Mongal, who had accompanied his uncle Marcus, an Irish Bishop, to Rome, and on their return journey settled at St. Gall, about 850. He was certainly there from 853 to 865. He was a good scholar, and, above all, an excellent musician. On the division of the monastic school, he became head of the inner school, which was meant for those who looked forward to becoming brethren of the monastery], who was greatly pleased with them, transcribed them on rolls, and gave them to the scholars to practice. (So the Dedicatory Epistle. Compare Dr. Neale's note in his Medieval Hymns, ed. 1863, p. 29, where he gives an interesting account of the origin of Sequences, though not a little of the information he gives regarding Notker seems to be derived from his own imagination.)

iii. The Notkerian Sequences. Genuine and False.—From this account it might seem perfectly easy to determine which are the genuine sequences of Notker. But no autograph copy of the L. S. N. has survived, and although there are still extant at least eight mss. not later than the 11th cent., all professing to furnish us with the L. S. N., yet on examination it is found that no two mss. exactly agree. From the fact that Notker was an accomplished musician, and is known to have composed the melodies as well as the words of sequences, one might hope to gain help. There is indeed an important ms. at St. Gall (No. 484) apparently written early in the 10th century, which contains the melodies without words; but there is nothing to show which of these are by Notker, and which are earlier. Nor does early tradition help us much. In the interlinear notes to his Rhythmi de Sancto Otmaro (St. Gall ms. 393, p. 153, both the text and notes being in Ekkehard's autograph), Ekkehard IV. speaks of Notker as having composed 50 sequences, but nowhere does he give a list of their first lines. The conjecture of Wilmanns is probably correct, viz., that Ekkehard took the St. Gall ms., No. 378, as his standard. It contains 55 sequences in the L. S. N. (Nos. 84, 114 had not been inserted when Ekkehard wrote), and deducting from this the sequences which in his Casus Sancti Galli Ekkehard definitely ascribes to others (Nos. 48, 95, 97, 106, 110, 111) there remain, in round numbers, 50. (See further below.)

The most careful attempt to settle what are genuine and what are false is in an article by W. Wilmanns (Welche Sequenzen hat Notker verfasst?) in Moriz Haupt's Zeitschrift für deutsches Alterthum, vol. xv., Berlin, 1872, pp. 267-294. With this may be compared P. Anselm Schubiger's Sängerschule St. Gallens, Einsiedeln, 1858; and K. Bartsch's Lat-einische Sequenzen des Mittelalters, Rostock, 1868. The references in Daniel are confused and inexact.

iv. MSS. of Notker's Liber Sequentiarum.—As a further contribution towards the settlement of this question, the present writer has procured collations of the sequences in the L. S. N. of the mss. noted below.

To the kindness of Dr. Laubmann, Director of the Royal Library at Munich, we are indebted for the collations of the mss. m and n; to the kindness of P. Gabriel Meier, O.S.B., of Einsiedeln, for the collation of ms. e; and to the kindness of Dr. Rose, Director of the ms. department of the Royal Library, Berlin, for the collation of ms. l. References to the mss. g, h, i, k, are given in the Index to the 1875 Verzeichniss of the St. Gall mss., but on examination it became evident that these references were very incomplete; and Herr Idtensohn, the librarian of the Stiftsbibliothek at St. Gall, has most obligingly made fresh collations, with the results shown below. The mss. g, h, i, k, l, m, n, are more fully described in Leon Gautier's Histoire de la Poesie Liturgique au Moyen Age. Les Tropes. Paris, 1886, pp. 127-135.

The eight mss. here indexed are:—

(c.) The Einsiedeln MS., No. 121, of about the end of the 16th cent. The first part of this ms. consists of an Antiphonary, the so-called Antiphonarium Sancti Gregorii (see Scherer's Verzeichniss, 1875, of the St. Gall mss., p. 124). The L. S. N. occupies pp. 436-499.

(g.) The St. Gall MS., No. 376, of the 11th cent. The L. S. N. occupies pp. 312-436.

(h.) The St. Gall MS., No. 378, of the 11th cent. Here the L. S. N. is at pp. 146-296.

(i.) The St. Gall MS., No. 380, of the 11th cent. The L. S. N. occupies pp. 118-272.

(k.) The St. Gall MS., No. 381, of the 11th cent. Here the L. S. N. is at pp. 325-498.

(l.) The Berlin MS. Lat. Theol. Quarto 11. Written at Minden about 1025, but apparently copied from a St. Gall ms. The L. S. N. begins at folio 144.

(m.) The Munich MS., Lat. 14,083. This ms. is of the 11th cent., and was evidently written in the monastery of St. Emmeram, at Regensburg. The L. S. N. is at folios 7-38.

(n.) The Munich MS., Lat. 14,312. This ms. was also evidently written at Regensburg, about 1030. The L. S. N. is at folios 16-43; and the sequences found there are printed by Bernhard Pez, in his Thesaurus Anecdotorum, vol. 1, Augsburg, 1721, cols. 15 ff., and repeated in Migne's P. P. Lat. cxxxi. 1603. The ms. was still at Regensburg when Pez consulted it.

In analysing the contents of these mss. it will be on the whole best to divide the sequences given in the L. S. N. in each case into two series. The First series contains those sequences which Wilmanns (who in deciding, gives special weight to the evidence of the St. Gall ms., No. 484, and to their relation to the melodies ascribed to Notker) accepts as genuine. The Second series includes the remainder of the sequences in question.

v. Table of Notkerian Sequences.—In this table we have the following divisions:—

(1) The first column gives the running numbers; (2) the second the number of the Sequence in J. Kehrein's Lateinische Sequenzen des Mittelalters, Mainz, 1873; (3) the third the first lines of the individual Sequences; (4) the fourth references to the mss. where found; (5) and the fifth states the subject or use of the sequence.

The reference e-n, in column 4, means that the sequence is found in all the mss., and the reference e-m, that it is in all the mss. except n. Additional references to many of these sequences will be found in the lists in the article Sequences, showing e.g. which of them have passed into the English Uses.

vi. Analysis of the Table.—In classifying the above 115 Sequences (including 70b) we may first of all eliminate those which are certainly not by Notker, viz. :—

Nos. 48, 95, 97, 111, by Ekkhard I. (d. 973); No. 24, by Godscalcus or Gottschalk (d. 1050); No. 106, by Waltram (fl. 909); No. 110, by Ekkhard II. (d. 990); No. 114, not inserted in the St. Gall mss. before the 13th cent. No. 109 is sometimes ascribed to Alemin.

For the rest, taking the joint evidence of the two most important St. Gall mss., Nos. 376 and 378, we find that the following are not contained in the L. S. N. of either, viz. :—

Nos. 3, 15, 20, 42, 44, 46, 49, 50, 51, 52, 60, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70b, 71, 74, 77, 80, 86, 87, 88, 89, 92, 93, 94, 96, 98, 99, 100, 106, 107, 108, 112; and besides these Nos. 24, 57, 62, 64, 70, 104, while contained in No. 378 are not in the L. S. N.

To pursue the analysis further would exceed the limits of our space, and would require a mass of wearisome details. The conclusions the present writer, in view of all the evidence, has arrived at, may best be seen by his dividing the Sequences into four classes: I. Those which may be accepted as genuine. II. Those of which the ascription is probable. III. Those which may possibly be by Notker. IV. Those certainly not by Notker.

I.
Nos. 1, 2, 4-14, 16, 17, 18, 21, 22, 23, 26-41, 43, 45, 47, 56, 58, 59, 65, 72, 82, 85: in all 46.

II.
Nos. 3, 19, 20, 24, 44, 48, 53, 54, 55, 61, 63, 72, 75, 78, 79, 81, 83, 88, 100, 101, 102, 103, 109, 113: in all 24.

III.
Nos. 15, 42, 49, 50, 51, 52, 57, 60, 62, 64, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 70b, 71, 74, 76, 77, 80, 86, 87, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 96, 98, 99, 104, 106, 107, 109, 112: in all 37.

IV.
Nos. 48, 54, 95, 97, 106, 110, 111, 114: in all 6.

A more acute criticism may be able to discriminate the third class more accurately and eliminate from it those mistakenly ascribed to Notker. One thing at least may be taken for granted, viz., that while the above lists probably contain various sequences not really composed by Notker, it is in the highest degree improbable that any here omitted can be his genuine compositions.

vii. Conclusion.—Notker's Sequences are remarkable for their majesty and noble elevation of tone, their earnestness and their devoutness. They display a profound knowledge of Holy Scripture in its plainer and its more recondite interpretations, and a firm grasp and definite exposition of the eternal truths of the Christian Faith. The style is clear, and the language easily comprehensible, so that whether he is paraphrasing the Gospel for the day, or setting forth the leading ideas of the Church's festivals, or is engaged in vivid and sympathetic word-painting; he is at once pleasing and accurate. His sequences were speedily received with favour as a welcome change from sound to sense, and from the end of the 9th century to the middle of the 12th, they, together with sequences on the same model, were in universal use over Northern Europe. As they were written for the neumes of the Alleluia they were of course made to correspond thereto, and must be studied in connection with their melodies. The metrical rules governing their composition are intricate; suffice it to say here that they were written in rhythmical prose, somewhat in the form of the Hebrew Psalms, in irregular lines and without any attempt at rhyme. It is thus difficult to present a version in English which shall be at once exact and yet suited to modern congregational use. The only literal version which has attained any popularity in English is Dr. Neale's tr. of No. 56, "Cantemus cuncti" (see p. 204, l.), and he complains bitterly (Med. Hys., ed. 1867, pp. viii., and 42) that hymnal compilers have ignored the ancient melody to which it was written, and that it has been "cramped, tortured, tamed down into a chant." Still the Notkerian sequences are worthy of greater attention than has been bestowed on them by English translators. If the endeavour to give a literal version is abandoned, they allow a wider choice of measures and greater freedom of rendering than the later rhyming Sequences. Those which have been attempted on these lines are Nos. 26, 43, 49, 56, 61, 65, 78, 87, the versions of which are noted under the first lines of the originals throughout this Dictionary; and besides these, there are various others worthy of and yet waiting for a good translation. The most famous of all the pieces ascribed to Notker is not in the lists given above, but is noted under "Media vita" (p. 781, L). [J. M.]

Noralis [Hardenberg, G. F. P. von.]

Now are the days of humblest prayer. F. W. Faber. [Lent.] Pub. in the 2nd ed. of his Jesus and Mary, &c., 1852, in 8 st. of 7 l.; in his Oratory Hys., 1854, in 5 st., No. 12; and his Hymns, 1862. It is usually given in an abbreviated form, sometimes as in the Oratory Hys. as above, and again as in the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871, where st. iii., vi. and vii. are omitted. In the Hymnary, 1872, it begins, "Lord, in these days of humblest prayer." [J. J.]

Now begin the heavenly theme. [Redeeming Love.] The authorship of this hymn is unknown. The earliest form in which it is found differs widely from that followed in modern hymnals. In 1763 it appeared in the Appendix to M. Madan's Ps. and Hys., as No. clixii., thus:—

"REDEEMING LOVE.

- i.
"Now begin the Heav'nly Theme,
Sing aloud in Jesu's Name,
Ye, who Jesu's Kindness prove Triumph in REDEEMING LOVE.
- ii.
"Ye, who see the Father's Grace
Beaming in the SAVIOUR'S Face
As to Canaan on ye move
Praise and blest REDEEMING LOVE.
- iii.
"Mourning Souls dry up your Tears,
Banish all your guilty Fears,
See your Guilt and Curse remove,
Cancel'd by REDEEMING LOVE.
- iv.
"Ye, alas! who long have been Willing Slaves of Death and Sin,
Now from Bliss no longer rove,
Stop—and taste REDEEMING LOVE.
- v.
"Welcome all by Sin oppress'd,
Welcome, to his sacred Rest,
Nothing brought Him from above,
Nothing but REDEEMING LOVE.
- vi.
"He subdu'd th' Infernal Pow'rs,
His tremendous Foes and ours
From their curst Empire drove,
Mighty in REDEEMING LOVE.
- vii.
"Hither then your Musick bring,
Strike aloud each joyful String,
Mortals join the Hosts above,
Join to praise REDEEMING LOVE."

In this form, or with alterations, the hymn appeared in about fifty collections between 1763 and 1833, and in all it was given anonymously, except in that of Dobell, 1806, who quoted it as from "Langford's Coll." This reference is to the Hymns and Spiritual Songs pub. by John Langford (p. 639, B.) in 1776, and in which the hymn appeared. In Langford's 2nd ed. he marked all his own hymns with an asterisk, but this hymn is unmarked. This is clear evidence against his authorship. The error of ascribing the hymn to Langford arose through the careless editing of E. Bickerteth, who in the Index of his Christian

Psalmody, 1833, gave the hymn as "Now begin the, Langford." This was copied by later compilers, some expanding the name into "John Langford," and others into "William Langford," and all basing their guesses on an error. The earliest date to which it has been traced is Madan's Appendix, 1763. Failing evidence that it was written by Madan, we must give it as Anon. No. 982, in Kennedy, 1863, "Now the heavenly joy proclaim." is an altered form of this hymn. [J. J.]

Now, from the altar of our hearts. J. Mason. [Evening.] Appeared in his Spiritual Songs, or Songs of Praise, 1683, pp. 25-6, in 3 st. of 8 l., and a half stanza of 4 l., and entitled "A Song of Praise for the Evening." (Orig. text, Lyra Brit. p. 396.) The third stanza, which is usually omitted in the hymnals, and reads:—

"Man's life's a book of history;
The leaves thereof are days;
The letters, mercies closely join'd;
The title is Thy praise," is usually thought to have suggested Dr. Franklin's well-known epitaph upon himself, wherein he compares his body to "the cover of an old book, the contents torn out, and stripped of its lettering and gilding." The whole hymn is sometimes quoted, and not without reason, as Mason's finest production. [J. J.]

Now from the world withdrawn. J. Bulmer. [Evening.] 1st pub. in his Hys., Original and Select, &c., 1835, Bk. i., No. 157, in 4 st. of 4 l., and entitled "The Spirit of Prayer and Holiness implored." It is one of the very few hymns by the author which have come into general use. It is found in its original form in Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1866, No. 975, with, in st. i., l. 3, "O Lord" for "dear Lord." [J. J.]

Now gracious Lord, Thine arm reveal. J. Newton. [The New Year.] The first of thirteen hymns to be sung "Before Annual Sermons to Young People, on New Years' Evenings," 1st pub. in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. ii., No. 7., in 5 st. of 4 l., and headed "Prayer for a Blessing." (Orig. text, Hy. Comp., No. 90.) Its use is very extensive in all English-speaking countries; it has also been translated into several languages. [J. J.]

Now let a spacious world arise. I. Watts. [Creation.] 1st pub. in his Hymns, &c., 1709, Bk. ii., No. 147, in 11 st. of 4 l. Its use is limited. In the 1745 Draft of the Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, No. xxviii., it was given with the omission of st. xi., and the change, in st. ii., l. 3, of "He call'd the Night," into "He call'd the Light," a change which evidently suggested the form of st. ii. in the recast of 1781. This recast, which opens, "Let heav'n arise, let earth appear," was given as No. i. (Gen. i. 1) in the authorized Trans. and Paraphs. of 1781, and has been in use in the Church of Scotland for more than 100 years. In the markings of authors and revisers by W. Cameron's daughter, this recast is claimed for him (see p. 200, B.). [J. J.]

Now let a true ambition rise. P. Doddridge. [Seek first the Kingdom of God.] Written January 1, 1733 [D. MSS.], and pub. by Job Orton in his posthumous ed. of Doddridge's

Hymns, 1755, No. 178, in 4 st. of 4 l., and headed, "Seeking first the Kingdom of God." It was also given in J. D. Humphreys's ed. of the same, 1839, No. 199. [J. J.]

Now let our cheerful eyes survey.

P. Doddridge. [Jesus, the High Priest.] This hymn is No. 67 in the D. mss., but undated. It is placed between hymns which are dated respectively "April 10, 1735," and "January 1, 1737." The heading reads "Christ bearing the names of His people on His breastplate, from Exodus xxviii. 29." When included by Job Orton in his posthumous ed. of Doddridge's Hymns, &c., 1755, No. 8, in 5 st. of 4 l., the heading was altered to "Christ's intercession typified by Aaron's Breastplate," and st. i., l. 4, was changed from "With correspondent love," to "And sympathetic love." In J. D. Humphreys's ed. of the Hymns, 1839, No. 9, the line reads, "His sympathy and love." He has also "And high o'er all the heavenly host," for "And high o'er all the shining train," in st. ii. This hymn is in C. U. both in G. Britain and America, Orton's text being that commonly adopted. Sometimes, however, it reads, "Now let our trustful eyes survey." [J. J.]

Now let our mourning hearts revive. P. Doddridge. [Death of a Minister.] Written on the death of a Minister, at Kettering, August 22, 1736, and headed, "Comfort in God under the Removal of Ministers; or, other Useful Persons by Death, Joshua, i. 2, 4, 5" (D. mss.) It was given in Job Orton's posthumous ed. of Doddridge's Hymns, &c., 1755, No. 17, in 6 st. of 4 l., with the heading changed to, "Support in the gracious presence of God under the Loss of Ministers, and other useful Friends"; and repeated in J. D. Humphreys's ed. of the same, in 1839, with the same heading. It is in C. U. in G. Britain and America. Another form of the text, beginning with st. ii., "What though the arm of conquering death" is also in several collections. [J. J.]

Now let our souls ascend above. [Christian Confidence.] In the Draft Translations and Paraphrases of the Church of Scotland, 1745, this vigorous paraphrase of Rom. viii. 31-39, was given as No. xxxv., in 9 st. of 4 l. The authorship is unknown. The first stanza reads:—

"Now let our Souls ascend above
the Fears of Guilt and Woe:
God is for us, our Friend declared:
who then can be our Foe?"

In the Draft of 1751, it remained unaltered; but in that of 1781 it assumed the form which was authorized in the Trans. and Paraphs. (No. xlviii.) of the same year. W. Cameron's daughter (p. 200, ll.) gives, in her markings of authors and revisers, J. Logan as the author of this arrangement of the text of 1745; and, as stated in the memoir of Bruce (p. 187, l.) in this work, we see no reason to doubt its accuracy. As this arrangement has been in authorized use in the Church of Scotland for more than 100 years, and some centos have also been compiled therefrom for use in English hymnals, we give the full text of 1781, with those portions taken from the Draft of 1745 printed in italics:—

1. "Let Christian faith and hope dispel
the fears of guilt and woe;
The Lord Almighty is our friend, and who can prove a foe?"
2. "He who his Son most dear and lov'd gave up for us to die, Shall he not all things freely give that goodness can supply?"
3. "Behold the best, the greatest gift, of everlasting love!
Behold the pledge of peace below,
and perfect bliss above!"
4. "Where is the Judge, who can condemn, since God hath justified?
Who shall charge those with guilt or crime for whom the Saviour died?"
5. "The Saviour died, but rose again triumphant from the grave;
And pleads our cause at God's right hand, omnipotent to save."
6. "Who, then, can e'er divide us more from Jesus and his love,
Or break the sacred chain that binds the earth to heav'n above?"
7. "Let troubles rise, and terrors frown, and days of darkness fall;
Through him all dangers we'll defy,
and more than conquer all."
8. "Nor death nor life, nor earth nor hell, nor time's destroying sway,
Can e'er efface us from his heart,
or make his love decay."
9. "Each future period that will bless as it has bless'd the past;
He lov'd us from the first of time;
he loves us to the last."

The designation of this full text must thus be Scottish Tr. & Par., 1745, Anon., and J. Logan, 1781. In addition to the full text there are also the following centos in C. U.:—

1. O let triumphant faith (hope) dispel. This form appeared in the American Prayer Bk. Coll., 1826, and has passed into several American collections.

2. The Saviour died, but rose again. This, in W. F. Stevenson's Hys. for Ch. and Home, 1873, is composed of st. v.-viii.

3. Who from the love of Christ our Head. This appeared in Miss Leeson's Paraphrases and Hys., 1853. It is based on st. vii.-ix. To this Miss Leeson added a second part in 4 st. as, "Let followers of the Apostles' faith." [J. J.]

Now let our souls on wings sublime.

T. Gibbons. [Death anticipated.] Appended to Sermon iv. of his Sermons on Various Subjects, with a Hymn adapted to each Subject, 1762, p. 17, in 5 st. of 4 l., the text of the Sermon being Eccles. xii. 7, and the title "The Return of the Body to Earth, and the Return of the Soul to God." In 1769 it was included in the Bristol Bapt. Coll. of Ash & Evans, No. 206; in 1787, in Rippon's Sel., No. 223; and later in a large number of collections in G. Britain and America. The American Meth. Episco. Ch. Hymns, 1849, gives it in 4 st. as "Arise my soul on wings sublime." In the American Church Praise Bk., N. Y., 1882, No. 718, is a cento of which st. i., ii. are st. i. and iii. of this hymn, and st. iii., iv. are st. i. and iii. of J. Newton's "As when the weary traveller gains" (see p. 65, ll.). In its various forms this is one of the most widely known of the author's hymns. [J. J.]

Now let the feeble all be strong.

P. Doddridge. [Help in Temptation.] Written June 24, 1739, on 1 Cor. x. 13, in 4 st. of 4 l. (D. mss.) and pub. by Job Orton in his posthumous ed. of Doddridge's Hymns, &c., 1755, No. 269, and again in J. D. Humphreys's ed. of the same, 1839, No. 294, with the original heading. "Temptation moderated by the Divine Fidelity, Power, and Love," changed, as in the Hymns, 1755, to "God's fidelity in moderating Temptations." [J. J.]

Now let Thy servant die in peace. [Nunc Dimittis.] In the 1745 Draft of the Translations and Paraphrases of the Church of Scotland, the following paraphrase of Simeon's Song appeared:—

1.
"Now let thy Servant die in Peace, from this vain World dismiss:
I've seen thy great salvation, Lord:
and hasten to my Rest.
2.
"Thy long-expected Grace, disclos'd before the People's View, Hath prov'd thy Love was constant still,
and promises were true.
3.
"This is the Sun, whose cheering Rays through Gentle Darkness spread, Pour Glory round thy chosen Race, and Blessings on their Head."

The author of this paraphrase is unknown. A second Paraphrase of the same passage, beginning, "When Jesus, by the Virgin brought," appeared in John Logan's Poems, 1781, in 7 st. of 4 l. This text is given in full in Dr. Grosart's Works of M. Bruce, 1865, pp. 135-6. For reasons assigned in the memoir of M. Bruce in this work (p. 187, i.), we regard this paraphrase as the work of Bruce, possibly with a few alterations by Logan. During the same year, 1781, the authorized Translations and Paraphrases of the Church of Scotland were published. In them, as No. 38, is a paraphrase of Simeon's Song, in 11 st. of 4 l., "Just and devout old Simeon liv'd." This is thus composed:—

- St. i.-iii. First given in the Draft of 1781.
St. iv.-vi. From the paraphrase as given in Logan's Poems.
St. vii. New, in Draft of 1781.
St. viii. Based on 1745 text as above.
St. ix. From the paraphrase in Logan's Poems.
St. x., xi. Based on 1745 text as above.

This arrangement was made, according to the markings by the daughter of W. Cameron (p. 200, ii.), by J. Logan. In Miss J. E. Leeson's Par. & Hys., &c., 1859, No. lxviii, the hymn beginning, "Now lettest Thou Thy servant, Lord," in 16 l., is based upon st. viii., ix., and xi. of the 1781 text as above. It is by Miss Leeson, as is also the second hymn on the same subject, "Behold, according to Thy word." [J. J.]

Now let us join with hearts and tongues. J. Newton. [Man honoured above Angels.] Appeared in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. ii., No. 39, in 7 st. of 4 l., and headed, "Man honoured above Angels." From this hymn "Jesus, Who passed the angels by," is taken. It is composed of st. iv.-vii. It is more widely used than the full hymn. [J. J.]

Now, Lord, we part in Thy great [blest] Name. J. Dracup. [Dismissal.] This hymn, which has undergone various modifications, first appeared in Dracup's Hys. and Spiritual Songs, Bolton, 1787, No. 62, entitled "At Parting," and reads:—

1. "Now, Lord, we part in Thy great Name,
In which we here together came;
Help us our few remaining days
To live unto Jehovah's praise.

11. "Help us in life and death to bless,
The Lord our strength and righteousness;
And bring us all to meet above,
Then shall we better sing Thy love."

In one or two instances the opening line is given as, "Now, Lord, we part in Thy blest Name." The most popular form of the hymn is that given to it by Bp. Heber, "Lord, now we part in Thy blest Name," and pub. in his posthumous Hymns, &c., 1827, p. 142, as a "Hymn after Sermon," and given as "Anon.," Bp. Heber's alterations are: st. i., l. 1, "Lord, now" for "Now, Lord," "blest" for "great;" l. 3, "Grant" for "Help;" st. ii., l. 1, "Teach" for "Help;" l. 3, "And Grant" for "And bring." In this form it is found in several collections, including Kemble's Ps. & Hys.; the Irish Church Hymnal, 1873, &c. [W. T. B.]

Now may fervent prayer arise. J. Newton. [New Year.] The third of thirteen "Hymns before Annual Sermons to Young People on New Years' Evenings," pub. in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. ii., No. 9, in 7 st. of 6 l. It is in C. U. both in the original and in the following forms:—

1. Bless, O bless the opening year.
2. Bless, O Lord the opening year.
3. Bless O Lord this opening year.
4. Bless O Lord each opening year.

These forms of the text generally embrace st. ii., iii., vi., vii., and are in use in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

Now one day's journey less divides. Charlotte Elliott. [Evening.] 1st pub. in her brother's Ps. & Hys., 2nd thousand, 1836-7, in 6 st. of 4 l., as an Evening Hymn. In 1839 Miss Elliott rewrote the original stanzas, added four thereto, and included the 10 st. as the hymn for Tuesday evening in her Hys. for a Week, which were pub. in 1842. This full text is given in Snapp's Songs of G. & G., 1872. The 1836-7 st. are i., ii., iv., v., vi., x., and the 1839 st., iii., vii., viii., ix. No. 437 in the Presbyterian Sol. of Hys., Philadelphia, 1861, is from this revised text, but slightly altered. [J. J.]

Now shall my inward joy arise. I. Watts. [God's care of His Church.] Pub. in his Hys. and Spiritual S., 1709, Bk. i., No. 39, in 6 st. of 4 l., as a paraphrase of Isaiah xlix. 13. &c. In this form its use is limited. In the Draft of the Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, 1745, No. xvii., is a hymn on the same passage beginning, "Ye heav'ns, send forth your praising song." Of this hymn st. i.-iii. are by an unknown hand, and have little or no resemblance to the corresponding stanzas in Watts, whilst st. iv.-vi. are from his hymn, as above, with the alteration of a "kind woman," in st. iv., l. 1, to a "fond mother." In the authorized issue of the Trs. and Paraphs. of 1781 the opening line reads, "Ye heav'ns, send forth your song of praise:" and the text is a recast of the Draft of 1745 throughout. As Watts's text of st. iv.-vi. is easily attainable for comparison we add hereto only the text of st. i.-iii. from the 1745 Draft:—

- "Ye heav'ns, send forth your praising song!
Earth, raise thy Voice below!
Let Hills and Mountains join the Choir, and joy thro' Nature flow!

"Behold, how gracious is our God!
with what comforting strains
He cheers the Sorrows of our Heart, and banishes our Pains.
"Cease ye, when Days of Darkness fall, with troubled Hearts to mourn;
As if the Lord could leave a Saint forsaken or forlorn."

The final recast of this hymn in the authorized issue of the Scottish Trs. & Paraphrases of 1781 is claimed for W. Cameron (p. 200, B.) by his daughter in her markings of authors and revisers of that issue. In Miss J. E. Leeson's Paraphs. & Hys., 1853, No. li., on the same passage is a hymn of 8 st. in two parts: (1) "Sing, O ye heavens! Be joyful, earth," and (2) "O Zion, from the stranger's land." This arrangement by Miss Leeson is based on the Scottish Trs. & Paraphs. of 1781, as above. [J. J.]

Now that my journey's just begun. Jane Taylor. [Early Piety.] Appeared in Hys. for Infant Minds, by A. & J. Taylor, 1810, in 9 st. of 4 l., with the motto, "Early will I seek Thee" (ed. 1886, p. 11). It is found in a few of the older hymn-books in an abbreviated form. With later compilers it is more popular, and is given in a great many collections for children. In a few hymnals, as the Meth. S. S. H. Bk., 1879, it begins, "Lord, now my journey's just begun." [J. J.]

Now the day is over. S. Baring-Gould. [Evening.] Written in 1865, and printed in the Church Times the same year. In 1868 it was given in the Appendix to H. A. & M., and from that date it has gradually increased in popularity until its use has become common in all English-speaking countries. [J. J.]

Now the labourer's task is o'er. J. Ellerton. [Burial.] Written for and 1st pub. in the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871, in 6 st. of 6 l. Mr. Ellerton says:—

"The whole hymn, especially the third, fifth, and sixth verses, owes many thoughts, and some expressions, to a beautiful poem of the Rev. Gerard Moultrie's, beginning, 'Brother, now thy toils are o'er,' which will be found in the People's Hymnal, 386" (Notes on Church Hymns, p. liii.).

From Church Hymns this hymn has passed into H. A. & M., Hy. Comp., Thring's Coll., and many other collections, and sometimes, as in the last-named, with the omission of st. iii. In R. Brown-Borthwick's Select Hys. for Church and Home, 2nd ed., 1885, the original text as it appeared in the 1st ed. of that work in 1871 is given as No. 72; and the revised and authorized text as in Church Hys., as No. 185. The latter is also in Mr. Ellerton's Hymns, &c., 1888, and may be at once known by the refrain:—

"Father, in Thy gracious keeping Leave we now Thy servant sleeping."

[J. J.]

Now the stars are lit in heaven. J. Keble. [Evening.] Appeared in the British Magazine, March, 1834, as one of five hymns entitled, "Lighting of Lamps." It was republished in Lyra Apostolica, 1836, in 5 st. of 6 l., and again in the author's posthumous Miscellaneous Poems, 1869, p. 19. In the Wellington College H. Bk., 1860, and later eds., st. iii. is omitted. [J. J.]

Now to our Saviour let us raise. J. M. Neale. [Ascension.] Appeared in his Hys. for Children, 1st Ser., 1842, in 7 st. of 4 l., No. xxviii., as a hymn for Ascension Day, and has been included in all later editions of the same. The hymn, "Christ is gone up, yet ere He passed," is compiled from the text of 1842. It appeared in Murray's Hymnal, 1852, being composed of st. ii.-vi. and the doxology. This form has been repeated in numerous collections, sometimes with the omission of the doxology as in H. A. & M., No. 352. The alterations which are found in most hymnals, in st. iv., where in l. 2 "to it is cold" is changed to "to her is cold;" and and l. 3, "And bring them in" to "Bring wanderers in," date from Murray, 1852. Dr. Neale, having contemplated the use of the hymn at daily service, supplied an additional st. for use in such cases before the doxology. It reads:—

"And now we haste with thankful feet,
To seek our Saviour's Face;
And in the Holy Church to meet,
His chosen dwelling-place."

In the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871, No. 170, the hymn for St. Matthias is thus composed: st. i.-ii., Dr. Neale, unaltered, as above; st. iii., Compilers of Church Hymns to adapt it to St. Matthias' Day; st. iv.-v., Neale altered. [J. J.]

Now to the Lord that makes us know. I. Watts. [Advent—Praise.] First pub. in his Hymns, &c., 1st ed., 1707, in 5 st. of 4 l., and entitled "Christ our High Priest and King: and Christ coming to Judgment." Its use outside the Nonconformist bodies has been limited. Orig. text in modern editions of Watts. It has been said that John Mason's Song of Praise, No. 83, on Rev. i., 1-12, suggested this hymn to Watts. The resemblance, however, is confined to the subject alone. In the Scottish Draft Translations and Paraphrases of 1745, No. xlv. is thus composed:—st. i.-iii., based on the above, by Watts, and st. iv. original, the opening line being, "To Him that lov'd the Souls of Men." In the Drafts of 1751 and 1781 it was repeated without alteration, and was finally authorized as No. lxiv. in the Trans. and Paraphs. of 1781, again without change. It thus holds the unique position of being the only paraphrase of the Draft of 1745 which passed without alteration into the authorized work of 1781. It has been in use in the Church of Scotland for more than 100 years, and is also included in a limited number of modern hymnals both in G. Britain and America. Its authorship, as distinct from Watts, is unknown. The statement that it is due to J. Morison has been made in ignorance of the fact that it was in print in its present form some four years before his birth. [J. J.]

Now, when the dusky shades of night retreating. [Morning.] This cento was given in Hedge and Huntington's Hys. for the Church of Christ, Boston, U. S. A., 1853, No. 404, in 6 st. of 4 l. The first stanza is an altered form of st. i. of W. J. Copeland's tr. of "Ecce jam noctis" (p. 320, l.). It is suggested in the Index of Latin first lines in Thring's Coll., 1882, that st. iii. ("Look from the tower of heaven") is also from the same Latin hymn; st. ii. ("To Thee Whose word, &c.") is from "Lucis Creator optime," and st. vi. ("So when the morn, &c.") is from "Nocte surgentes, &c." Possibly this may be so, but the resemblance is remote. The hymn as in the Hys. for the Church of Christ, either in full or in part, is in a great many hymn-books in G. Britain and America, including the Plymouth Coll., 1855; Kennedy, 1863; the Hymnary, 1872; Thring's Coll., 1882, &c. In most collections st. iv and v. of the 1853 text are omitted, and sometimes a doxology is added. [J. J.]

Nox atra rerum contegit. St. Gregory the Great (?). [Thursday. Morning.] Mone, No. 278, gives this as probably by St. Gregory the Great (it is not assigned to him by the Benedictine editors), and at i. p. 372, cites it as appointed for Nocturns on Thursday in an 8th cent. ms. at Trier. Daniel i. No. 45, gives the text, and at iv. p. 37, cites it as in a Rheinau ms. of the 10th cent. Among the British Museum mss. it is found in three 11th cent. Hymnaries of the English Church (Vesp. D. xii. f. 19b; Jul. A. vi. f. 27b; Harl. 2961, f. 223), and in an 11th cent. Breviary of the Spanish Church (Add. 30848, f. 77b). It is in an 11th cent. ms. at Corpus Christi College, Cambridge (891, p. 235), and in the Latin Hys. of the Anglo-Saxon Ch. (Surtees Society), 1851, is printed from an 11th cent. ms. at Durham (B. iii. 32 f. 7b). Also in three mss. of the 11th cent. at St. Gall, Nos. 387, 413, 414. It is included in the Roman (Venice, 1478, and the revision of 1632), Sarum, York, Aberdeen, and other Breviaries, the universal use being for Thursdays at Nocturns or Matins. The text is also in Wackernagel, i. No. 94; Hymnarium Sarsb., 1851, p. 51; Königsfeld, i. p. 12; and Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. [J. M.]

Nox, et tenebrae, et nubila. Prudentius. [Wednesday and Thursday.] This hymn is found in a ms. of the 5th cent. in the Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris (8084 f. 3 b.), and is given in all editions of Prudentius's works, including Aurelii Prudentii Clementis V. C., Opera Omnia, London, 1824, vol. i. p. 61, where it is given with notes. It is No. ii. of the Cathemerinon, and extends to 72 lines. At a very early date it was divided into two hymns, the first beginning as above, and the second. "Lux ecce surgit aurea." Each of these must be taken in detail.

1. Nox, et tenebrae, et nubila. [Wednesday Morning.] This is found in four mss. of the 11th cent. in the British Museum (Jul. A. vi. f. 26b; Vesp. D. xii. f. 18; Harl. 2961, f. 222b; Add. 30848 f. 77), and is printed in the Latin Hys. of the Anglo-Saxon Church, 1851, from an 11th cent. ms. at Durham (B. iii. 32, f. 7). It is found in most of the older Breviaries, as the Sarum, Roman, York, Aberdeen, &c. The text is also in Mone, No. 276; Daniel i. No. 104; in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae 1838 and 1865, &c. [J. M.]

  4. Swift as shadows of the night. R. Campbell, 1850, and Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1864.
  5. Haunting gloom and fitting shades. Card. Newman, 1853 and 1865.
  6. Begone, dark night, ye mists disperse. J. Wallace, 1874. [J. J.]

ii. Lux ecce surgit aurea. [Thursday Morning.] This portion of the hymn is also found in four mss. of the 11th century in the British Museum (Vesp. D. xii. f. 20b; Jul. A. vi. f. 28; Harl. 2961, f. 223b; Add. 30848, f. 78b), and is printed in the Latin Hys. of the Anglo-Saxon Church, 1851, from an 11th cent. ms. at Durham (B. iii. 32, f. 8). It is also in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865; Daniel i. No. 105; and other collections of Latin hymns. It is in the Sarum, Roman, York, and other Brevia. [J. M.]

Translations in C. U. :—

1. Behold, it shines, the golden light. By Bp. Mant, in his Ancient Hys. from the Rom. Brev. 1837, p. 25 (ed. 1873, p. 47). This is given in Kennedy, 1863, with the omission of st. v.
2. Lo, the golden light is peering. By W. J. Copeland, in his Hys. for the Week, &c., 1848, p. 36. In Kennedy, 1863, No. 1446, st. v. is new. In the Hymnary, 1872, it begins, "Lo, the golden sun is shining," Kennedy's st. v. being repeated, and Copeland's st. v. is given as st. vi.
3. Now with the rising golden dawn. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 27, and his Hymns, &c., 1873, p. 16. It is given in the People's H., 1867; Thring's Coll., 1882, and others. In the American Unitarian Hys. of the Spirit, 1864, it reads, "Now with creation's morning song." The alterations were made by S. Longfellow, one of the editors. This arrangement of the text is repeated in Martineau's Hymns, 1873.

4. Behold the golden dawn arise. By J. M. Neale, in the enlarged ed. of the H. Nodet, 1854; and the Hymer, 1882.

8. See! the golden morning rises. W. P. Lunt, in Putnam's Singers and Songs of the Liberal Faith, Boston, U.S.A., 1875. [J. J.]

Nu biten wir den heiligen Geist. [Whitsuntide.] Wackernagel, ii. p. 44, gives two versions, both in 5 lines; the one from a ms. sermon [now at Heidelberg] of "Bruder Bertholt von Regensburg," who d. 1272, and the other from the Psalltes Ecclesiasticus, Mainz, 1550. It is one of the very few examples of popular vernacular hymns used in church in pre-Reformation times. According to Koch, i. p. 208, it was sung at Whitsuntide by the people "during the ceremony in which a wooden dove was lowered by a cord from the roof of the chancel, or a living dove was thence let fly down." It was adopted by Martin Luther. (See Nun bitten, as below.) Tr. as "Now let us pray the Holy Ghost," by Miss Winkworth, 1869, p. 38. [J. M.]

Nun bitten wir den heiligen Geist. M. Luther. [Whitsuntide.] The first stanza of this hymn is old (see Nu biten wir as above). To this stanza Luther added a second, invoking the Holy Spirit as the true Light, a third as the blessed Love, and a fourth as the great Comforter. The full form in 4 st. of 4 l., with Kyrieleis, appeared in the Geystliche gesangk Buchleyn, Wittenberg, 1524. Thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 18, in Schirek's ed. of Luther's Geistl. Lieder, 1854, p. 29, and in the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 177. The hymn has been generally appointed for Whitsuntide, but has also been used in the Lutheran Church as a hymn for Holy Communion, at the ordination of ministers, or, as in the Strassburg Kirchen Ampt, 1525, before the sermon. Tr. as:—

Now pray we all God the Comforter. In full by A. T. Russell, as No. 18 in his Ps. & Hys., 1851, repeated by Dr. Bacon, 1884, p. 40.

Nun freut euch lieben Christen-gemein. M. Luther. [Advent. Redemption by Christ.] This is Luther's first congregational hymn. It was written in 1523, immediately after, and is a companion to, his "Ein neues Lied" (p. 326. l.). It appeared in the Ellich cristlich lider, Wittenberg, 1524, in 10 st. of 7 l., entitled "A Christian hymn of Dr. Martin Luther, setting forth the unspeakable grace of God, and the true faith" (in Klug's G. B., 1541, and most later books, entitled "A hymn of thanksgiving for the great blessings which God has bestowed on us in Christ"). Thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 5, in Schirek's ed. of Luther's Geistl. Lieder, 1854, p. 31, and in the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 235. By its clear and full doctrinal statements in flowing verse it soon became popular in Germany. Tileman Heeshusius, in his preface to Johannes Magdeburg's Psalter, 1565, thus speaks of it:—

"I do not doubt that through this one hymn of Luther many hundreds of Christians have been brought to the true faith, who before could not endure the name of Luther; but the noble, precious words of the hymn have won their hearts, so that they are constrained to embrace the truth: so that in my opinion the hymns have helped the spread of the Gospel not a little."

We may note that the original melody of 1524 is in H. A. & M., No. 293, called Erk. The melody, which appeared in Klug's G. B., 1535 (and possibly in the lost ed. of 1529), is said to have been written down by Luther from hearing it sung by a travelling artisan, and bears considerable resemblance to an old popular song tune (see L. Erk's Choral Buch, 1863, Nos. 193-195). In England the melody of 1535 has been long used, in an altered form, under the name of Luther's Hymn, and set to "Great God: what do I see and hear?" (p. 454. l.)

Owing to the structure of this hymn forbidding selection, and to its length, it has come very little into English C. U. Tr. as:—

1. Rejoice, ye ransom'd of the Lord. By W. M. Reynolds, in the Evang. Review, Gettysburg, July, 1849, p. 143. The trs. of st. i.-vi. are in the Amer. Luth. Gen. Synod's Coll., 1850-52.
2. Dear Christians, one and all rejoice. In full by R. Massie in his Martin Luther's Spir. Songs, 1854, p. 47. Repeated in the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880, and others.
3. Dear Christian people, all rejoice. A full and good tr. by Mrs. Charles, in her Voice of Christian Life in Song, 1858. Her tr. of st. i., altered and beginning "Ye Christian people!" is st. ii. of No. 95 in the Swedenborgian Coll., 1880.

Other trs. are:—

- (1) "Be glad now, all ye Christen men," by Rp. Coverdale, 1539 (Remains, 1846, p. 550).

- (8) "Come, Christians all, let us rejoice," by Dr. H. Mills, 1856, p. 66.
- (9) "Let us be glad, and no more sad," by S. Garratt, in his Hys. and Trs., 1867, p. 32.
- (10) "Dear

O CHRISTE MORGENSTERNE

"Thine angels, Christ! we laud in solemn lays,
Our elder brethren of the crystal sky,
Who, 'mid Thy glory's blaze,
The ceaseless anthem raise,
And gird Thy throne in faithful ministry!"

In this, its original, form it never appeared in a collection for congregational use, but as altered to embody the generally accepted meaning of the passage from the Revelation, it has had a fair degree of popularity. This altered form reads:—

"O God the Son Eternal, Thy dread might Sent forth St. Michael and the hosts of heaven."

It was made by the Rev. J. Keble for, and was first published in, the Salisbury H. Bk., 1857, No. 165. In 1861 the same text was given, with the omission of st. v., in Pott's Hymns fitted to the Order of C. P., from whence it passed into the S. P. C. K. Appendix, 1869, and Church Hymns, 1871. The same stanzas, but with further alterations, were included in the Parish H. Bk., 1863, and repeated in the Sarum, 1868, and the Parish, 1875. In the H. Bk. for the use of Wellington College, 1860, it begins with st. ii. "Thine angels, Christ! we laud in solemn lays." [J. J.]

O Christe Morgensterne. [Holy Communion.] This is one of Zwey Schöne neue Lieder, printed in broadsheet form at Leipzig, 1579, and thence in Wackernagel v. p. 11, in 10 st. of 6 l. The text in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1124, is from the Leipzig G. B., 1586, omitting st. x. Sometimes ascribed, but without proof, to Basilius Förtsch, or to Michael Walther. Tr. as:—

O Christ, Thou bright and Morning Star. A tr. of st. 1.—111., v., ix. by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 2nd Ser., 1858, p. 179, and her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 144. Repeated in the Pennsylvania Luth. Ch. Bk., 1868, reduced to c.m., and omitting st. iii. [J. M.]

O Christe qui noster poli. Archbishop Charles de Vintimille. (?) [Vigil of Whitsunday.] Appeared in the Cluniae Breviary, 1686, p. 506; again in the Paris Breviary, 1736, and in later French Breviaries. It is also in J. Chandler's Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837, No. 77; Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865, &c. Tr. as:—

1. O Jesu, Who art gone before. By J. Chandler, in his Hys. of the Prim. Church, 1837, No. 77, into Oldknow's Hymns, &c., 1850; Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869, &c. In Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1840, it is altered to "Messiah now is gone before."

2. O Christ, Who dost, our herald, rise. By C. S. Calverley, made for and pub. in the Hymnary, 1872.

Translations not in O. V.:—

1. O Thou, gone up, our Harbinger. I. Williams. 1839.

2. Our Forerunner, why forsake us? W. J. Blew. 1852-3.

3. Christ! Who in heaven Thy palace gate. J. D. Chambers. 1857.

4. O Christ, Who Leader in the race. C. I. Black, in Lyra Mericana. 1864. [J. J.]

O Christe splendor gloriae. [C. of Confessors.] This hymn is found in three mss. of the 11th cent. in the British Museum (Vesp. D. xii. f. 102b; Jul. A. vi. f. 62b; Harl. 2961 f. 247); and in the Lat. Hys. of the Anglo-Saxon Ch., 1851, it is printed from an 11th cent. ms. at Durham (B. iii. 32, f. 39b). It is also in a ms. of the 11th cent. at Corpus Christi, Cambridge (391, p. 270). In some of the mss. the initial "O" has dropped out. Morel, No. 236, gives it as a hymn for the Common of Apostles (beginning "Christe, tu splendor gloriae"), from an 11th cent. Rhenaun ms. Tr. as:—

O COMFORT TO THE WEARY 825

O Sun of glory! Christ our King. By J. D. Chambers. In his Lauda Syon, 1866, p. 6; and in the 2nd ed., 1863, of the Appendix to the H. Nodet, No. 200. [J. M.]

O come and dwell in me. C. Wesley. [Holiness desired.] This is a cento compiled from his Short Hymns, &c., 1762 (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. xiii.), as follows: st. i. from vol. ii., No. 569, on 2 Cor. iii. 17; st. ii. from vol. ii., No. 578, on 2 Cor. v. 17; and st. iii. from vol. ii., No. 713, on Heb. xi. 5. This cento was given in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 356, and has passed into several collections in G. Britain and America. G. J. Stevenson has an interesting account in his Methodist H. Bk. Notes, 1883, p. 258, of the spiritual use of this cento. [J. J.]

O come and mourn with me awhile. F. W. Faber [Good Friday.] Pub. in his Jesus and Mary, 1849, in 12 st. of 4 l., and headed "Jesus Crucified;" and again, after revision, in his Hymns, 1862. It was brought into special notice by being included in an abbreviated and altered form in H. A. & M., 1861. The original refrain reads, "Jesus, our Love, is crucified." This was changed in H. A. & M. to "Jesus, our Lord, is crucified," and has been almost universally adopted. The history of this refrain, which is somewhat interesting, is given under "My Lord, my Love was crucified" (p. 701, ii.). In addition to the H. A. & M. arrangement there are others, including, "Ye faithful, come and mourn awhile" in Skinner's Daily Service Hymnal, 1864, "O come, and look awhile on Him," in the 1874 Supplement to the N. Cong.; "O come, and mourn beside the Cross," in the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871; "Have we no tears to shed for Him," in Beecher's Plymouth Coll., 1855; and others. The H. A. & M. version of the text is translated into Latin in Biggs's annotated H. A. & M., 1867, by the Rev. C. B. Pearson, as "Adeste fideles, mecum complorantes." [J. J.]

O come, Creator Spirit, Inspire the souls. W. J. Blew. [Annunciation of B. V. M.] This hymn, which, as given in his Church Hy. and Tune Bk., 1852-55, is a cento as follows:—st. i. is original; st. ii. is a tr. of "Memento rerum conditor" (p. 349, l.); and st. iii.—vii., a tr. of "Hæc illa solemnitas dies" (p. 477, l.). This cento is repeated in Rice's Sol. from Mr. Blew's Church H. & Tune Bk., 1870. [J. J.]

O comfort to the dreary. J. Conder. [Christ the Comforter.] Given as No. 428 in the Cong. H. Bk., 1836, in 5 st. of 8 l., again in his Choir and Oratory, 1837, p. 45; and again, with the omission of st. v. in his Hys. of Praise, Prayer, &c., 1856. It is usually given with the omission of st. iii. [J. J.]

O comfort to [of] the weary! O balm to the distressed! T. R. Birks. [Ps. lxxxix.] Appeared in his Companion Psalter, 1874, in 4 st. of 8 l. It is repeated in the Universal H. Bk., 1885, and others, and sometimes as "O comfort of the weary." It is a good specimen of the author's paraphrases. [Psalter, English, § xx. 7.] [J. J.]

O! day of days! shall hearts set free? J. Keble. [Easter.] Written April 18, 1822, and 1st pub. in his Christian Year, 1827, as the poem for Easter Day. It is in 15 st. of 4 l., and headed with the text from St. Luke xxiv. 5, 6. It has been repeated in all later editions of the Christian Year. As a whole it is not in C. U.; but st. ix., xi. and xii., slightly altered, are given as, "As even the lifeless stone was dear," in the H. Bk. for the Use of Wellington Coll., 1860, where it is appointed for the evening of the 4th Sunday after Easter. [J. J.]

O day of rest and gladness. Bp. C. Wordsworth, of Lincoln. [Sunday.] This is the opening hymn of his Holy Year, 1862, pt. i., in 6 st. of 8 l. It is a fine hymn, somewhat in the style of an Ode from a Greek Canon, and is in extensive use. Sometimes st. v. and vi. are given as a separate hymn, beginning, "To day on weary nations." In the 3rd ed. of the Holy Year, 1863, the full hymn was given as No. 3. In the 1874 Supplement to the New Cong. H. Bk., it is reduced to 4 st. of 8 l., and is also somewhat altered. [J. J.]

O Dei sapientia. [Presentation of the B. V. M.] This hymn does not appear to be earlier than the 15th cent. Mone, No. 342, gives it from mss. of the 15th cent. at Bamberg, and at St. Paul in Carinthia; and Morrel, p. 82, cites it as in an Einsiedeln ms. of 1470. It is in three St. Gall mss. of the 15th cent., Nos. 408, 438, 440. The printed text is also in the Sarum Brev., Paris, 1531; the Aberdeen Brev. of 1509; in Daniel, iv. p. 283, &c. Tr. as:—

O wisdom of the God of Grace. By J. D. Chambers, in his Lauda Nyon, 1868, p. 64, and, with slight alterations and another doxology, in the Hymnary, 1872. [J. M.]

O Deus ego amo Te, Nam prior Tu amastime. [Love to Christ, or Passiontide.] This hymn is found in the Psalterium Canticorum Catholicarum, Cologne, 1722, p. 328, and is probably by some German Jesuit of the 17th cent. In J. C. Zabuesnig's Katholische Kirchengedänge, Augsburg, 1822, vol. i., p. 150, it is entitled, "The Desire of St. Ignatius," which probably is meant to refer to St. Ignatius Loyola (b. 1491, d. 1556; founder of the Society of Jesus, i.e. the Order of the Jesuits). The Latin text is also in the Hymnodia Sacra, Münster, 1753, p. 268; Daniel, ii., p. 335; H. M. Macgill's Songs of the Christian Creed and Life, 1876, &c. [J. M.]

Translations in C. U. :—

I love, I love Thee, Lord most high. By E. Caswall, in his Masque of Mary, &c., 1858, p. 357; and his Hys. and Poems, 1873, p. 221. It is in C. U. in its original form, and also as:—

1. Do I not love Thee, Lord most High? In Martineau's Hymns, &c. 1873.

2. I love Thee, O Thou Lord most High. In Dale's English H. Bk. 1874.

Translations not in C. U. :—

1. O God, I love Thee well. J. W. Hewett, 1859.

2. Fain would we love Thee, Lord; for Thou. J. Keble, 1869.

3. Jesus, I love Thee evermore. E. C. Benedict of New York, in Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869.

4. O God, my love goes forth to Thee. H. M. Macgill, 1876. [J. J.]

O Deus ego amo Te, Nec amo Te ut salves me. St. Francis Xavier? [Love to Christ, or Passiontide.] The original of this hymn is supposed to be a Spanish sonnet which begins "No me mueve, mi Dios, para quererte," and which in Diapenbrock's Geistlicher Blumenstrauß, 1829, p. 199, is ascribed to St. Francis Xavier. In the Poesias of St. Teresa of Spain (Teresa de Jesus, b. 1515, d. 1582), pub. at Münster, in 1854, it is included as by her; but we have been unable to find it in her Libros, Lisbon, 1616, her Obras, Lisbon, 1654, or her Opera, Cologne, 1686. The Latin form is probably by Xavier or by some German Jesuit. It is at least as early as 1668, for in that year a tr. was pub. by J. Scheffler, in his Heilige Seelenlust, Bk. v., No. 194, entitled, "She [the Soul] loves God simply for Himself, with the Holy Xavier. Also from the Latin" (see below). In the same year it also appeared with Xavier's name in W. Nakatenus's Coeleste palmetum (ed. 1701, p. 491, entitled, "The desire of a loving soul towards the God-Man crucified for us. S. P. Francis Xavier"). The Latin text is also found in the Psalterium Canticorum Catholicarum, Cologne, 1722, p. 328; the Hymnodia Sacra, Münster, 1753, p. 270; Daniel ii. p. 335; Königsfeld, ii. p. 280; F. A. March's Lat. Hys., 1875, p. 190, &c.

It has been tr. into German, and through the German into English, viz.:—

Ich liebe Gott, und swar umsonst. By J. Scheffler in his Heilige Seelenlust, 1668, Bk. v., No. 194 (Werke, 1862, p. 322). A free tr. in 10 st. of 4 l. in the Herrn- und G. B., 1735, No. 738. Tr. as "My dear Redeemer! Thou art He," as No. 624 in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754. In the 1789 and later ed. (1866, No. 464) it begins "Gracious Redeemer, Thou hast me." [J. M.]

The trs. directly from the Latin are:—

1. My God, I love Thee, not because. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 295; and his Hys. & Poems, 1873, p. 152. It has been included, with slight alterations, in most of the prominent hymn-books pub. since 1850, and is very popular in G. Britain and America. It is also found in the following forms:—

(1) I love Thee, O my God, but not. In the Reformed Dutch Hys. of the Church, N. Y., 1869, much altered. In the Bap. Praise Bk., N. Y., 1871, this form is again altered as "I love Thee, O my God, and still."

(2) Jesus, I love Thee; not because. In Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869.

(3) Lord, may we love Thee, not because. In Kennedy, 1863.

(4) O God, we love Thee; not because. In the Irvingite Hys. for the Use of the Churches, 1871.

(5) Saviour, I love Thee, not because. In Dale's English H. Bk. 1874.

(6) Thou, O my Jesus (Saviour) Thou didst me. In the Unitarian Hys. for the Church of Christ, Boston, U.S.A. 1853; T. Darling's Hys. for the Church of England, 1887, &c.

2. I love Thee, O my God and [my] Lord. Given anonymously in Kennedy, 1863, No. 661, in 4 st. of 6 l. In the Sarum Hyl., 1868, and Porter's Churchman's Hyl., 1876, it is abbreviated to 3 st.

3. My God, I love Thee, yet my love. By R. C. Singleton, in his Anglican H. Bk., 1868.

4. Thee, O God, alone I love. By G. E. Dartnell, in Thring's Coll., 1880 and 1882.

Other trs. are:—

1. My God, I love Thee, not because I covet Thy salvation. Anon. in The Old Church Porch, 1867.

2. O God, my heart is fixed on Thee. Elizabeth Charles, 1858.
 3. O God, I love Thee; not with hope. J. W. Hewett, 1859.
 4. I do not love Thee, Lord. To win Thy, &c. H. Kynaston, 1862.
 5. O God, let not my love to Thee. H. M. Macgill, 1876. [J. J.]

O disclose Thy lovely face. C. Wesley. [Pardon desired.] There are two centos in C. U., each beginning with this line, as follows:—

(1) The first is No. 156 of the Wes. H. Bk., prior to the 1875 revision. It is thus composed: St. i. is st. ii. of C. Wesley's hymn, "Lord, how long, how long shall I," which appeared in the Hys. & Sacred Poems, 1740; and st. ii. and iii. are st. ii. and iii. of "Christ, Whose glory fills the skies" (p. 230, l.). In this form the cento was given in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, and is found in several Methodist collections. (2) The second form of the hymn is No. 156*, in the revised Wes. H. Bk., 1875. It is composed of st. ii., iii., and v. of "Lord, how long, how long shall I?" as above. [J. J.]

O du allersüßste Freude. P. Gerhardt. [Whitsuntide.] This beautiful hymn of supplication to the Holy Spirit for His gifts and graces was 1st pub. in the 3rd. ed., 1648, of Crüger's Praxis pietatis melica, No. 155, in 10 st. of 8 l., reprinted in Wackernagel's ed. of his Geistliche Lieder, No. 30, and in Bachmann's ed., No. 10. It has attained a wide popularity in Germany, and is included in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 366. Through J. C. Jacobi's version it has also been very largely used, in various forms, in Great Britain and America. Tr. as:—

1. O Thou sweetest Source of gladness. A full and good tr. by J. C. Jacobi, in Part ii., 1725, of his Psal. Ger. p. 6 (ed. 1732, p. 43, greatly altered). His st. i.-iv., ix., x. were considerably altered, as "Holy Ghost, dispel our sadness," by A. M. Toplady, and were given in the Gospel Magazine, June, 1776, and repeated in the same year in Toplady's Ps. & Hys., No. 155. They are thus included in Sedgwick's ed. of Toplady's Hys. & Sacred Poems, 1860, p. 169. These st. are, (i.) "Holy Ghost, dispel our sadness." (ii.) "From that height which knows no measure." (iii.) "Come, Thou best of all donations." (iv.) "Known to Thee are all recesses." (v.) "Manifest Thy love for ever." (vi.) "Be our Friend on each occasion." While appearing in many centos, it usually begins with the first stanza of the Jacobi-Toplady text of 1776, "Holy Ghost, dispel our sadness." These centos may be thus grouped:—

(1) In the original metre. There are about a dozen of centos in C. U. in this metre, and all beginning with st. i., given in hymn-books from the Lady Huntingdon Coll., 1740, in 5 st., to the Irish Church Hymnal, 1873, in 2 st. The construction of all these centos may be ascertained by comparing them with the first lines of the Jacobi-Toplady text as above.

(2) In 8.7.8.7.4.7. metre. This, composed of st. i., iii., 1833; Kennedy, 1863; in Bickersteth's Christian Psalmody, 1873, in 2 st. The construction of all these centos may be ascertained by comparing them with the first lines of the Jacobi-Toplady text as above.

(3) In 8.7.8.7. metre. There are nearly ten centos in this metre from the Cong. H. Bk., 1836, in 2 st. to the Pennsylvania Lutheran Ch. Bk., 1868, in 3 st. of 8 l.

(4) In addition to these centos there are also (1) "Holy Spirit, Source of Gladness," in the American Unitarian Hk. of Hymns, 1844, and other collections; (2) "Come, Thou Source of sweetest gladness," in Stopford Brooke's Christian Hys., 1881, both being altered forms of the Jacobi-Toplady text.

2. Sweetest joy the soul can know. A good tr., omitting st. viii. and ix., by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 2nd series, 1858, p. 55, and again, altered in metre, as "Sweetest Fount of holy gladness," in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 73. In this st. ii. and iv., as in Lyra Ger., are omitted. From the Lyra Ger. text, No. 408 of the American Hys. of the Spirit, 1864, is derived; and from the C. B. for England text, No. 108, in Stryker's Christian Chorals, N. Y., 1885. [J. M.]

O du Liebe meiner Liebe. [Passiontide.] Included in the Geistreiches G. B., Halle, 1697, p. 203, in 7 st. of 8 l., and in Wagner's G. B., Leipzig, 1697, vol. ii. p. 870. Repeated in Freylinghausen's G. B., 1704, and recently in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863.

It has been erroneously ascribed to J. Scheller, to whose "Liebe, die du mich zum Bilde," it is a companion hymn: sometimes to A. Drese, equally without proof. In the Blätter für Hymnologie, 1883, p. 11, it is claimed for Elisabeth von Senitz (b. 1629 at Rankau, Briege, Silesia; d. 1679, at Oels in Silesia). (See Various.)

Translations in C. U.:—

Thou Holiest Love, whom most I love. A good tr., omitting st. iv., by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 1st Ser., 1855, p. 83 (2nd ed., 1856, altered, and with a new tr. of st. ii.). It was repeated in full in Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869, p. 185. Abridged in Flett's Coll., Paisley, 1871; Whiting's Hys. for the Ch. Catholic, 1882, the latter reading "most I prize." Two American hymn-books, the Dutch Ref., 1869, and the Bapt. Praise Bk., 1871, give centos beginning with the tr. of st. vi., "O Love! who gav'st Thy life for me."

Other trs. are, (1) "O the love wherewith I'm loved," as No. 627 in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1764 (1866, No. 99). (2) "Love divine! my love commanding," by Miss Burlingham in the British Herald, Oct., 1865, p. 152, and Reid's Praise Bk., 1872, No. 375. [J. M.]

O Durchbrecher aller Bande. G. Arnold. [Sanctification.] 1st pub. in his Göttliche Liebes-Funcken. Frankfurt am Main, 1698, No. 169, in 11 st. of 8 l., entitled "The Sigh of the Captive." Included in the Geistreiches G. B., Darmstadt, 1698, p. 498, in Freylinghausen's G. B., 1704, and many later collections, as the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 326. Also in Ehmann's ed. of Arnold's Geistl. Lieder, 1856, p. 81, and Knapp's ed., 1845, p. 202. It is Arnold's finest church hymn, and is a very characteristic expression of the Pietistic views regarding the conflict between the old and the new man. Lauxmann, in Koch, viii., 432-434, says of it:—

"In this hymn the poet powerfully expresses his inmost emotions under the many conflicts he had with his heart. . . . It is a true daily hymn of supplication for earnest Christians who have taken the words of the Apostle 'Follow. . . . the sanctification without which no man shall see the Lord' (Heb. xii. 14) as the rule and standard of their lives. Many such might often rather sigh it out than sing it."

Translations in C. U.:—

1. Thou who breakest every chain. A very good tr., omitting st. v., vi., by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 2nd Ser., 1858, p. 140 (C. B. for England, 1863, No. 111, omitting the trs. of st. iii., viii.). Included in the Harrow School H. Bk., 1866; Brown-Borthwick's Select Hys., 1871, and the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871, &c. In Church Hys. the cento is: st. i. is from i., ll. 1-4, and iv., ll. 1-4 of the German; ii. from iv., ll. 5-8, and vii., ll. 5-8; iii. from ix.; iv. from x., ll. 1-4, and xi. 5-8.

2. Thou who breakest every fetter, Thou who art. Omitting st. v., vi., by Mrs. Bevan, in her Songs of Eternal Life, 1858, p. 51. Her trs. of st. i., viii., x., xi., are No. 188 in Dr. Pagenstecher's Coll., 1864.

Another tr. is, "Thou who breakest every fetter, Who art ever," by N. L. Frothingham, 1870. [J. M.]

O esca viatorum. [Holy Communion.] This hymn was probably composed by some German Jesuit of the 17th cent., though it has been by some ascribed to St. Thomas of Aquino. It has not been traced earlier than the Mainz G. B., (R. C.) 1661, where it is given at p. 367 in 3 st., entitled "Hymn on the true Bread of Heaven." It is also in the Hymnodia Sacra, Mainz, 1671, p. 86; in Daniel ii. p. 369, and others. [J. M.]

Translations in C. U. :—

1. O Bread to pilgrims given. By R. Palmer, 1st pub. in the American Sabbath H. Bk., 1858, No. 1051; again in his Hys. & Sac. Poems, 1865; and then in the Lyra Sac. Americana, 1868. In 1867 it was given with alterations in Alford's Year of Praise, and subsequently in other collections.

2. O Food that weary pilgrims love. By the Compilers of H. A. & M., in the 2nd ed. of Introits prefixed to H. A. & M., 1861, and then in the 1868 Appendix to the same, and in other hymnals.

3. O Food of men wayfaring. By R. F. Littledale, in the Altar Manual, 1863; the People's H., 1867; and the Altar Hymnal, 1884.

4. O Bread of Life from heaven. By Philip Schaff, in his Christ in Song, N. Y., 1869, Lond., 1870. This is repeated in the Scottish Presb. Hymnal, 1876, and altered as "O Food, the pilgrim needeth," in the Hymnary, 1872.

Translations not in C. U. :—

1. O Living Bread from Heaven. H. Trend, in Lyra Eucharistica, 1863.

2. O Meat the pilgrim needeth. J. D. Chambers, 1866.

3. Behold the traveller fed. D. T. Morgan, 1880.

[J. J.]

O Everlasting Light. H. Bonar. [Christ in All.] Pub. in the 2nd Series of his Hys. of Faith and Hope, 1864, in 10 st. of 4 l., and headed, "Christ in All." It deals with Christ as the Everlasting "Light," "Rock," "Fount," "Health," "Truth," "Strength," "Love," and "Rest" of His people. It is in extensive use, and sometimes as "Jesus, my Everlasting Light." [J. J.]

O Ewigkeit, du Donnerwort. J. Rist. [Eternal Life.] 1st pub. in the Viertes Zehen of his Himliche Lieder, Lüneburg, 1642, p. 51, in 16 st. of 8 l., entitled "An earnest contemplation of the unending Eternity." It is given in full in Burg's G. B., Breslau, 1746, No. 1142, and still holds its place as a standard hymn, but is frequently abridged; st. iv., vii., viii., xii. being generally omitted, as in the Berlin G. L. S. ed., 1863, No. 1608. It is an impressive and strongly coloured hymn, and has proved a powerful appeal to many German hearts. Tr. as :—

1. Eternity! terrific word. A version of st. i., iii., xii., xvi., based on Jacobi, 1722; and probably by W. M. Reynolds, as No. 245 in the American Luth. Gen. Synod's Coll., 1850-52. Repeated in the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880.

2. Eternity! most awful word. By A. T. Russell, as No. 258 in his Ps. & Hys., 1851. It is in 4 st., founded on st. i., ii., ix., xvi. Repeated, altered and beginning "Eternity, tremendous word, The womb of mysteries yet unheard," in Kennedy, 1863.

3. Eternity, thou word of fear. A good tr. of st. i., ix., xiii., xvi., by E. Thring, as No. 47 in the Uppingham and Sherborne School H. Bk., 1874.

Another tr. is "Eternity! tremendous Word, Home-striking Point, Heart-piercing Sword," by J. C. Jacobi, 1722, p. 97. [J. M.]

O Ewigkeit! O Ewigkeit. [Eternity.] Wackernagel v. p. 1258, gives this as an anonymous hymn (in 18 st. of 6 l. and the refrain, "Betracht o Mensch die Ewigkeit"), from the Catholische Kirchen-Gesäng, Cologne, 1625 (Bäumker, ii. p. 304, says it is in the Ausserlesene Catholische geistliche Kirchengesäng, Cologne, 1623). In Daniel Wülffer's Zwölff Andachten, Nürnberg, 1648, p. 536, in 16 st. considerably altered. Wülffer's text is in the Nürnberg G. B., 1690; Schöber's Lied-erregen, 1769, and others; and is followed by Bunsen in his Versuch, 1833, No. 839. Bunsen's stts. correspond to st. i.-iv., viii., xi., xii., xiv.-xviii. of the 1625 text, some being considerably altered. As in almost all the trs. the second line is "How long art thou, Eternity," we employ in the following notes —, to show this. Tr. as :—

1. Eternity! Eternity!—Yet onward. In full from Bunsen, by Miss Cox, in her Sac. Hys. from the German, 1841, p. 187 (1864, p. 139). Included, more or less altered and abridged, in Alford's Ps. & Hys., 1844, and his Year of Praise, 1867; Holy Song, 1869; the American Hys. for the Church of Christ, 1853; Plymouth Coll., 1855; Dutch Reformed, 1869; and others.

2. Eternity! Eternity!—And yet. A good and full tr. from Bunsen by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 1st Ser., 1855, p. 24. It is repeated abridged in the Cumbræ H. Bk., 1863; and in America in the Hys. for Ch. & Home, 1860; Robinson's Songs for the Sanctuary, 1865, and the Church Praise Bk., 1882.

Other trs. are, (1) "Eternity! Eternity!—For still," by C. T. Brooks, in his Schiller's Homage of the Arts, &c., 1847 (Boston, U. S.), p. 146. (2) "Eternity! Eternity!—Yet hasteth," by Dr. H. W. Dulcken, in his Bk. of Ger. Songs, 1856, p. 285. (3) "Eternity, how long! how vast," by Dr. G. Walker, 1860, p. 115. (4) "Eternity! how long art thou," by Dr. J. Guthrie, 1869, p. 128. (5) "Eternity! Eternity!—Life hasteth," signed "M. M." in the Monthly Packet, vol. xii., 1871, p. 413. (6) "Eternity! Eternity!—Swiftly," dated 1866, by J. H. Hopkins, in his Carols, Hys. & Songs, 3rd ed., 1882, p. 90.

See also Eternity! Eternity! how vast, p. 357, i.

[J. M.]

O Faith! thou workest miracles. F. W. Faber. [Faith.] Appeared in his Jesus and Mary, 1849, in 12 st. of 4 l., and entitled "Conversion." It was also included in his Hymns, 1862. The hymn "O Gift of gifts! O grace of Faith," in the Hymnary, 1872, and others, is composed of st. v. vii.-x. and xii. of this hymn slightly altered. [J. J.]

O filii et filiae, Rex coelestis, Rex gloriae. [Easter.] Neale in his Med. Hys., 1851, classes this with others as belonging to the 13th cent.; but it is more probably not earlier than the 17th, and is apparently of French origin. The Latin text, for the Salut on Easter Day, is in the Office de la Semaine Sainte, Paris, 1674, p. 478. Bäumker, i. p. 569, cites a German tr. as in the Nord-

Sterne Führers zur Seeligkeit, a German Jesuit collection pub. in 1671. The hymn is introduced by "Alleluia, Alleluia, Alleluia." It is used in many French dioceses in the Salut, or solemn salutation of the Blessed Sacrament, on the evening of Easter Day. The text will be found in the Paroissiens pub. for use in the Paris and other dioceses in France. [J. M.]

Translations in C. U. :—

1. Ye sons and daughters of the Lord. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 251, and his Hys. & Poems, 1873, p. 152. It is given in some Roman Catholic hymn-books in an abbreviated form.

2. Ye sons and daughters of the King. By J. M. Neale in his Medieval Hys., 1851, p. 111, and the Hymnal N., 1854, No. 65. In addition to its use in its 1851 form it is also found as :—

(1) O sons and daughters, let us sing. This is the H. A. & M. text, and is Neale's altered by the Compiler. The Sarum 1868 is the same text with further alterations.

(2) Children of God, rejoice and sing. For Christ hath risen, &c. This in the Hymnary, 1872, is based upon Dr. Neale and J. D. Chambers.

(3) O sons redeemed, this day we sing. In Murray's Hymnal, 1852.

(4) Ye sons and daughters of the Lord. This in Skinner's Daily Service Hyl., 1864, is a cento from Neale and Caswall.

3. Ye sons and daughters, Christ we sing. By W. J. Blew in his Church Hy. and Tune Bk., 1852–55, and in Rice's Sel. from the same, 1870.

4. Children of men, rejoice and sing. By J. D. Chambers in his Lauda Syon, 1857, p. 178. It passed into the Salisbury H. Bk., 1857, and the People's H., 1867.

Translations not in C. U. :—

1. Young men and maids, rejoice and sing. In the Evening Office, 1748; the Divine Office, 1763; and O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884. In J. R. Beste's Church Hys., 1849, p. 50, the same tr. is given with very slight changes.

2. Let Zion's sons and daughters say. T. C. Porter (1859; revised 1868) in Schaff's Christ in Song, N.Y., 1869; Lond. 1870.

3. O maids and striplings, hear love's story. C. Kent, in O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884. [J. J.]

O fons amoris, Spiritus. C. Coffin. [Sunday Morning.] Appeared in the Paris Breviary, 1736, as the Ferial hymn at Terce, in 3 st. of 4 l., and again in Coffin's Hymni Sacri, 1736, p. 92. It is also in J. Chandler's Hys. of the Prim. Church, 1837, p. 4; and Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. It is a recast of the "Nunc sancte nobis." It is tr. as :—

1. O Spirit, Fount of love, Unlock Thy temple door. By I. Williams, in the British Magazine, Jan., 1834, vol. v. p. 30, and again in his Hys. tr. from the Parisian Brev., 1839, p. 7. In the English Hymnal, 1856 and 1861, No. 9 is the same tr. rewritten in C.M. as "O Holy Spirit, Fount of love, Unlock," &c.

2. O Holy Spirit, Lord of grace. By J. Chandler, in his Hys. of the Prim. Church, 1837, p. 4. This is repeated with slight changes in several collections. In H. A. & M. another doxology is substituted for that in Chandler.

3. O Holy Spirit, Fount of love. Blest Source, &c. By Jane E. Leeson, and pub. in her Paraphrases [of the Scottish Trs. and Paraphs.] & Hys., &c., 1853, in 4 st. of 4 l., and again in the Irvingite Hys., 1864, and 1871.

4. O Spirit, Fount of Holy Love. In the 2nd ed. 1863, of the Appendix to the H. Noted, No. 280.

Other trs. are :—

1. O Fount of love! blest Spirit. W. J. Blew, 1852 and 1855.

2. O Fount of love! Thou Spirit blest. J. D. Chambers, 1857.

3. All-gracious Spirit, Fount of love. D. T. Morgan, 1880. [J. J.]

O for a closer walk with God. W. Cowper. [Walking with God.] This is one of the most beautiful, tender, and popular of Cowper's hymns. It appeared in the 2nd ed. of R. Conyers's Coll. of Ps. & Hys., 1772, in 6 st. of 4 l., and again in A. M. Toplady's Ps. & Hys., 1776, and in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. i., No. 3, and headed, "Walking with God." It is based on Gen. v. 24, "And Enoch walked with God." It is in extensive use in all English-speaking countries, and usually in its original form. [J. J.]

O for a faith that will not shrink. W. H. Bathurst. [Faith.] 1st pub. in his Ps. and Hys., &c., 1831, Hy. 86, in 6 st. of 4 l., and entitled, "The Power of Faith." As found in H. A. & M., the Hy. Comp., and others, st. iv. is omitted. Its omission is a great gain to the hymn, as it mars its simplicity and tenderness. It reads :—

"That bears unmov'd the world's dread frown,
Nor heeds its scornful smile;
That sin's wild ocean cannot drown,
Nor its soft arts beguile."

The use of this hymn is great, and more especially in America, where it is given in most of the leading collections. [J. J.]

O for a heart to praise my God. C. Wesley. [Holiness desired.] Appeared in Hys. and Sac. Poems, 1742, p. 80, in 8 st. of 4 l. (P. Works, 1868–72, vol. ii. p. 77). It is based on the Prayer Book version of Ps. li. 10. From its appearance in M. Madan's Ps. & Hys., 1760, No. 3, to the present time, it has been one of the most widely used of C. Wesley's hymns. It was given in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 334. G. J. Stevenson's note in his Methodist H. Bk. Notes, 1883, p. 245, is of more than usual interest. [J. J.]

O for an overcoming faith. I. Watts. [Second Advent.] 1st pub. in his Hys. and Spiritual S., 1707 (2nd ed. 1709, Bk. i. 17), in 4 st. of 4 l. It is based on 1 Cor. xv. 55–58, and is included in several hymn-books in G. Britain and America.

Another form is that given to it as No. 41 in the Draft Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, 1745, beginning, "When the last trumpet's awful voice." It is in 7 st. of 4 l., of which i.–iii. and vii. are new, and st. iv.–vi. are st. ii.–iv. of this hymn by Watts. It was rewritten in the public worship ed. of the Trs. and Paraphs. issued by the Church of Scotland in 1781 and still in C. U.; st. iii., ll. 3, 4, being altered from the 1745 text, and st. vii. rewritten as st. vii. and viii. The text of 1745 is ascribed by the eldest daughter of W. Cameron (p. 200, ff.) to Thomas Randall (an opinion not shared in by the other authorities); and the alterations in 1781 to W. Cameron. This form of the text is in C. U. outside of the Trs. and Paraphs., both in G. Britain and America. Sometimes st. iii.–vi. are slightly altered as, "Behold what heavenly prophets sung." This form is in the Edinburgh Diocesan Sel. of 1830, No. 23, and again in the Scottish Episcopal Coll., 1858, No. 126. [J. M.]

O for one celestial ray. Anne Steele and A. M. Toplady. [Prayer for the Holy Spirit.] This hymn is based on the 12 concluding lines of Miss Steele's poem on "Captivity," pub. in her Poems, &c., 1760, vol. ii. p. 46 (Sedgwick's reprint, 1863, p. 227), and appeared in A. M. Toplady's Ps. & Hys., 1776, No. 194, in 5 st. of 4 l. This form of the text is in a few modern collections, including the Bap. Ps. & Hys., 1858, and others. [J. J.]

O for the death of those. [Burial.] The opening line of this hymn is the first line of J. Montgomery's "Ode to the Volunteers of Britain, On the Prospect of Invasion," pub. in his Wanderer of Switzerland and Other Poems, 1819; and the third line of st. i. is partly from the last stanza but one of the same "Ode." From these extracts, and the whole tone and swing of the hymn, it is clear that it was suggested by the "Ode." It appeared anonymously in Mason and Greene's American Church Psalmody, Boston, 1831, No. 616, in 5 st. of 4 l. It is given in several modern American collections, including Hatfield's Church H. Bk., 1872, and others. It is sometimes ascribed to J. Montgomery, and at other times to S. F. Smith, but in each case in error. Its authorship is unknown. [F. M. B.]

O for the happy days gone by. F. W. Fuber. [Dryness in Prayer.] Appeared in his Jesus and Mary, &c., 1849, in 18 st. of 4 l., and again in his Hymns, 1862. In the American Bapt. Praise Book, N. Y., 1871, No. 937, beginning, "One thing alone, dear Lord, I dread," is a cento compiled from this hymn. [J. J.]

O for the peace which floweth as a river. Jane Crewdson, née Fox. [Hoping and Trusting to the end.] Pub. in her posthumous work, A Little While, and Other Poems, 1864, as the opening hymn of the volume, in 6 st. of 4 l. It is found in full or in part in a large number of hymn books in G. Britain and America, and is much esteemed as a hymn for private use. [J. J.]

O fortis, O clemens Deus. C. Coffin. [Evening.] Included in the Paris Breviary, 1736, as the Ferial hymn at Vespers on Thursdays from Trinity to Advent; and again in Coffin's Hymni Sacri, 1736, p. 24. Also in J. Chandler's Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837, No. 28; and Carl Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as:—

1. O God of our salvation, Lord. J. Chandler, in his Hys. of the Prim. Church, 1837, p. 25, and Oldknow's Hymns, &c., 1850, &c.

2. Merciful and mighty Lord, Author of redeeming love. By R. Campbell, in his Hys. and Anthems, 1850. This is repeated in the 1860 Appendix to the Hymnal Noted.

Other tra. are:—

1. Merciful and mighty Lord, Author of the saving word. I. Williams. 1839.

2. O God of mercy, God of might. J. D. Chambers. 1857.

3. Unto Thee, O Father, merciful and mighty. D. T. Morgan. 1890. [J. J.]

O frommer und getreuer Gott. [Penitence.] Based on a hymn, "Ich armer Mensch, mein Herr und Gott," by Johann Leon in his Trostbuchlein, 1611, and thence in Wackernagel iv. p. 507, in 14 lines. It is included in 6 st. of 4 l. in the Königsberg G. B., 1650, p. 297, and probably in an earlier ed. c. 1643; also in J. Crüger's Praxis pietatis, 1648, No. 47, in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 527, &c. Sometimes erroneously ascribed to Bartholomäus Ringwaldt, whose hymn with the same first line (Porst's G. B., ed. 1855, No. 318) is entirely different. Tr. as:—

O God, Thou righteous, faithful Lord. In full, by A. Crull, in the Ohio Luth. Hym., 1880. [J. M.]

O God, before Whose radiant throne. [Opening of a Place of Worship.] This hymn appeared anonymously in the 1810 ed. of Rippon's Bap. Sel., No. 338, Pt. ii., in 7 st. of 4 l. It was rewritten by the Rev. C. H. Spurgeon in 1866 in 5 st., and included in his O. O. H. Bk., 1866, as by "John Rippon, 1810; Charles H. Spurgeon, 1866." This text and ascription of authorship were repeated in Dale's English H. Bk., 1874. We have seen no authority for attributing the original to Dr. Rippon. Its anonymous appearance in his Sel., in which the authors' names are usually given with the hymns, is no proof that he was the author. [J. J.]

O God, for ever near. Abner W. Brown. [Public Worship.] Written in 1844, and 1st pub. in his Introsits, 1845, in 4 st. of 4 l.; again in his Hys. and Scriptural Chants, 1848; and again in his Sel. of Ps. & Hys., 1865. In this last it was increased to 5 stanzas, the addition being st. iv. In the Bap. Ps. & Hys., 1858, No. 883, st. i.-iii. are from this hymn, and st. iv. is st. i. in a rewritten form. The hymn in whole or in part is also in other collections, as Alford's Year of Praise, 1867. [J. J.]

O God, my God, my all Thou art. [Ps. lxxiii.] This translation, by John Wesley, of a version of the 63rd Psalm, by an unknown Spanish author, was first pub. in J. Wesley's Coll. of Psalms and Hymns, 1738. This was an enlarged edition of the Ps. and Hys. previously pub. by him at Charles-Town, printed by Lewis Timothy, 1737. [See Methodist Hymnody, § 1.] The tr. was again pub. in the Wesley Hys. and Sacred Poems, 1739, p. 196, in 10 st. of 4 l. (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i., p. 174.) In 1780 it was included in the Wes. H. Bk., No. 425, with the omission of st. iv., "In holiness within Thy gates." Curiously enough, this stanza, as "O Lord, within Thy sacred gates," is the opening stanza of a cento from this hymn given in several modern collections, including the Hymnary, 1872, the H. Comp., 1870 and 1876, and others, together with many American collections. This cento is in Elliott's Ps. and Hys., 1835, and is probably much earlier. Dr. Osborn says, in his note on this hymn (P. Works, vol. i., p. 174.) "This noble version of Ps. lxxiii. was inserted in the book of 1738, and therefore probably translated in America. The Spanish author is unknown."

Mr. G. J. Stevenson, in his Methodist Hymn Book Notes, 1883, p. 294, says positively:—

"This hymn is from the Spanish, translated by John Wesley when he was in America in 1738."

Although there is much to strengthen Dr. Osborn's suggestion, that the tr. was made in America, we have seen no proof that it was made there in 1735; and somewhat against it is the fact that the hymn is not in the Charles-Town Coll. of Ps. & Hys., 1736-37. Bishop Bickersteth's note on the cento, in his H. Comp. (annotated ed., 1880), is well deserved:—

"This very beautiful version of part of the 63rd Psalm is varied from the translation of a Spanish version by J. Wesley. It seems to the Editor one of the most melodious and perfect hymns we possess for public worship."

The use, both of the Wes. H. Bk. text, and of the cento, "O Lord, within Thy sacred gates," is extensive, especially of the latter. [J. J.]

O God, my Refuge, hear my cries.

I. Watts. [Ps. lv.] Appeared in his Psalms of David, &c., 1719, p. 147 (misprinted 947), in 10 st. of 4 l., and headed, "Support for the afflicted and tempted Soul." In explanation of some portions of the Psalm which are not paraphrased, the following note is added:—

"I have left out some whole Psalms, and several parts of others that tend to fill the mind with overwhelming sorrows, or sharp resentment; neither of which are so well suited to the spirit of the Gospel, and therefore the particular complaints of David against Achitophel here are entirely omitted."

This paraphrase is given in some collections in full, and in others in an abbreviated form. In the Leeds Hy. Bk., 1853, and others, it begins with st. viii. as "God shall preserve my soul from fear." [J. J.]

O God of Bethel, by Whose hand.

P. Doddridge. [Jacob's Vow.] This well-known and much-appreciated hymn has more than usual interest attached to it from its historical association with the Scottish Translations and Paraphrases of 1745 and 1781, and the numerous forms it has undergone. The facts cannot be grasped without much difficulty unless they are set forth in chronological order, and with more than usual detail.

i. The English form of the Text.

1. The earliest form of the hymn is that in the handwriting of Doddridge, now in the possession of the Rooker family, and quoted in this Dictionary as the D. MS. (see Doddridge). Doddridge's MS. hymns number 100. This is as follows:—

"No. xxxii.

JACOB'S VOW.

From Gen. xxxiii. 20, 22.

1
"Oh God of Bethel, by whose Hand
Thine Israel still is fed
Who thro' this weary Pilgrimage
Hast all our Fathers led

2
"To thee our humble Vows we raise
To thee address our Prayer
And in thy kind and faithful Breast
Deposit all our Care

3
"If thou thro' each perplexing Path
Wilt be our constant Guide
If thou wilt daily Bread supply
And Raiment wilt provide

4
"If thou wilt spread thy Shield around
Till these our wanderings cease
And at our Father's lov'd Abode
Our Souls arrive in Peace

5
"To thee as to our Covenant God
We'll our whole selves resign
And count that not our tenth alone
But all we have is thine.

2. In 1755, Job Orton published 370 hymns from another MS. (written in shorthand, Humphreys's ed., Preface, p. viii.) by Doddridge as Hymns founded on Various Texts in the Holy Scriptures, &c. This hymn is given as No. iv., and begins:—

"O God of Jacob, by whose hand," this being the only variation from the Rooker MS. as above. In 1839, J. D. Humphreys reprinted the hymn in his edition of Doddridge's Hymns, &c., No. iv., from the same MS. as J. Orton had used, but with these variations: st. i., l. 4, Hath for "Hast"; and st. v., l. 2, We will ourselves for "We'll our whole selves." Of Humphreys's text editors have taken no notice.

From Orton's text there are the following hymns in C. U.:—

1. O God of Jacob, by Whose hand. In several collections.

2. O Thou, by Whose all bounteous hand. This was given in J. Belknap's Sacred Poetry consisting of Psalms and Hymns, &c., Boston, U. S. A., 1795; and again in later American collections.

ii. The Scottish form of the Text.

1. It is through the Scottish text that the hymn is most widely known. Its history, which is somewhat singular, is as follows:—

2. A copy of the Rooker MS. noticed above, and in Doddridge's handwriting, is in the possession of the descendants of Col. Gardiner's family. It formerly belonged to Lady Frances Erskine (an intimate friend of Doddridge's), who became the wife of Col. Gardiner, and her name is written therein. It is a complete copy of the Rooker MS., with the exception that the corrections of the text made by Doddridge in the margin of the Rooker MS. are given in the body of the hymn instead of the original words, and the dates are omitted. An Index of first lines, not in the Rooker MS., is added in Doddridge's handwriting. From this MS. R. Blair (p. 145, l.) secured this hymn from Lady Frances Gardiner, and presented it to the Committee engaged in compiling the Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, and in the issue of 1745 it was given therein as No. xlv., with the single alteration of "shield" to "wings" in st. iv., l. 1.

3. Doddridge wrote the hymn on "Jany. 16, 1739;" it was included in the Scottish Translations and Paraphrases in 1745; and J. Logan was born in 1748. Notwithstanding this, Logan gave it in his Poems, 1781, in the following form, and as his own:—

1. "O God of Abraham, by Whose hand
Thy people still are fed;
Who through this weary pilgrimage,
Hast all our fathers led.

2. "Our vows, our prayers, we now present
Before Thy throne of grace
God of our fathers! be the God
Of their succeeding race.

3. "Thro' each perplexing path of life
Our wand'ring footsteps guide;
Give us each day our daily bread,
And raiment fit provide!

4. "O spread Thy cov'ring wings around,
Till all our wanderings cease;
And at our Father's lov'd abode
Our souls arrive in peace!

5. "Now with the humble voice of prayer,
Thy mercy we implore;
Then with the grateful voice of praise,
Thy goodness we'll adore."

Here st. i.-iv. are a revise of Doddridge, and st. v. is new.

4. During the same year (1781) the Scottish Translations and Paraphrases were published in their new and revised form (see Scottish Hymnody). The text as in Logan's Poems is included as No. ii., with the following variations:—

- St. i. "O God of Bethel! by whose hand."
 St. ii., iii. and iv. as in Logan's Poems.
 St. v. "Such blessings from Thy gracious hand
 Our humble pray'rs implore;
 And Thou shalt be our chosen God,
 And portion evermore."

5. This arrangement is evidently by the same hand as the text in the Poems. The text as in the Poems has been claimed for M. Bruce (p. 187, i.), but we think on insufficient evidence. Its designation is "P. Doddridge, Jan. 1734; Scottish Trs. & Paraphs., 1745; J. Logan, 1781; and Scottish Paraphs., 1781."

6. From the Scottish Trs. & Paraphs., 1781, the following arrangements are in C. U.:—

1. O God of Bethel, by Whose hand. In numerous collections, in full or in part, in 3. Britain and America.
2. O God of Abraham, by Whose hand. In the S. P. C. K. Hymns, 1852.
3. O God of ages, by Whose hand. In Martineau's Hymns, 1840 and 1873.
4. O God of Israel, by Whose hand. In the Hys. for use in the Chapel of Marlborough College, 1859.
5. O God, by Whose Almighty hand. In the Cooke and Denton Hymnal, 1853.
6. God of our Fathers, by Whose hand. Very much altered in the American Prayer Book Coll., 1826, and a great many later American hymnals.
7. O God of Jacob, by Whose hand. In the 1869 Supplemental Hys. to H. A. & M.

iii. Claim on behalf of Risdon Darracott.

Doddridge's original has been claimed for Risdon Darracott, sometime pupil with Doddridge, and subsequently a Presbyterian minister at Wellington, Somerset. The earliest date given to Darracott's version is his marriage, after 1741. Doddridge, as we have seen, actually wrote the hymn on Jan. 16, 1734. Darracott may have adapted it for his own marriage, or Doddridge may have done it for him; in either case the hymn is by Doddridge. [J. J.]

O God of God, O Light of Light. J. Julian. [Praise of Jesus.] Written to Sir John Goss's tune Peterborough in Mercer's Ch. Psalter and H. Bk. for the Sheffield Church Choirs Union Festival, April 16, 1883, and first printed in the Festival book. In 1884 it was included in Horder's Cong. Hymns, and subsequently in other collections. [J. J.]

O God of hosts, the mighty Lord. Tate & Brady. [Ps. lxxxiv.] This is a more than usually good example of Tate and Brady's C. M. renderings of the Psalms. It appeared in the New Version, 1696, and when that work yielded to the modern hymn-book, it was adopted, usually in an abbreviated form, in many collections. The centos vary in their length, and in the stanzas chosen, and when a doxology is added, as in H. A. & M., Thring's Coll. and others, that of Tate and Brady is chosen. In Biggs's Annotated H. A. & M., a translation into Latin by George Buchanan, c. 1550, of the corresponding verses in the Psalm, is given, together with a Latin doxology from the Paris Breviary. [Psalters. Eng. § 13, γ.] [J. J.]

O God of love, O King of Peace. Sir H. W. Baker. [In Time of Trouble.] Written for and first published in H. A. & M., 1861. It has been repeated in several collections. In Alford's Year of Praise, 1867, it is attributed to "Cowper" in error. [J. J.]

O God of our forefathers, hear. C. Wesley. [Holy Communion.] 1st pub. in Hymns on the Lord's Supper, 1745, No. 125, in 4 st. of 6 l. (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. iii. p. 309), from whence it passed into the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 382, and the collections of other Methodist bodies. In those works it is usually given in Section vii., entitled "Seeking for full Redemption." Its strictly Eucharistic character is thus lost. St. ii.:—

- "With solemn faith we offer up
 And spread before Thy glorious eyes,
 That only ground of all our hope,
 That precious, bleeding sacrifice,
 Which brings Thy grace on sinners down,
 And perfects all our souls in one:"

certainly suggests most strongly, if it does not actually teach, the doctrine of the "Real Presence," and would have been so regarded if the hymn had been appropriated to its original use, or had appeared anonymously in a modern hymn-book. [J. J.]

O God of Zion, from Thy throne. [Prayer on behalf of the Church.] This hymn appeared anonymously in the 1800 ed. of Rippon's Bap. Sel., No. 427, Pt. ii., in 7 st. of 4 l. In Beddome's posthumous Hymns, 1817, No. 654, there is a hymn in 4 st. of 4 l. beginning, "Look with an eye of pity down," which is probably the original of that in Rippon's Sel. If this is so Dr. Rippon must have had a ms. copy of the hymn from Beddome. No. 289 in the Presbyterian Sel. of Hys., Philadelphia, 1861, is Rippon's text with the omission of st. ii. and vii. [J. J.]

O God [that] Who madest earth and sky. Bp. R. Heber. [Patience.] First pub. in the Christian Observer, Jan. 1816, p. 27, in 4 st. of 4 l., and entitled "Patience." In Heber's posthumous Hymns, &c., 1827, p. 138, it was given in 2 st. of 4 l. as "O God that madest earth and sky, the darkness and the day," and appointed for use "In Times of Distress and Danger," the only alteration being the change of "Who" to that in the first line. It is in C. U. in Great Britain and America. [J. J.]

O God, the Rock of Ages. Bp. E. H. Bickersteth. [Sunday after Christmas.] In his note to this hymn in his annotated ed. of his H. Comp., 1880, Bp. Bickersteth says that "this hymn was written by the Editor (1860)," but in his work, The Two Brothers, &c., 1871, p. 226, it is dated "1862." It was included in the Eng. Presb. Ps. & Hys., 1867; the H. Comp., 1870 and 1876; and the author's From Year to Year, 1883. Its use has extended to America and other English-speaking countries. [J. J.]

O God! to Whom the happy dead. J. Conder. [All Saints' Day.] Appeared in the Cong. H. Bk., 1836, No. 171, in 2 st. of 6 l., and headed, "Whose faith follow." In his work The Choir and the Oratory, 1837, p. 230, it was republished as a "Collect," in metre. It is a paraphrase of the words in the prayer "For the whole state of Christ's Church Militant here on earth," in the Office for Holy Communion in the Book of Common Prayer:—

"And we also bless Thy Holy Name, for all Thy servants departed this life in Thy faith and fear; beseeching Thee to give us grace so to follow their good examples, that with them we may be partakers of Thy heavenly kingdom: Grant this, O Father, for Jesus Christ's sake, our only Mediator and Advocate."

This hymn was repeated in the author's Hys. of Praise, Prayer, &c., 1856, p. 106, and is given in several modern hymn-books. In some it reads, "O God, in Whom the happy dead"; in others, "O God with Whom the happy dead"; and in others, "O God, to Whom the faithful dead." With these exceptions the text is usually given in its original form. [J. J.]

O God unseen, but not unknown. J. Montgomery. [Omniscience of the Father.] Written "Sep. 22, 1828" (M. MSS.). A copy, dated "The Mount, n. Sheffield, Dec. 16, 1845," appeared in the Christian Treasury, 1847, p. 7. It had previously appeared in the Evangelical Magazine, 1846, p. 187. In 1853 it was included in Montgomery's Original Hymns, No. 30, in 9 st. of 12 l., and headed, "Thou, God, meet me." It is in C. U. in an abbreviated form, and also as "The moment comes, when strength shall fail," in the American Sabbath H. Bk., 1858. [J. J.]

O God unseen, yet ever near. E. Osler. [Holy Communion.] 1st pub. in Hall's Mitre H. Bk., 1836, No. 270, in 4 st. of 4 l., and entitled, "Spiritual Food." In the March number of Osler's Church and King, 1837, it was repeated with the single change of st. iv., l. 1., from "Thus may we all" to "Thus would we all," &c. In some collections, as the English Hymnal, 1856 and 1861, it is given as, "O Christ unseen, yet ever near"; and in others as, "O God unseen, yet truly near." Other corruptions of the text are also found in Darling's Hymns, 1887, and other collections. H. A. & M. is an exception in favour of the original, with the single change in st. iv., l. 1., of "Thy words" to "Thy word." The use of this hymn in a more or less correct form is very extensive in all English-speaking countries. [J. J.]

O God, Who gav'st Thy servant grace. Bp. R. Heber. [St. John the Evangelist.] Pub. in his posthumous Hymns, &c., 1827, p. 19, in 4 st. of 4 l. In Thring's Coll., 1882, and some others, it begins, "O Thou! Who gav'st Thy servant grace." In this form of the text st. ii. is omitted, and a new stanza is added as st. iv. from another source. [J. J.]

O God, Who hear'st the prayer. C. Wesley. [In Time of National Trouble.] This is the first of three hymns "For His Majesty King George," which appeared in the Wesley tract of Hys. for Times of Trouble, for the Year 1745, the remaining two being (2) "The Lord is King, ye saints rejoice;" and (3) "Head of Thy Church triumphant." Concerning the hymn-tracts issued by the Wesleys in connection with the Osborn says in his Adventures "relate chiefly to the Rebellion of 1745, and exhibit the patriotism and loyalty of the Wesleys, unshaken by persecution, and sustained as it was by a sense of duty to God, and by an unflinching hatred of Rome." [J. J.]

O Gott, du frommer Gott. J. Heer-

mann. [Supplication.] 1st pub. in his Devotio musica cordis, Breslau, 1630, p. 137, in 8 st. of 8 l., entitled "A daily prayer." It is in the section which contains "Some Prayers and Meditations. Many Christian people are accustomed at their family prayers to sing the following prayers to the melodies to which they are set;" and these were evidently written (1623-30) during the time of Heermann's greatest sufferings. Thence in Mützell, 1858, No. 54; in Wackernagel's ed. of his Geistliche Lieder, No. 42, and the Unr. L. S., 1851, No. 568. Of this hymn Fischer, ii. 150, says:

"It is one of the poet's most widely used and signally blessed hymns, and has been not unjustly called his Master Song. If it is somewhat 'homes-baked' yet it is excellent, nourishing bread. It gives a training in practical Christianity, and specially strikes three notes—godly living, patient suffering, and happy dying."

Lauxmann, in Koch, viii. 324-329, says it has been called the "Priest's Concordance," and relates many interesting incidents regarding it.

Thus at Leuthen, in Silesia, Dec. 5, 1757, the Prussians under Frederick the Great stood face to face with an Austrian army three times their number. Just as they were about to engage, some of the soldiers began to sing st. ii., and the regimental bands joined in. One of the commanders asked Frederick if it should be silenced, but he replied, "No, let it be; with such men God will to-day certainly give me the victory." And when the bloody battle ended in his favour he was constrained to say "My God, what a power has religion." St. iii., adds Lauxmann, has been a special favourite with preachers, e.g. J. C. Schade, of Berlin; Dr. Hedinger, Court preacher at Stuttgart, &c.

Various melodies have been set to it. The best known in England (in the Irish Church Hymn called Munich) appeared in the Meinungen G. B., 1693 (Dr. J. Zahn's Psalter und Harfe, 1886, No. 243). The hymn is tr. as:—

1. O God, Thou faithful God. A full and good tr. by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 2nd Ser., 1858, p. 138; repeated in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 115; and the Ohio Lutheran Hymn, 1880.

2. O great and gracious God. A tr. of st. i., ii., iv., vii., viii., by Miss Borthwick, in Dr. Pagenstecher's Coll., 1864, No. 198, repeated in H. L. L., 1884.

Other trs. are, (1) "Lord, grant Thy servants grace," of st. ii. as st. i. of No. 656, in the Moravian H. Bk., 1801 (1886, No. 845). (2) "Our blessings come, O God," by Dr. H. Mills, 1845 (1856, p. 138). (3) "Thou good and gracious God," by Miss Cox, 1864, p. 179. (4) "O God, Thou faithful God! Thou well-spring," by N. L. Frothingham, 1870, p. 217. [J. M.]

O Gott! O Geist! O Licht des Lebens. G. Tersteegen. [Whitsuntide.] This beautiful hymn is one of the finest breathings of Tersteegen's mysticism. 1st pub. in the 4th ed., 1745, of his Geistliches Blumengärtlein, Bk. iii., No. 76, in 8 st. of 6 l., and entitled "Prayer for the inward working of the Holy Spirit." Included in Knapp's Ev. L. S., 1837, No. 749 (1865, No. 763). Tr. as:—

1. O God, O Spirit, Light of all that live. A good tr., omitting st. vii., by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 1st Ser., 1855, p. 140. Her trs. of st. i., ix., vi. altered to four 10's are included in the Hys. of the Spirit, Boston, U.S., 1864, No. 10. Another cento is No. 105, in M. W. Stryker's Christian Chorals, 1885.

2. O God, O Spirit, Light of life. A spirited but free tr., omitting st. vii., by Mrs. Bevan, in her Songs of Eternal Life, 1858, p. 7. From this st. i.-v. considerably altered and beginning "Spirit of Grace, Thou Light of life," were included as No. 1182 in Kennedy, 1863; and repeated in this form, abridged, in the Ibrox Hyl., 1871; Dr. Martineau's Hys. of Praise & Prayer, 1873; Thring's Coll., 1880-82, &c. [J. M.]

O happy band of pilgrims. [Pilgrims of Jesus.] Appeared in Dr. Neale's Hys. of the Eastern Church, 1862, in 8 st. of 4 l., with the note by Dr. Neale, "This is merely a cento from the Canon of SS. Chrysanthus and Daria (March 19)." In his Preface to the 3rd ed., 1866, he is more explicit, and says concerning this hymn, "Safe home, safe home in port," and "Art thou weary?" they "contain so little that is from the Greek, that they ought not to have been included in this collection; in any future edition they shall appear as an Appendix." Dr. Neale did not live to publish another edition: but in 1882 the 4th ed. with notes, was issued under the editorship of S. G. Hatherly, and in it the three hymns named were "removed from the body of the work at Dr. Neale's suggestion," and included in an Appendix. Its proper designation, therefore, is By Dr. Neale, based on the Greek Canon on SS. Chrysanthus and Daria by St. Joseph the Hymnographer. It must be added that no Greek lines corresponding to those in the English hymn can be found in that Canon. Dr. Neale nevertheless found what he wanted there, that is the inspiration to write the hymn as it now stands. The use of this hymn is very extensive in all English-speaking countries. [J. J.]

O happy day that fix'd my choice. P. Doddridge. [Joy in Personal Dedication to God.] Appeared in J. Orton's posthumous edition of Doddridge's Hymns, &c., 1755. No. 23, in 5 st. of 4 l., and entitled, "Rejoicing in our Covenant Engagements to God," 2 Chron. xv. 15; and again, with changes in the text of st. iv., in J. D. Humphreys's ed. of the same, 1839, No. 29. Its use in its full, in an abbreviated, and in a translated form, is extensive. The third stanza,

"'Tis done; the great transaction's done;
I am the Lord's, and He is mine:
He drew me, and I followed on,
Charmed to confess the voice divine," although often omitted from the hymn is frequently found as a quotation. In the American Prayer Bk. Coll., 1826, the hymn was altered throughout, and began, "O happy day, that stays my choice." This form is in several modern American collections. In the American Unitarian Hys. for the Church of Christ, 1853, st. iv., v. are given as No. 381, and begin "Now rest, my long-divided heart." The alterations which have been made in Doddridge's text are too numerous to be given in detail. At the present time two texts are quoted as the original, the first that in J. Orton's ed. of Doddridge's Hymns, &c., 1755; and the second that in J. D. Humphreys's ed. of the same, 1839. These are the same, except in st. iv. The readings are:—

1755. "Now rest my long divided Heart,
Fix'd on this blissful Centre, rest;
With Angels who would grudge to part
When call'd on Angels bread to feast?"

1839. "Now rest, my long-divided heart,
Fix'd on this blissful centre, rest;
O who with earth would grudge to part
When call'd with angels to be blest!"

As this hymn is not found in any Doddridge MS. with which we are acquainted, we cannot determine which of these two readings was written by Doddridge. Orton admits in his preface that he tampered in some instances (not named) with Doddridge's text (see Doddridge, P.), whilst Humphreys contends that he was faithful thereto. We can only add that Orton's reading has more in common with Doddridge's usual style and mode of expression than that of Humphreys, but the weight of evidence is in favour of the latter.

O happy is the man who hears. M. Bruce. [Wisdom.] From evidence set forth in our biographical sketch of M. Bruce (p. 187, L.), we believe the original of this hymn to have been written by M. Bruce about 1764, and that the MS. of the same was handed to J. Logan by Bruce's father a short time after Bruce's death in 1767. It was published by Logan as his own in his Poems, 1781, p. 104, No. 4, in 5 st. of 4 l. In the same year, a slightly altered version of the text was given in the new and revised edition of the Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, as No. xi., and this has been in authorised use in the Church of Scotland for more than 100 years. It is also found in many English and American collections. The nearest approach to the original text is given in Dr. Mackelvie's Lochleven and other Poems, &c., 1837, p. 258; and Dr. Grosart's Works of M. Bruce, 1865, p. 133. The text of the Scottish Trans. and Paraph., 1781, has been altered in several modern collections to (1) "How blest the man that bends the ear;" (2) "How happy is the child who hears;" (3) "How happy is the youth who hears;" and (4) "Wisdom has treasures greater far."

[J. J.]

O happy land, O happy land. E. Parson, née Rooker. [Heaven.] Contributed to J. Curwen's Child's Own H. Bk., 1840, in 2 st. of 8 l., the first beginning as above, and the second, "Thou heavenly Friend," &c. This was repeated in the Bap. Ps. & Hys., 1858, and several other collections. Another text, also by Mrs. Parson, in 3 st. of 4 l. was published in her Willing Class Hymns some time after her death. It consists of the two stanzas as above, somewhat altered, and another stanza, beginning, "The saints in light," &c. These three stanzas are given in W. F. Stevenson's Hymns for Ch. & Home, 1873.

[J. J.]

O happy saints [that] who dwell in light, And walk with Jesus, &c. J. Berridge. [Saints in Glory.] Pub. in his Zion's Songs, &c., 1785, No. 143, in 6 st. of 4 l. and headed, "At Thy right hand are pleasures for evermore." Ps. xvi. 11 (ed. 1842, p. 139). Although seldom found in English collections, its use in America, sometimes abbreviated as in the Bap. Service of Song, Boston, 1871, is somewhat extensive. It is based upon Ralph Erskine's "Aurora veils her rosy face" (p. 96, L.) The second stanza in Berridge reads:—

"Releas'd from sin, and toil, and grief,
Death was their gate to endless life;

An open'd cage to let them fly,
And build their happy nest on high."

This reads in Erskine's original:—

"Death is to us a sweet repose,
The bud was open'd to show the rose;
The cage was broke to let us fly
And build our happy nest on high."

The rest of the hymn follows Erskine's line of thought, but there is no repetition of his actual words.

[J. J.]

O Haupt voll Blut und Wunden. P. Gerhardt. [Passiontide.] This is a beautiful but free tr. of the "Salve caput crucientatum," which is pt. vii. of the Rhythmica Oratio, ascribed to St. Bernard of Clairvaux. The Latin text is noted under Salve mundi salutare; the present note is given here on account of the length of that article. Gerhardt's version appeared as No. 156 in the Frankfurt ed., 1656, of Crüger's Praxis, in 10 st. of 8 l., entitled, "To the suffering Face of Jesus Christ." It is repeated in Wackernagel's ed. of Gerhardt's Geistl. Lieder, No. 22; Bachmann's ed., No. 54; the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 109; and almost all recent German hymn-books. Lauxmann in Koch, viii., 47, thus characterises it:—

"Bernard's original is powerful and searching, but Gerhardt's hymn is still more powerful and more profound, as redrawn from the deeper spring of evangelical Lutheran, Scriptural, knowledge, and fervency of faith." Stanza x. Lauxmann would trace not only to Bernard but to st. iii. of "Valet will ich dir geben" (see Herberger); and to Luther's words on the death of his daughter Magdalen "Who dies thus, dies well." He adds many instances of its use. Thus A. G. Spangenberg, when on the celebration of his jubilee he received many flattering testimonies, replied in humility with the words of stanza iv. In 1798, while C. F. Schwartz lay a-dying, his Malabar pupils gathered round him and sang in their own language the last verses of this hymn, he himself joining till his breath failed in death.

The beautiful melody (in H. A. & M., called Passion Chorale) first appeared in Hans Leo Hassler's Lustgarten, Nürnberg, 1601, set to a love song, beginning "Mein G'müth ist mir verwirret." In the Harmoniae Sacrae, Görlitz, 1613, it is set to "Herzlich that mich verlangen" (see Knoll), and then in the Praxis, 1656, to Gerhardt's hymn. The original forms are in L. Erk's Choral Buch, 1863, Nos. 117, 118. It is used several times by J. S. Bach, in his Passion Music according to St. Matthew. The hymn is tr. as:—

1. O Head so full of bruises. In full, by J. Gambold, in Some other Hys. and Poems, London, 1752, p. 12. Repeated in the Moravian H. Bk., 1754, pt. i., No. 222; and pt. ii. pp. 389, 391. In the ed. of 1789 it was greatly altered (1886, No. 88), and a new tr. of st. ix. substituted for Gambold's version; the Gambold tr. of st. ix., "When I shall gain permission," being given as a separate hymn (1886, No. 1247). Centos from the text of 1789 are found under the original first line in Walker's Cheltenham Ps. & Hys., 1855; Reid's Praise Bk., 1872, &c. Other forms are:—

(1) O Head, so pierced and wounded (st. i. alt.) in Dr. Pagenstecher's Coll., 1864.

(2) O Christ! what consolation (st. vi. alt.) in the Amer. Bapt. H. Bk., 1871.

(3) I yield thee thanks unfeigned (st. viii.), in E. Bickersteth's Christian Psalms, 1833, and others.

(4) I give thee thanks unfeigned (st. viii. alt.), in H. Ryle's Coll., 1860.

2. O Sacred Head! now wounded. A very beautiful tr. by Dr. J. W. Alexander. The trs. of st.

i., ii., iv., v., vii.—x. were first pub. in the Christian Lyre, N. York, 1830, No. 136. These were revised, and trs. of st. iii., vi., added, by Dr. Alexander for Schaff's Deutsche Kirchenf. und, 1849, p. 91. The full text is in Dr. Alexander's Breaking Crucible, N. Y., 1861, p. 7; in Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869, p. 178; and the Cantate Domino, Boston, U. S., 1859. In his note Dr. Schaff says:—

"This classical hymn has shown an imperishable vitality in passing from the Latin into the German, and from the German into the English, and proclaiming in three tongues, and in the name of three Confessions—the Catholic, the Lutheran, and the Reformed—with equal effect, the dying love of our Saviour, and our boundless indebtedness to Him."

This version has passed into very many English and American hymnals, and in very varying centos. A comparison with the Christ in Song text will show how these centos are arranged. We can only note the following forms:—

(1) O sacred Head! now wounded (st. i.), People's H. Bk., 1867; Hymnary, 1872; and in America in Hatfield's Church H. Bk., 1872; Hys. & Songs of Praise, N. Y., 1874, &c.

(2) O Sacred Head! once wounded (l. alt.), Leads H. Bk., 1853; Bapt. Ps. & Hys., 1858; New Cong., 1859.

(3) O Sacred Head, sore wounded (l. alt.), in the Stoke H. Bk., 1878.

(4) O Sacred Head, so wounded (l. alt.), J. L. Porter's Coll., 1876.

(5) O blessed Christ, once wounded (l. alt.), Dr. Thomas's Augustine H. Bk., 1866.

(6) O Lamb of God, once wounded (l. alt.), Scottish Presb. Hyl., 1876.

(7) O Lamb of God, sore wounded (l. alt.), in the Brown Hyl., 1871.

3. Ah! Head, so pierced and wounded. A good tr. by R. Massie, omitting st. vi., contributed as No. 92 to the 1857 ed. of Mercer's C. P. & H. Bk., and reprinted in his own Lyra Domestica, 1864, p. 114. Abridged in Mercer's Oxford ed., 1864, and in Kennedy, 1863. A cento beginning with st. viii., l. 5, "Oh! that Thy cross may ever," is in J. H. Wilson's Ser. of Praise, 1865.

4. Ah wounded Head, that bearest. By Miss Winkworth, omitting st. vi., as No. 51 in her C. B. for England, 1863. Abridged in the Uppingham and Sherborne School H. Bk., 1874, and the Free Ch. H. Bk., 1882.

5. Oh! bleeding head, and wounded. In full, by J. Kelly, in his P. Gerhardt's Spir. Songs, 1867, p. 59, repeated in the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880.

Other trs. are:—(1) "Ah wounded Head! must Thou." By Miss Winkworth, 1855, p. 80. (2) "Thou pierced and wounded brow." By Miss Thurn, 1857, p. 39. (3) "O Head, blood-stained and wounded," in the Schaff-Giltman Lit. of Religious Poetry, ed. 1883, p. 748, marked as tr. by Samuel M. Jackson, 1873, 1880.

O heavenly love, arise, arise. [Love as a Guide.] This is part of a song which Wolfram von Eschenbach (q.v.) is supposed to sing at a contest for a prize at the hands of a German princess. The work in which this song is found is Tannhäuser; or, The Battle of the Bards. A Poem by Neville Temple and Edward Trevor, Lond., Chapman & Hall, 1861, p. 54, in 5 st. of 4 l. The hymn in Kennedy, 1863, No. 195, is composed of st. iii.—v., and a closing stanza by Dr. Kennedy. It is a beautiful hymn and suited for the Epiphany. We may add that Neville Temple was the Hon. Julian Charles Henry Fane; and Edward Trevor was Edward Robert Bulwer, afterwards Lord Lytton.

[J. J.]

O help us, Lord; each hour of need. H. H. Milman. [Lent.] 1st pub. in Bp. Heber's posthumous Hymns, &c., 1827, p. 52, in 6 st. of 4 l. and appointed for second Sunday in Lent, being based on the Gospel of that day. In his Sel. of Ps. & Hys., 1837, Milman omitted st. iv. and v., thus reducing it to 4 st. of 4 l. and each stanza beginning with the words, "Oh! help us." In this form it has come into extensive use in all English-speaking countries. In the Mitre H. Bk., 1836, No. 190, it is partly rewritten by E. Olerus, "O help us, Lord! in all our need." This is repeated in Olerus's Church and King, June 1, 1837, but it has failed to attract attention. Another arrangement, beginning with st. ii., "O help us, when our spirits bleed," is sometimes found in modern hymnals. [J. J.]

O Herre Gott, dein göttlich Wort. [Holy Scripture.] Appeared in the Erfurt Enchiridion of 1527, and thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 123, in 8 st. of 12 l. Included in Klug's G. B., 1529, and became very popular in Reformation times. Recently it is found as No. 434 in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863.

In the 1527 and many later books it bears the initials "A. H. Z. W." Lauxmann, in a long note in Koch, viii. 697-706, tries to vindicate its authorship as by Ulrich (Alaricus) Herzog zu Württemberg, who d. at Tübingen, Nov. 6, 1550. In the Blätter für Homnologie, 1883, p. 79, 1887, p. 11, it is noted that in the Lieder Krone of 1734 to the Ratsburg G. B., these initials are resolved to mean Anark Herr zu Wildenfels (near Zwickau), who was known as one of the principal supporters of the Reformation at the court of the Elector John of Saxony, was one of the signatories to the Augsburg Confession (subscribing it as Anark dominus de Wildenfels), and d. at Altenburg, June 1, 1539. The ascription to Anark of Wildenfels seems to us much the more probable. Tr. as:—

1. How long, Oh God, Thy word of life. A very free tr. in 16 st. of 4 l. by Miss Fry, in her Hys. of the Reformation, 1845, p. 122. Her trs. of st. i., vii., viii. are No. 48, in Whittemore's Suppl. to all H. Bks., 1860.

Other trs. are, (1) "O heavenly Lorde, Thy godly Worde," by Bp. Coverdale, 1539 (Remains, 1846, p. 584). (2) "Lord God Thy face and word of grace," in the Guide & Godly Ballades, ed. 1568, fol. 29 (1868, p. 48.) (3) "O God our Lord, Thy divine Word," as No. 307 in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754. (4) "We give Thee thanks, most gracious Lord," by Dr. J. Hunt, in his Spir. Songs of Martin Luther, 1853, p. 73. [J. M.]

O himmlische Liebe! du hast mich besessen. [Love to Christ.] Included in Wagner's G. B., Leipzig, 1697, vol. iii. p. 713, in 6 st. of 6 l. Repeated in the Trier G. B. (Rom. Catholic), 1816, p. 227, reading, du hast mich ergriffen. It is tr. as:—

O Heavenly Love, Thou hast made me Thy dwelling. By Dr. Littledale, in full, as No. 399 in the People's Hyl., 1867, and signed "F. R." [J. M.]

O hochbeglückte Seele. C. J. P. Spitta. [Christian Service.] A fine hymn for Lay Helpers and all workers in Christ's service. 1st pub. in his Psalter und Harfe, Pirna, 1833, p. 78, in 7 st. of 8 l., entitled "The Servant of the Lord." Included in the Leipzig G. B., 1844, No. 395. Tr. as:—

1. How blessed, from the bonds of sin. A free tr. of st. i., ii., vi., vii., by Miss Borthwick, in H. L. L., 1st Ser., 1854, p. 66 (1884, p. 67). This version has attained considerable popularity, and is found in a number of the leading hymnals of Great Britain, e.g. H. A. & M., 1875; the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871; Free Ch. H. Bk., 1882, &c.; and in America in the Epis. Hys. for Ch. & Home, 1860; Boardman's Sel., 1861, &c.

2. The man is highly blessed. In full, by R. Massie, in his Lyra Domestica, 1860, p. 76. His trs. of st. iii., iv., vi., vii. beginning "God sanctifies and blesses," are included in the Bk. of Common Praise, 1863, and G. S. Jellicoe's Coll., 1867.

Other trs. are, (1) "O Soul, how blest (blest truly)" by the Hon. S. R. Maxwell, 1857, p. 1-1. (2) "Thrice happy he who serveth," by Miss Burlingham, in the British Herald, Aug. 1865, p. 119. (3) "O highly blessed servant," by Lady Inverard, 1873. [J. M.]

O Holy Ghost, Thou God of peace. I. Williams. [Communion of Saints; and For Unity.] 1st pub. in his Hys. on the Catechism, 1842, No. 28, in 4 st. of 4 l., and again in later editions of the same work. In its original form it is not much used. In 1854 it appeared in an altered form in Morrell & How's Ps. & Hys., st. i.-iii. being from I. Williams with alterations, and st. iv. being new by Bp. W. W. How. I. Williams's omitted stanza reads:—

"For love is life, and life is love,
And Thou Thyself art love and life;
And we in Thee shall live and move,
If Thou wilt keep us free from strife."

The Williams-How text has been repeated in the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871, Thring's Coll., 1882, and others. [J. J.]

O Holy Ghost, Thy people bless. Sir H. W. Baker. [Whitsuntide.] Written for use in the London Mission of 1874, and printed in Hys. for the London Mission (No. 2), which were published by the compilers of H. A. & M., 1874. In 1875 it was included in the revised ed. of H. A. & M. [J. J.]

O Holy Jesu, Prince of Peace. R. Broten-Borthwick. [Holy Communion.] Written in 1870, and 1st pub. in his Sixteen Hys. with Tunes, &c., the same year, in 6 st. of 6 l., and again in his Select Hys. for Church and Home, 1871, No. 58. In 1871 it appeared in the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, with the omission of st. iv. In the author's 2nd ed. with Appendix of his Select Hymns, &c., 1885, st. iv. is bracketed for omission, a slight alteration in st. i., l. 3, is introduced, and the following note is added:—

"This is not a congregational hymn, but a meditation, to be read while non-communicants are retiring, or to be sung by the choir alone, anthem-wise, kneeling." [J. J.]

O Holy Lord, content to live [dwell—fill]. Bp. W. W. How. [A Child's Hymn.] Written in 1850, and 1st pub. in The Parish Choir in 1851. In 1854 it was repeated in Morrell & How's Ps. & Hys., No. 65, in 5 st. of 4 l. When included in H. A. & M., in 1861, considerable alterations were made in the text and it began, "O Holy Lord, content to dwell." This first line, but not the alterations in detail, was adopted in the enlarged ed. of Morrell & How's Ps. & Hys., 1864. For the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871, it was again rewritten, this time by Bp. How, as "O Holy Lord, content to fill." This is the author's authorised text, and is repeated in his Hymns, 1886. All these texts are in C. U. [J. J.]

O Holy Saviour, Friend unseen. Charlotte Elliott. [In Affliction.] This hymn is found in two forms, and both by Miss Elliott. The first appeared in the Isle of Hymns Book, 1834, in 2 st. of 4 l., and began:—

"O Holy Saviour! Friend unseen,
Since on Thine arm Thyself to me lean,
Help me, throughout life's varying scene,
By faith to cling to Thee."

The second version was given in her Hours of Solace, &c., 1836, p. 132, also in 2 st. of 4 l. It began:—

"O Holy Saviour! Friend unseen!
The faint, the weak, on Thee may lean;
Help me, throughout life's varying scene,
By faith to cling to Thee."

The full text of this version is given in Lord Selborne's Book of Praise, 1862, and in the Lyra Brit., 1867, as the original, in error. The hymn-books have generally followed this text, but (in an abbreviated form) Snapp's Songs of G. & G., 1872, and a few others, are exceptions in favour of the older text. In Beecher's Hymn-book (ed., 1855, No. 759, is a cento from the older text, and begins, "O Holy Saviour, Friend unseen." Dr. Martineau's "O Holy Father, Friend unseen," in his Hymns, 1873, is also from the same text. This altered form is also in other Unitarian hymn-books. In Kennedy, 1863, No. 517, begins "O gentle Saviour, Guide unseen." These various texts and centos are all in C. U. in G. Britain, and America. [J. J.]

O Holy Spirit, come, And Jesu's love declare. O. Allen. [Whitenside.] Appeared in his Hymn of the Christian Life, 1862, p. 33, in 8 st. of 4 l. It is based upon the words "The Holy Ghost shall teach you all things," St. John xiv. 26. In an abridged form it is in C. U. in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

O how I love Thy holy word. W. Cooper. [Holy Scripture is Affliction.] This is No. 17 of Book iii. in the Olney Hymns, 1779. It is in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed, "Afflictions sanctified by the Word." It is in C. U. in its original form, but a cento therefrom, beginning with st. iii., "Long unafflicted, undismayed," is much more popular than the complete hymn. [J. J.]

O how the thought that we shall know. E. Swaine. [Heaven Anticipated.] The original publication of this hymn we are unable to determine. It probably appeared in a religious magazine, circa 1830: for st. ii.-v. were given in Bickersteth's Christian Psalms, 1833, No. 575: as "For ever to behold Him shine." The original was republished in Swaine's The Hand of God, a Fragment, with Poems, Hymns, and Versions of Psalms, 1839: Bickersteth's arrangement was also repeated in several collections. In 1876 Bp. E. H. Bickersteth wrote a new stanza, substituted it for Swaine's original, and gave the hymn in his Hymn-Book, as "For ever 'beatific word,' together with an elaborate note in which he says it was strange to begin the hymn as his father had done, with the second stanza of the original, 'For ever to behold Him shine.'"

"without the sacred name of Jesus being previously expressed, and without the benediction, 'For ever, being clearly struck, as in the original, at the close of the first verse.' It is probably owing to this fact that so beautiful a hymn has been omitted from many of the standard hymnals of the Church. The editor therefore ventured, though with much diffidence, to write the first verse given in the text (as in H. Comp.) for the closing of the first and last stanzas with the same word 'for ever,' as originally contrived by the author, seems almost essential to the full chord of eternity, which is struck again and again in this admirable hymn." (Notes, H. Comp., No. 240.)

This arrangement by Bp. Bickersteth has produced a very attractive and melodious hymn. [J. J.]

O ignis Spiritus Paracliti. St. Hildegard. [Whitenside.] Mase, No. 179, gives this sequence from a ms. of the 12th cent. at Wiesbaden. This ms. contains the writings of St. Hildegard, Abbess of Rupertsberg, near Disgen (b. 1098, d. 1180), and Mase thinks the sequence is probably by her. His text is repeated by Daniel, v. p. 201, and Kehrle, No. 127. Tr. as:—

O Fire of the Comforter, O Life of all that live. By E. F. Littledale in the Lyra Alexandrina, 1864, p. 377. In the People's H., 1867, and the Irrigative Hymn for the Churches, 1871, it is re-written by Dr. Littledale as "O Fire of God, the Comforter."

Another text is:—
O Comforter, Thou uncreated Fire. T. G. Chippen, in his Ancient Hymns & Poems, &c., 1868. [W. A. S.]

O it is hard to work for God. F. W. Faber. [Trial of Faith.] Appeared in his Jesu and Mary, &c., 1849, in 19 st. of 4 l., and headed, "The Right must Win" also repeated in his Hymns, 1862. The following centos from this hymn are in C. U.:—(1) "O it is hard to work for God;" (2) "God's glory is a wondrous thing;" (3) "O blest is he to whom is given;" and (4) "Workman of God O lose not heart." [J. J.]

O it is joy in one to meet. Bp. R. Mand. [Divine Worship.] In his Ancient Hymns, &c., 1857, p. 89, is given an original "Hymn commemorative of the pleasure of Social Worship," in 6 st. of 4 l., beginning, "Glind is thy sound, O Sabbath bell" (ed. 1871, p. 153). From this st. ii.-v. were taken, slightly altered, and given in Beecher's Hymn-book, 1855, No. 769, as, "O, it is joy in one to meet." In the Songs for the Sanctuary, N. Y., 1865, the same stanzas are given as "O, it is joy for time to meet." The use of both arrangements is limited. [J. J.]

O Jesu Christ, mein schönstes Licht. P. Gerhardt. [Love to Christ.] Included in the 5th ed., Berlin, 1653, and the Frankfurt ed., 1656, of Crüger's Praxis, in 16 st. of 9 l., reprinted in Wackernagel's ed. of his Geistliche Lieder, No. 45; Bachmann's ed., No. 73; and included as No. 771 in the Ev. L. S., 1851. One of the finest hymns on the Love of Christ, it is founded on Prayer v. of Class B. in J. Arndt's Paradiesgärtlein, 1612. Luxmann, in Koch, viii. 294, relates many incidents regarding this hymn, mentioning that J. A. Bengel caused it to be sung at the celebration of Holy Communion at his death-bed, and that the wife of J. Lange (p. 633, L.) was greatly comforted by it in her last hours. Tr. as:—

Jesu, Thy boundless love to me. A full and very fair tr. by J. Wesley, in Hymn and Sacred Poems, 1739 (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i. p. 138), and as No. 35 in Hymn & Spirit. Songs, 1753. In the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 362, reduced to 9 st. The following forms are in C. U. :—

i. Jesus, Thy boundless love to me (st. i.). In Mercer (10 st.); N. Cong., 1859 (4 st.); Bapt. Hyl., 1879 (3 st.); &c.; and in America in the Dutch Ref., 1869 (3 st.); Koeng. Hyl., 1880 (4 st.); Laudes Domini, 1884 (3 st.); &c.

ii. O Love, how cheering is thy ray (st. iii.) Bk. of Hys., Boston, U.S., 1848; Holy Song, 1869.

iii. My Saviour, Thou Thy love to me (st. v.). Moravian H. Bk., 1789; H. L. Hastings's Hymnal, 1880.

iv. More hard than marble is my heart (st. vi.). American Sabbath H. Bk., 1858.

v. O draw me, Saviour, after Thee (st. ix.) Snepp's Songs of G. & G.; Pennsylvania Luth. Ch. Bk., 1868.

vi. O draw me, Father, after Thee (st. ix. alt.). Bk. of Hys., Boston, U.S., 1848; Amer. Unitarian H. Bk., 1869.

vii. Still nigh me, O my Saviour stand. St. i. of this form is taken from "Peace, doubting heart, my God's I am" (q.v.). To this is added in Snepp's Songs of G. & G., st. xii., xiv., xvi., and in J. L. Porter's Coll., 1876, st. xii., xv., xvi. of this tr.

viii. Thou Friend of sinners! Who hast bought. This is st. v., iv., xvi. rewritten by E. Osler, and pub. as No. 180 in the Mitre H. Bk., 1836, and in his own Church and King, June, 1857, p. 140. Repeated in the Irish Church Hyl., 1869 and 1873.

Other tra. are. (1) "O Christ, my sweetest Life and Light," in the Suppl. to German Psal., ed. 1766, p. 29; in Select Hys. from German Psal., Tranquebar, 1764, p. 47, and the Moravian H. Bk., 1754, pt. i., No. 444. St. v.-vii., beginning "Thou can'st in love to my relief," are given at p. 302 in the Moravian H. Bk. pt. ii., 1746. In the Moravian H. Bk., 1789 (1849, No. 460), it begins, "O Christ, my only Life and Light." (2) "O Jesus Christ! my fairest Light," by J. Kelly, 1867, p. 123. (3) "O Christ, my Light, my gracious Saviour," in the Moravian H. Bk., 1806. [J. M.]

O Jesu Christe, wahres Licht. J. Heermann. [Christian Church.] 1st pub. in his Devoti musica cordis, Breslau, 1630, p. 120, in 6 st. of 4 l. as one of the "Songs of Tears" in the section entitled, "In the time of the persecution and distress of pious Christians." Thence in Mützell, 1858, No. 49; in Wackernagel's ed. of his Geistliche Lieder, No. 87, and the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 242. It is a beautiful hymn on Christ as the Light and Centre of the world, and the most widely used through English tra. of any of Heermann's hymns. Tr. as:—

1. O Thou, the true and only Light, Direct, &c. A good tr. of st. i., ii., by W. Ball, as part of his book of words for the English ed. of Mendelssohn's St. Paul, 1836, and thence in Robinson's Church Psalter & H. Bk., 1860. To this in Allon's Suppl. Hys. and C. P. Hyl., 1886, Bapt. Hyl., 1879, &c., tra. of st. iv.-vi., from Chope (see below), were added; and in the Suppl. of 1874 to the New Cong., tra. of st. iii.-vi. from Miss Winkworth (see below). The version in the Anglican H. Bk., 1868, No. 275 (1871, No. 316), is st. i. by Ball, ii.-vi. by R. C. Singleton, 1867.

2. O Christ, the Light of heavenly day! A full and very good tr. by A. T. Russell, as No. 137 in his Ps. & Hys., 1851, and thence in Bosworth's Church Hys., 1865, and G. S. Jellicoe's Coll., 1867. In the Cooke-Denton Hymnal, 1853, No. 12 is composed of sts. i., iv., v., ii., vi., of Russell, in the order named. This form is repeated in Chope's Hyl., 1862, Thring's Coll., 1880-82, &c. The form beginning "O Jesu, Light of heavenly day," in Kennedy, 1863 (thence in Dr. Thomas's Augustine H. Bk., 1866), is Chope greatly altered.

3. O Thou, the true and only Light! Enlighten, &c. A somewhat free tr. in 5 st., as No. 58 in J. F. Thrupp's Ps. & Hys., 1853.

4. O Christ, our true and only Light. A good and full tr. by Miss Winkworth in her Lyra Ger., 2nd Ser., 1858, p. 21, repeated in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 100. This is found in the App. of 1874 to the Leeds H. Bk., 1853; Psalmist, 1878; and in America in the Presb. Hyl., 1874; Baptist H. Bk., 1871; Bapt. Service of Song, 1871; Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880, &c.

5. O Jesu Christ, the world's true Light. A good but rather free version by E. Massie in his Sacred Odes, vol. ii., 1867, p. 175, and thence in J. L. Porter's Coll., 1876.

Another tr. is, "O Christ, Thou heavenly Light, illumine," by Dr. G. Walker, 1860, p. 31. [J. M.]

O Jesu, meine Sonne. C. J. P. Spitta. [Love to Christ.] A beautiful hymn on Jesus as the daily help and life of His faithful people. 1st pub. in Spitta's Psalter und Harfe, Pirna, 1833, p. 69, in 8 st. of 8 l. entitled, "Life and full satisfaction in Jesus." Included in Knapp's Ev. L. S., 1850, No. 145 (1865, No. 1507). Tr. as:—

O blessed Sun, whose splendour. A full and good tr. by R. Massie in his Lyra Domestica, 1860, p. 66, repeated in Reid's Praise Bk., 1872, and in Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869-70. Varying centos with the original first line are found in Flett's Coll., Paisley, 1871; Hatfield's Church H. Bk., N. Y., 1872; Harland's C. P. & Hyl., 1876; J. L. Porter's Coll., 1876, &c.; and (with the first line as "Blessed Sun") in the Bk. of Common Praise, 1863. Varying centos (generally iv.-vi.) beginning "I know no life divided" (st. iv.) are included in Kennedy, 1863; People's Hyl., 1867; and in America in the Presb. Hyl., 1874; Meth. Epis. Hyl., 1878; Dutch Reformed H. Bk., 1869; Laudes Domini, 1884, &c.

Other tra. are. (1) "Jesus, my sun! before Whose eye," by Miss Fry, 1850, p. 143. (2) "O Jesus Christ, my Sunshine," by Miss Manington, 1861, p. 16. (3) "O Jesus, at Thy shining," by Miss Burlingham, in the British Herald, Aug. 1865, p. 124, repeated in Reid's Praise Bk., 1872. (4) "Jesus, my Sun, before Whose beams," by Lady Durand, 1873, p. 29. [J. M.]

O Jesu, my [our] beloved King. E. Caswall. [Grace and Merit.] Pub. in H. Formby's Catholic Hys., 1851, p. 45, in 7 st. of 4 l.; in Caswall's Masque of Mary, 1858, p. 217; and in his Hys. & Poems, 1878, p. 248. In the Hymnary, 1872, it begins, "O Jesu, our beloved King." [J. J.]

O Jesu, Thou art standing. Bp. W. W. How. [Christ at the Door.] Written in 1867, and first pub. in the 1867 Supplement to Morrell & How's Ps. & Hymns, in 6 st. of 4 l. It has passed, and usually in an unaltered form, into the 1868 Appx. to H. A. & M., the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871, and other collections in G. Britain, and also into several American collections. It is one of the most popular of Bishop How's hymns. [J. J.]

O Jesus bruised and wounded more. Cecil F. Alexander. [Holy Communion.] Appeared in her work, The Legend of the Golden Prayers and other Poems, 1859, p. 143, in 5 st. of 4 l., and entitled "Communion Hymn." In the Lyra Anglicana, 1865, it was given as Pt. ii. of the hymn "He cometh, on yon hallowed bourn," Pt. i. being an addition of 6 st. to the original hymn. Each of these "Parts" is in C. U. as a separate hymn, the second part being the more popular of the two. [J. J.]

O Jesus! God and man. F. W. Faber. [Children's Hymn.] This popular children's hymn was given in his Jesus and Mary, &c., 1849, in 7 st. of 4 l., and headed "Ragged School Hymn." In C. U. it is found in two forms, first, the original, in Roman Catholic hymn-books for missions and schools, in which st. iii., iv., both of which are addressed to the B. V. M., are retained; and second, in other hymn-books, where they are omitted. Orig. text in Faber's Hymns, 1862. [J. J.]

O Jesus, I [we] have promised To serve Thee to the End. J. E. Bode. [Confirmation.] Contributed to the 1869 Appendix to the S. P. C. K. Ps. & Hymns, No. 395. It has been repeated in a great number of hymn-books, and is very popular as a Confirmation hymn. [J. J.]

O Jesus, Jesus, dearest Lord. F. W. Faber. [Love to Jesus.] 1st pub. in his Jesus and Mary, &c., 1849, in 10 st. of 4 l., headed "Jesus, my God, and my All"; and again in his Hymns, 1862. It is in C. U. in its full form, and also abbreviated to 5 st., as in Hatfield's Church H. Bk., N. Y., 1872. A cento therefrom, beginning with st. vii., "O Light in darkness, Joy in grief," is No. 580 in the Hymnary, 1872. [J. J.]

O Jesus, make Thyself to me. Charlotte Elliott. [The Presence of Jesus desired.] Under date of Jan. 26, 1872, the Rev. J. Babington, brother-in-law to Miss Elliott, wrote to the late D. Sedgwick concerning this hymn:—

"The lines you refer to, 'O Jesus, make Thyself to me,' are Miss Charlotte Elliott's. They were for many years the private expression of her own daily prayers, and were so much a part of her own hidden life with her Saviour that they were rarely communicated by her to any one, and only to her most intimate friends. One of those had them printed on a card by Taylor [Edinburgh, 1869], and at first she was rather disconcerted, till she was led to feel that this was her loved Saviour's way of leading others to the participation in her own sacred inner life."

The lines are:—

"O Jesus, make Thyself to me,
A living, bright reality;
More present to faith's vision keen
Than any outward object seen;
More dear, more intimately nigh,
Than e'en the sweetest earthly tie!"

These lines are given in Snapp's Songs of G. & G., 1872, as No. 538. [J. J.]

O Jesus, Saviour of the lost. Bp. E. H. Bickersteth. [Jesus, the Rock.] Appeared in his Water from the Well-Spring, &c., 1852, p. 180, in 4 st. of 4 l., and headed, "Thou art my Rock." In 1858 it was repeated in his Ps. & Hymns, No. 135; and again, as "O Jesus, Saviour, &c.," in his H. Companion, 1870 and 1876. It is also in use in America. Bp. Bickersteth dates its composition 1849, but it is not in his Poems of that Year. [J. J.]

O Jesus, still, still shall I groan. C. Wesley. [Lent.] This poem, in 4 parts, appeared in Hymns and Sacred Poems, 1742, in 36 st. of 6 l., and entitled, "Groaning for Redemption." (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. ii., p. 126.) In 1780 the following hymns were compiled therefrom, and included in the Wes. H. Bk.:—

1. Jesus, Thou knowest my sinfulness (sinfulness). St. i.-iii., vii., viii. of Pt. ii.
2. Lay to Thy hand, O God of grace. St. viii.-x. of Pt. iii.
3. Saviour from sin, I wait to prove. St. i., ii., iv.-vi. of Pt. iv.

These hymns are retained in the Wes. H. Bk., 1875, and are found in various collections.

[J. J.]

O King of earth, and air, and sea. Bp. R. Heber. [Lent.] Appeared in his posthumous Hymns, &c., 1827, p. 55, in 6 st. of 4 l., and appointed for the 4th Sunday in Lent. Although apparently based upon the petition in the Lord's Prayer, "Give us this day our daily bread," it was doubtless suggested by the Gospel of the day, the feeding of the five thousand (John vi. 1). It is in C. U. in G. Britain and America. In the American Unitarian Bk. of Hymns, 1848, No. 492, it begins with st. iv., "Thy bounteous hand with food can bless." [J. J.]

O King of kings, Thy blessing shed. [National Hymn.] This hymn "For the King" appeared anonymously in the 8th ed. of Cotterill's Selection, 1819, No. 266, in 5 st. of 4 l. It is known in the following forms:—

1. Its full form as above, and in various hymn-books to 1837.
2. In 4 st. of 4 l. in Bickersteth's Christian Psalmody, 1833. This is the text, with the necessary changes from King to Queen, &c., which was used in the S. P. C. K. Jubilee Hymns, 1867, and other Jubilee collections.
3. The same arrangement of stanzas altered to suit the changed circumstances occasioned by the accession of H. M. Gracious Majesty Queen Victoria. This was given in an early edition of Hall's Mitre H. Bk. (1st ed., 1836), and was made by Hall.
4. The Mitre H. Bk. text with the addition of Bp. Ken's doxology, "Praise God from Whom," &c.
5. The Mitre H. Bk. text, with a return in some instances to the original text on the one hand, and some new changes on the other, in Thring's Coll., 1882.

This hymn is usually attributed to T. Cotterill. In the Julian and the Brooke marked copies of his Selection [see Cotterill, T.] it is blank. Snapp, in his Songs of G. & G., 1872, and others attribute it to "T. Cotterill." Their authority was the simple guess of D. Sedgwick, as his mss. testify. So far as we can discover it is "Anon. in Cotterill's Selection, 1819." [J. J.]

Ὁ Κύριος ἔρχεται. [Τὴν ἡμέραν τὴν φρικτὴν.]

O let my Jesus teach me how. J. Berridge. [Abiding in Jesus.] Pub. in his Zion's Songs, &c., 1785, No. 99, in 6 st. of 4 l., with the heading "Little children, abide in Him, 1 John ii. 28" (ed. 1842, p. 249). In modern hymn-books it is usually abbreviated, as in Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1866. [J. J.]

O Lord, consider my distress. W. Whittingham. [Ps. li.] This rendering of the 51st Ps., which first appeared in the Anglo-Generan Psalter, 1556 [Old Version, § III.], is the earliest known version of a Psalm in L. M. in the English language. A copy of the Psalter in which it appeared is preserved in the Bodleian, Oxford. Notwithstanding its historical value and some merit, it is unknown to modern collections. As a specimen we will quote the first stanza:—

"O Lord, consider my distress, and now with speed some pity take;
My sins deface, my faith redress, good Lord, for thy great mercies sake."

The full text is difficult to find, except in the Psalter appended to many old copies of the Bible, and in the Old Version. [J. J.]

O Lord, how good, how great art Thou. H. F. Lyte. [Ps. viii.] This is Lyte's altered version of his paraphrase of Ps. viii., which first appeared as "How good, how faithful, Lord, art Thou" (p. 706, ii. 4), in his Poems, 1833. This altered form was given in his Spirit of the Psalms, 1834, and is found in the Wes. H. Bk., 1875, and other collections. [J. J.]

O Lord, how happy should we be. J. Anstice. [Rest and Peace in Jesus.] 1st pub. in his posthumous Hymns, 1836, No. 44, in 5 st. of 6 l. In 1841 it was included in the Child's Christian Year, and from thence has passed into numerous hymn-books in all English-speaking countries. It was probably suggested by the words of the Psalmist, "Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and He shall sustain thee;" but in the Hymns there is nothing to indicate its origin, as it is printed there without title or heading of any kind. Usually the text is slightly altered, that in the H. Companion, although claiming to be the original, being at fault in no less than four instances. This hymn is the best known and most widely used of Anstice's hymns. [J. J.]

O Lord, in all our trials here. Emma Toke, nee Leslie. [Saints' Days.] Written in 1851, and contributed anonymously to the S. P. C. K. Hymns for Public Worship, 1852, No. 114, in 3 st. of 4 l. This hymn is in use in the following forms:—

1. The original in S. P. C. K. Hymns, &c.
2. Rewritten by Mrs. Toke, in 3 st. of 8 l. for the Rev. R. Judd's Sunday School Liturgy and H. Bk., Halifax, 1870, No. 11, and adapted for St. Stephen's Day.
3. In Hutton's Appendix, Lincoln, n. d., composed of the original; st. iv. from J. Newton's Olney Hymns, No. cxvi., st. vii.; and a doxology. This arrangement was given in Thring's Coll., 1st ed., 1880, but omitted in the 2nd ed., 1882, in favour of:—
4. The original with a fourth stanza added by Prebendary Thring, No. 385. [J. J.]

O Lord, incline Thy gracious ear. C. Wesley. [Ps. v.] Pub. in the Wesley Ps. & Hys., 1743, in 7 st. of 8 l. (P. Works, 1868–1872, vol. viii. p. 9.) From this paraphrase three centos are in C. U.:—

1. O Lord, incline Thy gracious ear. In Kennedy, 1863, No. 377.
2. Behold us, Lord, with humble fear. Composed of st. iv., v., and vii. rewritten and greatly altered, in A Sel. of Hys. designed as a Suppl. to the Ps. & Hys. of the Presb. Church. Philadelphia, 1861.
3. On Thee, O God of purity. This, which begins with st. ii., was given in the revised ed. of the Wes. H. Bk., 1875. In Common Praise, 1879, this is again changed to "On Thee, Thou God of purity." [J. J.]

O Lord, my best desire fulfil. W. Cowper. [Resignation.] 1st pub. in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. iii., No. 29, in 6 st. of 4 l., and entitled "Submission." It was somewhat widely used in the older hymn-books, and is still given in several collections in G. Britain and America. Usually it is abbreviated, and sometimes it is attributed to J. Newton, but in error. [J. J.]

O Lord of heaven, and earth, and sea. Bp. C. Wordsworth of Lincoln. [Offer-tory.] 1st pub. in the 3rd ed. of his Holy Year, 1863, in 9 st. of 4 l., and headed, "Charitable Collections." It is in extensive use in G. Britain and America, sometimes in its original form, as in the 1869 Appendix to the S.P.C.K. Ps. & Hys., and again as altered in H. A. & M., or the S.P.C.K. Church Hymns, and others. The changes in the text of the Church Hys. were approved by the author. His authorised text is in the 6th ed. of his Holy Year, 1872. [J. J.]

O Lord of hosts, Whose glory fills. J. M. Neale. [Laying Foundation Stone of a Church.] Appeared in his Hys. for the Young (being the 2nd series of his Hys. for Children), in 1844, No. 27, in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed, "Laying the First Stone of a Church." It is given in numerous hymnals, as H. A. & M., the People's H., Thring's Coll., &c. The alteration of st. v., ll. 1–2, from:—

"Endue the hearts that guide with skill; Preserve the hands that work from ill;"

to—

"The heads that guide endue with skill,
The hands that work preserve from ill," given in H. A. & M. in 1861, has been adopted with almost common consent. [J. J.]

O Lord, our fathers oft have told. Tate & Brady. [Ps. xlii. Thanksgiving for Victory.] 1st pub. in three parts in the New Version, 1696. From this rendering, centos of varying length have been compiled from time to time, and have come into common use. In 1836, Edward Osler rewrote various lines from the N. V. and formed them into a hymn of 4 st. of 4 l. beginning:—"Great God of hosts, our ears have heard." This was included in Hall's Mitre H. Bk., as a version of Ps. xlii. and entitled "For Succour against our Foes." From thence it passed into various collections, including Pott's Hymns, &c., 1861, where it was given with slight alterations, and a doxology. This text was repeated in the S.P.C.K. Church Hymns, 1871, with the change in the doxology of "One co-eternal Three" to "One God in Persons Three." [J. J.]

O Lord our God, with earnest care. [Fast Day.] This cento, in 5 st. of 4 l. in 4 Selection of Hys. Designed as a Suppl. to the Ps. & Hys. of the Presb. Church, Philadelphia, 1861, No. 356, and the Songs for the Sanctuary, N. Y., 1865, No. 1333, is from trs. of Latin hymns pub. in the H. Noted; st. i. being st. iii. of "Ecce tempus idoneum;" st. ii., iii. being st. iii., iv. of "Jesu quadragenarius;" st. iv. being st. iv. of "Audi benigne Conditor;" and st. v. of "Plasmator hominis Deus." (For history of the Latin texts see under their respective first lines.) Of these trs. st. i.–iv. are by Dr. Neale, and st. v. by another hand. The result is a most successful hymn for a Fast Day service, or for Lent. [J. J.]

O Lord, our languid souls inspire. J. Newton. [Opening of a Place of Worship.] This hymn was written at the same time and under the same circumstances as Cowper's "Jesus, where'er Thy people meet." Full details are given in the note on that hymn. "O Lord, our languid souls," &c., was pub. in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. ii., No. 43, in 7 st. of 4 l., and headed, "On opening a Place for Social Prayer." It is rarely found in its full form. The abbreviated texts sometimes begin with the first stanza, but the most popular arrangements are:—

1. Dear Shepherd of Thy people, hear. This is usually composed of four stanzas of the original, beginning with st. ii.

2. Great Shepherd of Thy people, hear. This is the most popular form of the hymn. Bickerneth included it in his Christian Psalmody, 1833.

3. Kind Shepherd of Thy people, hear. This arrangement appeared in J. H. Gurney's Coll. of Hymns, &c., 1838, and is repeated in later hymn-books.

The use of this hymn in these various forms is extensive. [J. J.]

O Lord, our Strength in weakness. Bishop C. Wordsworth of Lincoln. [For a Girls' Friendly Society.] Written in 1881 for The Lincoln Diocesan Manual of the Girls' Friendly Society, and first printed therein, 1881, in 6 st. of 8 l. (Lincoln: Williamson). It is an admirable lyric on Temperance, and is one of the most beautiful of Bp. Wordsworth's hymns. [J. J.]

O Lord, refresh Thy flock. J. Anstice. [Passiontide.] Appeared in his posthumous Hymns, 1836, No. 27, in 5 st. of 4 l., and again, with alterations, in the Child's Christian Year, 1841. In the former it is without title or heading of any kind; in the latter it is appointed for "Thursday in Passion Week." It is in several hymn-books, the text being usually that of the Child's Ch. Year. [J. J.]

O Lord, Thou knowest all the snares. Emma Toke, née Leslie. [Lent.] Written in 1851, and contributed anonymously to the S. P. C. K. Hys. for Public Worship, 1852, No. 34, in 2 st. of 8 l. From thence it has passed into later eds. of the same collection, the Irish Church Hymnal, and others. In 1870 Mrs. Toke altered it (for the worse) for the Rev. R. Judd's S. S. Liturgy and H. Bk., Halifax, 1870, No. 24, as "O God! Thou knowest all the snares," but in this form it has failed to attract attention. [J. J.]

O Lord, turn not Thy face away. J. Marchant. [Lent.] This hymn, known as The Lamentation of a Sinner, is first found in J. Daye's ed. of Sternhold and Hopkins, 1560-61 [Old Version, § v.] but without signature. In the edition of 1565, the authorship is given to Marchant. This name, sometimes written Market, appears also in the editions of 1595 and 1606 [Old Version, § ix. 10]. The first stanza is:—

"O Lord, turn not Thy face away
From him that lies prostrate,
Lamenting sore his sinful life
Before Thy mercy gate."

In The Whole Book of Psalms, &c., by J. Playford, 1677, p. 285, it begins "O Lord, turn not away Thy face."

The authorship of this hymn is given by Miller (Singers and Songs, 1867, p. 46) and by Lord Selborne (Book of Praise, 1862, p. 239, and note) to John Mardley, although Miller adds a "?" in his Index [Old Version, § ix. 10]. These conclusions are based upon Farr's note in his Select Poetry Chiefly Devotional of the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, &c., 1845, vol. i. p. l., where the signature "M" in the Old Version is thought to represent John Mardley.

A second rendering of The Lamentation is that by Tate and Brady, in the 6th ed. of the Supplement of the New Version, 1708. It is the Old Version text rewritten in 9 st. of 4 l. The first stanza reads:—

"O Lord, turn not Thy face from me,
Who lie in woeful state,
Lamenting all my sinful life
Before Thy mercy gate."

This text continued in use as a part of Tate and Brady until that work was superseded by modern hymn-books. It is also found in a considerable number of the latter, but usually in an abridged form.

A third rendering of The Lamentation, by Bp. R. Heber, was given in his posthumous Hymns, 1827, p. 104, in 12 double lines. The opening lines are:—

"Oh Lord, turn not Thy face away
From them that lowly lie,
Lamenting sore their sinful life
With tears and bitter cry."

This rendering, signed in Heber's Hymns "Sternhold" in error, is given in full in Lord Selborne's Book of Praise, 1862, p. 239. It is considerably altered from the Old Version original. In several modern hymn-books, including the Scottish Presbyterian Hymnal, 1876, it is slightly altered, as "O Lord, turn not Thy face from us." Other altered forms of the text are (1) "Turn not Thy face away, O Lord," in the American Sabbath H. Bk., 1858, and others; and (2) "Turn not, O Lord, Thy face from me," in Alford's Ps. & Hys., 1844, and his Year of Praise, 1867. The original texts of the O. and the N. Versions may be found bound up with old copies of the Book of Common Prayer. [J. J.]

O Lord, upon Thine heritage. [Ember Days.] This hymn, in W. J. Blew's Church Hymn and Tune Bk., 1852-55, in 5 st. of 4 l. is based upon F. Rous's version of Ps. 68, st. ix.-xii. as pub. in the Scottish Psalter, 1650. In the H. Bk. for the use of Wellington College, 1860, and in Kennedy, 1863, st. i.-iv., are repeated, together with the substitution of a doxology for Blew's st. v. [J. J.]

O Lord, when dangers press me round. W. H. Bathurst. [Ps. cxi.] 1st pub. in his Ps. & Hys., 1831, as a version of Ps. cxi. in 3 st. of 6 l. with the heading, "God a sure Defence." In its original form it is not in C. U., but as "My God, when dangers press me round," it is in a few modern collections, including the New Cong., 1859, No. 235. This altered form of the hymn appeared in Hall's Mitre H. Bk., 1836. The changes introduced by Hall are very slight. [J. J.]

O Lord, Who in Thy love divine. Bp. C. Wordsworth of Lincoln. [Ember Days and Ordinations.] 1st pub. in his Holy Year, 1862, p. 200, in 9 st. of 6 l. and headed "For Ember Weeks; and at the Ordination of Bishops, Priests, and Deacons." In 1865 a new stanza was added, as st. ii. ("Thou Who the night in prayer didst spend"), and the hymn was divided into two parts, Pt. ii. beginning with st. v., "O may Thy pastors faithful be." In Snapp's Songs of G. & G., 1872, No. 759, begins with st. iv. of the 1865 text, "O Thou Who didst at Pentecost." [J. J.]

O Lord, wilt Thou teach me to pray? Jane Taylor. [A Child's Hymn.] 1st pub. in Orig. Hys. for Sunday Schools, 2nd ed., 1813, No. 21, in 6 st. of 4 l. In the 4th ed. of the Original Hys., 1816, the opening line was changed to "Lord, teach a sinful child to pray." In this form, and in the more pleasing reading given to it by some, "Lord teach a little child to pray," it is found in numerous collections for children. [J. J.]

O Love divine, how sweet Thou art.

C. Wesley. [Desiring to Love.] Appeared in Hys. and Sac. Poems, 1749, vol. i., in 7 st. of 6 l. as No. 5 of six hymns on "Desiring to Love" (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. iv. p. 341). Three leading centos are in C. U. :—

1. Composed of st. i., iii., iv. and vii. This was given in G. Whitelield's Hymns, &c., 1753, No. 56, as the second of two hymns on "Longing for Christ." This cento was repeated by Mudan, Toplady, and others in the older collections, and is that usually found in the Church of England hymn-books.

2. Composed of st. i.-iv. This was given in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 141, and is in very extensive use in all English-speaking countries. In the revised ed. of the Wes. H. Bk., 1876, st. v., vi., of the original were added to the hymn.

3. Composed of st. iv., vi., and iii., in the order named. This cento, beginning "O that I could for ever sit," is in the American Songs for the Sanctuary, N. Y., 1865.

In addition to these other forms of the text beginning with st. i. are in limited use. G. J. Stevenson's associations in his Methodist H. Bk. Notes, 1883, are most interesting. [J. J.]

O Love divine, what hast Thou done? C. Wesley. [Passiontide.] 1st pub. in Hys. & Sacred Poems, 1742, in 4 st. of 6 l., as the last of three hymns on "Desiring to Love" (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. ii. p. 74). It came into use in the Church of England through Toplady's Ps. & Hys., 1776, No. 25, and with the Methodist Societies and other nonconformists through the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 27. The historical account of its beautiful refrain, "My Lord, my Love is crucified," is given under "My Lord, my Love was crucified" (p. 761, ii.). [J. J.]

O luce quae tuâ lates. Claude de nteuil. [Trinity.] Appeared in the Paris Breviary, 1680; the Clunian Breviary, 1686, p. 32; the Paris Brev., 1736; and again in other and later French Breviaries. It is also in J. Chandler's Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837; Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865; and Biggs's annotated ed. of H. A. & M., 1867. Tr. as :—

1. O Thou Who dwellest bright on high. By J. Chandler in his Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837, p. 93, and again in his Hys. of the Church, 1841, No. 54. This is given unaltered in some collections, and in others as "Thou ever blessed Trinity," as in Murray's Hymnal, 1852, No. 68.

2. Who, in Thy very light, self-shrouded art. W. J. Blew in his Church Hy. & Tune Bk., 1852-55, and again in Rice's Sel. from the same, 1870.

3. Blest Trinity, from mortal sight. By the Compilers of H. A. & M., given first in their trial edition, 1859, and then in their first ed., 1861, but omitted from the revised ed., 1875.

4. Great God, Who in Thy light dost rest. By R. C. Singleton, written in 1867, and included in his Anglican H. Bk., 1868 and 1871.

5. O Thou Who hidden art in Thine own light. By I. Williams in the British Magazine, Sept. 1837, vol. xii. p. 270, and his Hys. tr. from the Parisian Breviary, 1839, p. 163. [J. J.]

O Luce qui mortalibus. C. Coffin. [Sunday Evening.] Given in the Paris Bre-

iary, 1736, as the hymn for Sundays at Vespers, from Trinity to Advent; and again in Coffin's Hymni Sacri, 1736, p. 10. It is also in J. Chandler's Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837, No. 10; Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865; and in Biggs's Annotated ed. of H. A. & M., 1867. Tr. as :—

1. O Thou Who in the light dost dwell. By I. Williams in the British Magazine, Jan. 1834, vol. v. p. 31, and his Hys. tr. from the Parisian Breviary, 1839, p. 10. It was included with alterations in the Hymnary, 1872. It is also No. 104 (altered) in Korison's Hys. and Anthems, 1851.

2. O Thou, Whose throne is hid from men. By J. Chandler in his Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837, p. 8, and his Hys. of the Church, &c., 1841, No. 7. It is in a few collections only.

3. Thou Who in light dost dwell. By W. J. Blew, in his Church Hy. & Tune Bk., 1852-55, and Rice's Sel. from the same, 1870.

4. The splendours of Thy glory, Lord. By Archbishop E. W. Benson. 1st pub. in the H. Bk. for the Use of Wellington College, during his Head Mastership, 1860, and again in the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871.

5. Great God, Who hid from mortal sight. By the Compilers of H. A. & M., 1861 (based on J. Chandler), omitted from the revised ed., 1875, but restored, with alterations, in 1889.

6. Father of glory, that dost dwell. By J. M. Neale in the East Grinstead St. Margaret's Hyl., 1875.

Translations not in C. U. :—

1. O Thou Who in the light dost dwell. R. Campbell. 1850. This is I. Williams's tr. as above, rewritten in L. M. The opening ll. 1-3 are the same as Williams's.

2. O God, enshrined in heavenly might. J. D. Chambers. 1857.

3. God, who in the unapproached light. D. T. Morgan. 1880. [J. J.]

O Lux beata Trinitas, Et principalis Unitas. St. Ambrose. [Evening.] This is one of the twelve hymns which the Benedictine editors regarded as undoubtedly the work of St. Ambrose. It is cited as by St. Ambrose by Hincmar of Rheims in his treatise De unitâ et non trinâ Deitate, 857. The original consists of two sts. (ii. "Te mane laudum carmine") and a doxology. Its almost universal use was at Vespers on Saturday, as in the older Roman (Venice, 1478); Paris, 1643; Sarum, York, and Aberdeen Breviaries. It was sometimes also assigned to Vespers or Lauds on Trinity Sunday. Daniel, i., No. 26, gives the original, along with the revised text of the Roman Breviary of 1632, where it begins Jam sel recedit igneus. In his notes Daniel gives the additional st. tr. in J. D. Chambers's Lauda Syon, 1857 (see below); (iii. "Jam noctis tempus adventi"; iv. "Tu Christe solve vincula"; v. "Oramus ut exaudias"), which are found only in the Mozarabic Breviary, where the hymn is given for Vespers on the 2nd S. after the Epiphany, and at other seasons. In his further notes at iv. pp. 47-48, Daniel refers to the original text as in a 10th cent. Rheims MS.; gives the statements of Hincmar; and also cites a passage from the 21st Epistle of St. Ambrose, which he thinks clearly refers to this hymn, and so decisively settles its authorship. [W. A. S.]

Hymn. i. p. 372, cites this hymn as in an 8th cent. ms. at Darmstadt, where it is assigned to daily Vespers. Dreves gives it in his Hymnarius Moissiacensis, 1888, from a 10th cent. ms. It is also in three mss. of the 11th cent. in the British Museum (Vesp. D. xii. f. 2 b; Harl. 2961 f. 218; Add. 30848 [a Mozarabic Breviary] f. 66b). In the Lat. Hys. of the Anglo-Saxon Ch. (Surtees Society), 1851, p. 1, it is printed from an 11th cent. ms. at Durham (B. iii. 32, f. 2). Also in an 11th cent. ms. at Corpus Christi, Cambridge (391, page 227); in the St. Gall ms., No. 387, of the 11th cent.; in Migne's Patrol. xvi., col. 1407, and lxxxvi., cols. 220, 252, 699, 924; in Wackernagel, i. No. 60; in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1868, and others.

The original text has been frequently tr. into German, and through three of these versions has passed into English.

i. Der du bist drei in Einigkeit. This is a full and faithful version by M. Luther, written in 1543, and 1st pub. in Klug's G. B., Wittenberg, 1544. Thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 29; in Schircks's ed. of Luther's Geistl. Lieder, 1854, p. 42; and the Unc. L. S., 1851, No. 186. Tr. as:—

Thou Who art Three in Unity, True God. By R. Massie, in his Martin Luther's Spir. Songs, 1854, p. 25. Repeated in the Ohio Luth. Hyl., 1880, and by Dr. Bacon, 1884, p. 71

Other trs. are:—

(1) "Since Thou, the living God, art Three," by Miss Fry, 1845, p. 139. (2) "The true One God, in Persons Three," by J. Anderson, 1846, p. 23 (1847, p. 45). (3) "Thou Three in One, and One in Three," by Dr. J. Hunt, 1853, p. 53. (4) "Thou only God, the Three in One," by Dr. H. Mills, 1856, p. 223. (5) "Thou Who art One, and yet art Three," by Miss Worthington, 1863, p. 155. (6) "Thou, Lord, art Three in Unity," by S. Garratt, in his Hys. and Tra., 1867, p. 39. (7) "Thou, Who art Three in Unity, A," by Dr. G. Macdonald, in the Sunday Mag., 1867, p. 388, and his Exotics, 1876, p. 61.

ii. O selges Licht, Dreifaltigkeit. A full and good tr. by Bunsen for his Versuch, 1833, No. 41. Repeated in the Kirchen G. B. of the Eisenach Conference, 1854, No. 74. Tr. as "O Trinity of blessed Light, Thou Unity," by H. J. Buckoll, 1842, p. 62.

iii. O werthes Licht der Christenheit. A full and good tr. by M. A. von Löwenstern. It seems to have appeared in the 2nd ed., circa 1646, of the Breslau Kirchen- und Haus-Music. Mützell, 1858, No. 288, quotes it (as No. 26 of Löwenstern's Apelles-Lieder) from the 5th ed., circa 1668. Included in Burg's G. B., Breslau, 1746, No. 64. Tr. as, "O Holy fount of light on high," in full as No. 178 in Dr. Pagenstecher's Coll., 1864, signed, "F. C. C." [J. M.]

Both forms of the Latin text have been tr. into English. The text of each is:—

Durham text.	Brev. Rom.
O Lux beata Trinitas, Et principalis unitas; Jam sol recedit igneus. Infunde lumen cordibus.	Jam sol recedit igneus: Tu lux perennis unitas, Nostra, beata Trinitas, Infunde lumen cordibus.
Te mane laudent carmina, Te deprecemur vespere, Te nostra supplicis gloria Per cuncta laudet sacula.	Te mane laudum carmine, Te deprecamur vespere, Dignetur, ut te supplices Laudemus inter coelites.
Deo Patri sit gloria, etc.	Patri, simulque Filio, etc.

These forms have been translated thus:—

i. O Lux beata Trinitas.

1. Bright and blessed Three in One. By W. L. Alexander, in his Augustine H. Bk., 1st ed., 1849, No. 195, and again in later editions.

2. O Trinity of blessed light. By J. M. Neale, in the Hymnal N., 1852, No. 1. It is given in several collections, including H. A. & M., 1861 and 1875, with slight alterations; the Hymnary, 1872, with other changes; and other hymn-books.

3. O Light thrice blessed, Holy Trine. By W. J. Blew, in his Church H. & Tune Bk., 1852-55, and again in Rice's Sel. from the same, 1870.

4. O Light! Thou [O] Trinity most blest. By J. D. Chambers. This is a tr. of the 5th stanza and doxology form of the hymn as given in the Mozarabic Breviary (see above). It was pub. in Chambers's Psalter, 1852, p. 325; and his Lauda Syon, 1857, p. 56, and is No. 410 in the People's H., 1867.

Other trs. are:—

1. O blessed lighte, O Trinitie, O Unity that is the chief. Primer, 1604.

2. O blessed light, O Trinity, O Unity most principal. Primer, 1615.

3. Thou ever-blessed Trine light. Hymnarium Anglicanum, 1844.

4. O Trinity, blest Light. J. Williams, in his Thoughts in Past Years, 1848.

5. When sinks in night that radiant sun. H. M. Macgill, 1876.

ii. Jam sol recedit igneus. This revised version of the hymn appeared in the Roman Brev. in 1632. It is the hymn on Saturdays at Vespers from the Octave of the Epiphany to Lent; also at first and second Vespers of Trinity Sunday; and also on Saturdays at Vespers from the Octave of Corpus Christi until Advent. It is tr. as:—

1. Now sinks in night the flaming sun. By Bp. R. Mant. This paraphrase rather than translation appeared in his Ancient Hys. from the Rom. Brev., &c., 1837, p. 16, in 3 st. of 8 l. (ed. 1871, p. 31). The first stanza may be said to be the tr. of the Latin and the rest an expansion of the same line of thought, thus making the paraphrase. It is in several modern collections, including Kennedy, 1863, Thring's Coll., 1882, &c., and altered as "Father of lights, Who dwell'st in light," in the 1874 Supplement to the New Cong., and as "The flaming sun has sunk in night," in the Hymnary, 1872.

2. Now doth the fiery sun decline. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, pp. 36 and 108, and again in his Hys. and Poems, 1873, pp. 21 and 61. It is in several modern collections.

Other trs. are:—

1. Now doth the fiery sun retire. Primer, 1605.

2. The fiery sun now rolls away. And hastens. Primer, 1706.

3. The fiery sun now rolls away. Blest Three and One, &c. Evening Office, 1710.

4. Already the bright sun departs. A. J. B. Hope, 1844.

5. Behold the fiery sun recede. F. C. Husenbeth, 1840.

6. The fiery sun is gone. W. J. Copeland, 1848.

7. The fiery sun now fades from sight. W. J. Copeland, 2nd tr., 1848.

8. Behold the radiant sun departs. R. Campbell, 1859.

9. The red sun is gone. Card. Newman, 1863.

10. While fades the glowing sun away. T. J. Potter.

11. Blest Light, eternal Trinity. J. D. Ayward.

This tr. is followed by 5 additional stanzas.

12. The fiery sun recedes from sight. J. Wallace, 1874.

Of these trs. not in C. U. Nos. 1, 2, 3, 5, 8, 10, and 11, are in O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus (and its Appendix), 1884. [J. J.]

O Majestät! wir fallen nieder. G. Tersteegen. [Public Worship.] This hymn, founded on Rev. iv., first appeared in the 4th ed., 1745, of his Geistliches Blumenbüchlein, Bk. iii., No. 74, in 7 st. of 12 l., entitled

"Hallelujah"; repeated in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863. The form tr. into English is that given in Dr. H. A. Daniel's Evang. Kirchen G. B., 1842, No. 251, beginning, "Herr, unser Gott, mit Ehrfurcht dienen," being st. ii.-iv., vii., greatly altered. Tr. as:—

1. Lord our God, in reverence lowly. A good tr. of Daniel's text by Mrs. Findlater in H. L. L., 3rd Ser., 1858, p. 32 (1864, p. 154), and repeated in the Meth. N. Conn. Hymns, 1863. It is also found in the following forms:—

(1) Lord God of might, in reverence lowly. In Kennedy, 1863, &c.

(2) O Lord our God, in reverence lowly. In the 1869 Appendix to the S. P. C. K. Ps. & Hys., repeated in their Church Hys., 1871; the Hymnary, 1872, &c.

(3) Thee, God Almighty, Lord thrice holy. In the 1874 Suppl. to the New Cong. H. Bk.; the 1874 Appendix to the Leeds H. Bk., &c.

2. Lord our God, to whom is given. A free tr. of Daniel's st. i., iii., iv., by Dr. W. F. Stevenson, 1871, given in his Hys. for Ch. & Home, 1873, the refrain of st. i., ii. being taken from Mrs. Findlater as above. [J. M.]

O Master, at Thy feet. Frances R. Havergal. [Adoration.] We have been furnished with the following interesting account of this hymn from Miss Havergal's private papers:—

"I felt that I had not written anything specially in praise to Christ. A longing to do so possessed me. I wanted to show forth His praise to Him, not to others, even if no mortal ever saw it. He would see every line, would have known the unwritten longing to praise Him even if words failed utterly. It describes, as most of my poems do, rather reminiscence than present feeling. I cannot transcribe at the moment of strong feeling. I recall it afterwards and write it down. 'O Master!' It is perhaps my favourite title because it implies rule and submission; and this is what love craves. Men may feel differently, but a true woman's submission is inseparable from deep love. I wrote it ['O Master!'] in the cold and twilight in the little back room, uncarpeted, at Shreshill Parsonage, Dec. 31, 1866. I began my book [Ministry of Song] with the expression of its devotion to God's glory. I wished to close it with a distinctive ascription of praise to Jesus, and, therefore, without any hesitation, at once decided upon placing 'Adoration' [this hymn] where it stands."

The hymn was given in the Sunday Magazine, 1867; in her Ministry of Song, 1869; and in Life Mosaic, 1879, in 5 st. of 4 l. [J. J.]

O may the power which melts the rock. J. Newton. [National Fast.] This is one of his Fast-day hymns pub. in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. ii., No. 65, in 8 st. of 4 l. and headed, "Confession and Prayer, Dec. 13, 1776." In Cotterill's Sel., 1810, it was given in 6 st., and in this form it has come down to modern hymn-books. [J. J.]

O mean may seem this house of clay. T. H. Gill. [Divinity of, and Oneness with, Christ.] Written in 1850; 1st pub. in G. Dawson's Ps. & Hys., 1853; and again, after slight revision, in the author's Golden Chain, &c., 1869, No. 36, in 11 st. of 4 l. Concerning it the author says that it "Has had by far the widest acceptance of all my hymns. It was put into my mouth as the truth of the Incarnation was revealed to me [see Gill, T. H.]. Its production was a great spiritual event in my own life, as well as an exquisite and unspeakable delight. It wrought powerfully upon my outward life, and introduced me to persons my connection with whom led to a change of residence, and furthered the publication of my work, 'The Papal Drama.'" [F. M.]

This hymn as a whole is too long for C. U., but in an abbreviated form it is in numerous hymn-books in G. Britain and America. No. 58 in Horner's Cong. Hymns, 1884, is an example of a choice selection of stanzas. [J. J.]

O mighty Mother! why that light? F. W. Faber. [Whitsuntide.] Pub. in his Jesus and Mary, &c., 1849, in 21 st. of 4 l. on "The Descent of the Holy Ghost." Also in his Hymns, 1862. The hymn, "He comes, He comes, the Holy One," in the Sarum Hyl., 1868, is compiled from the 1849 text. [J. J.]

O most compassionate High Priest. C. Wesley. [For Pardon.] "First published in 1743, as 'A Prayer for those who are Convinced of Sin,' at the end of The Nature, Design, and General Rules of the United Societies, &c.; and to be found there in most if not all the editions of that tract published during Wesley's life" (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. v. p. 230). It was also included in Hymns and Sacred Poems, 1749, vol. ii., No. 63, in 18 st. of 4 l., as No. 3 of "Hymns of Intercession." In 1780, st. vi.-xiv. were given as: "O let the prisoners' mournful cries," in the Wes. H. Bk., No. 450, and from thence passed into other collections. The revised ed. of the Wes. H. Bk., 1875, omits the last two stanzas of the 1780 text. [J. J.]

O most delightful hour by man. W. Cowper. [Death and Burial.] These are the "Stanzas Subjoined to a Bill of Mortality for the Parish of All Saints, in the Town of Northampton, Anno Domini 1789," and subsequently pub. with Cowper's translations from the French of Madame Guion, as Poems Translated from the French of Madame de la Mothe Guion, &c., Newport-Pagnol, 1801, p. 122. There are 9 st. of 4 l. in all. Of these st. i.-iv. with alterations, were given in Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1840 and 1873, and also in a few American collections. [J. J.]

O my distrustful heart. W. Hammond. [Final Perseverance.] This hymn, on 2 Tim. ii. 13, "If we believe not, yet He abideth faithful," appeared in his Ps. & Hys., &c., 1745, p. 165, in 4 st. of 6 l. In 1776, A. M. Toplady pub. it in a rewritten form, but beginning with the same first line, in his Ps. & Hys., &c., No. 252. This arrangement was repeated in various collections to Snepp's Songs of G. & G., 1872, No. 727, with the change in Snepp of st. iv. l. 1. from "The bowels of Thy grace," to "Thy rich and sovereign grace." It is also in other collections, and should be given as "W. Hammond, 1745; A. M. Toplady, 1776." [J. J.]

O nata lux de lumine. [The Transfiguration.] The oldest text known of this hymn is in G. M. Dreves's Hymnarius Moissiacensis, 1888, from a 10th cent. ms. and in two Rheinau mss. now in the University Library at Zürich, No. 91 of the 11th cent.; No. 82 of the 11th or 12th cent. It is also in an early 14th cent. ms. in the Bodleian (Ashmole 1523 f. 247); in the Sarum Breviary, Venice, 1495; the Aberdeen Breviary of 1509, &c. The printed text is also in Carl. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiastici, 1838 and 1865; Daniel, iv. p. 161, &c. [J. M.]

Translations in C. U.:—

1. O Light of Light, Lord Jesu. By W. J.

Blew, in his Church Hy. and Tune Bk., 1852-55, and again in Rice's Sel. from the same, 1870.

2. O Light, Which from the Light hast birth. By J. D. Chambers, in his Lauds Syon, 1857, p. 241. This is repeated in several modern collections, including the People's H., 1867; the Hymner, 1882, &c.

In the Hymnal Noted, 1854, the tr. "A type of those bright rays on high," is given in error under "O Nata Lux de Lumine," instead of "Coelestis formam Glorise" (p. 240, ii.), of which it is a tr. [J. J.]

Ὁ νέος Οὐρανός. [Conception of the B. V. M.] Three Cathismata (i.e. hymns sung seated from the Daydawn or Lauds for the Conception of Anna, Dec. 9, in the Menæa. The tr. by Dr. R. F. Littledale, "Within the womb of Anna," was first pub. in the Church Times, Dec. 3, 1864, signed "R. F. L." and again in the People's H., 1867, and signed "L." It is an expansion of the original, the second stanza being introduced for the sake of clearness. The doxology is also by Dr. Littledale. [J. J.]

Ὁ παῖδας ἐκ Καμίνου. Ἀναστάσεως ἡμέρα.]

Ὁ πάντων ἐπέκεινα. St. Gregory of Nazianzus. [Praise.] This "Hymn to God" is found in various editions of St. Gregory's Opera; in Daniel, iii. 12, and in Anth. Græca Carm. Christ., 1871, p. 24. It is an exceedingly fine hymn, and has been well rendered into English by Mr. Chatfield in his Songs and Hymns, &c., 1876, in 12 st. of 4 l., pp. 98-101, as, "O Thou, the One Supreme o'er all." [Greek Hymnody, § iv.] [J. J.]

O Paradise eternal. T. Davis. [Heaven.] Appeared in his Hys. Old and New, 1864, No. 192, in 6 st. of 4 l., and again in his Annus Sanctus, 1877. It has passed, in its full, or in an abbreviated form, into a large number of hymn-books in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

O Paradise, O Paradise. F. W. Faber. [Heaven.] 1st pub. in his Hymns, 1862, in 7 st. of 8 l., and entitled "Paradise." In 1868 it was included in the Appendix to H. A. & M., with the omission of st. iii. and vii., and the addition of the stanza "Lord Jesus, King of Paradise," by the compilers. For some time after the hymn was included in H. A. & M. it was very popular, Dr. Dykes's tune therein being the chief cause of its success. Latterly, however, its unreality, and, in its original form, its longing for sudden death, has caused it to be omitted from several of the best collections. The rewritten version, in three stanzas, in Morrell & How's enlarged edition of their Ps. & Hys., 1864-67, No. 165, is a failure. [J. J.]

O Pater sancte, mitis atque pie. [Trinity Sunday.] This hymn is found in two mss. of the 11th cent. in the British Museum (Vesp. D. xii. f. 118b; Jul. A. vi. f. 70b); and in the Lat. Hys. of the Anglo-Saxon Ch., 1851, it is printed from an 11th cent. ms. at Durham (B. iii. 32, f. 43). It is included in the Sarum, York, Aberdeen, old Roman (Venice, 1478), and other Breviaries. The printed text is also in Mone, No. 12; Daniel, iv. p. 270; G. M. Dreves's Hymnarius Moissiacensis, 1888, from a 10th cent. ms., and Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. [J. M.]

Translations in C. U. :—

1. O Holy Father, merciful and loving. By W. J. Blew, in his Church Hy. and Tune Bk., 1852-55; and again, with slight alterations, in the 1860 Appendix to the Hymnal A., No. 140.

2. O gracious Father, merciful and holy. By R. F. Littledale, in the People's H., 1867, under the signature of "A. L. P."

3. Holiest Father, pitiful and loving [tender]. In the Antiphoner and Grail, 1880, and, altered, in the Hymner, 1882.

Translations not in C. U. :—

1. O Holy Father, gracious and benign. J. D. Chambers, 1852 and 1867.

2. Father most Holy, merciful and loving. J. W. Hewitt, 1859. [J. J.]

O perfect life of love. Sir H. W. Baker. [Passiontide.] Written for the revised edition of H. A. & M., and included therein in 1875, as one of the "Hymns of the Passion," in 7 st. of 4 l. It is a hymn of much merit. [J. J.]

Ὁ πλάστης μου κύριος. St. Theophanes. [Quinquagesima.] Stichera from the Triodion at the Vespers of Tyrophagus, the Sunday before the commencement of the Great Fast, in which even cheese (allowed for the last time on this Sunday) is prohibited. [See Δεῦτε ἀπαντες, p. 202, ii.] The original is in 5 st. of unequal length, as in Dr. Neale's tr. Adam's expulsion from Paradise is the subject of Tyrophagus, and the first three stanzas are spoken in the person of Adam. Dr. Neale's tr. : "The Lord my Maker, forming me of clay," is of st. i., ii., iii. and v., and appeared in his Hys. of the Eastern Church, 1862. He introduces it with the following note :—

"The reader can hardly fail to be struck with the beautiful idea in the third stanza, where the foliage of Paradise is asked to make intercession for Adam's recall. The last stanza, Milton, as an universal scholar, doubtless had in his eye, in Eve's lamentation." [J. J.]

O praise our God to-day. Sir H. W. Baker. [Friendly Societies.] Written in 1861, and pub. in H. A. & M. the same year, in 5 st. of 4 l. It has passed into several hymn-books in G. Britain and America, and is admirably suited for the purpose of Friendly Societies, &c., for which it was written. [J. J.]

O praise ye the Lord, Praise Him in the height. Sir H. W. Baker. [Ps. cl.] Written for and 1st pub. in H. A. & M., 1875. One of the author's most spirited productions. It is in 4 st. of 8 l. [J. J.]

O qualis quantaque laetitia. Thomas à Kempis. [Eternal Life.] In his Opera, Nürnberg, 1494, f. 130, entitled "Hymn on the joys of Heaven and the nine angelic choirs." The full text is in Wackernagel, i., No. 374. Trench, ed. 1864, p. 321, gives a beautiful fragment beginning with l. 9, "Astant (Ad-stant) angelorum chori." This portion has been tr. as :—

In the far celestial land. By Harriet M. Chester, made for and pub. in the Hymnary, 1872, under the signature of "H. M. C." [J. M.]

O quam glorifica luce coruscas. [B. V. M.] This hymn is found in four mss. of the 11th cent. in the British Museum (Vesp. D. xii. f. 87; Jul. A. vi. f. 55 b; Harl. 2961 f. 241; Add. 30848 f. 179 b); in a ms. of the 11th cent. at Corpus Christi College, Cambridge (391, p. 263); and in the Lat. Hys. of the Anglo-Saxon Ch., 1851, it is printed from a ms. of the 11th cent. at Durham (B. iii. 32 f. 32 b). Among the St. Gall mss. it is found in No. 92 of the 9th cent.; and in Nos. 387 and 413 of the 11th cent. It was included in the Sarum, York, and various German Breviaries, as a hymn for the Assumption of the B. V. M. The printed text is also in Daniel, iv. p. 188; and G. M. Dreves's Hymnarius Moissiacensis, 1888, from a 10th cent. ms. Tr. as:—

1. O with what glorious lustre resplendent. By J. D. Chambers, in his Lauda Syon, 1866, p. 87.
2. O what light and glory. By T. I. Ball, in the 1863 ed. of the Appendix to the H. Noted.
3. O with what glorious lustre thou shinest. In the Antiphoner & Grail, 1880, and the Hymner, 1882. [J. M.]

O quam juvat fratres, Deus. C. Coffin. [Unity.] Appeared in the Paris Breviary, 1736, as the hymn for Tuesdays at Vespers; and again in Coffin's Hymni Sacri, 1736, p. 17. It is also in J. Chandler's Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837, and Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as:—

1. O Lord, how joyful 'tis to see. J. Chandler, in his Hys. of the Prim. Church, 1837, p. 19. It is given, generally without alteration, in a large number of hymn-books, including H. A. & M., 1875; the Hymnary, 1872; Thring's Coll., 1882, &c. It ranks with the most popular of Chandler's translations.
2. How sweet the days, O Lord, are sped. Given anonymously in the Wellington College H. Bk., 1860, and later editions.

Other trs. are:—

1. How sweet it is to see, Brethren in Unity. J. Williams. 1839.
2. Father and God, how sweet to see. W. J. Blew. 1852-5.
3. O God, what joys around are shed. J. D. Chambers. 1857.
4. O God, our loving God, by whom Thy Church. D. T. Morgan. 1880. [J. J.]

O quanta qualia sunt illa Sabbata. Peter Abelard. [Sunday. Eternal Life.] Cousin, in his ed. of Abelard's Opera, Paris, 1849, vol. i. p. 306, gives this from a ms. in the Royal Library at Brussels. This ms. is of the 12th cent., and is probably the collection of hymns which Abelard prepared for the use of the abbey of the Paraclete of which Heloise was abbess. Mone, No. 282, gives the text from the St. Gall ms., No. 528, of the 14th cent.; and in the 1875 catalogue of the St. Gall mss. it is also marked as being contained in No. 387 of the 11th cent. It is also in Migne's Patrologiae Cursus, vol. 178, col. 1786. [J. M.]

1. O what their joy and their glory must be. By J. M. Neale, in the Hymnal N., 1854. It is in several hymn-books, including the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871; Thring's Coll., 1882; and others, the text most in use being Neale's tr. slightly altered by the compilers of H. A. & M., 1861.
2. O how fair and how great. By J. D. Chambers, in his Lauda Syon, 1857, p. 58. In the Scottish Epis. Coll. of Hys., 1 "O how surpassing fair."

3. O what shall be, O what W. Duffield. Mr. Duffield's Hymns, &c., N. Y., 1886, p. 1; this tr. in the Astor Library says that he used the text as logiae. This tr. was given in N. Y., 1884, in two parts. glorious King, O happy state.

Other trs. are:—

1. O what must be their joy. J. 1880.
2. O what must be the sabbath

O qui perpetuus nos Jean Baptiste de Santeuil. [St. Stephen.] Given in the Cluniac Breviary, 1681, p. xlii.; in the author's Hys. 1689, p. 207 (ed. 1698, p. 2 Breviary, 1736, as the hymn of Doctors at first and sec also in several modern *Card. in his Lyra Catholicæ, 1849, p. 285, and his Hym. & Poem., 1873, p. 189. It is in use in some Roman Catholic hymn-books.

1. O Prisoner of martyr's: thou whose name. By J. D. Chambers, in his Lauds, 1857, p. 85. [J. J.]

O quickly come, dread Judge of all. L. Tottel. [Advent.] 1st pub. in his Hym. for Churchmen, 1854, in 4 st. of 4 l. It was included in the 1868 Appendix to H. A. & M. in the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871, and several other collections. In a few American hymn-books it begins—“Come quickly come, dread Judge of all.” In the Guardian of Dec. 24, 1884, the H. A. & M. text is rendered into Latin by “A. C.” as:—“Ipse veni, genitor Judex sanctissime nostri.” [J. J.]

O rubentes oculi rosas. [Virginia.] This hymn on St. Ursula and the 11,000 virgins, is given by Moss, No. 1187, from a 15th cent. ms. at Basel. Daniel, iv. p. 281, repeats the text from Moss. The original was imitated by G. Moultre, and printed in the Church Times, June 23, 1864; then in his Hym. and Lyrics, 1867; and the People's H. the same year as “Heavenly garland, rose red.” [J. J.]

O sacrum, sacrum convivium. [Holy Communion.] In the York Breviary of 1493 this is given as an antiphon to the Gospel on the Festival of Corpus Christi, as follows:—“O sacrum convivium in quo Christus sumitur, recolitur memoria passionis ejus, mens impletur gratia, et futuro gloriosus nobis pignus datur, Alleluia.” In this form it is found in other ancient Breviaries, and in a Sacrum Processional of circa 1390, in the Brit. Mus. (Harl. 2942 f. 80 b). A hymn in metrical form, with this first line, we have been unable to find. The fr. in the Irvingite Hym. for the Use of the Churches, 1871, is by E. W. Eldrid, and was written in 1869. It begins: “O holy, holy, Feast of life Divine.” There is also a prose fr. in the 1863 ed. of the Appendix to the H. Notes, No. 228. [J. M.]

O sator rerum, reparator aevi. [Transfiguration.] The festival of the Transfiguration of our Lord was authorised by Pope Callistus III. in 1457 (and adopted by the English Convocation in 1483), and there are few hymns on this subject older than the 15th cent. This hymn is in two Rheims mss. in the University Library, Zürich, No. 91 of the 11th cent., and No. 82 of the 11th or 12th cent. It is also in a 14th cent. ms. in the Bodleian (Ashmole 1523 f. 247 b); in the Sacrum Breviary, Venice, 1495 (Pars Estiv. pt. ii. f. 174 b), as the hymn at Matins for the Transfiguration; in the Aberdeen Breviary; and in some of the eds. of the York Breviary after 1493. It is given in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiæ, 1838 and 1863; and G. M. Dreyer's Hymn. Abessin., 1868, from a 10th cent. ms. Daniel, l. No. 280, gives only st. i. Tr. as:—

Author of all things, Christ, the world's Redeemer. In the Antiphoner and Grad., 1880, and the Hymner, 1882.

Other vers. are:—

1. The World's Restorer, Christ, of kings the King. W. J. Shaw, 1852-55.

2. Prisoner of world's Redeemer of our days. J. D. Chambers, 1887. [J. M.]

O Saviour, is Thy promise fled? P. R. Heber. [Advent.] This is the third of the four hymns contributed by Heber to the October number of the Christian Observer, 1811. It was given for the 3rd Sun. in Advent, and consisted of 5 st. of 4 l. In Heber's posthumous Hymns, &c., 1827, p. 10, it is slightly altered and expanded to 6 st. of 4 l., the new stanza being “Yet, mid the wild and wintry gale.” It is in C. E. in its full form as in Thring's Coll., 1882, and in an abbreviated form as in Common Prayer, 1879. There are also two cento, both beginning “Come, Jesus, come, return again,” the first, in the American Unitarian Hym. for the Church of Christ, Boston, 1853, and others, consisting of st. ii.-iv. of the 1827 text; and the second in the Islington Ps. & Hym., 1862, No. 270, where st. ii., v., vi. are given. The latter arrangement is also repeated in other collections. The original hymn is based upon the Gospel for the 3rd S. in Advent, St. Matt. xi. 2-10. [J. J.]

O Saviour of the faithful dead. P. R. Heber. [On Recovery from Sickness.] 1st pub. in the Christian Observer, Jan. 1816, in 4 st. of 8 l., and headed, “View of Death.” In Heber's posthumous Hymns, &c., 1827, p. 152, it is slightly altered, divided into 8 st. of 4 l., and the heading is changed to “On Recovery from Sickness.” It is usually given in an abridged form of 2 st. of 8 l., or 4 st. of 4 l., but its use is not extensive. [J. J.]

O Saviour, Whom this holy morn. P. R. Heber. [Christmas.] Pub. in the Christian Observer, Nov., 1811 (p. 697), in 5 st. of 4 l. and headed, “Christmas Day.” The opening stanza reads:—

“Oh Saviour! Whom this holy morn
Gave to our world below;
To wandering and to labour born,
To weakness and to woe!”

In Heber's posthumous Hymns, &c., 1827, p. 13, it was given with alterations, the first stanza reading:—

“Oh Saviour Whom this holy morn
Gave to our world below;
To mortal want and labour born,
And more than mortal woe!”

Each stanza, except st. iii., is altered in like manner, the result being two distinct texts. Of these texts that of 1827 is almost absolutely followed by hymn-book compilers. Very few, however, give it in its complete form. The H. Comp. is an exception in favour of the full 1827 text, with the change of st. v. l. i., “Through fickle fortune's various scene,” to “Through this world's fickle various scene.” Other forms of the hymn are:—

1. O Saviour. Whom this joyful morn. This text is very much altered throughout. The opening stanza is the 1811 text with alterations; the rest are altered from the text of 1827. In this form it was given in Hickson's Christian Festival, 1823, No. 261; Ellist's Ps. & Hym., 1825; and again in recent hymn-books.

2. O God, Whose Holy Child this morn. This altered form of the 1827 text appeared in Martineau's Hymns, 1846.

3. Incarnate Word! by every grief. This, beginning with st. ii. of the 1827 text, is No. 318 in the American Bay. Psalter, N. Y., 1871.

4. Jesus, Thou man of sorrows born. This is found in several modern collections, including Common Prayer, 1879, and others, and is the 1811 text slightly altered.

When these various forms of the text are taken into account it is found that the use of this hymn is extensive. It is, however, far from being one of Heber's best productions.

[J. J.]

O Saviour, Whose mercy severs in its kindness. Sir R. Grant. [Benefits of Affliction] This poem is found in Sacred Poetry, 2nd Series, Edinburgh, W. Ouphant & Son, circa 1824, No. 149, in 8 st. of 4 l., headed "Benefit of Affliction," and signed "Sir Robert Grant." In Grant's posthumous Sacred Poems, 1839, it was given unaltered as No. v., with the text "Blessed is the man whom thou chastenest. Psalm xlv. 12." It is given in full in H. W. Beecher's Plymouth Coll., 1855, and other American hymn-books. In the Boston Unitarian Hys. of the Spirit, 1864, No. 586, "I thought that the course of the pilgrim to heaven," is composed of st. v.-vii.

[J. J.]

O say not thou art left of God. Card. J. H. Newman. [Faith.] 1st pub. in the British Magazine for July, 1834, in 5 st. of 4 l., and again in the Lyra Apostolica, 1836, No. 27, with the heading "Tokens. 'The Lord stood with me and strengthened me,'" and signed "J." It is also in his Verses on Religious Subjects, 1853, and his Verses on Various Occasions, 1868. In Kennedy, 1863, the text is slightly altered, and a doxology is added.

[J. J.]

O see how Jesus trusts Himself. F. W. Faber. [True Love.] Pub. in the 1852 ed. of his Jesus and Mary, &c., No. 59, in 23 st. of 4 l., and headed "True Love." It is also in his Hymns, 1862. The cento usually found in C. U. was given in Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1866, No. 784, and is composed of st. i., iii., v. and vi. This is repeated in Laudes Domini, N. Y., 1884, and, with slight alterations, in Dale's English H. Bk., 1874. [J. J.]

O selig Haus, wo man dich aufgenommen. C. J. P. Spitta. [Private Use.] A beautiful description of a true Christian household, taken from the happy home life of the author. 1st pub. in his Psalter und Harfe, Pirna, 1833, p. 97, in 5 st. of 8 l., entitled "Salvation is come to this house" (St. Luke xix. 9). Included in the Württemberg G. B., 1842, No. 500; Hannover G. B., 1883, No. 527, and many others. Tr. as:—

1. Oh happy house! where Thou art loved the best. A good but free tr. by Mrs. Findlater in H. L. L., 3rd Ser., 1858, p. 16 (1884, p. 142). In Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869-70. St. i.-iv. were also repeated in the 1869 Appendix to the S. P. C. K. Ps. & Hys.

2. O happy house, O home supremely blest. A good tr. by R. Massie in his Lyra Domestica, 1860, p. 81, repeated in Bp. Ryle's Coll., 1860, No. 216, and in Arthur Wolfe's Hymns, 1860.

Other trs. are, (1) "O blessed house, whose favoured inmates know," by S. A. Storr, in her Thoughts and Sketches, 1857, p. 68. (2) "O happy house, where ev'ry breast," by Dr. G. Walker, 1860, p. 67. (3) "O blessed house, where Thou, dear Lord," by Dr. R. Maguire, 1883, p. 103.

[J. M.]

O show me not my Saviour dying. J. Conder. [Easter.] 1st pub. in the Cong. H. Bk., 1836, No. 160, in 4 st. of 8 l.; again in Conder's Choir and Oratory, 1837, p. 65; and again in his posthumous Hys. of Praise,

Prayer, &c., 1856, p. 128, for "The Lord's Supper" it is, strictly speaking, and based on the words "He risen. Come, see the play." In an abridged form with alterations, it is given Church Hymns, 1871, as "Jesus dying."

O sight for angels W. Hoar. [Baptism of J.] S. P. C. K. Church Hymns given as one of the hymns. In his Notes to the folio 1881, Mr. Ellerton exp. of the hymn as follows:—

"The Baptism of our Lord event commemorated in the or Epiphany; and in the East key-note of the festival. A desirable to place amongst the hymns specially commemorating this Son of God."

In T. Darling's Hys. 1887, st. iv. is omitted.

O Son of Man, Thine cross. [St. Stephen's] given in the Rev. J. for Pub. Worship, 1841. In his Index of says that it was "rewritten the source of the original evidently Mrs. C. F. St. Stephen's Day, "lily ride," which appears Holy Seasons, 1846, p. stanzas chosen being Thrupp's form of the change when included Church Hymns, 1871. Thysself once crossed added their st. ii., "O cast," and altered. This text of 1871 1882.

O speak that J. Newton. [Peace] Bk. iii. in the Olney 4 l., and is headed full or in an abridged few modern hymns Epis. Hymns, 1849, c. m. to s. m., and again; but this met with favour.

O Spirit of truth gomery. [For M] "to be sung at Auxiliary Mission Riding of Yorks Chapel, Leeds, J printed on a fly again in the E following August successful revision in his Christian 6 st. of 4 l., and panying the Wor Original Hymns, given in an abridgement seldom altered. Missions it has 2 use in all English-speaking countries. The original text is given in the Churchman's Shilling Magazine, 1877. [J. J.]

O splendor aeterni Patris. C. Coffin. [Lent.] Given in the Paris Breviary, 1736, as the hymn on Sundays and Ferias at Compline throughout Lent till Wednesday in Holy Week. It is also in Coffin's Hymni Sacri, 1736, p. 95; J. Chandler's Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837, No. 15; and Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. It is based upon the "Christe qui lux es et dies" (p. 227, l.). Tr. as:—

1. Thou Brightness of the Father's face. By J. Chandler, in his Hys. of the Prim. Ch., 1837, p. 12, and thence into a few collections.

2. Brightness of the Father's glory. By Bp. J. R. Woodford, in his Hys. arranged for the Sundays, &c., 1852; the Parish H. Bk., 1863, and several other collections.

Other trs. are:—

1. O Christ, blest influence divine. J. Williams. 1839.

2. O Christ, the true and endless Day. R. Campbell. 1850.

3. O Brightness of Thy Father! Ray. J. D. Chambers. 1857. [J. J.]

O take away this evil heart. J. Montgomery. [Lent.] Written Dec. 9, 1829 [M. Mss.], and pub. in his Original Hymns, 1853, No. 281, in 5 st. of 4 l., with the heading "O Lord, I beseech Thee, deliver my Soul." It is found in a few modern hymn-books.

[J. J.]

O ter jucundas, o ter foecundas. [Christmas.] Included in the Mainz G. B. (R. C.), 1661, p. 103, in 5 st., entitled "Hymn on the holy birth-night of Christ." In later collections it begins, "O ter foecundas, o ter jucundas," and so in Daniel, ii. p. 339; Trench, ed. 1864, p. 116; and in H. M. Macgill's Songs of the Christian Creed and Life, 1876. "This pretty poem," as Trench terms it, does not seem to be earlier than the 17th cent. Tr. as:—

O blessed night! O rich delight. By H. M. Macgill, contributed to the Draft of the Scottish Presb. Hymnal, 1874, and pub. in that Hymnal in 1876. It is also in Dr. Macgill's Songs of the Christian Creed and Life, 1876, No. 34.

Other trs. are:—

1. Thrice joyful night. E. C. Leaton-Blenkinsopp. in Lyra Messianica, 1864.

2. O night of nights, supreme delights. J. C. Earle. in O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884. [J. M.]

O that I was as heretofore. C. Wesley. [A Minister's Prayer.] Pub. in Hys. and Sac. Poems, 1749, vol. i., No. 188, in 8 st. of 6 l. (P. Works, vol. v., 1868-72, p. 105). Two centos from this hymn are in C. U.:—

1. Give me the faith which can remove. Composed of st. iii.-vii. in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 421, and later collections.

2. I would the precious time redeem. Composed of st. v.-vii. in the Bapt. Hym., 1879. [J. J.]

O that Thou would'st the heavens rend. C. Wesley. [Prayer against the power of Evil.] Appeared in Hys. and Sac. Poems, 1749, p. 79, in 17 st. of 4 l. (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i. p. 269). It has been broken up into parts thus:—

1. O that Thou would'st the heavens rend. St. i.-ix. in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 134. In the American

Meth. Epis. Hymns, 1849, st. i.-iv. are given as No. 376.

2. Jesus, Redeemer, Saviour, Lord. St. x.-xvii. in the Wes. H. Bk., 1870, No. 135. In the American Meth. Epis. Hymns, 1849, No. 426 is composed of st. x.-xiii.

3. Almighty God, be Thou our Guide. St. iii., iv., vi., viii., ix., slightly altered, in Holy Song for all Seasons, Lond., 1869.

4. Is there a thing too hard for Thee. St. v.-ix. in the American Meth. Epis. Hymns, 1849, No. 377.

5. O Christ, Redeemer, Saviour, Lord. In Kennedy, 1863, is composed of st. x., xiii.-xvii. slightly altered.

In addition to these arrangements from this hymn another in 8 st. is sometimes met with in the Church of England collections. It opens with the first stanza of the original, but is distinguished from the arrangement in the Wes. H. Bk. as above, by the second stanza, which reads, "What tho' I cannot break my chain." It first appeared in A. M. Toplady's Ps. & Hys., 1776, No. 352, and is composed of st. i., iv., vi., vii., ix., xii., xv., xiii. in the order named. A second cento in Toplady, 1776, No. 108, and beginning, "Jesus, Redeemer, Saviour, Lord," is composed of six stanzas from this hymn, and three (iv.-vi.) from C. Wesley's "Jesus, if still Thou art to-day." Also in later collections. [J. J.]

O the bitter shame and sorrow. T. Monod. [Gratitude.] Mr. J. Thin's annotation of this hymn (the substance of which was derived apparently direct from the author) as given in his Notes of 1887 to the Scottish Presbyterian Hymnal, reads:—

"By Rev. Theodore Monod, Paris. Written by him in English during a series of 'Consecration' meetings held at Broadlands, England, in July 1874. Given by the author to Lord Mount-Temple at the close of the meetings, and printed by his Lordship on the back of a programme card for another series of similar meetings held at Oxford in October, 1874. . . . The author writes (1887) that he now wishes line 4 of ver. 4 to read, 'Grant me now my supplication.'"

This hymn is given in several collections, including the Hy. Comp., 1876, where, in the annotated edition, it is accompanied by the following note by Bp. E. H. Bickersteth:—

"This touching hymn by Monod, with the exception of reading 'petition' for 'desire' [st. iv. l. 4] for the measure's sake, is without alteration. In one of the last letters which the Editor received from the late Sir H. W. Baker, he expressed his great regret that it was not included in the revised edition of H. A. and M."

It is in the H. A. & M. Suppl. Hys., 1889.

[J. J.]

O the hour when this material. J. Conder. [The Invisible State.] Pub. in Collyer's Coll., 1812, No. 898, in 8 st. of 8 l., and headed "The Invisible State; or, 'absent from the Body present with the Lord.' Rev. vii. 15-17." It was repeated in the Cong. H. Bk., 1836, No. 620, and again in Conder's posthumous Hys. of Praise, Prayer, &c., 1856, p. 192. It is in C. U. in its full form, as in the Leeds H. Bk., 1853. A cento therefrom is also in use as "Jesus, blessed Mediator." This cento is popular in America. [J. J.]

O the vastness, O the terror. J. M. Neale. [All Souls.] This Sequence for All Souls appeared in his posthumous Sequences, Hys. and other Ecclesiastical Verses, 1866, p. 34, in 30 st. of 4 l. From it three centos have come into C. U.:—(1) "O the vastness, O the terror;" (2) "At length the Master calls;" and (3) "Now when prayer and toil have failed." [J. J.]

'Ο θεατὴς τῶν ἀρρήτων. [St. John Evangelist.] These are three prosomia (hymns of a similar structure) from the Vespers of St. John the Divine, May 8, in the Menæa, and preceding others also in the Auth. Græca Car. Christ., 1871, p. 65. The author and date are unknown. The tr. by Dr. Littledale, "O Saint permitted here to see," was written for, and first pub. in, the People's Hymnal, 1867, signed "L.," and appointed for the festival of St. John the Divine. The fourth stanza in the People's H. is not in the original. [J. J.]

O Thou, before Whose gracious throne. [During the dangerous illness of a Minister.] The earliest date to which we have traced this hymn is the 4th ed. of the Bristol Bap. Coll. of Ash & Evans, 1781, where it is given in 9 st. of 4 l., and is unsigned. In the 8th ed., 1801, it is signed "J— K—" It was included in full in Rippon's Bap. Sel., 1787, No. 413, but without signature. In Dobell's Sel., 1806, No. 592, it is signed "K.—Evans's Coll." In later editions it is "K." only. This uncertainty of authorship was increased by D. Sedgwick's guesses at the meaning of "K." In one of his books annotated in ms. we find him giving it to "John Kentish," in another to "George Keith," and so on, but in each case confessing that it was a guess only. In the Primitive Meth. Hyl., 1887, it is given to "F. Kirkham," a signature which is evidently wrong. We must subscribe it "J. K. in Ash & Evans, 1781." In modern collections the text is usually in an abbreviated form. [J. J.]

O Thou Eternal Victim slain. C. Wesley. [Passiontide.] Pub. in the Hys. on the Lord's Supper, 1745, No. 5, in 3 st. of 6 l. (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. iii. p. 219). It is found in its full and unaltered form in the Wes. H. Bk. and other collections, both old and new. In the Salisbury H. Bk., 1857; the Sarum, 1868; the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871, and others, it reads "O Thou before the world began." In addition this hymn has been entirely rewritten in two forms, the first by Dr. Kennedy in his Hymns. Christ., 1863, as, "O first in sorrow, first in pain"; and the second by T. Darling, in his Hymns, 1887, as, "Christ Jesus, ere the world began." Of these Dr. Kennedy's is the finer of the two. [J. J.]

O Thou from Whom all goodness flows. T. Haweis. [Christ our Hope in Affliction.] This hymn is given at the close of a tract the title of which is:—

The Reality and Power of the Religion of Jesus Christ Exemplified in the Dying Experience of Mr. William Browne of Bristol, who departed this Life October 16, 1791. Aged 70 . . . Bristol. Printed by John Rose, No. 21 Broadmead . . . 1791. Price Two Pence.

In the account given in this tract of Browne's last illness, it is said he made this remark to a gentleman who called upon him:—

"I have chosen my funeral text and hymn Remember me. He hath remembered me with that favour which He beareth to His own people. The Lord will perfect that which concerneth me. Thy mercy, O God, endureth for ever: fulfil the work of Thine own hands" (p. 8).

From this it is tolerably clear that the hymn appeared before 1791, in some book or magazine which we have failed to trace. On p. 12 of the tract the hymn is given as follows:—

"HYMN."

Composed by the Rev. Mr. H [Browne's] Funeral Sermon.

This form of the hymn was Montgomery in his Christian
No. 188. As Montgomery as-ship were copied by Bicker

Christian Psalmody, 1833, by Elliott in his Ps. & Hys., 1835, and others, and were for a long time accepted as correct. Cotterill's text of 1819 (sometimes with alterations) is that usually found in modern hymn-books in G. Britain and America. Its use is extensive. [J. J.]

O Thou God Who hearest prayer, Every hour, &c. J. Conder. [Lent; or, In Affliction.] Written whilst suffering from a severe accident through a fall from a horse, and 1st pub. in his Star in the East, &c., 1824, p. 72, in 5 st. of 6 l., and dated "Sep. 20, 1820." It was included in The Cong. H. Bk., 1836, No. 590; and in Conder's posthumous Hys. of Praise, Prayer, &c., 1856, p. 77. In modern hymnals it is given in its full and also in an abridged form. [J. J.]

O Thou that [Who] hangedst on the tree. C. Wesley. [For Condemned Malefactors.] Pub. in Hys. & Sac. Poems, 1749, vol. i., in 14 st. of 4 l., and headed, "For Condemned Malefactors." It is based on the Prayer-Book Version of Ps. lxxix. 12 (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. iv., p. 460). From this hymn the following are taken:—

1. O Thou that hangedst on the tree. Composed of st. i. iv.-vii. in the 1830 Supplement of the Wes. H. Bk.
2. O Thou Who hangedst on the tree. A cento in the Hymnary, 1872, st. i.-iv., very much altered from, and st. v.-viii. based upon Wesley.
3. Canst Thou reject our dying prayer? Composed of st. viii.-xi. in the 1830 Supplement to the Wes. H. Bk.
4. Thou that didst hang upon the tree. A cento in the American Sabbath H. Bk., 1858, and others. St. i., viii., x., xi., altered.
5. We have no outward righteousness. Composed of st. iv.-vii. in the American Meth. Episcopal Hymns, 1849, and their Hymnal, 1878.

Most of these centos are in extensive use in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

O Thou that hearest prayer. J. Burton, jun. [The Holy Spirit desired.] Appeared in the Evangelical Magazine, June 1824, p. 260, in 6 st. of 4 l., headed, "Prayer for the Holy Spirit," and signed "Essex—J. B." It was given anonymously in the Leeds H. Bk., 1853, and has since then passed in a more or less complete form into a large number of hymn-books, and more especially into those of America. [J. J.]

O Thou that hear'st when sinners cry. I. Watts. [Ps. li.] This is the third part of his l. m. version of Ps. li. It appeared in his Psalms of David, &c., 1719, p. 143, in 8 st. of 4 l., headed "The Backslider restored; or, Repentance and Faith in the Blood of Christ." In its full form its use is limited, but the cento therefrom beginning with st. v., "A broken heart, my God, my King," is found in a large number of hymn-books. A second cento beginning with st. iv. is in the American Methodist Episcopal Hymns 1849, as "Though I have grieved Thy Spirit, Lord." [J. J.]

O Thou, the contrite sinner's Friend. Charlotte Elliott. [Jesus, the Advocate.] Appeared in her brother's Ps. & Hys., 1st ed., 1835, in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed with the text, "We have an Advocate with the Father." In the Index it was given as by "Wesley" in error, and this ascription was continued therein for a considerable length of time. Lord Selborne cleared up the matter in a note to the hymn in his Book of Praise, 1862:—

"Miss Elliott's name is now (through the kindness of her brother, the Rev. H. V. Elliott, in obtaining for me her permission) first made public as the authoress of this hymn. Through some accidental error it is ascribed in the Rev. H. V. Elliott's collection to Wesley; and the same mistake has been transferred to Ryle's Spiritual Songs, Bouchier's Solace in Sickness and Sorrow, and probably other works."

The use of this hymn has extended to all English-speaking countries. Usually the original text is given as in the H. Comp., No. 139. In Thring's Coll., 1882, there is a change in st. v. l. 2 (suggested by H. H. Pierson, the musician) from "Darken'd with anguish, guilt, and fear," to "O'ercast with sorrow, pain, and fear," which was submitted to Miss Elliott and received her approval. [J. J.]

O Thou the hope of Israel's host. [Perpetual presences of God desired.] This cento appeared in T. Gibbons's Hys. adapted to Divine Worship, &c., 1784, in 4 st. of 4 l. It is made up of st. i. by Gibbons, and st. ii.-iv. from P. Doddridge's "Come, our indulgent Saviour, come" (p. 250, i.), st. ii., iv., v. much altered. It was repeated in the 27th ed. of Rippon's Bap. Sel., 1827, No. 404, Pt. ii., and thence into later collections including Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1866, &c. [J. J.]

O Thou Who at Thy creature's bar. C. Wesley. [Testifying for Christ.] Pub. in his Hys. and Sacred Poems, 1749, vol. i. No. 209, in 9 st. of 12 l., and headed, "For a Person called forth to bear his Testimony." Dr. Osborn says, in the Wesley P. Works, 1868-72, vol. v., p. 134, that "this grand hymn was more than once published as a supplement to an apologetic or controversial tract." This hymn has supplied the following centos:—

1. Thy power and saving truth to show. This was given in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, as No. 437. It begins with st. v., and is repeated in several collections.
2. Thou Jesus, Thou my breast inspire. This is No. 428 in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780. It begins with st. viii., and is repeated in several collections.
3. Servants of Christ, His truth who know. This cento, beginning with st. v. much altered, was given in the Mitre H. Bk., 1836, No. 218, and was compiled and altered by E. Osler. It is repeated in Kennedy, 1863, and others.
4. Lord of the Church, we humbly pray. This also appeared in the Mitre H. Bk., 1836, No. 219. It was repeated in E. Osler's Church and King, April 1, 1837. In the Index to the bound volume of his Church and King, Osler says he based it upon C. Wesley. The text used by Osler was No. 2 above, as in the Wes. H. Bk. Osler's version, slightly altered, is in Thring's Coll., 1882.

Dr. Jackson, in his official Memoirs of the Rev. Charles Wesley, M.A., in writing of the Hys. and Sac. Poems, in which this hymn is found, says, concerning the hymn:—

"The first volume concludes with a hymn of unusual length, and of almost unparalleled sublimity and force. Nothing could give so perfect a view of the spirit in which he had exercised his ministry, from the time at which he began his glorious career in Moorfields and Kennington-common, to this period of his life. In these noble verses he has strikingly depicted the mighty faith, the burning love to Christ, the yearning pity for the souls of men, the heavenly-mindedness, the animating hope of future glory, which characterized his public ministry, and which not only enabled him to deliver his Lord's message before scoffing multitudes, but also carried him through his wasting labours, and the riots of Bristol, of Cornwall, of Staffordshire, of Devon, and of Ireland, without a murmur. As a witness for Christ he freely sacrificed his reputation as a man of letters and of genius; and of life itself, comparatively speaking, he made no account." (Abridged ed. 1848, p. 329.) [J. J.]

O Thou Who by a star didst guide. J. M. Neale. [Epiphany.] Appeared in his 2

Hys. for Children, 1st series, 1842, No. 23, in 5 st. of 4 l., and headed "The Epiphany, or Twelfth Night." It is usually described as a translation, but in error. Its use is extensive, the original text as in the H. Comp., with the omission of the doxology, being generally followed. [J. J.]

O Thou Who camest from above. C. Wesley. [For Holiness, and for Earnestness in Work.] Pub. in his Short Hymns, &c., 1762, vol. i. p. 57, in 2 st. of 8 l. (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. ix. p. 58). It was included in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 318, and has become one of the most popular hymns in the Methodist denominations. To some hymn-book compilers the opening lines of st. ii.,

"There let it for Thy glory burn
With inextinguishable blaze," have presented difficulties which have caused its omission from many collections. Bp. E. H. Bickersteth, in his H. Comp., has done much towards removing this difficulty by rendering the lines:—

"There let it for Thy glory burn Unquenched, undimmed in darkest days."

This reading has been adopted by others. Bp. Bickersteth's note thereto explains the cause and meaning of the change:—

"The Editor believes that this admirable hymn would have been far more popular if it had not been for the very long word 'inextinguishable.' Words of five syllables must be admitted into hymns sparingly; but for a whole congregation to be poised on six, practically leads to a hymn being passed by. It is hoped that the line given in the text, which only paraphrases the same thought, will be allowed."

In Martineau's Hymns, 1840, and 1873, the opening line of this hymn is changed to "O Thou, Who deignest from above." [J. J.]

O Thou, Who didst with love untold. Emma Toke, nee Leslie. [St. Thomas.] Written in 1851, and contributed to the S. P. C. K. Hymns for Pub. Worship, 1852, No. 117, in 4 st. of 4 l., and appointed for St. Thomas's Day. The various forms which these 4 st. of 4 l. have taken are somewhat perplexing, and we can name only those which are of importance:—

1. The original text as above and in later editions of the same collection.

2. An altered version with a doxology by the editors in the Cooke & Denton Hymnal, 1863, No. 165. This is repeated in full in the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871 (with one slight variation), and, in an abridged form, in Chope's Hymnal, 1864; Windle's Coll., and others.

3. In the Hymnary, 1872, No. 342 is composed of st. i.-iii. of the Cooke & Denton text, and st. iv.-vi. by the editors.

Other altered texts, beginning with the same first line, are to be found. Their departures from the original may be ascertained by a collation with the original as in any edition of the S. P. C. K. Ps. & Hys. [J. J.]

O Thou Who hast Thy servants [children] taught. H. Alford. [Fruits of Holiness.] 1st pub. in his Ps. & Hys., 1844, No. 61, in 4 st. of 4 l., for the 8th S. after Trinity, and again in his Year of Praise, 1867, No. 47, for the 3rd S. after Epiphany. Another form to adapt it for children is, "O Thou Who hast Thy children taught." It is composed of sts. i., iv. slightly altered. [J. J.]

O Thou, Who when I did complain. S. Wesley, sen. [Ps. cxvi.] 1st pub., together with other Psalm-versions munificent Rightly Prepar 4 l. It was repeated in Coll. of Ps. & Hys. Charles in the Wesley Hys. & S the Wesley P. Works, 186 and in the *Wes. H. O Traurigkeit, o Herzel [Easter Eve.] 1st pub. in the his Himliche Lieder, Lünebur in 8 st. of 5 l., entitled "A son hymn on the mournful entom Saviour Jesus Christ, to be Friday," and with this note at p

"The first verse of this funeral hymn, along with its devotional melody, came accidentally into my hands. As I was greatly pleased with it, I added the other seven as they stand here, since I could not be a party to the use of the other verses."

The original hymn appeared in the Würzburg G. B. (Roman Catholic), 1628, in 7 st. The st. adopted by Rist is there:—

"O Trawrigkeit,
O Hertzenleyd,
Ist dass dann nicht zu klagen:
Gottes Vatters einige Kind,
Wird zum Grab getragen."

The hymn in this form (i.e. st. i. as in the 1628, and st. ii.-viii. by Rist) by its simplicity and force obtained speedy popularity in Germany: passed into Crüger's Praxis, 1656, No. 161, and most later books, and is No. 112 in the Unv. L. S., 1851. Its popularity was greatly aided by the plaintive melody, which appeared with the original hymn in 1628 (see Bäumker, i. p. 490). Tr. as:—

1. O darkest woe! This, omitting st. ii., vi., is by Miss Winkworth, given in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 54, with the original melody. Repeated in her Christian Singers, 1869, p. 191, and in the Ohio Lutheran Hyl., 1880, No. 78.

2. O grief, O woe. A good tr., omitting st. vi., vii., contributed by E. Thring to the Uppingham and Sherborne School H. Bk., 1874, No. 83.

Other trs. are, (1) "O boundless grief," by J. C. Jacobs, 1723, p. 19. (2) "O grief of heart," as No. 301 in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754. (3) "O deepest grief," based on the 1754, as No. 119 in the Moravian H. Bk., 1789 (1849, No. 150). [J. M.]

O treuer Heiland Jesu Christ. C. J. P. Spitta. [Supplication.] Founded on 1 Cor. v. 17, being also a prayer that the good work may be carried on in us to the end. First pub. in his Psalter und Harfe, 2nd Ser., Leipzig, 1843, p. 25, in 9 st. of 4 l., entitled "Thanksgiving and Supplication." Tr. as:—

We praise and bless Thee, gracious Lord. A free tr. in 10 st., by Miss Borthwick, in H. L. L., 2nd Ser., 1855, p. 45 (1884, p. 104). In full in Bp. Ryle's Coll., 1860, No. 279. St. i.-vi. are included in Kennedy, 1863, and in Dr. Thomas's Augustine H. Bk., 1866. St. i., iii., iv., vi., vii., x. are in Allon's Suppl. Hys., 1868, and his Cong. Psalmist Hyl., 1886; the Bapt. Hyl., 1879; Dale's Eng. H. Bk., 1874, &c. Other centos are in the Church S. S. H. Bk., 1868; W. F. Stevenson's Hys. for Ch. & Home, 1873; Harland's C. P. & Hyl., 1876; Boardman's Selection, Philad., 1861, &c. In the Hys. of the Spirit, Boston, U.S., 1864, No. 417, beginning "I praise and bless Thee, O my God," is Miss Borthwick's st. i., iv., and a st. added.

Other trs. are, (1) "Oh faithful Saviour, Jesus Christ," by Miss Manington, 1863, p. 57. (2) "We give Thee thanks, O Lord, who hast," by R. Massie, 1864, p. 25. [J. M.]

O vos fideles animae. [All Souls.] This is the hymn in the Little Office for the dead, in W. Nakatenus's Coeleste palmetum. It is at p. 363 in the ed. of 1701, which professes to be unaltered from the original ed. of 1668; and is repeated in all later eds., e.g. Mechlin, 1859, p. 264. Tr. as: "Ye souls of the faithful," by E. Caswall, in his Masque of Mary, &c., 1858, p. 371; and his Hys. & Poems, 1873, p. 233. [J. M.]

O wo des smerten. [In Sorrow] Wackernagel, ii. p. 326, gives this in 20 l. from a Basel ms. of the 14th cent. Also in F. H. van der Hagen's ed. of the Minnesinger, 1838, vol. iii. p. 468. Tr. as, "Alas for my sorrow," by Miss Winkworth, 1869, p. 45. [J. M.]

O weep not o'er thy children's tomb. Bp. R. Heber. [Holy Innocents' Day.] Pub. in his posthumous Hymns, &c., 1827, p. 20, in 4 st. of 4 l. It is in use in its original form, and as "Why weep'st thou by thy children's tomb?" It is one of the least popular of the author's hymns. [J. J.]

O Welt, sieh hier dein Leben. P. Gerhardt. [Passiontide.] 1st pub. in the 3rd ed., 1648, of Crüger's Praxis pietatis melica, No. 119, in 16 st. of 8 l., reprinted in Wackernagel's ed. of his Geistliche Lieder, No. 15; Bachmann's ed., No. 8, and included as No. 113 in the Unv. L. S., 1851. It is a thoughtful meditation on the Passion. St. iii.-v. were favourites with J. S. Bach and used by him in his St. Matthew and St. John Passion Music. Tr. as:—

1. Extended on a cursed tree. A free tr. in L. M. of st. i., iii., iv., vi., viii.-xi., xvi., by J. Wesley, in Hys. & Sacred Poems, 1740 (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. i. p. 232), and thence, as No. 23, in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, and since in other hymnals of the Methodist family. Included in full, as No. 402, in the 1857 ed. of Mercer's C. P. & H. Bk. (Ox. ed., 1864, No. 172, omitting the tr. of st. xi.). The trs. of st. ix.-xi., xvi., beginning "My Saviour, how shall I proclaim," were included in the American Sabbath H. Bk., 1858, and the Baptist Service of Song, Boston, U.S., 1871.

2. See, World, upon the bloody tree. A C. M. version by P. H. Molther of st. i.-x. as No. 118, in the Moravian H. Bk., 1742, and thence, as No. 442, in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754. In 1789, No. 96 (1886, No. 109) it is altered to "See, world, upon the shameful tree." In his Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 280, Montgomery omitted the tr. of st. ii., v., vi. In 1856, st. i., iii.-vi. were included in the Evan. Union H. Bk.

3. O, World! behold upon the tree. A good tr., omitting st. vii., by Miss Winkworth, in the 2nd Ser., 1858, of her Lyra Ger., p. 29, and thence in Schaff's Christ in Song, ed. 1869, p. 174. Her tr. of st. i., iii.-v., xii., xv., xvi. were included, slightly altered, in the Hymnary, 1872, and that of st. xi.-xiii., xv., xvi. altered and beginning "Lord, be Thy Cross before our sight," in Kennedy, 1863.

Other trs. are, (1) "Here, World, see thy Redeemer." In the Supplement to German Psalmody, ed. 1765, p. 16; in Select H. from German Psalmody, Tranquebar, 1754, p. 28. (2) "O World! attention lend it," by J. Gambold, as No. 442 in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754. In 1789, No. 89, altered to "O World, see thy Creator" (1886, No. 94). (3) "O World! see thy Life languish," by J. D. Burns, in the Family Treasury, 1859, pt. i. p. 54, and in his Memoir & Remains, 1869, p. 246. (4) "See, World! thy Life assailed," by J. Kelly, 1867, p. 54. (5) "Here, World, thy great Salvation see," by Dr. J. Guthrie, 1869, p. 87. (6) "O World! see here suspended," as No. 1009, in Beld's Praise Hk., 1872. (7) "Behold, O World, thy Life, thy Lord," by Dr. R. Maguire, 1883, p. 143. [J. M.]

O what a lonely path were ours. Sir E. Denny. [Jesus ever with us.] Given in the Appendix to Hymns for the Poor of the Flock, circa 1838; in the author's Selection, 1839, No. 260; in the Ps. and Hys., Lond., D. Walther, 1842, Pt. i., No. 72, and other and later Plymouth Brethren collections. In some hymn-books it is abridged to 5 st., and in others it is sometimes attributed to "T. Moore" in error. [J. J.]

O! what, if we are Christ's. Sir H. W. Baker. [Feasts of Martyrs.] 1st pub. in Murray's Hymnal, 1852, No. 126, in 6 st. of 4 l., and headed "Ye shall indeed drink of My cup, and be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with." It was repeated in the following year in the Cooke & Denton Church Hymnal, No. 166, where it was appointed for the "Conversion of St. Paul." This was followed in 1857 by the Salisbury H. Bk., No. 161, where it was given as one of the hymns for the "Festivals of Martyrs." In 1859 it appeared in the trial copy of H. A. & M., No. 126, with st. iv., l. 2, changed from "Ever like them to bear," to "Like them in faith to bear," and the substitution of a new doxology. These changes were retained in the authorized H. A. & M., 1861, and in the revised ed., 1875. Also found in a large number of hymn-books. [J. J.]

O when my righteous Judge shall come. [The Judgment Day.] Miller's account of this hymn in his Singers and Songs, &c., 1869, p. 182, is:—

"It was in this fourth edition [of the Lady Huntingdon H. Bk.] that there appeared for the first time the striking and well-known hymn by the Countess 'Oh! when my righteous Judge shall come.' . . . It is the second part of a piece on the Judgment Day which has a first part of five verses, beginning 'We soon shall hear the midnight cry.'"

This statement by Miller is based upon information which he received from Daniel Sedgwick. On turning to D. Sedgwick's own copy of the edition of the Lady Huntingdon H. Bk. referred to by Miller, we find, first, two separate and distinct hymns numbered 146 and 147, and beginning respectively, "We soon shall hear the midnight cry," and "O when my righteous Judge shall come;" and, secondly, a note in pencil in Sedgwick's handwriting which reads, "Hymn 146 and 147 seem to be both by the same Author—perhaps the Countess's." On turning to Sedgwick's copy of Miller's Singers and Songs, we find, written by Sedgwick opposite the words quoted by Miller as above, the following:—

"Upon the testimony of the Rev. Thomas Young of Canterbury this hymn was composed by Charles Wesley. None doubt it was wrote at the suggestion of the Countess by C. Wesley."

It is clear that these guesses of Sedgwick are worthless. The history of the hymn, so far as we have been able to trace it, is as follows:—

(1) In an enlarged edition of the Lady Huntingdon Coll., circa 1774 [see Huntingdon Hymn-books, Lady, § iv.], it was given, together with "We soon shall hear the midnight cry" (as Nos. 146 and 147), in 4 st. of 6 l., and in common with all the rest of the hymns in the collection without signature. Both hymns were subsequently omitted from all official editions of the hymn-book, a fact which tells greatly against the guess that they were written by the Countess.

(2) We next find both hymns in the 1775 Appendix by L. Coughlan to J. Bazlee's Select Coll. of Ps. & Hys. . . . for the Use of the Congregation of Cumberland Street [London] Chapel. [Lady Huntingdon.] They are numbered 295, 296. [See Bazlee, J., p. 119, i.]

(3) "We soon shall hear the midnight cry," is seldom found after this date; but its companion hymn, "O when my righteous Judge shall come," appears in Rippon's Bap. Sel., 1787, No. 579, as "When Thou, my righteous Judge, shalt come." This was repeated in numerous hymn-books in G. B. in the popular form of the hymn.

The most, therefore, to regard to its authorship is Lady Huntingdon's H. Bk. upon's Bap. Sel. 1787."

This text is in all English-speaking countries in use in an abbreviated and slightly altered form as in H. A. & M., 1861; and in the A. & M., 1875. The 1839 text is in fore, in *H. O worship the Lord in the beauty of holiness. S. B. Monsell. [Epiphany; or, Divine Worship.] This hymn for the Epiphany is found in two forms, both by Dr. Monsell, and each is in the original, which opens with "O worship, praise, and adore the Lord."

Love and Praise. The first and most extensive use is in H. A. & M., 1861, p. 103, in 5 st. of 4 l. It is found, sometimes altered, in a large number of hymn-books in G. Britain and America. Orig. text in Thring's Coll., 1882. The second form is Dr. Monsell's revision of the 1863 text which he made for, and included in his Parish Hymnal in 1873, No. 85, as, "Worship the Lord in the beauty of holiness." This is almost unknown. [J. J.]

O ye immortal throng. P. Doddridge. [Christ seen of Angels.] In the D. MSS. this hymn is No. 35, in 7 st. of 8 l., in headed "Christ seen of Angels, from 1 Tim. iii. 16," and is dated "Feb. 13, 1734." It was pub. by J. Orton in his posthumous ed. of Doddridge's Hymns, &c., 1755, No. 304, with the same heading, but with slight variations in the text. In J. D. Humphreys's ed. of the Hymns, &c., 1839, No. 330, it begins "Ye bright immortal throng." This text is repeated in Snapp's Songs of G. & G., 1872. Usually Orton's text of 1755 is followed. The S. P. C. K. Church Hymns is an exception in favour of a text which is much altered, and a doxology unknown to Doddridge. [J. J.]

Oakeley, Frederick, D.D., youngest s. of Sir Charles Oakeley, Bart., sometime Governor of Madras, was b. at Shrewsbury, Sept. 5, 1802, and educated at Christ Church, Oxford (B.A. 1824). In 1825 he gained a University prize for a Latin Essay; and in 1827 he was elected a Fellow of Balliol. Taking Holy Orders, he was a Prebendary of Lichfield Cathedral, 1832; Preacher at Whitehall, 1837; and Minister of Margaret Chapel, Margaret Street, London, 1839. In 1845 he resigned all his appointments in the Church of England, and was received into the Roman Communion. Subsequently he became a Canon of the Pro-Cathedral in the Roman Catholic ecclesiastical district of Westminster. He d. January 29, 1880. Miller (Singers and Songs of the Church, 1869, p. 497), writing from information supplied to him by Canon Oakeley, says:—

.. He traces the beginning of his change of view to the lectures of Dr. Charles Lloyd, Regius Professor, delivered at Oxford about the year 1827, on the 'History and Structure of the Anglican Prayer Book.' About that time a great demand arose at Oxford for Missals and Breviaries, and Canon Oakeley, sympathizing with the movement, co-operated with the London booksellers in meeting that demand. . . . He promoted the [Oxford] movement, and continued to move with it till, in 1845, he thought it right to draw attention to his views, to see if he could continue to hold an Oxford degree in conjunction with so great a change in opinion. The question having been raised, proceedings were taken against him in the Court of Arches, and a sentence given that he was perpetually suspended unless he retracted. He then resigned his Prebendal stall at Lichfield, and went over to the Church of Rome."

Canon Oakeley's poetical works included:—

- (1) Devotions Commemorative of the Most Adorable Passion of Our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, 1842;
- (2) The Catholic Florist; (3) The Youthful Martyrs of Rome, a Christian Drama, 1856; (4) Lyra Liturgica: Reflections in Verse for Holy Days and Seasons, 1866.

Canon Oakeley also published several prose works, including a tr. of J. M. Horst's Paradise of the Christian Soul, London, Burns, 1850. He is widely known through his tr. of the "Adeste fideles" (p. 20, l.). Several of his original hymns are also in Roman Catholic collections. [J. J.]

Oocom, Samson (sometimes given as Ockum, and again as Oecum), a Mohican Indian, was b. at Norwich, Connecticut, in 1723. He was converted from Paganism under G. Whitefield, in 1739-40, and educated by the Revs. E. Wheelock and Benjamin Pomeroy. In 1748 he removed to Long Island and laboured amongst a remnant of his people. In 1759 he received Presbyterian orders, visited England, 1766-67, where he preached often (once for J. Newton at Olney), and with acceptance, and raised about ten thousand pounds for Dartmouth College, and for Indian education. His later life was spent first among his own race on Long Island, and, from 1786, in Oneida County, N.Y. He d. in July, 1792. Oocom's Choice Collection of Hys. and Spiritual Songs was pub. at New London, Connecticut, in 1774 (2nd ed. 1785). He is credited as the author of several hymns, but none of those hymns are found in his own collection. They are:—

1. Now the shades of night are gone. Morning. The date of 1770 is given to this hymn, but on insufficient authority. No evidence connects it with Oocom, though it has not, on the other hand, been claimed for any other. It is first found in the Hartford Congregational Coll., 1799, and was brought into general use by the Prayer-Book Coll., 1826. It is in several modern hymn-books.

2. Awaked by Sinai's awful sound. Peace with God. By this hymn, from its extensive use, Oocom is chiefly known. We are satisfied, however, that in this form it is not his. It is first found in the Connecticut Evangelical Magazine, July, 1802, p. 39, "communicated as original." It is however altered from "Waked by the gospel's powerful sound," which is No. 285 in Josiah Giddard's Coll., Walpole, N. H., 1801, and possibly earlier. This older text is probably Oocom's own composition.

3. When shall we three meet again? Parting. This once popular hymn has been ascribed to Oocom, but the claim is doubtful. We find it in no collection earlier than Leavitt's Christian Lyre, 1830, although it is known to have been sung at an earlier date. It is sometimes given as, "When shall we all meet again?" as in H. W. Beecher's Plymouth Coll., 1855. [F. M. B.]

Ode. [Ὀδὴ. Ὀιδὴ.] [Greek Hymnody, § xvi. 10.]

O'er the shoreless waste of waters. Bp. W. W. Hor. [Holy Baptism.] Written in 1870 for the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns and

pub. therein in 1871. It is "intended to embody the doctrinal teaching of the Church on Baptism, without reference to any individual case; so that it may be sung before or after catechisings or sermons on the subject." (Church Hym., folio ed., p. li.) [J. J.]

O'er those gloomy hills of darkness.
W. Williams. [Missions.] This hymn was pub. (not in his Hosannah, 1759, as sometimes stated, but) in his Gloria in Excelsis: or, Hymn of Praise to God the Lamb, Carmarthen, John Russ, 1772, No. 37, in 7 st. of 6 l. (Orig. text in Lynn Brit., 1867, p. 631.) It is known to modern hymn-books in the following forms:—

1. O'er those gloomy hills of darkness. The original in full, but more often abbreviated.

2. O'er the gloomy hills of darkness. This was given in Rippon's Bap. Sel., 1787, No. 429, with slight alterations, and the omission of st. v. and vii. In the 27th ed., 1827, it was enlarged to 6 sts. by the addition of "Every creature, living, breathing," &c. This text is repeated in Spurgeon's G. O. H. Bk., 1866.

3. O'er the realms of pagan darkness. This appeared in Cotterill's Sel., 4th ed., 1819, No. 239, in 4 st. of 6 l. It can hardly be said to be Williams's text rewritten, there is so little of Williams therein. It would be more accurate to say that it is based upon Williams, as the first stanza of each will show:—

Original. "O'er those gloomy Hills of Darkness Look, my Soul, be still and gaze,
All the Promises do travel
On a glorious Day of Grace.
Blessed Jubil, &c.
Let the glorious Morning dawn."

Cotterill. "O'er the realms of pagan darkness
Let the eye of pity gaze;
See the kindreds of the people,
Lost in sin's bewildering mass:
Darkness brooding
On the face of all the earth."

This arrangement is in several hymn-books in Great Britain and America.

4. Light of them that sit in darkness. This, in the Irish Church Hymnal, 1873, and others, begins with st. ii. of Cotterill's text as above.

The use of this hymn in these various forms is extensive. [J. J.]

Of justice and of grace I sing. I.
Watts. [Ps. ci.] Pub. in his Ps. of David, 1719, p. 258, in 6 st. of 4 l. It is in use in its original form, and as, "Mercy and judgment I will sing," in the Islington Ps. & Hym., 1862, and as, "Mercy and judgment will I sing," in the Wes. H. Bk., 1875. Although found in these three forms its use is limited. [J. J.]

Of Thy love some gracious token.
T. Kelly. [Close of Service.] 1st pub. in his Coll. of Ps. & Hym., Dublin, 1802, No. 256, in the following form:—

"Of Thy love, some gracious token,
Grant us, Lord, before we go;
Bless Thy word which has been spoken,
Life and peace on all bestow;
When we join the world again,
Let our hearts with Thee remain!
O direct us,
And protect us!
Till we gain the heav'nly shore,
Where Thy people want no more."

This text was rewritten and included in the 27th ed. of Rippon's Bap. Sel., 1827, No. 373, Pt. 2, as:—

"Grant us, Lord, some gracious token
Of Thy love before we part;
Crown Thy word which has been spoken,
Life and peace to each impart;
And all blessings
Which shall sanctify the heart."

Both forms of the text are in C. U. in Great Britain and America. [J. J.]

Offertorium. This is the anthem said or sung directly to the Creed, while, in ancient times, bread and wine were being made ready for the Eucharist. It was generally to Scripture, and most frequently of Psalms. Occasionally it was from some other source. We subjoin a metrical Offertory taken from the Compassion or Lamentation of the Virgin Mary, in the Sarum Missal.

II. Early Editions.

Sternhold's psalms were originally composed for his own "Godly solace" (Strype) and sung by him to his organ. Some may have been written in Henry VIII's reign. They were overheard by the young King Edward, and repeated in his presence. The 1sted., undated, was dedicated to him, and contains 19 psalms. Its title is:—

Certaine Psalmes, chosen out of the Psalter of David and drawe into English metre by Thomas Sternhold, grome of ye kynges's Maiesties robes. [Brit. Mus.]

A 2nd ed. was pub. posthumously in 1549 and contained 37 psalms. The title is:—

Al such Psalmes of David as Thomas Sternhold, late grome of the Kynges's Maiesties robes did in his lyfe tyme drawe into English metre. [Brit. Mus.]

A 3rd ed. of 1551 (Bodleian) by Whitchurch contains, at the end of Sternhold's psalms, seven others by J. H. (John Hopkins), who in a short preface says that he does not deem them "in any parte to be compared with" [Sternhold's] "most exquisite doynges." There were reprints of this book, both by Whitchurch and John Kyngston in 1553 (Cotton).

III. Anglo-Genevan Psalters.

During the troubles at Frankfort among the congregation of exiles, the Puritan party resolved to frame an order of Service in place of the Book of Common Prayer. This order was drawn up by Knox, Whittingham, Gylby, Fox and Cole, whilst still at Frankfort, but was not printed till they had settled at Geneva. It appeared as:—

The forme of prayers and ministration of The Sacraments, &c., used in the English Congregation at Geneva: and approved by the famous and godly learned man, John Caluyn. Imprinted at Geneva by John Crespin, MDLVI.

The progress of the Psalter is connected with the editions of this book, which contain, immediately before the Catechism, the metrical psalms, with independent pagination. The separate titlepage of the 1556 edition is:—

One and Fiftie Psalmes of David in English metre, whereof 37 were made by Thomas Sternholde, ad the rest by others. Ciffered with the hebrewe and in certeyn places corrected as the text and sense of the Prophete required. (Bodleian).

The psalms are those by Sternhold and Hopkins, pub. in 1551, with 7 fresh ones, which, from later editions, are known to be by Whittingham. A metrical rendering of the Ten Commandments by Whittingham is appended. Among these psalms is the earliest L. M. "O Lord, consider my distress" (51st). The Psalms of Sternhold and Hopkins had undergone a revision, probably by Whittingham, who was a good Hebraist. The general preface to The Forme of Prayers, &c., contains, among other interesting remarks on the value of metrical psalms, an apology for altering the revered words of Sternhold. (It may be noted that Warton's ridicule of the bridegroom "ready trimmed" (shaved), in Ps. 19, really falls on the revisers, not on Sternhold.) This revised text was permanently adopted in all subsequent editions of the Psalter.

The contents of a lost edition of The Forme of Prayers, &c. (1558), cannot be ascertained. But Livingston, in his splendid work on the Scottish Psalter, to which this article is largely indebted, has conjectured, for reasons which will appear below, that it contained 9 fresh psalms by Whittingham, and 2 by Pullain.

In 1561 and probably in the earlier half of the year appeared another edition of The Forme, of which there is an unique copy in St. Paul's Cathedral Library. The Psalter in it is entitled:—

Four Score and seven psalmes of David in English metre by Thomas sternholde and others: conferred with the Hebrue, and in certeyn places corrected, as the sense of the Prophet requireth, whereunto are added the Songe of Simeon, the then commandements and the Lords prayer. (The account here given is from a collation by Dr. Simpson, Librarian of St. Paul's, and another by Major Crawford in Notes and Queries, June 2, 1883.)

The contents of this book are a reprint of all the pieces in 1556, with the addition of 9 fresh psalms by Whittingham; 2 by John Pullain, already, it is probable, published in 1558; 24 with the signature of William

Kethe (W. Ke); and the L.M. 100th Ps. ("All people that" (p. 48, d.)), set to its familiar tune (which had appeared in the French Psalter of 1551 and was set there to the 134th Ps.), and with the extraordinary signature "Tho. Ster." There are also a version of "The Song of Simeon" and two of "The Lord's Prayer" by Whittingham; a third, of the "Lord's Prayer," anonymous, which is known from the English Psalters to be by D. Cox; and a prose prayer to be said before a man begins his work. It is in this edition that the influence of Marot and Beza's Version is most perceptible. Several of the psalms, by Pullain (148th), and Whittingham (e.g. 121, 124, 127), and most of Kethe's, are either imitations of French metres, or are set to French tunes. There are 60 tunes, 18 of which are from Marot and Beza's Version; the rest (except Pss. 67th, 125th) are in the 1560 ed. below. This is probably the book alluded to in a passage in "A Brieff Discours off the Troubles begonne at Franckford":—

"The congregation prepared themselves to depart (from Geneva), savinge certaine whiche remained behinde the reste, to witt, to finishe the Bible (the Geneva Bible) and the Psalmes bothe in meeter and prose, whiche were already begoon," &c. (The prose Psalms were finished, and presented to Queen Elizabeth. The metrical Psalter was only advanced another stage towards completion.)

Later Editions.

Two further editions may be added, although they to a certain extent anticipate the after history, in order to present here a complete view of the development of the Psalter at Geneva. There is an unique edition in the Peterborough Cathedral Library, incorporated in "The Forme of Prayers and Ministration of The Sacraments, &c., used in the English Church at Geneva approved and receyved by the Church of Scotland," pub. by Henri Mareschal (no place of pub.). The origin of this book is puzzling. The title-page, table of contents, calendar, and sonnet by William Stewart are identical with the Scottish Psalter, 1565. But the Psalms are not from the Scottish Psalter. The 1561 edition (St. Paul's) is first reprinted in block. Then all the remaining numbers are filled up from the English Psalter, omitting its duplicate psalms. At the end are printed "The Commandements of Almighty God" ("Attend, my people"), "A Prayer" ("The Spirit of grace graunt us, O Lord"), "The Lordes Prayer," D. Cox, "The XII Articles of the Christian Faith" ("All my belief," &c.), "A Prayer unto the holy Ghost to be song before the Sermon," "The Lamentation of a Sinner" (2nd), (beginning of it lost), "A thankesgeuing after the receauing of the Lorde's Supper," and "The Song of Simeon" (W. Whit.). In 1569 an edition of "The Forme of Prayers," &c., pub. by Crespin at Geneva (Hoddeian), contains a reprint of one of the English complete editions of the Psalters (app.) with the substitution of Whittingham's version of the "Nunc dimittis." The singular feature in both these editions is the preference of the English Psalter to the Scottish, notwithstanding the far closer affinity that existed between the Churches of Scotland and Geneva. The 1568 edition appears entirely ignorant of the special psalms of the Scottish version of 1564. The 1569 edition adopts the English version by preference, and as a consequence rejects the majority even of the genuine Genevan psalms, written by Kethe. A notice may here be inserted of the unique reprint of the 1561 edition existing in the Britwell Library of S. Christie Miller, Esq., and through his kindness collated by Major Crawford specially for this work. It is slightly smaller (4½ by 3½ inches) than the St. Paul's book, and, unlike that, is in black letter. The title is the same, but there is no imprint of the place of publication. It was, however, undoubtedly printed in Great Britain, perhaps in Edinburgh, probably for the use of the Genevan exiles. Many of the misprints of the Genevan edition, due to foreign printers, are corrected; and there are a few slight variations in the melodies. But the only substantial change is the substitution (Ps. 100) of the signature of W. Ke (Actae) for the obvious blunder of the Genevan edition (Tho. Ster.). It is from this Genevan 1561 edition apparently that taken for incorporation in the complete of 1564, rather than from the Genev. Fuller details of this collation than in this article are given by Major Crawford Queries, June 2, 1883, pp. 423-424.

This Psalter contains 83 psalms in all (80 in the book). The psalms of the earlier edition are reprinted, with the exception of Whittingham's 67th and 71st, now finally excluded from the Genevan Psalter, 1561, and appearing in the Scottish. The 95th Psalm, however, is removed from the body of the book, and placed as a canticle before the Te Deum. (This version of the 95th retains this position in the complete ed. of 1562 and those that follow it, other version being composed by Hopkins for insertion in the Psalter). All the Canticles, metrical versions of Creed, Lord's Prayer, and Commandments, mentioned in the last edition, are reprinted. To these are added 3 psalms by Sternhold, one of which is 23rd, "My Shepherd is the Living Lord," 13 by Hopkins [the 66th, which, though signed "Th. Ster.", is probably, from its double rhyme, by Hopkins (see § x.)], the 75th, which is here anonymous, but afterwards consistently ascribed to Norton, and the old 100th ("All people that..."), set to its well-known tune, and anonymous as it is in every subsequent English edition (see § x.). Besides these, the number of pieces attached to the Psalter is increased by new versions of Canticles, Creed, &c., by original hymns, and by the insertion of the Ordinal (see details below): some of these forming a sort of prelude, others an Appendix to the Psalter. It contains in all 40 tunes, 14 of which are set to the appended hymns, psalms, and canticles.

As no account of this edition has hitherto been published, a more extended notice and criticism of it may be in place here. Only one copy is known to exist, which is in the possession of Octavius Morgan, Esq., F.S.A., to whose kindness we are indebted for these details. The date of the book (1561) appears only in the colophon at the end. It is bound up in a volume containing a Prayer Book of 1560, a Bible of 1553, the Homilies of 1560, and the Godly Prayers (no date): the binding is probably not later than 1561. There is a short introduction to the Science of Music, in which the object of the book is stated as use "as well in the cofion place of praying... as privately by themselves or at home in their houses." Before the Psalmes there are metrical versions of "Veni Creator," "Venite," "Te Deum," "Benedictus," "Magnificat," "Nunc Dimittis," "Quicumque Vult," "The Lamentation of a Sinner," "The Lord's Prayer," "The Ten Commandments." After the Psalmes there are Ps. 117, T. B. . . . to be songe before Mornyng Prayer; Ps. 134, T. B. . . . to be songe before Evenyng Prayer; "The Ten Commandmentes," W. Whit.; "The Lordes Prayer," D. Cox; "The XII Articles of the Christyan Faythe," "A Prayer vnto the Holy Ghost," to be song before the sermon; "Da pacem, Domine," "Thanksgyuing after receyving the Lordes Supper," the hymn "Pseuerue us Lorde by thy deare Worde," and then prose prayers to be used before and after meals (2 sets), and a Prayer to be used at all times. There can scarcely be a question that it was intended not merely for private, but public, use, and as a Companion to the Prayer Book of 1559. And with this intention on its face it was "allowed," i.e. "approved and permitted to be printed," by the Archbishops or the Bishop of London, who were the censors for the Queen. John Day obtained a patent to print the Psalmes in metre on the 3rd of June in this year (Dibdin's Ames). He would risk no more illicit printing: the book was to be lawfully published. It is possible that this patent applied also to the earlier 1560 edition (Ch. Ch.) (if it is Daye's, which is doubtful), which was "allowed" by the censors in the same terms; and looking back at it we now see what was the intention of the versified Canticles ("Benedictus," "Magnificat," "Nunc Dimittis"), Ten Commandments, and Response ("Lord have mercy on us," &c.), The Lord's Prayer and Creed, in that edition. The attempt to associate the Psalter with the Prayer Book, and so take away Genevan suspicions, had begun in the earlier book, was developed in the edition 1561, and was to be completed in 1562. This new movement seems to be connected with the names of Wisdome and Hopkins, Norton and Cox, and perhaps Grindal (see § ix.). Robert Wisdome, unlike John Pullain, the other new contributor to the earlier edition of 1560, was not a Genevan exile: on the contrary, he appears at Frankfort among the party of Cox, which defended the Prayer Book of Edward against Calvin's Service Book introduced by Knox. His contributions to the Psalter also have no affinity with Geneva; the likeness of his 67th Psalm to Coverdale was remarked above. John Hopkins's place of exile is unknown, but it is not probable that he was at Geneva; and he reappears now, bringing apparently Sternhold's mes., and contributing a large number of Psalmes. The influence of Whittingham, on the other hand, has ceased. He had left England before the edition 1561 was published; two of the psalms by him in the Christ Church edition of 1560 are now rejected, and his contribution to the English edition has attained its maximum; it may even be doubted whether he had any personal share in editing the earlier edition of 1560; the new psalms by him and Pullain then published may have already appeared in the lost Genevan edition of 1560. The German influence is increased by two more translations ("Da pacem" and "Preserve us, Lord, by Thy dear word"); and the admission of uninspired hymns, such as "The Lamentation," &c., is an entire departure from Genevan precedent and in accord with Luther's practice. [For Becon and Norton see below, § ix.]

§ VI. The English and Anglo-Genevan Psalters compared.

A careful comparison of these two editions with that of Geneva (1561), throws an interesting light on the internal history of the English and Scottish Psalters in their ultimate forms. Leaving out of sight the whole contents of the 1556 edition, which is incorporated in the three books, the only matter common to the Christ Church ed. (1560) and the Genevan at St. Paul's (1561) consists of the 9 psalms by Whittingham, 2 by Pullain, and the version of the Lord's Prayer by Cox. The psalms of Whittingham and Pullain, both Genevan exiles, excite no surprise in the Genevan edition of 1561; but their previous appearance in the English, 1560, lends great plausibility to Livingston's conjecture that they had originally appeared in the lost Genevan edition of 1558, and passed thence to England with the exiles; and if this was really the case, then the only absolutely new matter common to 1560 and 1561 (Geneva) is somewhat surprising, viz.:—The Lord's Prayer by Cox, the stout antagonist of Calvin. (It is given as anonymous in 1561, not as by Cox.) With this exception, the two editions ignore each other. The version of the "Nunc Dimittis," in 1561 (Geneva), is a different one to that in Christ Church, 1560, and written by Whittingham, who was then under Calvin's influence, and did not throw in his lot definitely with the English Prayer Book till 1563, when he became Dean of Durham; his selection of both this and the Lord's Prayer (2) for versification follows the precedent of Beza's continuation of Marot, pub. in 1551. It would be natural also to suppose that if the compilers of 1561 (Geneva) had seen the 95th of Christ Church, 1560, they would not have left that psalm a blank, as they did. The independence of the English work is marked more strongly still, when the 1561 (Geneva) is compared with Daye's edition, 1560-1. If the Genevan editors had known of the three new-found Sternhold's, and eight renderings of Hopkins, all of which they have left blank, it is scarcely conceivable that they would have omitted them. There is only one absolutely new piece common to them both, the Old 100th ("All people that," &c.), signed, in the Genevan edition, Tho. Ster. (!) In these facts we seem to catch sight of two companies of editors at work independently. The English one is under the direction of Hopkins and his colleagues, using the old material of Geneva with a certain reserve, shown by the rejection of Whittingham's 67th and 71st. The Genevan one is under the direction of Kethe, adopting the previous Genevan work in its entirety, and unaware (except in the case of the Old 100th, and Cox's Lord's Prayer, which may have reached them in ms.) of the versions which Hopkins and the others were publishing in England. If now for a moment we look on to the complete Scottish, 1564, and English Psalters, 1565, we see that they are the direct descendants of these two separate movements. The Scottish Psalter adopts the Genevan, 1561, in the block. The English adopts the 1560-1 Daye in the block, with a slight reduction of the Genevan element (Whittingham's 115th and 129th, and Pullain's 149th), and only uses the Genevan 1561 to fill in the blanks not supplied by England, with 9 renderings by Kethe.

VII. The Complete Psalter.

In 1562 The Complete Psalter was published by John Daye, entitled—

The whole Book of Psalmes, collected into English metre by T. Sternhold, John Hopkins, and others: conferred with the Hebrew, with apt notes to sing them withal. Faithfully perused and allowed according to th'ordre appointed in the Quene's Mosteities Injunctions. Very mete, &c. (See Christ Church title-page.) Only one copy is known to exist. It was examined by Dr. Allon (Ongregational Psalmist Historical Notes, pp. vii-viii.) and by Livingston (Scottish Psalter). The details here are from the latter.

This is the first edition in which Hopkins's name is given in full. On comparing it with Daye's edition, 1560-1, we find that all the psalms are reprinted except the 23rd and 50th by Whittingham, the Old Hundredth ("All people," &c.), the 125th by Wisdome (all displaced for the moment, but to reappear in the fuller English edition of 1565); and Whittingham's 115th and 129th, and Pullain's 149th (all of which disappear permanently from the English Psalter, though preserved in the Scottish, 1564). The new contributions to the Psalter consist of 39 psalms by Hopkins, 25 by Norton, the 102nd signed "J. H.," but probably also by Norton, 8 by Kethe, the 111th signed "N.," but probably also by Kethe (see § x.), and 4 by Murekant. The pieces before and after the Psalms in Daye, 1560-1, are also reprinted. There are given before the Psalms "The Song of the Three Children," and "The Humble Sute of a Sinner." After the Psalms are added "The Complaint of a Sinner," and a second hymn called a "Lamentation." The 9 psalms by Kethe are the same as those in edition of 1561 (Geneva), and they present with the new striking. With the exception of 134th, they are P. M., and tunes. Livingston thinks the with little regard to English the tunes in the French Pse may be the explanation of "honour and majesty," &c., whole of the new contribution other hand, C. M.

The contrast illustrates the the English and Scottish Pse English the C.M. of Sternhold tonously dominant; and the Fr of Whittingham and Kethe are admitted; in the Scottish not Kethe's and Whittingham's of 1561 (Geneva) reprinted, but t Pont and Craig, which are ac of those of the English Psalter cline to irregular metres. T from the French model is furth the versification of "The Bel the English Prayer Book, and of three more uninspired hymns We seem to see in these, as we dome's psalm, and the translatio of 1560-1 (see § v.), the re-as old influence of Luther on Co English Hymnody, Early. § IV.]

VIII. Final Alterati

IX. Authors.

The book was the work of hands. (1) Thomas Sternhold is us as a Hampshire man (Fuller's Wood's Athenae). An entry, b registers of Awre in Gloucester on a blank page, between the y 1580, in printed characters, ap later date, says—

"Let it be remembered for the hon that from it sounded out the Psalms of metre by Thomas Sternhold and John former lived in an estate near Blak Hayfield; the later in an estate in Awre called the Woodend. And in said John Hopkins there is now to be a the Tudor family being painted upon th on both sides is written, in Saxon chara part of the thirteenth chapter of St. the Romans, which was done at that petuum rei vive operis memoriam."

Miller (Singers and Songs of

He is the author of 40 than as nearly versions, nearly measure of Chevy Chase with only the ballad two rhymes. he appears to stead and other Bodmin in Cornwall. Miller attributes to him the versification of Certain Chapters of the Proverbs of Solomon, but this is apparently an error (see Cotton's Edd. of the Bible).

(2.) Of John Hopkins very little is certainly known. His residence in Gloucestershire, mentioned above, may perhaps be reconciled with the usual account of him as a clergyman and schoolmaster in Suffolk. Wood conjectures that he may be the same as one John Hopkins, who graduated as B.A. at Oxford in 1544 or 1545. He also mentions a John Hopkins, who died at Walsingham in Suffolk in Oct. 1570, as possibly the same man. Wood speaks of him as "Britannicorum poetarum sui temporis non infimus." Some Latin stanzas prefixed to Foxe's Martyrs are by him. In the history of the metrical Version we catch sight of him first in 1551. He then disappears (his place of exile being unknown), until the close of 1560, when he brings a large contribution of psalms to Daye's edition, 1560-1; and his name is printed in full, as the largest contributor to the Version, in 1562. His contribution from first to last consists of 60 psalms, all in c. m., but distinguished from Sternhold's by having four rhymes in a stanza—a change which eventually greatly altered the stresses and cadence of the metre. (See § x.)

(3.) William Whittingham was of greater mark. He was senior student of Cardinal College (Christ Church), Oxford (B.A. 1545), and then travelled in France, Germany, and Geneva, returning in 1553. He fled from the Marian reign to Frankfort, 1554, and thence to Geneva in 1555. He there married Calvin's sister Catherine, and succeeded Knox as pastor of the English congregation. He had an eminent share in the translation of the Geneva Bible, and stayed behind the main body of the exiles to finish it. His thanks to the magistrates for their hospitality to him and his companions were given May 30, 1560, and he no doubt then left Geneva for England. He left England, however, the same year with the Earls of Bedford and Warwick. He was made Dean of Durham in 1563, and had correspondence thence with Knox across the border. He was fond of music, and is said by Warton to have introduced the use of the metrical Canticles in the Cathedral. Wood charges him with acts of vandalism there, especially the destruction of the image of St. Cuthbert. He protested against the habits. When Abp. Sandys visited Durham during the vacancy of the see, he refused to attend his summons. Sandys excommunicated him, and tried to invalidate his Genevan orders, received from Calvin. Whittingham died before the struggle ended, in 1579. He is the author of 12 psalms in the English and 16 in the Scottish Psalter. The short period of his residence in England in 1560 makes it doubtful whether he can have had any personal share in publishing the 1560 edition, and favours Livingston's conjecture that the psalms from his pen in that edition had appeared in the last edition of 1558. His influence on the Psalter was, in the first place, that of scholarly revision of the work of Sternhold, and of Hopkins's seven early psalms from his knowledge of Hebrew; and, in the second, imitation of French metres, especially notable in the 1560 Christ Church. The first l. m. is his (51st) "O Lord, consider my distress" (see § III.).

(4.) John Pullain was also one of the original students of Christ Church, Oxford, admitted in 1547. He was a Yorkshire man, previously at New College, Oxford (M.A. 1544). He was one of the Genevan exiles in company with Whittingham and Kethe. He became Archdeacon of Colchester under Elizabeth. His name appears among the signatories of the Articles in Convocation, 1562, and also attached to a petition in the same year "that the psalms appointed at common prayer be sung distinctly by all the congregation . . . and that all curious singing and playing of the organs may be removed." (The "psalms" mean those in the Prayer Book, not metrical psalms). Besides the 148th and 149th Psalms (the latter only found in the Scottish Psalter), he paraphrased Ecclesiastes, Solomon's Song, Esther, Judith, and Susannah. His influence on the Psalter is slight, though of the same kind as Whittingham's: but it is worthy of remark that to his version of the 148th Psalm we owe a fine metre, again employed in the New Version for the same psalm ("Ye boundless realms of joy"), and also in one or two of Watts's richest compositions (e.g. "Lord of the worlds above").

(5.) Robert Wisdome was educated at Cambridge, where he took a B.A. degree. He was curate of Stisted in Essex. His protest against Roman doctrines brought him into trouble for a sermon at Oxford; and about 1538 he was obliged to bear a faggot by Stokesley, Bp. of London. Two years afterwards he was complained of to Bonner, and summoned before the Privy Council, as parish priest of St. Margaret's, Lothbury, and imprisoned in the Lollard's Tower. In 1543, in company with his friend Becon and others, he recanted and burnt his books at Paul's Cross. (See Recantation at length in Foxe's Acts and Monuments, ed. 1846, Appendix xii.) He then retired with Becon to Staffordshire, and revoked his recantation. Here, too, he wrote "a postill. . . upon every gospell through the yere," translated from Ant. Corvinus, pub. 1519. And here he wrote an exposition of certain Psalms of David, and turned some of them into verse. If the 67th Psalm, contained only in the Christ Church ed. 1560, and the 125th ("Those that do put their confidence") were among these, they are perhaps the earliest pieces of the Old Version. In the reign of Edward VIth (July 1550), he obtained the rectory of Settrington in Yorkshire, in the gift of the king, and was mentioned by Cranmer (1552) for the archbishopric of Armagh, which he declined. He was deprived in Mary's reign (1554), and at Frankfort was a hot advocate of the Prayer Book of Edward VIth, on the side of Cox. In the autumn of 1559 he appealed to the royal visitors of the northern dioceses against one Thorneton, who had intruded into his benefice at Settrington. He was instituted Archdeacon of Ely in the diocese of his friend Cox, Feb. 27, 1560. He preached at court, and at Paul's Cross that year. His name occurs among the signatories of the Articles, and the petition about organs, &c. (see above, 4) in 1562. He d. at Wilburton (a parish which, with Haddenham, was then annexed to the Archdeaconry) in 1568. [For a full account of Wisedome, see Athenæ Cantabrigienses, by C. H. and T. Cooper, 1850.] The three pieces by Wisedome have a marked individuality. The 125th Psalm is written in an 8-line stanza, of which lines 1-4 are in the metre of Hopkins, with the double rhyme, and lines 5-8 are in a metre very common in Parker's Psalter, with a middle rhyme in lines 5 and 7. The 67th Psalm (1560) is tr. from Luther, with help from Coverdale. (See Es wollt uns Gott genädig seyn.) The third piece is the hymn "Preserve us, Lord, by Thy dere word," a tr. from Luther, on which much satire has been expended (see Warton's Eng. Poetry) for its conjunction of Turk and Pope. (See Erhalt uns, Herr, bei deinem Wort.) It is plausible to associate the return to German matter and precedent, and the movement in favour of the Book of Common Prayer, which first shows itself in 1560, in some measure to Wisedome, whose pieces are then first inserted.

(6.) The initials E. G. (the author of the hymn "Da pacem," found first in Daye's edition of the Psalter, 1560-1, though it possibly may have appeared in the lost page at the end of Christ Church, 1560), have been conjecturally attributed by Rev. H. F. Sheppard to Edward Gosynhill, author of The Schole House of Women (a satire), and a Praise of Women (Herbert's Catalogue). But the discovery of the German original ("Gib Fried zu unser Zeit o Herr," composed by Wolfgang Köpfel, and pub. in the Strasburg Gesangbuch of 1533, see p. 276, l.), which is followed in sense and metre, lends greater probability to the conjecture of Mr. Mearns, that the translation is by no less a person than Edmund Grindal, afterwards Abp. of Canterbury, who was a Strasburg exile.

(7.) Thomas Norton was a b London, circa 1532, and d. Mr Sharpenhoe, in Bedfordshire. "busy Calvinist" (Wood). He was a disciple of Edward VI.'s reign he became Vicar of St. Stephen's, Walchapelain to Somerset. He was in Mary's reign, but released; his Ps. 103, 112, were written during his deliverance. He was a student of the University of Cambridge, and wrote thence a letter to the brethren in England. Under Elizabeth he was restored to Walbrook, made a Prebendary of Canterbury, and held the living of St. Dunstons Backchurch. He died before July 2, 1567. His works, in 3 vols., are published by the Parker Society. In his Catechism, 1560, he echoes the common-time. "Let no filthy songs be sung, but rather songs of Holy Scripture and the English tongue." His 2 psalms (117th, 134th) form no part of the regular Psalter. They were added at the end of Daye's ed. 1560-1, as acknowledged psalms: but in the complete alternative title, "An Exhortation unto the prayne of God evening" prayer. The name T. Becon is given in full in the 1565 edition.

(10.) John Marckant was incumbent of Clacton Magna (1559), and Shopland (1568-8). Livingston, P. 70. He is known only as the author of one or two small pieces: a political poem on Lord Wentworth, 1558-9; a New Year's gift intitled, With speed return to God; and Verses to diverse good purposes, circa 1580-1 (Rev. H. F. Sheppard quoting Stationers' Registers). The 4 psalms he contributed to 1562 (119th, 131st, 132nd, 135th), were attributed by conjecture, in the Censura Literaria, to John Mardley, "who turned 24 psalms into English odes, and many religious songs." Among the latter, "The Lamentation" ("Oh! Lord, turn not Thy face"), and "The Humble Sute," both marked "M." in 1562, would be classed. This conjecture is adopted by Miller with a "?" in his Index, and Lord Selborne. But the name is given in full "Marckant," in 1565, and in later editions is sometimes written "Market."

(11.) For William Kethe see Scottish Hymnody and Kethe. He contributed 9 psalms to the ed. of 1562, not counting the Old 100th; they had appeared previously, in 1561, Geneva. The imitation of French metres is more conspicuous than in Whittingham's; the 104th psalm is one of the best in the Psalter, and its metre the only surviving result that has achieved success of these attempts to naturalise French.

ret 12.) T. C. are the initials of John Craig, Scottish Hymnody and Craig, John.) The 106th psalm signed T. C. is evidently copied from the Scottish Psalter, and was not inserted earlier than 1581. "T. C.," as a misprint for J. C., was perpetuated in the English editions—one of the clearest instances of the uncertainty which attaches to the evidence of the signatures. The English critics, ignorant of the Scottish Psalter, have (until Livingston pointed out the error, and even subsequently) allotted the initials to Thomas Churchyard, a late writer of the Elizabethan time.

X. Details of Authorship.

As the initials of the writers are attached to each piece from 1560 onwards, it would seem easy to identify the authorship. But, as a fact, the signatures of late editions are full of errors, and even in the earliest there are curious printers' freaks.

Thus 119, 127, which are elsewhere W. W., are anon in 1560-1. The c. w. 100th, elsewhere anon, is J. H. in 1564. The interchange of N. and M., common in late editions, is favoured by N. to Ps. 118 in 1563 (Lie.), and 129 in 1569 (Geneva), and N. to 132 in 1564. Other instances will be observed in this and § ix.

The verdicts here are based on the signatures of Sternhold's 1st edition (Brit. Mus.), 2nd (Lowndes and Cotton), 1551 (Bodleian), 1558 (Bodleian), 1560 (Ch. Ch.), 1561 (Morgan's Daye, see § v.), 1562 (Livingston), 1564 (Brit. Mus.), 1565 (Brit. Mus.), 1569 (Bodleian and Lincoln Cathedral), 1579 (Brooke), and several editions of the 16th and 17th cents. The psalms of the English Psalter only are noted: ? is attached to the doubtful psalms, and the reasons of the decision are given subsequently.

T. Sternhold.—Pss. 1-5, 20, 25, 29, 32, 34, 41, 49, 73, 78, 103, 120, 123, 128, in the undated first edition; Pss. 6-17, 19, 21, 43, 44, 63, 68, added in 1549; Pss. 18, 22, 23, in 1561.

J. Hopkins.—Pss. 30, 33, 42, 52, 79, 82, 146, in 1561; Pss. 24, 26, 27, 31, 62, 64, 65, 66 (?), 67, 68-72, 74, in 1561; Pss. 35, 36, 38, 39, 40, 45-48, 50 (2nd), 54-61, 76, 77, 80, 81, 83-99, in 1562.

W. Whittingham.—Pss. 23 (1st), 51 (1st), 114, 130, 133, 137, in 1556; Pss. 37, 50 (1st), 119, 121, 124, 127, in 1560; Ten Comm. in 1556 and sequ.

J. Pullain.—Ps. 148 in 1560 and sequ.

T. Norton.—Pss. 75, in 1561; Pss. 51 (2nd), 53, 101, 102 (?), 105, 106, 108-110, 115-117, 129, 136 (1st), 138-145, 147, 149, 150, in 1562; Quicunque, in 1561 and sequ.; Ten Comm. ("Hark Israel"), in 1561 and sequ.

R. Wisedome.—Ps. 125; "Those that do put their confidence," in 1560 and sequ.; and "Preserve us, Lord," in 1561 and sequ.

J. Marckant.—Pss. 118, 131, 132, 135, and the Lamentation "Oh! Lord, turn not," and "The Humble Sute." W. Kethe.—Pss. 104, 107, 111 (?), 112, 113, 122, 125 (1st), 126, 134.

J. Craig.—Ps. 136 in 1561 and sequ.

Anonymous.—Both versions of 100th, and the Canticles and other pieces not specified in §§ ix., x. "S." is attached to "Nunc Dimittis" in 1562 (Lie.).

Comment.—In Sternhold's 1st edition there are several misprints in the numbers: 19 (29), 27 (28), 33 (34), 121 (120), 122 (123), 138 (128). The only psalm here assigned to Hopkins which is doubtful is 60th, marked "T. S.," in 1561, 1562, 1564, 1569; but in 1565, and Scottish 1564, 1565, "J. H." As it has four rhymes, it is probably by Hopkins. A similar conflict of evidence occurs as to 28th, signed "J. H.," in 1561, 1562, 1564, 1565. But it is one of the Sternhold's in 1551, 1556, and "T. S." in 1564, 1569, 1579; and the double rhyme decides it for "Sternhold." The 102nd is signed "J. H." in 1562, 1565, 1566, 1579; but "N." in 1564, 1569, 1579, and later editions. As it has only a double rhyme, it is probably Norton's. The 111th is signed "N." in 1562, 1564, 1565, 1566, and all later editions we have compared; but on its first appearance, 1561 (Gen.), and in the Scottish 1564 and 1565, it is W. A., and as it is r. m., never used by Norton, except in the dissimilar 136th, and as there is no trace of Norton's work in 1561 (Geneva), it is probably Kethe's. The authorship of the Old 100th is discussed elsewhere under "All people that on earth do dwell" (p. 43, B.).

XI. Authorization.

A hot dispute, often biased by party considerations, has raged as to the nature of the authority of the Version. It may be read at large in Heylin's Ecclesia Restaurata, Warton's

Hist. of Eng. Poetry, and Todd's Observations on the Metrical Versions. It is agreed on all hands that it was not sanctioned by Convocation or Parliament; the dispute concerns the nature of the royal authority. This authorization is stated in three formulas of the title-pages, none of which there is any reason to distrust. In the Christ Church edition of 1560 the book is said to have been "allowed according to the order appointed in the Queen's Maiesties Injunctions." In 1562 the formula is "Faithfully perused, and allowed according to," &c. And in 1566 (Bodleian) the formula is adopted, which remains in all subsequent editions, "allowed to be song . . . before and after morning and evening prayer: as also before and after the Sermon." "The order in the Queen's Injunctions" refers to the 51st in the Injunctions of 1559; which forbade the printing of all books except classics until they had been "perused and licensed" by certain appointed officers of the Queen; books so licensed were said to be "allowed." The titlepages of 1560 and 1562 consequently prove no more than authorized and legal printing. The titlepage of 1566 has been held (even by Heylin, who discredits it in consequence,) to assert the royal permission of use in public worship. The assertion, however, may be more implicit than explicit. By a more celebrated clause of the Injunctions, any intelligible hymn "or song to the praise of Almighty God" might be sung before and after Morning and Evening Prayer, and hence the Psalter among the rest. The use of it before and after sermons was not forbidden by the Act of Uniformity, and had become a cherished custom; which may therefore not have needed express authorization. (It is curious, however, that the Lords Committee in 1641 suggested "to add lawful authority to have them sung before and after sermons"—as if the practice was illegal.) The book itself bore on its face the object of use in public worship; parts of it had been so used for years, and in the words of Parker (Dec. 1559, to Exeter, see Psalters, § vi.), "permitted in this Church of England;" if it was printed, its use in public worship was a certainty. With the most vivid knowledge of all this, the Queen's officers "allowed" it, i.e. licensed it to be printed; the permissive use in church was the corollary of that allowance rather than its gist. If the patents of 1560 and 1568 to John Daye for printing the Psalms could be recovered, they might furnish decisive evidence; but we only know, from Barker's Report in 1582 (Stationers' Registers) that "in privilege or private license granted to John Daye are among other things the Psalms in metre with notes to sing them in the churches, as well in four parts as in plain song:" which is not more distinct than the titlepages. A comparison of the three other royal authorizations of Psalters seems unfavourable to the interpretation of "allowance" by "permitted use." Both in King James's Version, in the New Version, and Sir Richard Blackmore's, the word "allowed" is used apparently in the sense of "licensed" or "approved," but the permissive use is granted in other words, such as "recommended" (King James) or "permitted to be used" (New Blackmore). Whatever be the legal authorization, of its practice by the State, the State Services 1580, which quote it as if it were a psalm book, are an evidence. (For reprints, Liturgical Services, 184

XII. Success.

Few books have had so long a fluence. With the growing Puritan singing came to be esteemed the part of God's public service; the psalms, with the first and second heard in many places with a c but all men sitting bare-headed psalm was sung" (Heylin). parentage, its use as a badge of and the illegal practice of "i Psalms" with the Liturgy brought "frowns of great people," such as and Cosin. But the Restoratic change of feeling. The Puritans Conference petitioned in vain that amended or superseded; the Bishop it lay outside their commission. antiquated words were changed alterations, drawn from Rous according to Archd. Churton), made more modern air. In 1710 Bp. Beveridge a strenuous defence of it as a monument of the Reformation. Though superseded by The New Version, in a few churches within the men still living.

XIII. Merits.

The chief claims to excellence been put forward in behalf of Version are its fitness as an instrument of instruction and spiritual good to the people, and its fidelity to the Hebrew. It has found patrons in Beveridge and Romaine. We ought in fact to remember the times and the conditions of its work. The great burst of Elizabethan poetry was still in the future; Sternholme was to make the Psalms the badge of the court and people; and this consideration terminated the metres and treatmen by contemporary ballads, or even in Henry VIII's Primers, or the poetry of the age, they will be Fuller's words "to go abreast with" and this is the explanation of the exaggerated estimates of Sternholme's poems as poets, quoted in § ix. With reference to this, that they were written for the mass; even Warton tempers his criticism by confessing that "had they been poetically translated, they would have been acceptable to the common people; but the style was a very subordination to that of faithfulness to the Hebrew. This faithfulness has been acknowledged by Keble; and Beveridge, contrasting the inaccuracy of the New Version (Old Version, 1710), points out that it has preserved some of the subsequent revised Authorized Version of 1611. Still, if it is used, it must be confessed to be almost dead. The likeness to the Hebrew is the corpse to the living body (Quarterly Review). From the times of Dodd the § x.) the abuse lavished on it has been in the preface to new translations of the Psalms. "Their piety was better than their poetry;" "they had drunk more of Helicon;" "sometimes they make the barbarism, and have in many verses a smith's anvil would make better music," says Fuller. Charles II. was a parish clerk was singing, and Hopkins had great qualms.

When they translated David's psalms, make the heart right glad: When the King David's fate: Both had a sing and them translate, To hear — 'twould set him mad."

By the whole, it is pleasant to think that in the Old 100th, "All people do dwell," in Kethe's 104th, "that on earth praise the Lord," and one or two "My soul, still retain some links with so more, we still a book and history. [H. L. B.]

When the Old and New Versions gradually gave way to the hymn-book proper, their fall was broken by the adoption in the hymn-books of extensive extracts from their contents. These extracts took the form, sometimes of entire versions of individual psalms, and again of parts of, and centos from the same, or from others. Those of the N. V. so dealt with are given under the New Version. It remains for us to provide the same information with regard to the Old Version. In doing this we shall give (1) The first line of each Psalm from the 1565 ed.: (2) the same line, when altered, from the Clarendon Press ed.; (3) the first lines of all parts taken from any Psalm; and (4) the initials of the author, not as in 1565, but as in the foregoing Key in § x.

Olivers, Thomas, was b. at Tregynon, near Newtown, Montgomeryshire, in 1725. His father's death, when the son was only four years of age, followed by that of the mother shortly afterwards, caused him to be passed on to the care of one relative after another, by whom he was brought up in a somewhat careless manner, and with little education. He was apprenticed to a shoemaker. His youth was one of great ungodliness, through which at the age of 18 he was compelled to leave his native place. He journeyed to Shrewsbury, Wrexham, and Bristol, miserably poor and very wretched. At Bristol he heard G.

Whitefield preach from the text "Is not this a brand plucked out of the fire?" That sermon turned the whole current of his life, and he became a decided Christian. His intention at the first was to join the followers of Whitefield, but being discouraged from doing so by one of Whitefield's preachers, he subsequently joined the Methodist Society at Bradford-on-Avon.
At that town, where he purposed carrying on his business of shoemaking, he met John Wesley, who, recognising in him both ability and zeal, engaged him as one of his preachers.
Olivers joined Wesley at once, and proceeded as an evangelist to Cornwall. This was on Oct. 1, 1753. He continued his work till his death, which took place suddenly in London, in March 1799. He was buried in Wesley's tomb in the City Road Chapel burying ground, London. Olivers was for some time co-editor with J. Wesley of the Arminian Magazine, but his lack of education unfitted him for the work. As the author of the tune Helmsley, and of the hymn "The God of Abraham praise," he is widely known. He also wrote "Come Immortal King of glory"; and
"O Thou God of my salvation," whilst residing at Chester; and an Elegy on the death of John Wesley. His hymns and the Elegy were reprinted (with a Memoir by the Rev. J. Kirk) by D. Sedgwick, in 1868. [J. J.]

Olney Hymns. A collection of hymns by the poet Cowper (p. 265, L.) and John Newton (q.v.), sung originally either in the church or at the prayer-meetings at The Great House at Olney, and pub. as—

Olney Hymns, in Three Books. Book I. On Select
Tracts of Scripture. Book II. On Occasional Subjects.
Book III. On the Progress and Changes of the Spiritual Life.... London: Printed and sold by W. Oliver, No. 12,
Bartholomew Close... MDCCLXXIX. The three
"Poems" were added in later editions.

They were probably given out verse by verse, like many of those by Watts and Dodderidge, and often suggested by Newton's sermons. In the preface Newton says, that besides the principal motive of promoting the faith and comfort of sincere Christians, the hymns were designed "to perpetuate the remembrance of an intimate and endeared friendship" between himself and Cowper. This project was formed in 1771. Whether it was simply suggested by Newton's perception of Cowper's poetical powers, or intended to occupy a mind in which there were symptoms of approaching madness, cannot be decided.
Cowper contributed 67 hymns. Two of them—
The Happy Change ("How blest Thy creature is, oh! God!") and Retirement ("Far from the world, oh! Lord, I flee") had been written immediately on his recovery from his first attack of madness, at St. Albans, in 1764. "Jesus, where'er Thy people meet," had been written for the opening of the large room at The Great House as a place for prayer-meetings (April 17, 1769). The only other hymn whose date is approximately known is Light shining out of darkness ("God moves in a mysterious way"), which, despite of its rational fortitude, was written under the most painful circumstances

(see p. 433. l.). The known hymns by Newton previous to 1773 are few, and during the early part of that year the shock of Cowper's calamity made him "hang his harp on the willows." In his Diary, Nov. 30 of that year, he speaks, however, of then making one hymn a week: and there are memoranda of composition at intervals to Jan. 30, 1778 (see Newton's Life by Rev. Josiah Bull). Twelve hymns by Newton and Cowper appeared in the Gospel Magazine (1771-78): thirteen were attached to Omicron's Letters (1774); R. Conyers's collection has several; and one or two others are found in obscure hymn-books. The complete Olney Collection appeared in 1779, arranged in three books. 1. "On Select Texts of Scripture"; 2. "On occasional Subjects"; 3. "On the Rise, Progress, Changes and Comforts of the Spiritual Life." It contained 348 hymns and 3 other pieces, and has gone through many editions. Except in refined tenderness, Cowper's hymns are indistinguishable from Newton's. Both follow Newton's stern yet wholesome caution, that in hymns the "imagery and colouring of poetry, if admitted at all, should be admitted very sparingly and with great judgment." Both in their best pieces exhibit great excellence of structure. Both authors are vague as to the aim, capabilities, and limitations of hymns. Several pieces are disquisitions or soliloquies ("What various hindrances we meet" is really not a hymn, but a fine instruction on prayer). With the splendid exception of "Glorious things of thee are spoken," there is scarcely a trace of jubilation. Out of the many themes of Christian praise one alone is touched—the surpassing mercy of Jesus to His sinful elect: and even the rapt contemplation of this droops away into sad reflection. Gloom is a characteristic of the book. The despondence, sense of exile from God, and not the gladness, of the Psalms, are selected for versification. The contemplation of nature suggests sorrowful resemblances to the work of grace in the human heart, not the vision of God's majesty and love. Hymns describing the heavy self-accusation, dejection, desertion of the regenerate, form the largest and most darkly real portion of the book, and those of Newton have more unrelieved dejection than Cowper's. But Newton's despondence arose from his sense of ingratitude for his election, never from doubt of it: and hence alongside of it there are hymns full of rational faith, strong confidence, and, above all, fervent clinging love of Jesus. Verses often occur, which from their direct force, are vigorous maxims: and, though there is a large quantity of tame, sermonlike doggerel, there are a considerable number of pure English hymns, of melodious cadence and Scriptural ring. The earlier hymn-books that most nearly resemble them are Shepherd's Penitential Cries and the Collection by Newton's friend, Dr. Conyers. The intense love of the Saviour, which animates them, endeared them to numbers in the earlier part of this century, and the finest of them are still in C. U. in all English-speaking countries. [See Cowper, William; Newton, John.] [H. L. B.] mountain's top appearing. This hymn appeared in Ps. & Hys., Dublin, 1802, No. 249, and is based on Ps. lli. 7. It is repeated in the author's 1804, and later editions (ed. 1853, Cotterill's 1815 Appendix to his Hymns, No. 203, st. i., iii., iv. an altered form. This was re-ed. of the Sel., 1819, No. 162; in Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. in later collections. Two texts, with the same opening stanza, came into C. U. They can be easily distinguished by the 3rd stanza of Kelly and the 2nd of Cotterill, which read:—

When these two forms of the hymn are taken into account, its use is found to be extensive. Cotterill's text has been rendered into Latin by R. Bingham in his Hymns. Christ. Latina, 1871, as "Stat ecce! in altis montibus jam nuncius." (J. J.)

On what has now been sown. J. Newton. [Close of Service.] This hymn is in C. U. in three forms, as follows:—

1. The original in 1 st. of 6 l. This is found in a few of the older collections. The stanza is the sixth of J. Newton's hymn "What contradictions meet," which appeared in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. ii., No. 26.
2. The same stanza, with the addition of a doxology as given in (Common Praise, 1879).
3. The same stanza, with the addition of J. Newton's "Short Hymn," "To Thee our wants are known," from the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. iii., No. 103. This is No. 98 in the Irish Church Hymnal, 1873. (J. J.)

Once in Royal David's city. C. F. Alexander, nee Humphreys. [Christmas.] 1st appeared in her Hymns for Little Children, in 1848, p. 30. It is based on the words of the Creed, "Who was conceived by the Holy Ghost, Born of the Virgin Mary," and is in 6 st. of 6 l. It is usually given in a correct form, and ranks as one of the most popular of Mrs. Alexander's hymns for children. (J. J.)

Once more before we part. [Close of Service.] The details concerning this hymn, and other which have grown out of it, are as follows:—

1. Once more before we part. By J. Hart, in his 1762 Supplement to his Hymns, &c., No. 79, as follows:—
"Once more, before we part,
We'll bless the Saviour's name;
Record His mercies every heart,
Sing every tongue the same."

"Hoand up His sacred word,
And feed thereon and grow;
Go on to seek, to know the Lord,
And practice what you know."
This is in C. U. in Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1866, and other collections.

2. Once more before we part. By J. Hart and R. Hawker. In 1787 R. Hawker opened a Sunday School at Charles, Plymouth; and then, or shortly after, he pub. his Ps. & Hys. Sung by the Children of the Sunday School in the Parish Church of Charles, Plymouth, &c., &c. In this Coll. Hart's hymn appeared in this form:—

"Once more before we part,
Bless the Redeemer's name;
Write it on every heart,
Speak every tongue the same.
Chorus. Jesus the sinners' friend,
Him Whom our souls adore:
His praises have no end;
Praise Him for evermore."

"Lord, in Thy grace we came;
That blessing still impart;
We met in Jesus' name,
In Jesus' name we part.
Jesus the sinners' friend, &c."

"Still on Thy holy word,
We'd live, and feed, and grow;
Go on to know the Lord,
And practice what we know.
Jesus the sinners' friend, &c."

"Here, Lord, we came to live,
And in all truth increase;
All that's amiss forgive,
And send us home in peace.
Jesus the sinners' friend, &c."

"Now, Lord, before we part,
Help us to bless Thy name;
May every tongue and heart
Praise and adore the same.
Jesus the sinner's friend," &c.

The portions above in italics are from Hart's hymns, and the last stanza is also Hart's st. i. rewritten; the rest of the hymn is by Dr. Hawker. This text was repeated in several later collections.

3. Come, brethren, are we part. This, as No. 610 in the Comprehensive Rippon, 1844, is composed of st. i. and ii. with the chorus from the Hart-Hawker text, and a new stanza as st. iii. This text is repeated in Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1866, No. 1049; but in the ascription the fact that st. iii. is from the Comprehensive Rippon, 1844, is ignored.

4. Come, children, are we part. This text in some American collections for children, and the English Meth. S. S. H. Bk., 1879, is composed of st. i. and iii. of the Comprehensive Rippon text slightly altered.

[W. T. B.]

Once more we meet to pray. Lent. We have traced this hymn to Matthew Wilks's enlarged ed. of G. Whitefield's Col. of Hys. . . . Corrected and Enlarged, with some Original Hymns, &c., Lond., 1798, No. 300. It is in 4 st. of 4 l., and headed "Distress." It subsequently appeared in several collections, including the American Baptist Psalmist, 1843; Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1866, and others. In Spurgeon the text of st. iv. is slightly altered. This appears to be one of the "Original Hymns" named in Wilks's title-page, but whether by him or not we cannot say. (J. J.)

Once Thou didst on earth appear. C. Wesley. [God manifest in the Flesh.] This is a cento thus composed: st. i. from Short Hys., 1762, vol. ii., No. 790; st. ii., iii., Short Hys., vol. ii., No. 649; and st. iv., Hys. for Families, 1747, No. 28. In this form it was given in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 401, and from thence has passed into several collections in G. Britain and America. In the 1875 ed. of the Wes. H. Bk. st. iv. is omitted. (J. J.)

Onderdonk, Henry Ustie, D.D., was b. in New York, March 16, 1789, and educated at Columbia College. Taking Holy Orders, he was for some time Rector of St. Ann's Church, Brooklyn, New York. On the 27th Oct., 1827, he was consecrated at Philadelphia, and acted as Assistant Bishop of Philadelphia to Bishop White from that date to 1836, when upon the death of Bishop White, he entered upon the full charge of the diocese. He was suspended by the House of Bishops on the ground of intemperance in 1844, but restored in 1856. He d. in Philadelphia, Dec. 6th, 1858. Without Bishop Doane's commanding talents, he yet rendered large and useful service to hymnody as author and compiler. He was a member (and apparently a leading one) of the Committee which compiled the American Prayer Book Coll. of 1826 [American Hymnody, § 1.], and was by far the largest contributor thereto. Apart from hymn-writing, so far as we know, he wrote nothing in verse. His original hymns contributed to the Prayer Book Coll., 1826, are :—

1. Although the vine its fruit deny. Confidence in God. A paraphrase of Hab. iii. 17-19.
2. Blest be Thou, the God of Israel. Praise. A paraphrase of 1 Chron. xxix. 10-13.
3. How wondrous and great. Missions. A paraphrase of Rev. xv. 3, 4, being the Song of Moses and of the Lamb.
4. On Zion, and on Lebanon. Missions. Based on the text, Is. xxxv. 2.
5. Seek, my soul, the narrow gate. The Narrow Way. A paraphrase of St. Luke xiii. 24-27.
6. Sinner, rouse thee from thy sleep. Exhortation to awake out of sin. Based upon Eph. v. 14-17.
7. The Spirit in our hearts. Invitation. Based upon Rev. xlii. 17-20. This hymn may possibly have been suggested by Dr. Gibbons's "The Spirit in the word," which appeared in Hys. adapted to Divine Worship, 1769, p. 149. Bp. Onderdonk's hymn is in extensive use. Sometimes it is given as "The Spirit to our hearts."
8. Though I should seek to wash me clean. Need of the Mediator. This is not only used in full, but sts. iii.-v. are also used separately as "Ah, not like erring man is God."
9. When, Lord, to this our western land. Missions. This, and No. 4, were given in the Prayer Bk. Coll. "For Missions to the new Settlements in the United States."

In addition to these original hymns, Onderdonk contributed to the same collection the following adaptations from others :—

10. Ah, how shall fallen man! Redemption. This is I. Watts's "How should the sons of Adam's race?" (p. 539. l.), rewritten from the form given to it in the Scottish Translations and Paraphrases, 1781.
11. Heirs of unending life. Trust in God. Of this st. i. is by Onderdonk, and st. ii. and iii. are altered from Beddome's hymn "That we might walk with God." Sometimes given as "Heirs of immortal life."
12. The gentle Saviour calls. Christ accepting Children. This is altered from Doddridge's "See Israel's gentle Shepherd stand." It is sometimes given as "The Saviour kindly calls." [F. M. B.]

One there is above all others, O how He loves. Marianne Nunn. [Jesus the Friend.] The first st. of this hymn is :—

"One there is above all others :—

O how He loves !
His love beyond a brother's ;
O how He loves !
Earthly friends may fail and leave us,
This day kind, the next bereave us ;
But this friend will ne'er deceive us,
O how He loves !"

This hymn appeared in her brother's (J. Nunn's) Ps. & Hymns, 1817, in 4 st., and was intended as an adaptation of J. Newton's hymn as below, to the Welsh air "Ar hyd y nos." From Nunn's Ps. & Hys. it has passed into numerous collections, and sometimes as Opie, Amelia, nee Alderson, daughter of Dr. Alderson, a physician at Norwich, was b. there Nov. 12, 1769. In May 1798 she was married to John Opie, the painter, who d. in 1814. She joined the Society of Friends. In her subsequent life she lived at Mostow, Norwich, where she d. Dec. 2, 1853. Mrs. Opie's prose works were some-what numerous, and included Father and Daughter, 1812; Tales of Real Life, 1813; and others. Her poetical works were Miscellaneous Poems, 1802; The Warrior's Return and Other Poems, 1808; Lays for the Dead, 1833, &c. Very few of her poems have come into use as hymns. The best known is "There seems a voice in every gale."

Opitz, Martin, s. of Sebastian Opitz, butcher at Bunzlau in Silesia, was b. at Bunzlau, Dec. 23, 1597. He entered the University of Frankfurt a. Oder in 1618, and in 1619 went to Heidelberg, where he acted as a private tutor, and studied literature and philosophy at the University, paying also short visits to Strasburg and Tübingen. When the University was threatened by the Spanish troops (they sacked the town under Tilly in Sept. 1622), Opitz left Heidelberg in Oct. 1620, and with his friend, H. A. Hamilton (a member of a Danish noble family), travelled through Holland, Friesland and Jutland. In the spring of 1621 he returned to Silesia through Lübeck, and at Easter, 1622, became Professor of Philosophy and Poetry in the Gymnasium founded at Weissenburg in Transylvania by Prince Bethlen Gabor (Gabriel Bethlen). He resigned this post in the summer of 1623, and then for some time employed himself at the request of Duke Rudolf of Liegnitz-Brieg in versifying the Epistles for Sundays and Festivals according to the metres of the French Psalter (see below), being rewarded with the title of Rath, but receiving no permanent appointment. In 1625 he accompanied his cousin, Kaspar Kirchner, on an embassy to Vienna, where he presented to the Emperor Ferdinand II. a poem on the death of the Grandduke Karl (Prince-Bishop of Breslau, and brother of the Emperor), and was crowned as a poet by the Emperor (who in 1628 also raised him to the nobility as Opitz von Boberfeld). He then became, in 1626, private secretary to the Burgrave Carl Hannibal von Dohna, president of the Supreme Court in Silesia. When, in 1628, von Dohna began the Counter-Reformation, by means of the Lichtenstein dragoons, against the Protestants of Silesia, Opitz wrote poems in his praise, and in 1631 pub. a tr. of the controversial manual of the Jesuit Martin Becanus, "for the Conversion of the Erring" to help on this work. He also executed a diplomatic mission to Paris in 1630, on Dohna's behalf, where he became acquainted with Hugo Grotius. When Dohna was driven out of Breslau in Sept. 1632, by means of the Saxon and Swedish troops, Opitz remained behind.

In the autumn of 1633 he was sent by Duke Johann Christian of Liegnitz-Brieg as his plenipotentiary to Berlin, and also to the Swedish chancellor Oxenstjerna. When Wallenstein obtained the mastery over the Silesian duchies, Opitz accompanied Duke Johann Christian to Thorn in 1635. He then went to Danzig, where in June, 1637, he was definitely installed as Historiographer to King Wladislaw IV. of Poland. Here, from this place of rest, he did his best, by correspondence and otherwise, to atone for the oppression of his brethren in Silesia. During the pestilence which visited Danzig in 1639 he was accosted on Aug. 17 by a diseased beggar to whom he gave an alms, and whose frightful appearance so affected him that he returned home, sickened of the pestilence, and d. Aug. 20, 1639. (Allg. Deutsche Biog. xxiv. 370; Goedeke's Grundriss, iii., 1887, p. 37, &c.)

Opitz was pre-eminently a literary man of the world who knew how to ingratiate himself with people of all opinions. He was one of those writers who exercise an enormous influence over their contemporaries, but whose works succeeding generations are content to leave unread. A long list of his works is given by Goedeke, some ninety (including a considerable number of trs. from the Greek, Latin, French, and Dutch), of which appeared during his lifetime. In his poems originality and force are conspicuous by their absence, and the great majority have little but their style to recommend them. He became a member of the great German literary union, the Fruitbearing Society, in 1629. His great merit was as a reformer of German prosody by his example of literary style and by his Buch der Deutschen Poesiey, an epoch-making work, pub. at Breslau in 1624. Here he laid down the rules of German verse, and may be said to have given it the form which it retains to this day. Among his sacred poems his hymns are much the best (he also pub. a paraphrase of the Lamentations of Jeremiah in 1626; and of Canticles in 1627). He also pub. versions of detached Psalms in 1629, 1630, 1634, 1635, and 1636, and a complete version in 1637 (see Psalters, German). His hymns on the Epistles for the Church Year seem to have been written in 1624 (see above), but were apparently first pub. as Die Episteln der Sonntage und fürnemsten Feiert des gantzen Jahrs, auff die Weisen der Franckischen Psalmen in Lieder gefasset, Breslau, 1628 (printed at Leipzig) [Weimar Library]. His hymns, Psalm versions, &c., to the number of 248, are collected in his Geistliche Psalmen, Breslau, 1638. Twenty-nine are given by Müntzell, 1886, pp. 187-221.

A few of Opitz's hymns are found in recent German hymn-books, while two have passed into English, viz. :—

i. Brieh auf, und werde Lichte. Epiphany. In his Episteln, 1628, p. 11, in 6 st. of 6 l., and entitled, "On the Holy Three Kings Day. Isaiah 60." Repeated in the Geistliche Psalmen, 1638, p. 132, and in the Ohio G. B., 1870, No. 55. Tr. as :—

Zion, awake and brighten. In full by E. Cronenwett, as No. 51 in the Ohio Luth. Hym., 1880.

ii. O Licht, geboren aus dem Lichte. Morning. His finest hymn, and a special favourite in Silesia. 1st pub. at the end of his Zehen Psalmen Davids, Breslau and Leipzig, 1634, p. 48, in 3 st. of 10 l., and entitled "Morning Hymn." Bunken, in his Versuch, 1833, p. 865, speaks of it as "of singular beauty in form and contents," and as a "pious prayer for the Fatherland and for the Church in her sore troubles." Repeated in his Geist. Psalmen, 1638, p. 231, in the Breslau Kirchen- und Hausmusik, 1644, p. 762, and recently in the Unv. L. S., 1851, No. 470. Tr. as :—

Thou Light, from Light eternal springing. A good and full tr. by H. J. Buckoll, in his Hymns from the German, 1842, p. 17; repeated, slightly altered, in the Dalston Hospital H. Bk., 1848.

Other trs. are: (1) "O Holy Light, of Light engendered." By C. W. Stields, in Sacred Lyrics from the German, Philadelphia, U. S. A., 1859, p. 161. (2) "O Sun of Righteousness, thou Light." By Dr. G. Walker, 1860, p. 58. (3) "O Light, who out of Light wast born." By Miss Winkworth, 1869, p. 173. [J. M.]

Opprobriis, Jesu, satur. C. Coffin. [Passiontide.] Given in the Paris Breviary, 1736, as the Ferial hymn at Matins throughout Passion Week, and after till Maundy Thursday. It is also in Coffin's Hymni Sacri, 1736, p. 50, and some modern French Brevs. J. Chandler in his Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837, and Card. Newman in his Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865, also give the text. Tr. as:—

His trial o'er, and now beneath. By J. Chandler, in his Hys. of the Prim. Church, 1837, p. 72, and his Hys. of the Church, 1841, No. 40. It has been repeated in a few collections, and also, altered as "From judgment taken, lo, beneath" in the Hyl. for the Use of St. John the Evangelist's, &c., Aberdeen, 1870. In the Suppl. Hyl. to H. A. & M., 1889, Chandler's tr. is altered by the Compilers to "O scorned and out-cast Lord, beneath."

Other trs. are:—

1. Up that dark hill funereal, faint with ill. I. Williams, in the British Mag., April, 1834; and his Hys. tr. from the Parisian Breviary, 1839.

2. Like faithful Abraham's holy child. R. Campbell, 1850.

3. Now to the cruel scourge, the twined thorn. W. J. Blew, 1852-55. The 1st st. of this tr. of "Et jam flagellis," which is st. vii. of "Fando quis audivit, Dei," p. 658. The tr. of "Opprobriis, Jesu, satur" begins with st. ii.

4. Jesu, by cruel taunts distressed. J. D. Chambers, 1857. [J. J.]

Optatus votis omnium. [Ascension.] This hymn is probably of the 6th or 7th cent. It is found in two mss. of the 11th cent. in the British Museum (Vesp. D., xii. f. 74 b; Jul. A. vi. f. 50 b); in a ms. of the 11th cent. in the Library of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge (391, p. 249); and in the Lat. Hys. of the Anglo-Saxon Ch., 1851, it is printed from an 11th cent. ms. at Durham (B. iii. 32, f. 26). It was included in the Ambrosian Breviary, 1539, and some Carthusian and Cistercian Breviaries. The printed text is also in Mone, No. 175, and Daniel, i., No. 55. [J. M.]

Translations in C. U.:—

1. Delight and joy of earth. By W. J. Blew, of st. i.-iv., in his Church Hyl. & Tune Bk., 1852-55, and Rice's Sel. from the same, 1870. In the 1860 Appendix to the Hymnal N., No. 135, st. i.-iv. and viii. are from this tr., and st. v.-vii. are from Mrs. Charles's tr. of the same hymn altered. This cento begins "Delight of all the earth."

2. O mighty joy to all. This begins with st. v., "O grande cunctis gaudium," and was tr. by W. J. Blew as above, 1852-55.

3. At length the longed-for joy is given. By Mrs. Charles, in her Voice of Christian Life in Song, 1858, p. 104. This is given in full or in part in several collections, and is the most widely used of the trs. of this hymn.

4. O wondrous joy to all mankind. By J. Skinner, in his Daily Service Hymnal, 1864.

5. The sacred day hath beamed. By R. C. Singleton, in his Anglican H. Bk., 1871.

Ὁς θεῖος ποταμός. [Time of Postilence.] Two Cathismata from the Greek Office of Prayer Oil, given after the 3rd ed. of the Canon by St. Arsenius. The only tr. into English is "Christ, mercy's holy River," by Dr. Littledale, first printed in the Church Times, Aug. 13, 1864, and signed "R. F. L." In 1867 it was transferred in an altered form to the People's Hymnal, No. 322, and signed "A. L. P." It is therein appointed for a "Time of Postilence," for which it is most suitable. The doxology added by Dr. Littledale is not in the original [J. J.]

Oster, Edward, was b. at Falmouth in January, 1798, and was educated for the medical profession, first by Dr. Carver, at Falmouth, and then at Guy's Hospital, London. From 1819 to 1836 he was house surgeon at the Swansea Infirmary. He then removed to London, and devoted himself to literary pursuits. For some time he was associated with the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, both in London and at Bath. In 1841 he became the Editor of the Royal Cornwall Gazette, and took up his residence at Truro. He retained that appointment till his death, at Truro, March 7, 1903. He was a M.B.E. and F.R.S. For the Linnæan Society he wrote Burrowing and Boring Marine Animals. He also pub. Church and Bible: The Voyage: a Poem written at Sea, and in the West Indies, and illustrated by papers on Natural History, 1830; The Life of Lord Esmouth, 1837, &c. His hymnological work is mainly connected with the Mitre H. Bk. During 1833-36 he was associated with Prebendary W. J. Hall, the editor, in producing that collection, which was pub. in 1836 as P's and H's, adapted to The Services of the Church of England [see Kath. W. J., p. 441]. He resided in Mr. Hall's house during the time. From the "HALL MSS." we gather that he contributed 15 versions of the Psalms (5 being rewritten from others), and 50 hymns (a few rewritten). Most of these hymns and Psalm versions, together with others not in the Mitre H. Bk., were afterwards given in the monthly numbers of his Church and King, from Nov. 1836 to Aug. 1837. The best known of these hymns are, "O God, unseen, yet ever near," and "Worship, honour, glory, blessing." Several of his hymns are annotated under their respective first lines (see Index); the rest in C. U. are:—

1. Father, Whose love and truth fulfill. Bdly Baptism.
2. Glory to God: with joyful adoration. Praise to the Father.
3. Great God, O'er ramp and heaven supreme. Men the Steeds of God's chariot.
4. Great God of hosts, our ears have heard. Ps. xiv. Based on the N. Version.
5. Great God, Whose awful mystery. Bdly Trinity.
6. I hold the sacred book of God. Martyrs.
7. Jehovah hath spoken, the nations shall hear. Second Advent.
8. Lord, may the inward grace abound. Bdly Baptism.
9. May we Thy precepts, Lord, fulfill. Love.
10. Mighty Saviour, gracious King. Advent.
11. O God, the help of all Thy Saints. Ps. x.
12. O Thou, the Lord and Life of these, Christ the Life of Men.
13. O Saviour, Who didst come. Resurrection.
14. Saviour, Whose love could stoop to death. Easter.
15. See, Lord, before Thy mercy wait. Our School.
16. Set in a high and favoured place. Advent.
17. Wake from the dead, new life begin. Levi.
18. With trembling awe we come. Levi.

Several of these hymns are not in Oster's Church and King. We have ascribed them and others to him on the authority of the "HALL MSS." It must be noted also that the text in the Church and King often differs from that in the Mitre. [J. J.]

Oswald, Heinrich Siegmund, s. of Johann Heinrich Oswald or Oswald, of Nimmesatt, near Lönitz, in Silesia, was b. at Nimmesatt, June 30, 1751. After passing through the school at Schmiedberg he was for seven years clerk in a public office at Breslau. In 1773 he became Secretary to the Landrath von Prittwitz at Glatz, with whom he remained two years, and was thereafter in business at Hamburg and at Breslau. Through J. D. Hofmeier, Oberconsistorialrath at Potsdam, whose daughter he married, he became acquainted with King Friedrich Wilhelm II. of Prussia, and in 1791 was appointed reader to the king. He accordingly removed to Potsdam, and was in 1791 appointed also Geheimrath. After the king's death, on Nov. 16, 1797, Oswald received a pension, and retired first to Hirschberg, and then to Breslau, where he d. Sept. 8, 1834. (Allg. Deutsche Biog. xxiv. 508; Miller's Singers & Songs, 1862, p. 303; extracts from the Breslauer Zeitung, Sept. 12, 1834, and the Schlesische Provinzialblätter, 1835, p. 289, kindly communicated by Dr. Markgraf of the Breslau Stadt-Bibliothek, &c.)

Oswald's hymns, over 100 in all, appeared principally in his (1) Unterhaltungen für gläubige Seelen, Breslau, 1792. (2) Gedichte und Lieder fürs Herz, Berlin, 1793. (3) Letzten Mittheilungen neuer der Kirche und Religion geweihter Aese, Breslau, 1826. (4) Schönungsgesänge, Breslau, 8. m. (first Aug. 1827).

Three or four of Oswald's hymns have passed into German hymn-books. One has been tr. into English, viz.:—

Wenn in Leidestagen. For Mourners, in his Letzte Mittheilungen, 1826, p. 42, in 14 st. of 4 l., and entitled "An exhortation to Tranquillity. To the Suffering. Psalm 56, v. 15." Busen, in his Fernsch., 1833, No. 813 (Allg. G. B., 1840, No. 333), selects at. i.-iii., 1., iii.-xiv. The singing of this beautiful hymn (in Miss Cox's version) formed an impressive part of the service in the church at Edensor at the funeral of Lord Frederick Cavendish, May 11, 1882. Tr. as:—

1. O! Let him whose sorrow. A very good tr. from Bunsen's text, by Miss Cox, in her Sacred Hys. from the German, 1841, p. 181 (H. from the Ger., 1864, p. 189), included in Alford's Ps. & Hys., 1844, and others. Since its reception into H. A. & M., 1861 (unaltered save st. vii. and the change to the plural), it has attained a wide popularity, and is found in many English and American collections. In the Unitarian Hys. for the Ch. of Christ, Boston, U.S., 1853, the Hymnary, 1872, and others, it begins with st. ii., "Where the mourner weeping," and in C. H. Bateman's Sacred Melodies, 1872, with st. iii., "God will never leave thee." In Dale's English H. Bk., 1874 (in order to make up 4 double st.) four lines, beginning "On Thy truth relying," were added from J. Montgomery's "In the hour of trial" (p. 566, ll.). This form is also in J. L. Porter's Coll., 1876, and Horder's Cong. Hys., 1884.

Another tr. is: "When in thine hours of grief," by Lady E. Portescue, 1843, p. 71. [J. M.]

Otfrid of Weissenburg, was b. about the beginning of the 9th cent., according to some in Franconia, according to others near the Lake of Constanx. After receiving the elements of his education in the Benedictine monastery of Weissenburg in Alsace, he went, about 830, to the cathedral school at Constanx. He afterwards studied at the school of the monastery of Fulda, where, under the care of Rabanus Maurus, he learned to love his mother tongue. In 846 he left Fulda, and, after a short stay at St. Gall, settled as a monk and priest at Weissenburg, where he became head of the monastic school. Here he wrote and completed about 865 a German poetical Life of our Lord (or Harmony of the Gospels), or Evangelienbuch, in 5 books of 15,000 lines (first printed at Basel in 1571; recent eds. by E. G. Graff, 1831; J. Kelle, 1856; P. Piper, 1878; O. Erdmann, 1882; trs. into modern German by G. Rapp, 1858, F. Rechenberg, 1862, J. Kelle, 1870, &c.), a most interesting work philologically, and the earliest example of a long German poem in rhyme. (Allg. Deutsche Biog. xxiv. 329; Goedeke's Grundriss, vol. i., 1884, p. 22, &c.) Besides this he wrote a number of rhymed prayers in German. Two which have been ascribed to him, and have been tr. by Miss Winkworth, are noted under their first lines, see Du him-lisco trohtin (p. 315, l.), and Got, thir eigenhaf ist (p. 443, l.). They are in his manner, but appear to be of later date. Miss Winkworth also gives a tr. of a section of the Evangelienbuch, which begins thus:—

Mánot unah thisu firt. This is chapter xviii. of Book i., and is on the Epiphany. It is in Wackernagel's deutsche Kirchenlied, II. p. 8, in 28 st. of 4 l.; in Erdmann's ed. of the Evangelienbuch, 1882, p. 47, &c. Erdmann, in his notes at p. 370, speaks of this chapter as the "first detailed mystical explanation [of the Return of the Magi to their own land]. The removing of the Magi from their home and their home-going by another way reminds us of our Home, the glorious Paradise (lines 1-10); we have lost it by pride, self-will and disobedience, and sojourn in sorrowful banishment (11-30). In order to reach Home again, we must follow the new way of purity, humility, love and self-denial (31-46)." The only tr. is "Now warneth us the Wise Mens fare." By Miss Winkworth, 1869, p. 17. [J. Our festal morn is come. W. H. Haecgerl. [Missionary Anniversary.] Appeared in W. Carus Wilson's Bk. of Christian Psalms, 2nd ed., 1842, No. 625, in 4 st. of 4 l., and is based on Ps. lxxxi. 3. In Mercer's C. P. & H. Bk., Oxford ed. 1844, No. 125, st. ii. is from I. Watts's version of Ps. xlviii. Pt. ii., st. i. and st. vi. is also an addition. [J. J.]

Our God is love: and all His saints. [Brotherly Love.] We have not been able to trace this hymn beyond Cotterill's Sol., 1819, No. 129, where it is given in 4 st. of 4 l., and headed, "For Christian Love." It is not by Cotterill, and although sometimes attributed to Wilkings, its authorship is unknown. It is in somewhat extensive use. [J. J.]

Our God, our God, Thou shinest here. T. H. Gill. [Whitenside.] Written in 1846, and 1st pub. in G. Dawson's Ps. & Hym., 1846, No. 119, in 7 st. of 4 l. In 1853 it was given in Hedge & Huntington's Hym. for the Ch. of Christ, No. 726, with the omission of st. vi., and thus came into American C. U. It was rewritten by the author for his Golden Chain, &c., 1869, No. 55, in 8 st. of 4 l., is therein entitled "The Glory of the latter days," and is accompanied with the quotation from Milton:—

"The power of Thy grace is not passed away through the primitive times as fond and foolish men imagine, but Thy kingdom is now at hand, and Thou standing at the door."

The Bapt. Hymnal, 1879, No. 756; Dale's English H. Bk., 1874, No. 364; Horder's Comp. Hymns, 1884, No. 185, and other modern English collections follow the 1869 text. The cento "Come, Holy Ghost, in us arise," in the American Bapt. Service of Song, Boston, 1871, is also from the 1869 text, and is composed of st. v-viii. The author says of the full text, "I approve of both forms, but the earlier has more freshness and freedom." [J. J.]

Our God, our help in ages past. I. Watts. [Ps. xc.] This is the first part of his c. m. rendering of Ps. xc., in 9 st. of 4 l., which appeared in his Psalms of David, &c., 1719, p. 229, and entitled "Man Frail, and God Eternal." This version of Ps. xc. has come down to modern collections in the following forms:—

(1) The original, in a few instances in full, but shorter in an abridged form of st. i., ii., iii., v., vii., and ix.

(2) The altered text by J. Wesley, 1st pub. in his col. of Ps. & Hym., 1737, where it begins, "O God, our help," &c. In this text alterations are introduced in st. i., ii., v., vi., and viii. This arrangement in 7 st. was included in the Hym. Bk., 1740, No. 39, and has been retained in all subsequent editions of that collection. A collation of any hymnal with the original and these changes by J. Wesley, will show that in nearly every case the one taken are i., ii., iii., v., vi., ix., and the alterations, if any, are by J. Wesley. In Riggs's Authorized H. & M., 1867, a rendering into Latin by V. S. Calverley, 1866, "Auxilium quædam, nunc-upia," is given of the H. & M. text, which is the original, with J. Wesley's "O God" for "our God."

(3) A curious arrangement of Watts with this & already was given by Toplady in his Ps. & Hym., 1776, No. 308, in 10 st. of 4 l. This cento is unknown to modern collections.

(4) In Snodell's Manchester Coll., 1821, Ps. xc. is composed of st. i., ii., from this version by Watts; and iii.-v. by another hand. It is repeated in the 1857 ed. by his son. It is a most unequal cento, with a grand opening and a most feeble finish.

Of Watts's original it would be difficult to write too highly. It is undoubtedly one of his finest compositions, and his best paraphrase. In the commonly accepted form of six stanzas it is seen to the fullest advantage, the omitted portions being unequal to the rest, and impede the otherwise grandly sustained flow of thought. It has been rendered into many languages, and its use is universal. Orig. text in modern editions of Watts. [Fasters. Eng. § xv.] [J. J.]

Our heavenly Father calls. P. Doddridge. [Communion with God.] This hymn is in the c. m., but is undated. It was given, without alteration, in Job Orton's posthumous ed. of Doddridge's Hymns, &c., 1755, No. 346, in 5 st. of 4 l., with the heading, "Communion with God and Christ," and again in J. D. Humphreys's ed. of the same, 1839, No. 372. It is in several hymn-books. [J. J.]

Our heavenly Father! hear our prayer. J. Montgomery. [The Lord's Prayer.] Written Feb. 28, 1835 [m. m.], and printed as No. v. in the Church Missionary Society's Jubilee Tract of Hymns and Prayers, 1835, in 3 st. of 4 l. It was repeated in Montgomery's Original Hymns, 1853, No. 63. [J. J.]

Our Saviour's words are, Watch and Pray. J. Montgomery. [Watchfulness and Prayer.] Written in 1835 [m. m.], and printed on a broadsheet for use at the Anniversary Sermons of the Red Hill Wesleyan Sunday Schools, Sheffield, March 1 and 2, 1835, in 6 st. of 4 l. It was also used by the Sheffield Sunday School Union, at the Whit-Monday gathering, 1841. In 1853 it was included in Montgomery's Orig. Hym., No. 162, and headed, "Watch and Pray." [J. J.]

Our souls shall magnify the Lord. In Him our spirit shall rejoice. J. Montgomery. [For Friendly Societies.] This hymn is given in modern collections in three forms as follows:—

1. The original. This appeared in Cotterill's Sol., 7th ed., 1819, No. 156, in 4 st. of 4 l., and headed "For unity and brotherly love." It was repeated, unaltered, in the 9th ed., 1820, No. 130, where it is given "For a Friendly Society;" in Rickert's Christian Psalms, 1821, and others of the older collections. This is the original of No. 365, in the S. P. C. K. Church Hym., 1871, and not No. 2 as under. Both the text and the date quoted in the note in Church Hym. follow are incorrect. The alterations of the text in that collection are from an Appendix to the Coke and Jewell hymnal.

2. Author's Revised Text. In his Christian Psalms, 1826, No. 305, Montgomery slightly altered the text of 1819, added therein three stanzas (ii., iii., vi.), and gave the name as a hymn "For a Female-Friendly Society." This begins, "Our soul shall magnify," &c., and is repeated in his original Hym., 1853, No. 286.

3. A cento. In Hall's Worship H. Bk., 1836, No. 285, is a cento composed of st. i., ii., iv., and v. of the 1825 text, slightly altered. Its use is limited. [J. J.]

Our times are in Thy hand, Father, we wish them there. W. F. Lloyd. [Re-signation.] The opening of this hymn is:—

"Our times are in Thy hand,
Father, we wish them there;
Our life, our soul, our all, we leave Entirely to Thy care."

This hymn appeared in Hym. for the Poor of the Flock, 1841, No. 257, in 6 st. of 4 l., each stanza opening with the same first line. This was repeated in Ps. Hym. and Spiritual S., Lond., D. Walther, 1842, Pt. i., No. 64; and again in A few Hym. and some Spiritual Songs selected 1856 for the Little Flock, No. 209. In Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1866, the text is slightly altered. Spurgeon's date, "1835" we cannot authenticate. [J. J.]

Our times are in Thy hand, and Thou wilt guide our footsteps, &c. Sir J. Bowring. [Divine guidance.] The first stanza of this hymn reads:—

"Our times are in Thy hand, and Thou Wilt guide our footsteps at Thy will:
Lord, to Thy purposes we bow:
Do Thou Thy purposes fulfil."

The hymn appeared in Beard's Unitarian Coll. of Hys., 1837, No. 37, in 3 st. of 4 l., but is not marked, in common with other hymns by Sir J. Bowring, as "Original." In the 3rd ed. of the author's Matins and Vespers, 1841, p. 229, it was given in an unaltered form. In the American Unitarian Hys. of the Spirit, 1864, it reads "My times are in Thy hand," &c. [J. J.]

Pabat, Julius, s. of Karl Leopold Pabat, sometime Inspector of the Royal Normal School at Erfurt, was b. at Wilhelmsruhe, near Eitorf on the Sieg (Rhenish Prussia), Oct. 18, 1817. From 1838 to 1842 he studied theology and philosophy at the Universities of Breslau and Halle; from 1842 to 1852 he acted as private tutor in Berlin, in the Neumark, and in Dresden; and from 1852 to the end of 1855, was engaged in literary pursuits at Berlin. After New Year's Day, 1856, he resided at Dresden as secretary and teacher of the dramatic art on the staff of the general direction of the Court Theatre and the Royal Orchestra, receiving, in 1860, the honorary title of Hofrath. He d. Oct. 22, 1881 (F. Brümmer's Deutsche Dichter-lexicon, 1877, pt. ii. p. 123; ms. from his family, &c.).

His hymns appeared principally in his (1) Die Furcht des Herrn ist der Weisheit Anfang, Berlin, 1846, and his (2) Christliches Schatzkästlein, Hamburg, 1848. The only one in English C. U. is:—

O Geist des Lichtes, komm hernieder. Whitsuntide. Schatzkästlein, p. 227, in 7 st. of 5 l., entitled "Festival Hymn." Tr. as:—

Spirit of Light, come down, we pray. In full, by Dr. R. Maguire, in his Melodies of the Fatherland, 1883, p. 73, repeated in R. Gault's Hymn Bk., 1886, No. 252, omitting st. v., vi. [J. M.]

Pain and toil are over now. Cecil F. Alexander, née Humphreys. [Easter Eve.] Pub. in her Verses for Holy Seasons, &c., 1846, p. 59, in 6 st. of 6 l., and headed "Easter Even. 'And laid it in his own new tomb.' St. Matt. xxvii. 60." In C. U. it is commonly abbreviated, one form being that in the American Protestant Episco. Church Hymnal, 1871, where st. i., ii. and iv., are altered, and the two closing lines of each stanza are omitted. These alterations and omissions have gone far towards utterly spoiling the hymn. [J. J.]

Palmer, Horatio Richmond, M.D., D.C., was b. April 26, 1834. He is the author of several works on the theory of music; and the editor of some musical editions of hymn-books. To the latter he contributed numerous tunes, some of which have attained to great popularity, and 5 of which are in I. D. Sankey's Sacred Songs and Solos, Lond., 1881. His publications include Songs of Love for the Bible School; and Book of Anthems, the combined sale of which has exceeded one million copies. As a hymn-writer he is known by his "Field not to temptation," which was written in 1868, and pub. in the National Sunday School Teachers' Magazine, from which it passed, with music by the author, into his Songs of Love, &c., 1874, and other collections. In America its use is extensive. Dr. Palmer's degree was conferred by the University of Chicago in 1880. [J. J.]

Palmer, Ray, D.D., s. of the Hon. Thomas Palmer, a Judge in Rhode Island, was b. at Little Compton, Rhode Island, Nov. 12, 1808. His early life was spent at Boston, where he was for some time clerk in a dry-goods store. At Boston he joined the Park Street Congregational Church, then under the pastoral care of Dr. S. E. Dwight. After spending three years at Phillips Academy, Andover, he entered Yale College, New Haven, where he graduated in 1830. In 1835 he became pastor of the Central Congregational Church, Bath, Maine. During his pastorate there he visited Europe in 1847. In 1850 he was appointed to the First Congregational Church, at Albany, New York, and in 1865 Corresponding Secretary to the American Congregational Union, New York. He resigned in 1878, and retired to Newark, New Jersey. He d. at Newark, Mar. 29, 1887. Dr. Palmer's published works in prose and verse include:—

- (1) Memoirs and Select Remains of Charles Pond, 1828; (2) The Spirit's Voice, a Poem, 1837; (3) How to Live, or Secrets of Mrs. C. L. Watson, 1838; (4) Practical Duty Book, 1839; (5) Spiritual Improvement, 1859, republished as Christ Abides in 1861; (6) What is Truth? or Hints on the Formation of Religious Opinions, 1858; (7) Remember Me, or The Holy Communion, 1845; (8) Hymns and Sacred Poems, with Meditations, 1866; (9) Hymns of my Holy Father, and other Poems, 1862; (10) Hope, or the Celestial Paradise, 1873; and (11) Voices of Hope and Gladness, 1881.

Most of Dr. Palmer's hymns have passed into congregational use, and have won great acceptance. The best of them by their combination of thought, poetry, and devotion, are superior to almost all others of American origin. The first which he wrote has become the most widely known of all. It is:—

1. My faith looks up to Thee. Faith in Christ. This hymn was written by the author when fresh from College, and during an engagement to teaching in New York. This was in 1836. The author says concerning its composition, "I gave form to what I felt, by writing, with little effort, the stanza. I recollect I wrote them with very tender emotion, and ended the last line with tears." A short time afterwards the hymn was given to Dr. Lowell Mason for use, who thought good, in a work then being compiled by him and Dr. T. Hastings. In 1821 that work was Practical Songs for School Worship; adapted to the use of Presidents, &c. Words and Music arranged by Thomas Hastings, of New York, and Lowell Mason of Boston. It is No. 141 in 4 st. of 31, entitled "Self-Consecration," and accompanied with the tune by Dr. L. Mason, then given as "My faith looks up to Thee," but subsequently known as Adieu. (Orig. text of hymn in Hastings's Gift, 1852.) It has passed into most modern collections in all English-speaking countries and has been rendered into numerous languages. That in Latin, by H. M. Margill (p. 708, 3d.), begins "Fides Te mea spectat."

2. Psalm of everlasting love. Praise for renewed spiritual life. This also appeared in the Spiritual Songs, &c., 1821, No. 191, in 4 st. of 41, and headed "Praise for a Revival."

The hymns which are given below are all in Dr. Palmer's Poetical Works, N. Y., 1876, and the dates appended in brackets are those given by him in that work.

3. Then who call'd at the year around. (1832.) Class of the Year. In several American collections.

4. Away from earth my spirit turns. (1831.) Holy Communion. Appeared in Lowell Mason's Class of the Year, in 4 st. of 41, in the Church Prayer Bk., N. Y., 1842. It begins with st. ii., "Thou, Saviour, art the Living Bread."

5. Before Thy throne with tearful eyes. (1834.) Liberty of Faith.

6. Stealing from the world away. (1834.) Evening. Written at New Haven in 1834, and is very popular in America.

7. Thine (Thy) holy day's returning. (1834.) Sunday Morning.

8. Wake thee, O Zion. (1833.) Zion Reviveth.

9. We stand in deep repentance. (1834.)  Lent.

This last, No. 9, in common with Nos. 10, 11, 12, is marked "original," in the Presbyterian Parish Hymns, 1843. Probably they were given to the editors of that book in MS., and had not previously appeared.

10. And is there, Lord, a rest? (1843.) Rest in Heaven. Written at Bath, Maine, in 1843.

11. O sweetly breathe the hymn above. (Consecration to Christ.) This was accidentally omitted from Dr. Palmer's Poetical Works, 1876. S. W. Buffum says:—

"It was written in the winter of 1843-44, at a time of revival. At the previous Communion several had been received, under circumstances that made [Dr.] Palmer's hymn, 'O happy day that fixed my choice,' a most appropriate selection. Not caring to repeat it, and needing something similar, Dr. Palmer composed the present hymn." English Hymns, N. Y., 1866, p. 422.

12. When downcast to the darkness tomb. (1842.) Death contemplated. Written at Bath, Maine, 1842.

From 1843 there comes a long break, and Dr. Palmer seems to have done no more hymn-writing until called upon by Professors Park and Phelps, of Andover, for contributions to their Sabbath Hymn-Book, 1858. His hymns written for that important collection rank amongst the best that America has produced. This is specially true of the first four (Nos. 13-16) from the Latin.

13. Jesus, Thine joy of living hearts. (1858.) Fr. of a cento from "Jesu dulcis memoria" (p. 358, 3d.).

14. O Bread to Pilgrims given. (1858.) Fr. of "O sacra Eschenta" (q. v.).

15. O Christ our King, Greater Lord. (1858.) Fr. of "Ilex Christus, factor omnium" (p. 355, 3d.).

16. Come Holy Ghost, in love. (1858.) Fr. of "Veni Sancte Spiritus" (q. v.).

17. Jesus, these eyes have never seen. (1858.) Christ loved, though sinners. This hymn is accredited by many as next in merit and beauty to "My faith looks up to Thee."

18. Lord, my weak thought in vain would climb. (1858.) and Psemschke. This hymn draws from the mysteries of Predestination in a reverent and devout manner.

19. Thy Father's house: thine own bright home. (1858.) Heaven.

The next group, Nos. 20-27, appeared in Dr. Robinson's Songs for the Sanctuary, 1865.

20. Lord, bring the joyful day. (1864.) Contemplation of Heaven. Written in New York city.

21.  Eternal Father, Thine host said. (1865.) Missionary.

22. Jesus, Lamb of God, for me. (1863.) Jesus, the Way of Salvation. Written in Albany, New York.
 23. Take me, O my Father, take me. (1864.) Lent.
 24. Wouldst thou eternal life obtain. (1864.) Good Friday.
 25. Come Jesus, Redeemer, abide Thou with me. (1864.) Holy Communion.
 26. Lord, Thou on earth didst love Thine own. (1864.) Fellowship with Christ.
 27. Thou, Saviour, from Thy throne on high. (1864.) Prayer.

The next four (Nos. 28-31) present another group. They appeared in D. E. Jones's Songs for the New Life, 1869, and the Reformed Dutch Hys. of the Church, N. Y., 1869. The dates of composition are from Dr. Palmer's Poems, 1876.

28. Lord, Thou hast taught our hearts to glow. (1866.) Ordination, or Meeting of Ministers.
 29. When inward turns my searching gaze. (1868.) Evening.
 30. O Jesus, sweet the tears I shed. (1867.) Good Friday.
 31. Jesus, this [my] heart within me burns. (1868.) Love.

The hymns which follow are from various sources.

32. O Christ, the Lord of heaven, to Thee. (1867.) Universal Praise to Christ. Appeared in the author's Hys. of my Holy Hours, 1867. It is a hymn of great merit, and is widely used.
 33. Behold the shade of night is now receding. (1869.) A tr. of "Ecce jam noctis." (p. 320, i., and Various.)
 34. Mid evening shadows let us all be waking. (1869.) A tr. of "Nocte surgentes" (p. 309, i.).
 35. I give my heart to Thee. (Aug. 29, 1868.) A tr. of "Cor meum Tibi dedo," p. 262, ii.
 36. Holy Ghost, that promised came. (1873.) Whit-suntide. From the author's Poems, 1876.
 37. O Holy Comforter, I hear. The Comforter. Appeared in the Boston Congregationalist, September 7th, 1867.
 38. Lord, when my soul her secrets doth reveal. (1864.) Holy Communion.

Most of the foregoing hymns are in C. U. in G. Britain, and all are found in one or more American hymn-books of importance.

Palms of glory, raiment bright. J. Montgomery. [Heaven in Prospect.] Written for the Sheffield Sunday School Union, and first printed on a broadsheet for use at the Anniversary in June 1829, in 6 st. of 4 l. It then appeared in T. Russell's Sel. of Hys. . . . An Appendix to Dr. Watts's Ps. & Hys., N. D. [circa 1833, see p. 269, i.]; again in Montgomery's Poet's Portfolio, 1835, p. 240; and again in his Original Hys., 1853, p. 160, where it is headed "Heaven in prospect." It is of more than usual merit, and is widely used.

Pange lingua gloriosi corporis mysterium. St. Thomas of Aquino. [Holy Communion.] One of the finest of the mediæval Latin hymns; a wonderful union of sweetness of melody with clear-cut dogmatic teaching. It was written for the office of the Festival of Corpus Christi, which St. Thomas drew up in 1263, at the request of Pope Urban IV. The metre and the opening line are imitated from Fortunatus. It is found in the Roman (Venice, 1478; and again, untouched, in 1632); Mos-arabic of 1502, Sarum, York, Aberdeen, Paris of 1736, and many other Breviaries. Wherever employed it was always primarily for use on Corpus Christi, either at Matins (Sarum), or at Vespers (Roman). It has also been used as a processional on Co-votive Office of the Blessed Forty Hours, and other "Tantum ergo sacramentum" magnificent doxology, is sung in the office of the Benediction of the Host. The text, in will be found in Daniel Sarieb, 1851, p. 121, and

The hymn is found in a MS. leian (Ashmole 1525, f. 175) 13th cent. (Add. 23935 f. 3), viary (Reg. 2, A. xiv. f. 9, Museum; in the St. Gall Also in Wachernagel, l. 2 Königsfeld, l. p. 146; Car-siae, 1839 and 1866, and old

This tr. is repeated in the Liturgic Expositor, 1883, without alteration; and with a revised approach to the original in the Altar Hymnal, 1884.

9. Of that glorious Body broken. This tr. in the Sonnet, 1868, No. 123, is Caswall's altered (except in st. ii. and iii.) almost beyond recognition. It is repeated in Thring's Coll., 1882, with slight changes, except in the crucial st. iv. This is materially changed in the wording, although it remains the same in doctrinal teaching.

10. Waken, my tongue, the mystery telling. By R. C. Singleton, in his Aspicion H. Bk., 1868 and 1871.

Translations set in C. V. —

1. Of Christe thy body glorious. Primer, 1804.
2. Sing thou my tongue with accent clear. Primer, 1815.

16. Now, my tongue, the mystery singing. W. T. Brooke, in his Churchman's Manual of Private and Family Devotion, 1881.
17. Sing, my tongue, the joyful mystery. J. D. Aspicion, in O. Bishop's Annals Sanctus, 1884.

Tantum ergo sacramentum. This portion of the "Pange lingua," consisting of st. v. and vi., and sung in the office of the Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament, &c., as noted above, has been tr. by all the above-named translators, and each tr. is given as the conclusion of the original hymn. In a few instances the stanzas (v.-vi.) are given as a separate hymn in English, as in Latin. These include (1) Caswall's "Down in adoration falling," which appears in some Roman Catholic hymn-books for missions and schools; (2) a tr. in the Altar Hym., 1884, in 2 st., the first being Caswall's altered, and the second the doxology from H. A. & M., as "Down in lowly worship bending;" and (3) Neale's tr., altered to "Bow we then in veneration," in the 1863 Appendix to the Hymnal N.

Dr. Neale's estimate of this hymn is well known. His words are so few and to the point that we may quote them here:—

"This hymn contains the second place among those of the Western Church with the Psalm Regina, the Stabat Mater, the Jesu dulcis Memoria, the Ad Regiam Agni Saper, the Ad supernam, and one of two others, leaving the Dei Fili in its unapproachable glory." (3rd. Hy. 3rd ed., 1867, p. 178.)

Concerning translations, and of his own in particular, he says:—

"Is [the hymn] has been a book of Ulysses to translate. The translation above given [his own] claims to other merit than an attempt to unite the best portions of the four best translations with which I am acquainted —Mr. Wackerbarth's, Dr. Pusey's, that of the Leeds book, and Mr. Caswall's. — The great crisis of the translator is the fourth verse."

Before continuing Dr. Neale's remarks it will be well to give the original Latin of st. iv., which reads:—

Verbum caro, panem verum verbo carnem edidit,
Fique sanguis Christi merum, etiam sensu edidit.
Ad brassidum cor stercoroso sola fides sufficit."

Dr. Neale continues, "I give all the translations:—

(1) "God the Word by one word maketh

Very Bread His Flesh to be:

And whose that Cup partaketh,

Tastes the Fount of Calvary:

While the carnal mind forsaketh,

Faith receives the Mystery." (Leeds H. Bk.)

"Here the incarnation of the Word, so necessary to the antithesis, is omitted; and as exact a writer as S. Thomas would never have used the expression by one word.

(2) "At the Incarnate Word's high bidding,

Very Bread to Flesh did turn:

Wine became Christ's Life-blood-feeding:

And, if sense cannot discern,

Guileless spirits, never dreading,

May from Faith sufficient learn."

[Wackerbarth. Mr. Wackerbarth's l. 2 reads, "Bread to very Flesh," &c.]

"Here the antithesis is utterly lost, by the substitution of Incarnate for made flesh, and bidding for word, to say nothing of Blood-feeding, for Blood.

(3) "Word made Flesh! The Bread of nature,

Thou by word to Flesh dost turn:

Wine, to Blood of our Creator:

If no sense the word discern,

Yet the true heart proves so truster:

Faith unaided all shall learn." (Pusey.)

"Here the antithesis is preserved, though at the expense of the vocative case. And surely S. Thomas, in an exact dogmatical poem, would not have spoken of the Blood of our Creator, Mr. Caswall, following up the hint given by the last version, and substituting the opposite pronoun for the vocative, has given, as from his freedom of rhyme might be expected, the best version.

(4) "Word made Flesh, the Bread of nature

By a word to Flesh He turns:

Wine into His Blood He changes:

What though sense no change discerns,

Only be the heart in earnest,

Faith the lesson quickly learns."

"In both these last translations [Pusey and Caswall], however, the panem verum of S. Thomas is not given; and Mr. Caswall brings in the worse than unnecessary article—"By a word." [It must be noted that Dr. Neale must have quoted Caswall from memory or from some other source than Caswall's eye (ibidem, 1868, p. 112, where l. 2 reads, "By his word to Flesh He turns;" and l. 4, "Faith her lesson quickly learns." These readings of 1868 are repeated in Caswall's eye, ibidem, 1874, p. 42. 1868 Dr. Neale—revised Caswall, or did Caswall publish a text distinct from that in his Liturgic Expositor.]

"Since the first edition of my book [1861], Hymns Ancient and Modern have produced a translation put together from former ones, but nearer my own version than to any other. Their fourth verse is their weakest:—

Word made Flesh, True Bread He maketh

By His word His Flesh to be:

Wine His blood; which when we take

Meat from heaven thought to be free:

Faith alone, though sight forsaketh,

Shows true hearts the Mystery."

"It is needless to observe that the italicized line and a half is not in the original. — Paraphrase, too, is scarcely English. I have substituted an alteration of Hymns Ancient and Modern for my original l. 6th verse, ["Therefore we, before it bending"]

After this exhaustive criticism by Dr. Neale we must give his rendering of the same passage. It reads:—

“ Word made Flesh, by Word He maketh
Very Bread His Flesh to be;
Men in wine Christ's Blood partaketh,
And if senses fail to see,
Faith alone the true heart waketh,
To behold the Mystery.”

These examples of translations could be increased to the total number known. The result, however, would be to add materially to the length of this article without increasing its historical value. [J. J.]

Pange lingua gloriosi proelium certaminis. V. H. C. Fortunatus. [Passiontide.] This is one of the finest of the Latin Mediaeval Hymns, and perhaps the best of its author. It has been sometimes, apparently without reason, ascribed to Claudianus Mamertus, who d. c. 474. In its full form it consists of 10 stanzas of unrhymed trochaic tetrameter verse. In some of the mss. there is added a doxology, but in very various forms. F. Leo in his ed. of Fortunatus's Opera poetica, Berlin, 1881, p. 27, gives it from a St. Petersburg ms. of the 8th or 9th cent., two mss. of the 9th cent. in the Bibl. Nat. Paris (No. 1153, and Lat. 9347), &c. Mone, No. 101, prints it from a ms. of the 8th cent. now at Trier; a ms. at Trier of about the end of the 8th cent. or beginning of the 9th; a ms. of the 11th cent. at St. Gall, &c. It is found in a 10th cent. Mozarabic service book in the British Museum (Add. 30846 f. 70); in four mss. of the 11th cent. there, viz. two English Hymnaries (Harl. 2961 f. 240; Vesp. D. xii. f. 120 b); a Spanish Breviary (Add. 30848 f. 109), and a Sequentiary written at St. Gall (Add. 19768, f. 51 b), &c. Also in Daniel, i., No. 140, and iv. pp. 67, 353, from a Bern ms. of the 10th cent., and other sources. In his notes Daniel quotes the following stanza:—

“ Quando iudex orbis alto vectus axe venerat,
Et crucis tue tropaeum inter astra fulserit,
O sis anxilis asyllum et salutis aurora.”

Dr. Neale in translating this verse says it “seems ancient,” but the only source quoted by Daniel is the Corolla Hymnorum, Cologne, 1806. (The text of 1806, l. 3, reads, “Salutis anchora.”) From the Trier ms. of about the end of the 8th cent. Mone prints four additional stanzas, which are not by Fortunatus, but are probably of the 7th cent., and never really came into use.

The hymn very early came into extensive use, and is found in most Mediaeval Breviaries and Missals. In the older Roman (Venice, 1478), Paris of 1613, Sarum, York, Aberdeen, and other Breviaries, it is appointed for use from Passion Sunday to Maundy Thursday; stanzas i.-v. being used at Motins; and vi.-x. beginning “Lustra sex qui jam peracta,” at Lauds. In the Roman, Sarum, and other Missals, it is appointed to be used on Good Friday at the Improperia (see “Popule meus”), stanza viii., “Crux fidelis inter omnes,” being first sung by the clergy, or as a solo, then st. i.-vii., ix., x. by the people; each stanza being followed by either the first, or second (“Dulce lignum, dulce clavos” part of st. viii.). The Sarum, York, Aberdeen, and other Breviaries also appointed st. viii.-x. (“Crux fidelis”) for the festival of the Invention of the Cross (May 3). In the Roman Brev. of 1632 it was altered, the first part beginning “Pange lingua gloriosi laetram certaminis” (an unfortunate change; for, as Dr. Neale points out, it is not to the glory of the termination of our Lord's conflict with the Devil that the poet would have us look, but to the glory of the struggle itself); and the second part beginning “Lustra sex qui jam peregit” (in the Roman Brev., Antwerp, 1624, pt. ii. begins “Lustra sex qui jam peractis”). The text of that revision, in Daniel, Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1851, is also in the Lat. Hys. of 1851, p. 163 (from Vesp. D. Sarum, 1851, p. 84; Hüssler, Nos. 78, 79; Königsfeld, ii. pp. 147, 148; Lat. Hys., 1876, p. 64; G. M. Missiacensis, 1888, p. 44 (from Macgill's Songs of the Christian and others).

We may add that stanza i. reference to the ancient battle of Christ was made from which sprang from a seed Tree of Life; this seed or 1 according to one version gives his expulsion from Paradise another version, given to 2 who guarded the Garden Mediaeval forms of this legend Gould's Curious Myths of No. xv., “The Legend of 1 said that among the relics degunda for the Church at particle of the (so-called) further under Vexilla Regis). cross seems to be regarded figure, as the ship in which 1 ride over the waves of this tr after those waves have been s by the anointing oil that wounds of the Lamb of God.

The older text as above, Breviary text have both been English as follows:—

2. Rehearse, my tongue, the glorious Chambers, 1852.

3. O my tongue! rehearse the glory. 1857.

4. Sing, my tongue, the war of glory. 1859.

5. Sing the Cross! the conflict telling. In The Juvenile Miss. Mag. of the U. P., May, 1868, and his Songs of the Christ Life, 1876.

(ii.) Lustra sex qui jam peracta. In this is not headed as a separate translators, but in the hymn usually given as such:—

1. Thirty years among us dwelling. By J. M. Neale, as above.
2. Six lustres past: His life in Ash. By J. Chambers, in his Psalter, 1852.
3. Years three ten had he, completing. By W. J. Blew, as above, and Nice's Sel. therefrom, 1870.
4. Till the thirty years were finished. By Mrs. Charles, as above, and in the People's H., 1867, as "When the thirty years were finished."

Other translations are:—

1. Now are thirty ten years completed. J. D. Chambers, 1857.
2. Thirty years 'ere now fulfilling. J. W. Hewitt, 1858.
3. Thirty winters has he numbered. H. M. Mayall, same as Pt. I. above.

ii. Roman Breviary Text:—

(1.) Pange lingua gloriosi laurum certamina. Of this text Pt. I. has been tr. thus:—

Sing, my tongue, the Saviour's glory. By E. Caswall, in his Lyræ Catholice, 1840, p. 111, and his Hym. & Poem., 1873, p. 51. Found in a few collections in from 4 to 6 stanzas. In Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869, the opening line reads, "Sing, my tongue, the Saviour's battle," and several other changes by the editor are made in the text.

Other translations are:—

1. Sing, O my tongue, the glorious crown. Primer, 1706.
2. Sing, O my tongue, devoutly sing. Divine Office, 1763.
3. O sing, my tongue, God's glory sing. C. Keel.
4. Sing loud the conflict, O my tongue. J. B. Aylward.
5. Sing, my tongue, with glowing accents. T. J. Potter.
6. Sing, my tongue, the glorious combat. J. R. Betts, 1849.
7. Sing, my tongue, the contest glorious. H. N. Oxborn, in his Servant of Servants, 1854.
8. Sing, my tongue, the glorious laurel. J. Wallace, 1874.

Nos. 2-5 are in O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884.

(ii.) Lustra sex, qui jam peregit, tempus implens corpora. This has been tr. as:—

Thus did Christ to perfect manhood. By E. Caswall, as above. In a few hymn-books.

Other translations are:—

1. Six lustres past, the Sabbath came. Primer, 1706.
2. Full thirty years were freely spent. Divine Office, 1763.
3. The thirty years have all been passed. Hym. J. Wallace, 1874.
4. Scarce six lustres are completed. J. R. Betts, 1849.
5. Scarcely the sweeten blossom wanting. R. Campbell, 1858.
6. Now full thirty years are past. J. Wallace, 1874.
7. Already thirty years have shed. C. Keel.
8. Now, when full thirty annual aere. J. B. Aylward.

Of these trs. Nos. 2, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, are in O. Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884.

iii. Canto.

Several cantos are in C. U. and are formed either from the two parts, or from two or more translations. These are:—

1. See the destin'd day arise. By Bp. R. Mant. This is a paraphrase or free tr. of portions of both parts. It appeared in his Ancient Hymns, &c., 1817, p. 52, in 7 st. of 4 l. (ed. 1871, p. 94). In its full or in an abbreviated form its use is extensive.

2. Sing, O my tongue, devoutly sing. In Murray's Hymnal, 1852, No. 43.

3. Sing, my tongue, the Saviour's glory. This, in Pott's Hymns fitted to the O. of C. Prayer, 1861, is compiled almost word for word from the tr. of both parts by E. Caswall, at l. iii. being from Pt. I. and tr. vi. from Pt. II. Its right designation is "A Canto from E. Caswall's tr." It is given, with slight alterations, in the S. P. C. K. Catholic Hymns, 1871.

4. All within a lovely manger. In Kennedy, 1863, No. 577, Pt. II., is at l. i. from Caswall, and at ii. iv. from Neale.

5. Sing, my tongue, the Saviour's triumph. This is in the Sorum, 1868, No. 106, is at l. i. v. from Caswall, and at vi. viii. from Neale.

6. Now the thirty years accomplished. In the Hymnary, 1872, No. 230. In this cento st. i., iii. and v. are from Neale, and st. ii., iv. and vi. from Caswall.

7. O the Cross, above all other. In Johnson's English Hym., 1861, No. 267.

8. Faithful Cross! above all other. This in the Altar Hym., 1884, is Dr. Neale's tr. as above, with st. viii. as the opening of the hymn, and also as a chorus at the end of each of the other stanzas, and the addition of the stanza noted above as in the Corolla Hymnary, 1869, which Dr. Neale gave in his Notes as "When, O Judge of this world, coming."

When these various translations and cantos are all taken into account it is found that the use of this hymn in modern hymn-books is extensive.

Paraclete, Tho. [Greek Hymnody, § xiv.]

Parent of good, Thy works of might. J. Foreest. [Delight in God.] Appeared in his Hymns, &c., 1782, p. 81, in 9 st. of 6 l., and entitled "Delight in God." It is used in an abbreviated form, from 6 st. in Dr. Alexander's Augustine H. Bk., 1849, to 3 st. in the American Unitarian Hymn [and Tune] Book, Boston, 1868.

Park, Roswell, D.D., of the Protestant Episcopal Church, was b. at Lebanon, Connecticut, Oct. 1, 1807, and educated at Union College and West Point. Previous to receiving Holy Orders he was in the army, and also held the appointment of Professor of Chemistry in the University of Pennsylvania. He was ordained in 1843, was President of Racine College, Wisconsin (1852-59), Chancellor of the same College (1858-63); and Principal of a school in Chicago from 1863 to his death. He d. at Chicago, July 16, 1869. He pub. Sketch of West Point, 1840; Pantheology, 1841; Handbook for European Travel, 1853; and Poems, 1836. His best known hymn is for Holy Communion. It begins "Jesus spreads His banner o'er us," and was pub. in his Poems, 1836. It is in C. U. in G. Britain and America.

[F. M. B.]

Park, Thomas, F.R.S., was b. in 1760 and d. in 1835. He was an engraver, but found more congenial work in literary pursuits. In addition to publishing Nugæ Musæus, an original work of prose and poetry, in 1818, he also edited a-veral works, including the Works of J. Hammond, 1805; Works of John Dryden, 1806; the Works of the British Poets, in 42 small volumes, 1808; Poetical Works of Isaac Watts, 1807, and others. His hymn:—

My soul, praise the Lord, speak good of His Name, His merits record, &c. Ps. cix., or Universal Praise, appeared in Ps. & Hym. Selected from Various Authors, with Occasional Alterations, for Use of a Parochial Church. By a Country Clergyman. Lond.: Palmer, 1807, p. 256, in 5 st. of 4 l. There is appended thereto the following note:—

"At the moment of closing this little collection I am favoured with the above hymn from my obliging friend. This almost extemporaneous effusion of his peculiarly neat and poetic pen was excited by my expressing (in a letter soliciting some psalmic information) regret that I had only one set of words for Handel's simple, sublime tune for the 104th Psalm."

For these details we are indebted to Miller's Singers and Songs of the Church, 1869, p. 329. The opening line of this hymn is composed of the first two lines of W. Kethe's version of Ps. civ. in the Old Version, 1561. [J. J.]

Parker, Matthew, D.D., was b. at Norwich in 1504, and educated at Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, where he graduated in 1523. His appointments were many and influential, including that of Dean of Stoke, Chaplain to Queen Anne Boleyn and Henry VIII., Prebendary of Ely, Master of his College, Vice Chancellor of his University, and Dean of Lincoln. On the accession of Mary he was deprived of everything, and lived in obscurity till Elizabeth ascended the throne. In 1559 he was raised to the See of Canterbury. He d. in 1575, and was buried in his own chapel at Lambeth. His munificence is well known, as also his connection with the "Bishop's Bible." He was well versed in Saxon literature and Early English history; published several important works; and left his large collection of ancient mss. to his College. His Psalter, written in 1555 (see Psalters, Eng., § VII.), was printed without date (about 1560) and anonymously. This led Wood in his Athenæ Oxonienses to attribute the Psalter to John Keeper, of Wells Cathedral. This question of authorship is further discussed in Psalters, English, § IX. [J. J.]

Parker, Theodore, M.A., was b. at Lexington, Massachusetts, Aug. 24, 1810; laboured with his father as a farmer and mechanic; entered Harvard College in 1830, but continued his work at home and attended the College for examinations; attended the Divinity School from 1834 to 1836, and became pastor of the Unitarian congregation in West Roxbury, June 21, 1837. He received the degree of M.A. from his College in 1840. Changes in his theological views led him to undertake the pastorate of a congregation in Boston, in January 1846. He continued his writing, preaching, and lecturing till 1859, when bleeding at the lungs compelled him to seek relief in Europe. He d. at Florence, May 10, 1860. His publications were numerous, and have been republished in G. Britain. An extended list is given, together with 12 poetic pieces, in Putnam's Singers and Songs of the Liberal Faith, Boston, U. S. A., 1875. His life has been published by Weiss, and by Frothingham. A few of his poetical pieces are given in American Unitarian hymn-books. These include:—

1. In darker days and nights of storm. Almighty Love. "Introduced in a sermon which Mr. Parker preached, entitled 'The Practical Effects of the Ecclesiastical Conception of God.'" In Putnam as above.

2. O Thou great Friend of all the sons of men. Jesus the Way, the Truth, and the Life. This in the original is a sonnet (see Putnam as above). Altered for use as a hymn it is widely used by American Unitarians; and is also given in some English hymn-books. [J. J.]

Parr, Harriet, was b. at York in 1828, and has published several works under the nom de plume of "Holme Lee," including Maude

Talbot, 1854; Sylvan Hol Warp and Woof, 1861; M 1867; and several other wo Parr is known to hymno only, viz:—

Part in peace! Christ's life was peace. Sarah Adams, née Flower. [Close of Service.] 1st pub. in her Vivia Perpetua, 1841, a dramatic poem, in five Acts, where it is given as the close of Act iii. The persecuted Christians are represented as meeting in "A cave of sepulchre, dimly lighted," where they learn that the edict is gone forth that they must perish. Before parting, possibly never to meet again, "they all sing":—

- "Part in peace! Christ's life was peace—
Let us breathe our breath in Him!
Part in peace! Christ's death was peace,—
Let us die our death in Him!
Part in peace! Christ promise gave
Of a life beyond the grave.
Where all mortal partings cease.
Part in peace!
(Acho.) "Peace!"

In Act v. it is sung again after Vivia's condemnation, with l. 2 changed to "Let us live our life in Him." This form is sometimes used as in the Bap. Ps. & Hym. 1858, where l. 8 is lengthened as "Holy brethren, part in peace." This last line is again altered in some collections to "Brethren, sisters, part in peace." The hymn is widely used. [J. J.]

Part in peace! is day before us? Sarah Adams, née Flower. [Close of Service.] This is altogether a different hymn from the above. It was contributed to W. J. Fox's Hymns and Anthems, 1841, No. 82, in 3 st. of 4 l. It is in several Unitarian collections. In the American Unitarian Hymns [and Tunes] Book, 1868, it begins with st. ii., "Part in peace! with deep thanksgiving." [J. J.]

Παρθένε, σύμφη Χριστοῦ. St. Gregory of Nazianzus. [The Church of Christ.] "An Admonitory Address to a Virgin," pub. in various editions of his Works, and also found in the Anti. Græco Carm. Christ. 1871. From the latter Mr. Chastfield made his tr., "O bride of Christ on high," publishing the same in his Songs & Hymns, &c., 1876, p. 125, in 250 lines. The original dates 924-989. [Greek Hymnody, § iv.] [J. J.]

Parvum quando cerno Deum. [Christ-mas.] This hymn is found in the Sirinas Symphonice, Cel. gno, 1678, p. 41, the Psalterium cantuum catholicarum, Cologne, 1722, p. 50; and in the Hymnologia Sacra, Münster, 1753, p. 53. Also in Daniel, ii. p. 342, headed "The Mother with the Son." It is a Christmas Hymn of the Blessed Virgin and her Child.

It may be remarked that it ends with a venerated aspiration for the personal fulfilment (in a spiritual and mystical sense) of Ps. cxviii. 3-5—arrows, or even one of them, desired to be discharged at one's own heart, such as the young child could discharge at the heart of his mother. Tr. as:—

1. Oh as Thou, my infant Saviour. By E. Carwell, in his Mystic of Mary, &c., 1895, p. 289, and his Hymns & Poems, 1873, p. 149. It is in use in a few Roman Catholic hymn-books.

2. When within His Mother's arms. By E. A. Washburn, 1868, and included in Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869.

3. When I view the Mother building. By H. H. Bramley, in Stainer and Bramley's Christmas Carols, &c., [W. A. S.]

Peace is her day of grace. J. Keble. [Christ Weeping over Jerusalem.] The poem from which this is taken is dated 1819, and was given in Keble's Christian Year, 1827, in 6 st. of 8 l. for the 10th S. after Trinity. The hymn, No. 195, in Hall's Mitre H. B., 1836, is composed of st. i., based upon the first part of Keble's poem, and st. ii.-iv. from the two concluding stanzas of the poem. [J. J.]

Pastore percusso, minas. Guillaume de la Broetiere. [Conversion of St. Paul.] This hymn was given in the Classic Breviary, 1686, p. 914, and in the Paris Breviary, 1736, as the hymn at 1st and 2nd Vespers on the Feast of the Conversion of St. Paul. It is also in several later French Breviaries; J. Chantrel's Hym. of the Primitive Church, 1837, No. 85, with omission of st. iii., iv.; and Card. Newman's Hymns Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865, in full. Tr. as:—

1. The Shepherd slain, the wolf returns. By J. Chandler, from his Latin text as above, in his Hym. of the Prim. Church, 1837, p. 96. It was included in Obitknow's Hymns, 1850, and others.

2. The Shepherd smitten is, and is. By I. Williams, in his Hym. fr. from the Parisian Breviary, 1839, p. 176. It is used in an abbreviated form. In Johnson's English Hym., 1861, No. 210, it begins, "The Shepherd smitten and laid low." The rendering in W. J. Blew's Church Hym. and Tune Bk., 1892-55, "The spoiler fierce is lying low," is mainly from this tr., beginning with st. v.

3. The Shepherd now was smitten. By F. Pott, in his Hym. fitted to the Order of Common Prayer, 1861, the People's H., 1867, and others. In one or two American books, st. vi.-viii. are given as "Christ's foe becomes His soldier." The alterations in H. A. & M., 1861 and 1875 were by the Compiler.

4. O Lord, Thy voice the mountain shakes. This, in the Hymnary, 1872, is adapted from I. Williams's tr. as above, with a change in the order of stanzas, and several alterations.

Translations not in C. U.:
1. Smitten is the Shepherd good. R. Campbell, 1856.
2. They smite the Shepherd: fired with wrath. J. D. Chambers, 1868. [J. J.]

Pater superni luminis. Cardinal Belarmine. [St. Mary Magdalene.] Included in the Roman Breviary, Venice, 1603, f. 445, as the hymn at Vespers on the festival of St. Mary Magdalene (July 22), and repeated in later eds. It is said to have been written while with Cardinal Silvio Antoniano he was spending a holiday in the country at Frascati, as the guest of Pope Clement VIII.; the Pope having proposed to them to see which could compose the best ode in honour of St. Mary Magdalene. The text is in Daniel, iv. p. 305, and Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as:—

1. Father of celestial Light. By W. J. Copeland, in his Hys. for the Week, &c., 1848, p. 121. This is in C. U. without alteration; and also slightly changed, as, "Thou that art celestial Light," in the Hymnary, 1872.

2. Father of Light! one glance of Thine. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 162, and his Hys & Poems, 1873, p. 88. This is given in some hymn-books without alteration, and in others as "O Lord of Light, one glance of Thine."

Other tra. are:—

1. Father of light, that shines above. Primer, 1615.
2. Sweet Father of supernal light. Primer, 1685.
3. Bright Parent of celestial Flame. Primer, 1706.
4. O Father of supernal light. D. French, 1839.
5. O Father of resplendent light. J. Wallace, 1874.

Patrick, St., the 2nd Bishop and Patron Saint of Ireland, was s. of Calpurnius, a deacon, and grandson of Potitus, a presbyter, and great grandson of Odissus, a deacon, was b. most probably near Dumbarton, in North Britain, in 372. According to his epistle to Coroticus, his father was also a decurio, a member of the local town council, and a Roman by descent. Hence probably the name Patricius. St. Patrick alludes in Coroticus, § 5, to his having been originally a freeman, and of noble birth. His birthplace is termed in his Confession, § 1, Bannavem Taberniæ. Some have identified that place with Boulogne-sur-Mer, in France. His mother's name was Concessa, said to have been sister of St. Martin of Tours. According to Tirechan's Collections (circa A.D. 690), Patrick had four names—(1) Magonus, which Tirechan explains by clarus, illustrious; (2) Succat (Succetus), god of war, or brave in war, said to have been his baptismal name; (3) Patricius; and (4) Cothraige (Cothrighe), given because he had been a slave to four masters. At the age of 16 he was carried off with many others to Ireland, and sold as a slave. There he remained six years with Milcho, or Miliuc. He was engaged in feeding cattle (pecora), though the later writers say that he fed swine. In his captivity he became acquainted with the Irish language. His misfortunes were the means of leading him to Christ, and he devoted himself to prayer, and often frequented, for that purpose, the woods on Mount Slemish. Having escaped after six years, he spent some years with his parents, and then was stirred up, when still a youth (puer), to devote himself to the evangelisation of Ireland. According to Secundinus's Hymn (St. Sechnall), which is probably not much later than the age of St. Patrick himself, the saint received his apostleship "from God," like St. Paul. No reference is made in that hymn, or in the later so-called Hymn of St. Fiacc, to any commission received from Pope Celestine, as is asserted by later writers. St. Patrick does not in his own writings allude to the external source whence he obtained ordination, and, as he speaks of his Roman descent, it would be strange for him not to have mentioned his with their pagan king, Laoghaire, and his court, at Tara, the royal residence." (Lyrn Hibernica Sacra, 1878, p. 2.)

3. Dr. Todd in his work S. Patrick, Apostle of Ireland, 1894, gives a metrical rendering of the "Brenastupla," which begins:—

"I bind to myself to-day,

The strong power of an invocation of the Trinity,
The faith of the Trinity in Unity,
The Creator of the elements."

The tr., which extends to 78 lines, was mainly the work of Dr. Whitley Stokes. A more correct version by the same scholar is given in the Rolls' edition of the Tripartite Life, 1887; and that revised version, with a few modifications, accompanied with critical notes, explanatory of the alterations made on the former version, is given in the 2nd and 3rd editions of the Writings of St. Patrick, by Dr. C. H. H. Wright. Dr. Whitley Stokes, therefore, is to be regarded as the real translator from the original Irish. Dr. Petrie's translation, though highly meritorious as a first attempt, has been proved in many particulars to be erroneous. There is no mention of Tara in the hymn. An uncertainty yet exists as to the meaning of a few words.

4. In Dr. W. MacLachlan's Lyrn Hibernica Sacra, 1878, Dr. Todd's tr. was re-printed (with notes), together with a second tr. by James Clarence Mangan, the opening lines of which are:—

"At Tara to-day, in this awful hour,

I call on the Holy Trinity!

Glory to Him Who reigneth in power,

The God of the elements, Father, and Son,

And Paraclete Spirit, which Three are the One,
The everlasting Trinity."

5. A popular version of the hymn for congregational use was written by Mrs. Cecil F. Alexander, for St. Patrick's Day, 1889, and sung generally throughout Ireland on that day. The opening lines are:—

"I bind unto myself to-day

The strong Name of the Trinity,

By invocation of the same,

The Three in One and One in Three.

"I bind this day to me for ever,

By power of faith, Christ's Incarnation;

His baptism in Jordan river;

His death on Cross for my salvation;

His bursting from the spiced tomb;

His rising up the heavenly way;

His coming at the day of doom;

I bind unto myself to-day."

Mrs. Alexander's version is given, along with that of James Clarence Mangan, in the Appendix to the Writings of St. Patrick, edited by Dr. C. H. H. Wright (R. T. S.), 1889.

6. Another metrical version of this hymn was given in the Irish Ecclesiastical Gazette for April 5, 1889. It is by Joseph John Murphy, and the opening lines are:—

"I bind as earnest on my breast

The Threefold Name wherein I call,

Of Father, Son, and Spirit blest,

The Maker and the Judge of all."

7. The tr. in Stokes and Wright's edition of St. Patrick's writings was set to music as a cantata by Sir R. Stewart, and was performed for the first time in St. Patrick's Cathedral, Dublin, on St. Patrick's Day, 1888.

8. Mr. Thomas French, Assistant Librarian of Trinity College, Dublin, writes as follows respecting this hymn:—

"The six called the 'Liber Hymnorum' belonged to Art. Umber, and forms one of the volumes of the Umber Collection now in the Library of Trin. College, Dublin. There is no interlinear Latin tr. in the original. It was given by Petrie in his account of the hymns 'for the satisfaction of the learned.' (The St. Patrick authorship is) tradition only, so far as I know. Dr. Todd in his S. Patrick, Apostle of Ireland, p. 428, says: 'It is undoubtedly of great antiquity, although it may now be difficult, if not impossible, to adduce proof in support of the tradition that St. Patrick was its author. . . . Petrie and Todd make the age of the MS. 9th or 10th cent. Whitley Stokes 11th or 12th.'

We may add that St. Patrick's Latin works were pub. by Sir James Ware, 1656, in the Acta Sanctorum of the Bollandist Fathers, 1608, by Villanueva, 1835, and by others, as R. S. Nicholson, 1868, Miss Cusack, 1871, and, above all, by Dr. Whitley Stokes, in the Rolls' Edition of the Tripartite Life, 1887. The latter three works contain also translations. Tr. of the whole, or a portion of St. Patrick's writings, have been pub. by Rev. T. Olden, 1876; Sir S. Ferguson, L.L.D. Transactions of Royal Irish Academy, 1885, and more completely in the Writings of St. Patrick, edited by Prof. G. T. Stokes and Dr. C. H. H. Wright, 1st ed. 1887, 2nd ed. 1888, 3rd ed., edited, with notes critical and historical, and an introduction by Dr. C. H. H. Wright revised and enlarged. London: Religious Trist Soc., 1889. [C. H. H. Patris aeterni Soboles canova. Charles Guet. [Dedication of a Church.] This hymn is appointed for use at Lauds on the Feast of the Dedication of a Church, in the Sens Breviary, 1702; the Paris Breviary, 1736; and later French Breviaries. It is based on the "Christe cunctorum" (p. 216, B.). The text is also in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as:—

1. O Word of God above. By I. Williams, in the British Magazine, July, 1837, vol. xi, p. 33, and again in his Ilya. tr. from the Parisian Breviary, 1839. This tr. is rarely found in its original form. In 1852 it was given, much altered, in Murray's Hymnal as No. 89. This was the received text until 1861, when the Compilers of H. A. & M. produced another text, which superseded both it and the original. This text is thus composed: st. i., Williams; ii., Murray, altered by the Compilers; iii., tr. Compilers; v., vi., Murray; vii., Murray and the Compilers. This cento is the most popular form of the text, but the wording of st. ii. has undergone several changes.

2. Jesus, most loving God. This rendering is in the Hymnary, 1872, and is attributed in the index to "I. Williams." Of I. Williams's tr. three lines only are found in the hymn, and these are in the doxology. The rest of the hymn is the text of I. Williams rewritten.

To translate the crux of this hymn has been st. ii., which reads:—

"His sacri fontis latices ab orbe
Indit purgant maculas carnis;
Hic et infundit nova spiritalia Christa
Christus coelestis."

I. Williams translated this:—

"There dwells in this deep fount
Ainching souls to love,
And from beneath this holy mount Goes forth the healing wave."

In Murray's Hymnal, 1852, it reads:—

"Grace in this Font is stored
To cleanse each guilty child;
The Spirit's blast astringing poured
Brightens the once defiled."

This is changed in H. A. & M. to:—

"Here from the Font is poured Grace on each sinful child;
The blest Anointing of the Lord
Brightens the once defiled."

The rendering in the Hymnary is:—

"Here in the Font are streams
To cleanse the sin-defiled:
Here God the Spirit with His strength
Endows the new-born child."

In addition to this stanza Williams's tr. of st. v. and vi. have been either subjected to great changes, or superseded altogether. They have not however the same doctrinal importance as st. iv. [J. J.]

Patris Sapientia, veritas [bonitas] divina. [Passiontide.] This is the best and most popular of the metrical Hours of the Passion of our Lord, which were commonly used in mediæval times. It is probably of the 14th cent., and consists of 8 stanzas, viz. one each for Matins, Prime, Terce, Sext, None, Vespers, and Compline, with the concluding stanza—

"Has horas canonicas cum devotione
Tibi Jesu recole pia ratione,
Ut sicut tu passus es poenas in agone,
Sic labore consonans consors sim coronæ."

Mone, No. 82, gives it from a Reichenau ms. of the 14th cent. (where it is ascribed to Pope Benedict XII., who d. 1342); a ms. of the 14th cent. at Coblenz (where it is ascribed to Pope John XXII., who d. 1334); a ms. of the 14th cent. at Lichtenthal (where it is ascribed to Aegidius, Abp. of Bourges, who d. 1316), and other sources. It is in a ms. of the 15th cent. in the British Museum (Harl. 2951, f. 132), a ms. c. 1400, in the Bodleian (Bodl. 113, f. 40 b, &c.), a ms. of the 14th cent. in the Bodleian (Liturg. Misc., 251, f. 151 b), and others. The text will also be found in Daniel, i., No. 483; Wackernagel, i., No. 267; Neale's Hy. Eccl., 1851, p. 137; Büssler, No. 115; Königsfeld, ii. p. 318. Tr. as:—

Circled by His enemies. By J. M. Neale, in his Mediæval Hys., 1851, p. 65 (with a note), and in the People's H., 1867. Of this tr. st. i.-iii. and part of vii. were given in J. D. Chambers's Lauda Syon, 1857, pp. 168-170, the rest of the tr. therein being by Mr. Chambers.

Peabody, William Bourne Oliver, D.D., twin-brother of the above, was b. at Exeter, New Hampshire, July 9, 1799, and educated in his native town and at Harvard College. Leaving Harvard in 1817, he taught for a year at an academy in Exeter, and then proceeded to study theology at the Cambridge Divinity School. He began to preach in 1819, and became the Pastor of the Unitarian Congregation at Springfield, Massachusetts, in October, 1820. This charge he held to his death on May 28, 1847. His Memoir (written by his brother) was pub. with the 2nd ed. of his Sermons, 1847; and his Literary Remains followed in 1850. "He was a man of rare accomplishments, and consummate virtue," whose loftiness of character impressed many outside his own sect. In 1823 he published a Poetical Catechism for the Young to which were appended some original hymns. He also edited the Springfield Collection of Hymns for Sacred Worship, Springfield, 1833. A few of his hymns also appeared in that collection. His hymns in C. U. are:—

1. Behold the western evening light. Death of the Righteous, or Autumn Evening. Pub. in his Collected, 1823, in 6 st. of 4 l., and again in his Springfield Coll., 1833, No. 464. It is in C. U. in its original form; also as altered by George Russell in the Rep. Ps. & Hym., 1838, where it reads "How softly on the western hills."

2. God of the earth's extended plains. Hymn of Nature. This is in Greenleaf's Poets and Poetry of America, in 6 st. of 4 l. This is thought by some to be the production of his brother Oliver (see above); but Putnam assigns it to William. It is given abbreviated in a few collections. The hymn "God of the rolling orb above," in the Boston Unitarian Hym. [and Psalms] 1840, and others, begins with st. v.

3. O when the hours of life are past. The Hereafter. This hymn, in 6 st. of 4 l., was given in his Catechism, 1823, as the Answer to "Question xlv. What do you learn of the Future State of Happiness?" It is in use in its original form, and also altered as "When all the hours of life are past."

4. The moon is up: how calm and slow. Evening. A poem rather than a hymn, in 6 st. of 4 l., appended to his Catechism, 1823.

5. When brighter suns and milder skies. Spring. Appended to his Catechism, 1823, in 6 st. of 4 l.

The full texts of all these hymns are in Putnam's Singers and Songs of the Liberal Faith, Boston, U. S. A., 1875. [F. M. B.]

Peace be on this house bestowed. C. Wesley. [Household Peace desired.] This hymn, although beginning in a similar manner and on the same subject as the next below by Wesley, is altogether a different hymn. It was pub. in the Hym. & Sac. Poems, 1742, p. 157, in 3 st. of 8 l., and entitled "The Salvation." (P. Works, 1808-72, vol. ii. p. 219.) It was included in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 467, and has since passed into several Methodist collections. [J. J.]

Peace be to this habitation. C. Wesley. [Household Peace desired.] This is No. 35 of his "Hym. for Believers," which appeared in Hym. & Sac. Poems, 1749, vol. ii., in 6 st. of 8 l., and headed "On entering an House." (P. Works, 1808-72, vol. v. p. 53.) It is not in C. U. in its full form, but as follows:—

1. Peace be to this habitation. This, as given in Cottrell's Sel., 1819, No. 336, was composed of st. i., ii. from this hymn (st. i. and vi.) altered, and st. iii. from J. Newton ("May the grace of Christ our Saviour"). This text, with slight changes, and the omission of the stanza from J. Newton, was handed down to modern hymn-books through Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1824; Conger's Cong. H. Bk., 1836; the Psalm. Ps. & Hym., 1848, and others. The doctrine in W. F. Stearns's Hym. for Church and Home, 1872, is Conger's "Praise the God of all creation," which appeared in the Cong. H. Bk., 1836, No. 552. It gives a stately finish to the hymn.

2. Peace be to this sacred dwelling. This, in the American Southey H. Bk., 1836, and others, is Cottrell's st. i., ii., as altered in Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1823, again slightly altered to adapt it to the better for Public Worship.

3. Peace be to this congregation. This is No. 2 with further changes. It is No. 35 in the American Unitarian Hym. of the Spirit, 1864. The alteration of the first line is found in some of the earliest editions of the Lady Huntington collection.

As these forms of the text are in extensive use, and as they differ somewhat widely from Wesley, we append st. i. and vi. of his original:—

—Peace be to this habitation!

Peace to every soul herein!

Peace, the forerunner of salvation,

Peace, the voice of angels' joyous din,

Peace that speaks its heavenly Giver,

Peace to earth's unknown unknown,

Peace Divine, that lasts for ever,

Here erect its glorious throne!

—Prince of peace, if Thou art near us,

Fix in all our hearts Thy house,

By Thy last appearing cheer us,

Quickly let Thy kingdom come:

Answer all our expectation,

Give our raptured souls to prove

Glorious, uttermost salvation,

Heavenly, everlasting love!"

4. Visit, Lord, this habitation. In the Philadelphia Sel. of Hymns, 1861, this is composed of Wesley's st. i., ii. 1-4; st. iii. ii. 1-4; and st. vi. slightly altered.

[J. J.]

Peace, doubting heart, my God's I am. C. Wesley. [Peace with God.] 1st pub. in Hym. & Sac. Poems, 1739, p. 153, in 7 st. of 6 l., and based upon Isaiah xlii. 1-3. (P. Works, 1808-72, vol. i. p. 135.) It was given in full in the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 204, and subsequently in other Methodist collections. In addition it is found in some Church of England hymn-books in 5 st., a form given to it in Toplady's Ps. & Hys., 1776. From it also the following hymns are derived:—

1. For ever nigh me, Father, stand. This in Martineau's Hymns, 1846 and 1873, is composed of st. iv., ii. and vi. slightly altered.

2. Still nigh me, O my Saviour, stand. This, in the Bap. Sel. of Hymns, 1838, No. 321, and the Bap. Ps. & Hys., 1858, No. 427, is a cento, st. i. being st. iv. of this hymn, while st. ii. is st. xvi. of J. Wesley's tr. from the German "Jesu, Thy boundless love to me."

G. J. Stevenson's note on Wesley's hymn in his Meth. H. Bk. Notes, 1883, p. 209, is of more than usual interest. [J. J.]

Peace, perfect peace, in this dark world of sin. Bp. E. H. Bickersteth. [Peace.] Written in 1875, and first printed in a small tract of five hymns (all by Bp. Bickersteth), entitled Songs in the House of Pilgrimage (Hampstead, J. Hewetson, M.D.), in 7 st. of 2 l. It is based upon the text, "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on Thee, because he trusteth in Thee," Isaiah xvi. 3. It was given, without alteration, in the H. Comp., 1876; and has been repeated in numerous collections. It is also in the author's From Year to Year, 1883. In 1884 Bp. Bickersteth issued it, together with a companion hymn in the same metre on Prayer, printed on cardboard, as Prayer and Peace (Lond. Sampson Low). The hymn on Prayer begins "Pray, always pray, the Holy Spirit pleads." This was given in the author's Octave of Hymns, 1880, No. 1. [J. J.]

Peace that passeth understanding. J. Montgomery. [For Peace.] This hymn is dated on the original ms. ("M. MSS.") "Sept. 20, 1837," and is indexed as having been copied and sent to many persons. The earliest printed form with which we have met is in Montgomery's Original Hymns, 1853, No. 245, in 3 st. of 8 l., and entitled "Invocation to Peace." It is in Kennedy, 1863, and other collections. [J. J.]

Pearce, Samuel, s. of a silversmith at Plymouth, was b. in that town, July 20, 1766. Early in life he joined the Baptist Church in Plymouth, and, showing gifts for the ministry, was invited to preach. After a course of study at the Baptist College, Bristol, he became, in 1790, pastor of the Baptist congregation in Cannon Street, Birmingham. There his ministry was remarkably successful; but after a brief and bright course he d. on Oct. 10, 1799. He was strongly disposed to foreign mission work, and was one of the founders of the Baptist Missionary Society, in 1792. His Memoirs, by A. Fuller, was pub. in 1800. Embodied in the Memoirs were eleven poetical pieces. In the 2nd ed., 1801, these pieces were grouped together at the end of the Memoirs. He is known to hymnology through the following hymns:—

1. Author of life, with grateful heart. Evening. This in the Meth. Free Church S. S. H. Bk., 1860, is the original with the omissions of st. iii.; that noted on p. 98, l. is a cento for "Morning." Both are from the Memoirs, 1800.

2. God of our lives, our morning song. Morning. From the Memoirs, 1800, into the Meth. Free Church H. Bk., 1860, with the omission of st. ii.

3. In the floods of tribulation. In Affliction. His "Hymn in a Storm," in the Memoirs, 1800, in 4 st. of 10 l. In the 10th ed. of Rippon's Bap. Sel., 1800, it is

Court of Exchequer, was b. in Merriam Square, Dublin, Feb. 5, 1816. He resided for a time in educational purposes at Wesley College, near Bristol, and then at Levens Farmhouse, near Kendal, Westmoreland. He entered Trinity College, Dublin, in Feb. 1832, and graduated B.A. in 1840. Taking Holy Orders in 1841, he became curate of Ballymacnagh, diocese of Kilmore. In July, 1844, he was preferred to the Vicarage of Mellifont, near Drogheda. In 1848 he removed to England, where he held successively the incumbency of Trinity Church, Walton, Aylesbury, 1848; of Christ Church, Barnet, 1852; and of St. Jude's, Midway Park, 1864. He d. April 30, 1878. His great work at Barnet and at Midway—the Conferences began at the former and continued at the latter place—the large religious and charitable organizations which he instituted and superintended, are matters of history. Full details are given of the rise and progress of these and his other works in his Life and Letters, 1878. His hymns were written mainly for the Barnet and Midway "Conferences," and were pub. sometimes as leaflets, and again, as for the Conference of 1875, as Hymns Original and Selected, By W. F. In this pamphlet there are 25 of his compositions. In the latter part of 1878 his Original Hymns and Thoughts in Verse was pub. posthumously. This work contains 71 pieces, but few of which are dated. Of these the following are given in a few hymn-books:—

1. And may I truly tread. Divine Worship.
2. Help us, O Lord, to praise! Praise.
3. How shall we praise Thy name. Christian Communion. From this "O for ten thousand harps," is taken.
4. Jesus, in Thy bliss name. Church Conference.
5. Jesus, stand among us. Divine Worship.
6. My blessed Jesus, Thou hast taught. Self Communion.
7. O God of glorious majesty. For Retreats or Quiet Days.
8. O haste Thy coming kingdom. The Second Advent desired.
9. O holy, holy Father. Divine Worship.
10. O Lord, with one accord. Divine Worship.
11. O Saviour! we adore Thee. Jesus the Faithful One.
12. Once more with chartered joy. Divine Worship.
13. Praise God, ye seraphs bright. Praise.
14. Thousands and thousands stand. Communion of Saints.
15. You shining there is nearer. Heaven Anticipated.

Mr. Pennefather's hymns possess much beauty and earnest simplicity; are rich in evangelical sentiment and doctrine; and are much more musical than is usual with lyrics of their class. They deserve greater attention than they have hitherto received. [J. J.]

People of the living God. J. Montgomery. [On Turning to God.] In Hatfield's Poets of the Church, N.Y., 1884, p. 440, the author says, "At the close of 1814, he [Montgomery] was publicly recognised, at Fulneck, as a brother in the Lord, and a member of the [Moravian] Society. It was in all probability on this occasion that he wrote his beautiful and popular hymn beginning with 'People of the living God.' This uncertainty in Hatfield's English Hymns, N.Y., 1886, p. 455, where he says, "This hymn describes Montgomery's feelings at the prospect of being readmitted to the Moravian communion at Fulneck, November 4th, 1814." In Holland's Memoirs of Montgomery, pub. in 1854, the full details of Montgomery's application to the Moravian community at Fulneck, the consent of the authorities there, and his admission in Dec., 1814, are given, but neither there nor elsewhere in the Memoir is any reference made to this hymn. The original ms. is not amongst the ms. nss., nor is there anything at our command which can fix the date of its appearance until 1819, when it was included in Cotterill's Sol. as No. 160, in 3 st. of 8 l., and headed, "Choosing the portion of God's heritage." Although therefore we cannot say positively, with Duffield, that it was written at the period when Montgomery joined the Moravians at Fulneck, in Dec., 1814, yet we are prepared to admit with Hatfield that it was in all probability written at that time. The text was repeated from Cotterill's Sol. in Montgomery's Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 466, and in his Original Hymns, 1855, No. 51. The use of this hymn is extensive. [J. J.]

Perpetual Source of Light and Grace. P. Doddridge. [Inconstancy in Religion lamented.] This hymn is No. 74 in the p. nss., and undated, but is found between other hymns dated respectively, "Jan. 15, 1734," and "Jan. 1, 1734," thus fixing the date as 1738. It was given, without alteration, in Job Orton's posthumous edition of Doddridge's Hymns, &c., 1755, as No. 151, in 6 st. of 4 l., with the heading "Inconstancy in Religion. Hosea vi. 4," and again, with slight changes, in J. D. Humphreys's edition of the same, 1839, No. 170. It is in a few modern collections, including Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1840 and 1873. In a few collections it begins "Eternal Source of Light and Grace." [J. J.]

Perronet, Edward. The Perronets of England, grandfather, father, and son, were French émigrés. David Perronet came to England about 1680. He was son of the refugee Pasteur Perronet, who had chosen Switzerland as his adopted country, where he ministered to a Protestant congregation at Chateau D'Oex. His son, Vincent Perronet, B.A., was a graduate of Queen's College, Oxford, though his name is not found in either Anthony Wood's Athenae Oxonienses nor his Fast, nor in Bliss's apparatus of additional notes. He became, in 1728, Vicar of Shorham, Kent. He is imperishably associated with the Evangelical Revival under the Wesley and Whitefield. He cordially co-operated with the movement, and many are the notices of him scattered up and down the biography and Journals of John Wesley and of Selina, Countess of Huntingdon. He lived to the venerable age of ninety-one; and pathetic and beautiful is the account of John Wesley's later visits to the white-haired saint (b. 1693, d. May 9, 1785). His son Edward was b. in 1726. He was first educated at home under a tutor, but whether he proceeded to the University (Oxford) is uncertain. Born, * Agnes's Protestant Exiles from France in the Reign of Louis XIV. contains Vincent the father with Edward his son.

baptized, and brought up in the Church of England, he had originally no other thought than to be one of her clergy. But, though strongly evangelical, he had a keen and searching eye for defects. A characteristic note to The Mitre, in referring to a book called The Dissenting Gentleman's answer to the Rev. Mr. White, thus runs:—"I was born, and am like to die, in the tottering communion of the Church of England; but I despise her nonsense; and thank God that I have once read a book that no fool can answer, and that no honest man tell" (p. 235). The publication of The Mitre is really the first prominent event in his life. A copy is preserved in the British Museum (993a, 21), with title in the author's holograph, and ms. notes; and on the fly-leaf this:—"Capt. Boisragon, from his oblig'd and most respectful humbleservt. The Author. London, March 29th, 1757." The title is as follows:—The Mitre; a Sacred Poem (1 Samuel ii. 30). London: printed in the year 1757. This strangely overlooked satire is priceless as a reflex of contemporary ecclesiastical opinion and sentiment. It is pungent, salted with wit, gleams with humour, hits off vividly the well-known celebrities in Church and State, and is well wrought in picked and packed words. But it is a curious production to have come from a "true son" of the Church of England. It roused John Wesley's hottest anger. He demanded its instant suppression; and it was suppressed (Atmore's Methodist Memorial, p. 300, and Tyerman, ii. 240-44, 264, 265); and yet it was at this period the author threw himself into the Wesleys' great work. But evidences abound in the letters and journals of John Wesley that he was intermittently rebellious and vehement to even his revered leader's authority. Earlier, Edward Perronet dared all obloquy as a Methodist. In 1749 Wesley enters in his diary:

"From Rochdale went to Bolton, and soon found that the Rochdale lions were lambs in comparison with those of Bolton. Edward Perronet was thrown down and rolled in mud and mire. Stones were hurled and windows broken" (Tyerman's Life and Times of the Rev. John Wesley, M.A., 3 vols., 1870; vol. ii. 57).

In 1750 John Wesley writes:

"Charles and you [Edward Perronet] behave as I want you to do; but you cannot, or will not, preach where I desire. Others can and will preach where I desire, but they do not behave as I want them to do. I have a fine time between the one and the other. I think Charles and you have in the general a right sense of what it is to serve as sons in the gospel; and if all our helpers had had the same, the work of God would have prospered better both in England and Ireland. I have not one preacher with me, and not six in England, whose wills are broken to serve me" (ibid. ii. 55, and Whitehead's Life of Wesley, ii. 259).

In 1755 arrangements to meet the emergency created by its own success had to be made for Methodism. As one result, both Edward and Charles Perronet broke loose from John Wesley's law that none of his preachers or "helpers" were to dispense the Sacraments, but were still with their flocks to attend the parish churches. Edward Perronet asserted his right to administer the Sacraments as a divinely-called preacher (ibid. ii. 200). At that time he was resident at Canterbury, "in a part of the archbishop's old palace" (ibid. ii. 230). In season and out of season he "evangelized." Onward, he became one of the Countess of Huntingdon's a chapel in Watling Street. Throughout he was passionately strong-willed; but always a loving Master. The student-remember the Wesleys will be "taken e passages that ever and anon He bursts in full of fire and ebullient and volatile. In this he is found as an independent pastoral of a small church. He must have been in easy stances, as his will shows. 1792, and was buried in the great cathedral, Jan. 8. He published anonymously in 10 volumes. [A. B. G.]

Peter of St. Maurice (Petrus Mauritus), also called Peter of Cluny (Petrus Cluniensis), or Peter the Venerable (Petrus Venerabilis), Abbot, was b. 1092 or 1094 (Trench, Sac. Lat. Poetry, 1874, p. 101) a noble family (the Counts of St. Maurice) in Auvergne ("the Nobles": Leg. i genere natus fuit noster, Hist. Poem. Med. Ævi, p. 425). Beginning life as a soldier, he afterwards became a Benedictine monk, and on the death of Hugh, Prior of Marcigny, who had but three months before been elected to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Abbot of the celebrated monastery of his order at Cluny, in 1122. From this time much of his life was spent in controversy, a summary of which is an interesting piece of Ecclesiastical history.

Pontius, by his arrogance, in claiming, as Abbot of Cluny, the title of opponent to his pretensions, and the matter had clouded of the moment in his resignation of his office. But Peter had scarcely been three years installed as Abbot, when Pontius established himself as head of another religious community at Treviso, in Italy, whence he started with a train of monks, and, taking advantage of the temporary absence of Peter, again got possession of his old position at Cluny, and drove out the friends of Peter, with the Prior St. Bernard at their head. After great excesses, and had been committed by the usurper and his followers, and the villages and estates of the Abbey had been given up to fire and the sword, Pope Honorius II. summoned all the villages and estates of the Abbey both sides, decided parties to Rome, and, having heard Pontius and imprisoned in favour of Peter, excommunicated Pontius a few months afterwards him in a dungeon, where he died.

When this question had been settled, another dispute arose, in which the monks of Cîteaux or Clairvaux accused those of Cluny of an undue relaxation of the rule of their order. Robert, a cousin of St. Bernard, had become a monk at Clairvaux, but, finding the rule there too gallant, had migrated to Cluny, and, on an appeal to Rome, the Pope directed him to remain at Cluny, much to the chagrin of St. Bernard, who, as the Cistercian head of Clairvaux, vehemently attacked the milder discipline of the Benedictine Cluny. Robert, in consequence of his cousin's objections, was sent back by Peter to Clairvaux, but his monks, resenting such a tame surrender, got William, the Abbot of St. Thierry, near Rheims, to write a sharp letter of remonstrance to St. Bernard. The reply of the latter accusing the Cluniacs of all sorts of declensions from the needful strictness of monastic life, drew forth rejoinder from Peter as characteristic of "that gentle forbearance and love of peace" of the latter, "which made him stand out conspicuous in his generation, when each man sought his own, or the things of his order, not the things of Jesus Christ" (S. Baring-Gould's Lives of the Saints, December, p. 284). (S. Baring-Gould's Lives of the Saints, p. 102), both of which have been translated. See Latin, Tra. from the, p. 655, ii.

In a subsequent controversy between St. Bernard and Peter the former was more successful. He opposed the wish of Hugh, son of the Duke of Burgundy, to secure the see of Langres, when vacant in 1138, for a Cluniac monk. The Archbishop of Lyons consecrated Hugh's nominee in the teeth of St. Bernard's opposition, but notwithstanding all defence Peter could of the appointment of the new bishop which Peter could make, the Pope, who was wholly under the influence of St. Bernard, pronounced the consecration of the Cluniac monk void, and the Prior of Clairvaux, a cousin of St. Bernard's, was consecrated in his stead.

Once more the gentle Peter came into collision with the fiery, domineering St. Bernard in the matter of Abelard. The latter had been condemned, if not altogether unheard, at any rate misunderstood, by the Council of Sens upon charges of heresy brought against him by St. Bernard, and the sentence upon him had been confirmed, upon appeal, by Pope Innocent II.—a mere echo of the prosecutor. Abelard, silenced and broken down, took refuge at Cluny on his way to Rome, and remained there for some two years, during which Peter so far won upon the victorious Bernard as to bring about a reconciliation between him and Abelard, if such can be called a reconciliation, which allowed Bernard still to do his utmost to set the minds of men against his old adversary. The peaceful death of Abelard at Cluny in 1142 finally terminated this controversy.

The year 1143 saw a renewal of the correspondence between St. Bernard and Peter on the subject of the two reforms, in which the latter takes credit for a warm love for the Cistercians, and reminds his correspondent of the shocks that love had withstood in the question of the payment of tithes by a Cistercian monastery in the neighbourhood of Cluny to the Cluniac monks, which had led to a keen controversy and many appeals; as well as in the contest about the Bishop of Langres. It was at this time that Peter sent to St. Bernard a copy of the translation of the Koran, which Peter had caused to be made in Spain by Robert, an Englishman, but Archdeacon of Pampeluna.

Peter was in high favour with Pope Celestine II. and Lucius II., and in 1146, in common with St. Bernard, took an active part in discountenancing the slaughter of the Jews in France and Germany, which had resulted from the preaching of St. Bernard against the infidels. But though Peter appealed to Louis VII. to stay the massacre, it must be said that he made no effort to prevent the plunder of the Jews.

Another matter in which Peter was interested and engaged was that of Peter of Bruys, who founded a sect holding tenets strongly tinged with Manichæism, and was burnt alive by a zealous Catholic mob early in the twelfth century. A letter strongly condemning the heretic, his followers, and his opinions is still extant. Peter went to Rome for five months in 1160, when Eugenius III., a nominee of St. Bernard, was Pope, and gave an account of Eugenius to St. Bernard by letter.

The rest of Peter's life was spent at Cluny, where he d. early in 1156 or 1157, leaving the impression behind him of "one of the most attractive figures which monastic and mediæval history presents to us" (S. Baring-Gould's Lives of the Saints, Dec., p. 281). Lacking the fire and power of his great antagonist and correspondent, he succeeded by the gentleness and imperturbability of his disposition in gaining and retaining an influence in the religious world second only to that of St. Bernard. His writings were chiefly controversial, and the poetry which he wrote was great neither in quantity nor quality. Amongst his latter were (1) Some Rhythms, Prose, Verses, and Hymns contained in the Bibliotheca Cluniensis, 1614; (2) A Hymn on the "Translation of St. Benedict"—"Clarior conjubila Gallia cantibus," in the Bibliotheca Floriacensis, 1605; and (3) An "Epitaph on Peter Abelard." From the first collection, Archbishop Trench gives two specimens: (a) On Christ's Nativity, "Cælum gaude, terra plaude," and (b) one on the Resurrection of our Lord, "Mortis portis fractis fortis" (Sac. Lat. Poetry, 1874, p. 102), both of which have been translated. See Latin, Tra. from the, p. 655, ii.

Peter the Venerable. [Peter of St. Maurice.]

Peters, Mary, née Bowly, daughter of Richard Bowly, of Cirencester, was b. in 1818, and subsequently married to the Rev. John McWilliam Peters, sometime Rector of Quenington, Gloucestershire, and d. at Clifton,

July 29, 1856. Her prose work, The World's History from the Creation to the Accession of Queen Victoria, was pub. in seven volumes. Several of her hymns were contributed to the Plymouth Brethren's Ps., Hys., and Spiritual Songs, Lond., D. Walther, 1842. These with others, 58 in all, were pub. by Nisbet & Co., London, 1847, as Hys. intended to help the Communion of Saints. Dr. Walker introduced several from these collections into his Cheltenham Ps. & Hys., 1855. Many of these have been repeated in Snepp's Songs of G. & G., 1872, and other Church of England hymn-books. These include, besides those annotated under their respective first lines:—

i. From Psalms, Hymns, & S. S., 1842:—

1. Blessed Lord, our hearts are panting. Burial. Given in later collections as "Blessed Lord, our souls are longing."
2. How can there be one holy thought! Holiness through Christ.
3. Jesus, how much Thy Name unfolds. The Name of Jesus.
4. Lord, we see the day approaching. Second Advent.
5. O Lord, we know it matters not. Taught by the Spirit.

6. The murmurs of the wilderness. Praise to Jesus.
7. The saints awhile dispersed abroad. God within us.
8. Unworthy is thanksgiving. Jesus the Mediator.
9. Whom have we, Lord, but Thee. Christ All in All.
10. With thankful hearts we meet, O Lord. Public Worship.

ii. From her Hymns, &c., 1847:—

11. Earth's firmest ties will perish. Burial.
12. Enquire, my soul, enquire. Second Advent.
13. Hallelujah, we are hastening. Journeying Heavenward.
14. Holy Father, we address Thee. Holy Trinity.
15. Jesus, of Thee we ne'er would tire. Holy Communion.
16. Lord Jesus, in Thy Name alone. Holy Communion.
17. Lord, through the desert drear and wide. Prayer for Perseverance.
18. Many sons to glory bring. Security in Christ.
19. O Lord, whilst we confess the worth. Dead in Christ. Sometimes it begins with st. II., "Dead to the world we here avow."
20. Our God is light, we do not go. Christ the Guide.
21. Praise ye the Lord, again, again. Public Worship.
22. Salvation to our God. Passiontide.
23. The holiest we enter. Public Worship. Sometimes given as "The holiest now we enter."
24. Through the love of God our Saviour. Security in Christ.
25. Thy grace, O Lord, to us hath shown. Offertory.
26. We're pilgrims in the wilderness. Life a Pilgrimage.

Petersen, Johann Wilhelm, was b. June 1, 1649, at Osnabrück: his father Georg Petersen, Kanzlei-beamter at Lübeck, having gone to reside at Osnabrück as representing Lübeck in the negotiations which ended in the Peace of Westphalia. Petersen matriculated at the University of Giessen, in 1669; went in 1671 to Rostock, and was then for short periods at Leipzig, Wittenberg, and Jena; the degree of M.A. being conferred on him by Giessen in absentia. He returned to Giessen in 1673, and began to lecture on philosophy and rhetoric as a privat doctent. About 1675 he visited Spener, at Frankfurt. This proved an important turning-point in his life. In 1677 he began to lecture at Rostock, as Professor of Poetry (D.D. from Rostock 1686), but in the same year accepted the pastorate of the St. Aegidien church at Hannover. He was then, in May, 1678, appointed by Duke August Friedrich of Holstein, as Court preacher at Eutin, and general superintendent of the diocese of Lübeck. In Advent, 1688, he became pastor and superintendent at made himself obnoxious by refusing to take fees; received into his amunde Juliane von , publicly to teach her id Kingdom. In addition some of Mr. Phillimore's trs. from the Latin were given in the 1863 ed. of the Parish H. Bk.; and other original hymns which are annotated under their respective first lines. His hymn for Saints Days, "O Lord of glory, King of saints," was included in the 1875 ed. of that collection. Phillimore's Sermons and Hys. were pub. in 1884. [J. J.]

Φῶς ἱλαρὸν ἁγίας δόξης. The author of this hymn, which is found in the Service Book of the Greek Church as a Vesper Hymn, is unknown. It was quoted by St. Basil in the 4th century as of unknown authorship and date (De Sp. Sancto ad Amphiloichium, c. 29). Its earliest printed form is in Archbishop Usher's De Symbolis, 1647, his text being taken from two Greek mss., one supposed to be of the 12th, and the second of the 14th century. Routh also gives it in his Reliqu. Sacr. iii. 299, and Daniel in his Theol. Hymn. iii. p. 5. The form in which the original is printed varies in different works, as in the Lyra Apostolica, 1836, p. 74 (ed. 1879, p. 78); Littledale's Offices, &c., of the Holy Eastern Church, 1863, p. 277, but the text is the same. It is as follows, from Daniel:—

Φῶς ἱλαρὸν ἁγίας δόξης,
'Αθανάτου Πατρὸς οὐρανοῦ,
'Αγίου, μάκαρος,
'Ιησοῦ Χριστέ,
'Ελθόντες ἐπὶ τὴν ἡλίου δόξαν,
'Ιδόντες φῶς ἱσπερινόν,
'Υμνοῦμεν Πατέρα, καὶ Υἱόν,
Καὶ ἅγιον Πνεῦμα θεόν.
'Αξιὸν σε ἐν πᾶσι
Καιροῖς ὑμνεῖσθαι φωναῖς
'Οσίοις, διὰ τοῦ,
Ζωὴν ὁ διδοὺς διδ
'Ο κόσμος σε θαλάξει.

This hymn was sung in the ancient Church at the Lighting of the Lamps, and hence is known as "The Candlelight Hymn." Its modern use as a translated hymn is at Evensong. It may be added that in modern Greek liturgical books it is attributed to Sophronius (see Greek Hymnody, § vi.), thirteen of whose compositions are given in Daniel iii. pp. 20-46.

Translations in C. U.:—

1. Hail! gladdening Light, of His pure glory poured. By J. Keble. This tr. appeared in the British Magazine, 1834; and again, together with the Greek text, in Lyra Apostolica, 1836, p. 73, in 1 st. of 10 l., and signed γ. In 1868 it was given in the Appendix to H. A. & M., and was repeated in the revised ed., 1875. The sign γ in the Lyra Apostolica is that of the Rev. John Keble (Card. Newman's Apologia 2nd ed., p. 297, and Lyra Apost., 1879, p. viii.). In some editions of the Lyra Apostolica, the signature is changed to δ (i.e. Card. Newman) in error. This has been corrected in the ed. of 1879. This tr. is very popular, and is in extensive use.

Pierpoint, Folliott Sandford, M.A., s. of William Horne Pierpoint of Bath, was b. at Spa Villa, Bath, Oct. 7, 1835, and educated at Queen's College, Cambridge, graduating in classical honours in 1871. He has pub. The Chalice of Nature and Other Poems, Bath, N.D. This was republished in 1878 as Songs of Love, The Chalice of Nature, and Lyra Jesu. He has also contributed hymns to the Churchman's Companion (London), Masters, the Lyra Eucharistica, &c. His hymn on the Cross, "O Cross, O Cross of shame," appeared in both these works. He is most widely known through:—

For the beauty of the earth. Holy Communion, or Flower Services. This hymn was contributed to the 2nd ed. of Orby Shipley's Lyra Eucharistica, 1864, in a st. of 4 l., as a hymn to be sung at the celebration of Holy Communion. In this form it is not usually found, but in 4, or sometimes in 5, stanzas, it is extensively used for Flower Services and as a Child's hymn. [J. J.]

Pierpont, John, s. of James Pierpont, of Litchfield, Connecticut, was b. at Litchfield, April 6, 1785, and educated at Yale College, where he graduated in 1804. After fulfilling engagement as a Tutor in New Haven, and in Charlestown, South Carolina, he was admitted to the Bar in 1812. Shortly after he retired and went into business, only to leave it also, and to pass on to Harvard College as a student in theology. In 1819 he succeeded Dr. Holley as the pastor of the Unitarian congregation in Hollis Street, Boston. At length his zeal against intemperance and slavery caused him to resign his charge in 1840 (see Lothrop's Proceedings of an Eccl. Council in the case of the Hollis Street Meeting and the Rev. J. Pierpont). At this date he pub. his Poems & Hymns, including his anti-slavery and temperance poems and songs. In 1845 he became the pastor of an Unitarian congregation at Troy, New York. This he vacated for another at Medford, Massachusetts, in 1849. That he resigned in 1859. When over 70 years of age he became Chaplain in the United States Army (1862), and was finally a Government clerk in the Treasury Department at Washington. He d. suddenly at Medford, Aug. 27, 1866. Pierpont's publications include Airs of Palestine, 1816, some school books, and his Poems & Hymns, 1840 and 1854. His hymns in C. U. include:—

1. Another day its course hath run. Evening. Appeared in Hymns for Children, Boston, 1825; in Greenwood's Chapel Liturgy, 1827; and in the author's Poems & Hymns, 1840.
2. Break forth in song, ye trees. Public Thanks-giving. Written for the Second Centennial Celebration of the Settlement of Boston, Sept. 17, 1830, and included in the Poems & Hymns, 1840.
3. Break the bread and pour the wine. Holy Communion. In Harris's Hymns for the Lord's Supper, 1820.
4. Father, while we break the bread. Holy Communion.
5. God Almighty and All-seeing. Greatness of the Father. Contributed to Elias Nason's Cong. H. Bk., Boston, 1857.
6. God of mercy, do Thou never. Ordination. Written for the Ordination of John B. P. Storer at Walpole, Nov. 15, 1826; and pub. in the author's Poems, &c., 1840.
7. God of our fathers, in whose sight. Love of Truth desired. This hymn is composed of st. ix., x. of a hymn written for the Charlestown Centennial, June 17, 1830. In this form it was given in the Hymns of the Spirit, 1864, and it was given in the Boston Hymns, 1830. Part of No. 2 above.
8. I cannot make him dead. Good Burial. Written in 1830. Part of No. 2 above.
9. I cannot make him dead. of an exquisitely touching and beautiful poem of ten stanzas originally printed in the Monthly Miscellany, Oct. 1840.

10. Let the still air rejoice. Praise.
11. Mighty One, Whose name is Holy. Charitable Institutions. Written for the anniversary of the Howard Benevolent Society, Dec. 1826, and included in the author's Poems, &c., 1840.
12. My (O) God, I thank Thee that the night. Morning. Appeared in his Poems, &c., 1840. In Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1873, it begins "O God, I thank Thee," &c.
13. O bow Thine ear, eternal One. Opening of Divine Service. This is dated 1823, but was not included in the author's Poems, &c., 1840, although one of his best productions.
14. O Thou to Whom in ancient time. Universal Worship. "Written for the opening of the Independent Congregational Church in Barton Square, Salem, Massachusetts, Dec. 7, 1824," and printed at the close of the sermon preached by Henry Colman on that day. It was given in Pierpont's Poems, &c., 1840, and is found in several collections in Great Britain and America. It is widely known.
15. O Thou Who art above all height. Ordination. "Written for the Ordination of Mr. William Ware, as Pastor of the First Congregational Church in New York, Dec. 18, 1821," and included in his Poems, &c., 1840.
16. O Thou Who on the whirlwind rides. Dedication of a Place of Worship. Written for the opening of the Seamen's Bethel in Boston, Sept. 11, 1833. Sometimes given as "Thou Who on the," &c.
17. O'er Kedron's stream, and Salem's height. Gethsemane. One of eight hymns contributed to Dr. T. M. Harris's Hymns for the Lord's Supper, 1820. It is in Martineau's Hymns, &c., London, 1873, and others.
18. On this stone, now laid with prayer. Foundation-stone Laying. Written for the laying of the corner-stone of Suffolk Street Chapel, Boston, for the Ministry of the Poor, May 23, 1839.
19. With Thy pure dew and rain. Against Slavery. Written for the African Colonization Society, and included in Cheever's American Common Place Book, 1831. Not in the author's Poems, &c., 1840.

Pierpont's talents as a hymn-writer, as in other fields, were respectable rather than commanding, but so energetically employed as to make their mark. Thus, although he never wrote a single hymn that can be called a great lyric, yet he has attained to a prominent position in American hymnody. [F. M. B.]

Pierson, Arthur Tappan, D.D., was b. in New York city, March 6, 1837, and educated at Hamilton College. He entered the Presbyterian ministry in 1860, and was pastor successively in Binghamton and in Waterford, New York, and Fort Street, Detroit; his last charge being the Bethany Presbyterian Church, Philadelphia. (Duffield's English Hymns, 1886, p. 576.) Dr. Pierson's hymns include:—

1. Once I was dead in sin. Praise for Salvation.
2. The Gospel of Thy grace. The Love of God in Christ.
3. To Thee, O God [Lord], we raise. Divine Benevolence.
4. With harps and with viols there stand a great throng. The New Song.

Of these hymns, No. 3 is in Hymns and Songs of Praise, N. Y., 1874, and the Laudes Domini, N. Y., 1884; and Nos. 1, 2, 4, are in I. D. Sankey's Sacred S. and Solos. [J. J.]

Pilgrim, burdened with thy sin. G. Crabbe. [The Christian Pilgrim.] In the preface to the 1807 ed. of his work, The Village, Crabbe says concerning Sir Eustace Grey:—"In the story of Sir Eustace Grey an attempt is made to describe the wanderings of a mind first irritated by the consequences of error and misfortune, and afterwards soothed by a species of enthusiastic conversion, still keeping him insane; a task very difficult; and, if the presumption of the attempt may find pardon, it will not be refused to the failure of the poet."

The scene of this story is a madhouse, and the persons are a visitor, the physician, and the patient. Sir Eustace, the patient, gives his history in detail. He was the lord of the manor, had a wife, two children, and a friend; the wife is seduced by the friend; a duel in which the friend is killed; wife pines away; both children die; is himself distracted; plagued by two friends; found peace at last in the Sun of Mercy; and gives a specimen of the preaching through which he was saved. This specimen is:—

"Pilgrim! burdened with thy sin,
Come the way to Zion's gate;
There, till mercy speaks within,
Knock, and weep, and watch, and wait;
Knock—He knows the sinner's cry;
Weep—He loves the mourner's tears;
Watch—for saving grace is nigh;
Wait—till heavenly light appears.
"Hark! It is the Bridegroom's voice,
'Welcome, pilgrim! to thy rest.'
Now within the gate rejoice,
Safe, and sealed, and bought, and blest:
Safe—from all the lures of vice;
Sealed—by signs the chosen know;
Bought—by love and life the price;
Blest—the mighty debt to owe.
"Holy pilgrim! what for thee,
In a world like this remains?
From thy guarded breast shall flee
Fear and shame, and doubt, and pain:
Fear—the hope of heaven shall fly;
Shame—from glory's view retire,
Doubt—in certain rapture die;
Pain—in endless bliss expire."

These stanzas, when detached from their melancholy surroundings, form a somewhat spirited hymn, and as such they are in use in Great Britain and America. [J. J.]

Pirie, Alexander, was for some time a minister in connection with the Antiburgher Synod of the Presbyterian Church of Scotland. He was appointed in 1760 a teacher of the Philosophical Class in the Theological Seminary, New York city, but was suspended shortly after and expelled from the body. On joining the Burghers he returned to Scotland and became the minister of a congregation in Abernethy. In 1769 he joined the Independents, and was minister of a congregation at Newburgh, Fifeshire. He d. in 1804. In 1777 he pub. Psalms, or Hymns founded on some important Passages of Scripture. From this work two well-known hymns have come down to modern collections through the Sac. Songs and Hys. on V. Passages of Scripture for the New Relief Church, Campbell St., Glasgow, 1794. These are:—

1. Come, let us join in [our] songs of praise, To our ascended Priest. Ascension.
2. With Mary's love without her fear. Easter.

Pistor, Henricus. Little or nothing is known of the life of this author, to whom is attributed the grand hymn on St. John the Baptist, "Præcursoris et Baptistæ," which is given by Clichtoveus (Elucidat. 1516, f. 192 b), and Trench in his Sac. Lat. Poetry, ed. 1874, p. 94, as well as by Daniel and others. Clichtoveus describes him as a Doctor of Theology in the University of Paris, and a Monk of the Abbey of St. Victor, and states that he took part in the Council of Constance (1414–1418), which would fix the time he lived to the end of the 14th and the beginning of the 15th centuries. Archbishop Trench says of him "that the writer" (of the poem mentioned above) "was an accomplished theologian is plain; and no less so that he was trained Pleasant are Thy courts above. H. F. Lyte. [Ps. lxxxiv.] Pub. in his Spirit of the Psalms, 1834, in 4 st. of 8 l., and again in later editions. Its use in all English-speaking countries is extensive, and it is usually given in an unaltered form, as in H. A. & M., the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., &c. In the S. P. C. K. Hymns, 1852, No. 162, a portion of this hymn was given in 4 st. of 4 l., as "Happy they that find a rest." [See Psalters, English, § XVII.] [J. J.]

Plume, Mrs. N. D., a nom de plume of Mrs. Van Alstyne.

Plumptre, Edward Hayes, D.D., s. of Mr. E. H. Plumptre, re, was b. in London, Aug. 6, 1821, and educated at King's College, London, and University College, Oxford, graduating as a double first in 1844. He was for some time Fellow of Brasenose. On taking Holy Orders in 1846 he rapidly attained to a foremost position as a Theologian and Preacher. His appointments have been important and influential, and include that of Assistant Preacher at Lincoln's Inn; Select Preacher at King's College, London; Dean of Queen's College, Oxford; Professor of Pastoral Theology at London; Dean of Queen's Cathedral, Dublin; Professor of Exegesis of the New Testament in King's College, London; Boyle Lecturer, Oxford; Examiner in the Theological schools at Oxford; Member of the Old Testament Company for the Revision of the A. V. of the Holy Scriptures; Rector of Pluckley, of Wells, 1881. Dean Plumptre's literary productions have been very numerous and important, and embrace the classics, history, divinity, biblical criticism, biography, and poetry. The list as set forth in Crockford's Clerical Directory is very extensive. His poetical works include Lazarus, and Other Poems, 1864; Master and Scholar, 1866; Things New and Old, 1884; and translations of Sophocles, Æschylus, and Dante. As a writer of sacred poetry he ranks very high. His hymns are elegant in style, fervent in spirit, and broad in treatment. The subjects chosen are mainly those associated with the revived Church life of the present day, from the processional of the present day, from the hospital work and the spiritual life in schools and colleges. The rhythm of his verse has a special attraction for musicians, its poetry for the cultured, and its stately simplicity for the devout and earnest-minded. The two which have attained to the most extensive use in G. Britain and America are "Rejoice, ye pure of old," and "Thine arm, O Lord, in days of old." His trs. from the Latin (see Index), 1871 and 1872, are very good and musical, but they have not been used in any way in proportion to their merits. His original hymns in C. U. include:—

1. Behold they gain the lonely height. The Transfiguration. Written for and first pub. in the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871.
2. For all Thy countless bounties. National Hymn.

Written for the Jubilee of Queen Victoria, 1867, and set to music by C. W. Lavington. It was printed, together with the National Anthem adapted for the Jubilee, in Good Words, 1867.

3. Lo, summer comes again! Harvest. Written in 1871 for use at the Harvest Festival in Pluckley Church, Kent, of which the author was then rector, and pub. in the same year in the Hymnary, No. 466.

4. March, march, onward soldiers true. Processional at Choral Festivals. Written in 1867 for the tune of Costa's March of the Israelites in the Oratorio of El, at the request of the Rev. Henry White, Chaplain of the Savoy, and first used in that Chapel. It was subsequently pub. in the Savoy Hymnary, s.d. [1870], in 4 st. of 4 l.; in a Choral Festival book at Peterborough, and in the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871.

5. O Light, Whose beams illumine all. The Way, the Truth, and the Life. Written in May 1864, and pub. in his Lazarus, and Other Poems, 1864, as one of five Hymns for School and College. It passed into the 1868 Appendix to H. A. & M., and again into other collections.

6. O Lord of hosts, all heaven possessing. For School or College. Written in May, 1864, and pub. in his Lazarus and other Poems, 1864, in 5 st. of 6 l.

7. O praise the Lord our God. Processional Thanksgiving Hymn. Written May 1864, and pub. in his Lazarus, and other Poems, 1864, in 4 st. of 8 l. It is a most suitable hymn for Sunday school gatherings.

8. Rejoice, ye pure in heart. Processional at Choral Festival. Written in May 1865, for the Peterborough Choral Festival of that year, and first used in Peterborough Cathedral. In the same year it was pub. with special music by Novello & Co.; and again (without music) in the 2nd ed. of Lazarus, and Other Poems, 1865. It was included in the 1868 Appendix to H. A. & M. with the change in st. 1, l. 3, of "Your orient banner wave on high," to "Your festival banner wave on high." It is more widely used than any other of the author's hymns. Authorized text in H. A. & M.

9. Thine arm, O Lord, in days of old. Hospitals. Written in 1864 for use in King's College Hospital, London, and first printed on a fly-sheet as "A Hymn used in the Chapel of King's College Hospital." It was included in the 2nd ed. of Lazarus, and Other Poems, 1865; in the 1868 Appendix to H. A. & M.; the S. P. C. K. Church Hys., 1871; Thring's Coll., 1882; and many others.

10. Thy hand, O God, has guided. Church Infence. Included in the 1869 Supplemental Hymns to H. A. & M. The closing line of each stanza, "One Church, one Faith, one Lord," comes in with fine effect.

Dean Plumptre's Life of Bp. Ken, 1888, is an exhaustive and excellent work. The chapter on the bishop's three hymns is well written, but should be read with the article on the same subject in this Dictionary, p. 617, i.

Plunged in a gulph of dark despair.

I. Watts. [Praise to Jesus, the Redeemer.] 1st pub. in his Hys. and Spiritual Songs, 1707, in 8 st. of 4 l., and headed "Praise to the Redeemer." In G. Whitefield's Hys. for Social Worship, &c., 1753, st. i.-iii., vi., viii., were given as No. 104. This form of the text was repeated by M. Madan in his Ps. & Hys., 1760, with the change in st. ii., l. 4, of "He ran" to "He came to our relief." Through frequent repetition this became the recognised form of the hymn in Church of England hymn-books. Other forms of the text, all beginning with the first stanza, are also in C. U. in G. Britain and America.

Plunket, William Conyngham, D.D., 4th Baron Plunket, eldest s. of John, 3rd Baron, was b. in Dublin, 26 August, 1828; educated at Trinity College, Dublin, where he graduated in 1853; and took Holy Orders in 1857. He was Precentor of St. Patrick's Cathedral, Dublin, from 1869 to 1876, when he was elected Bishop of Meath. In 1884 he was translated to the Archdiocese of Dublin. His hymn "Our Lord Christ hath risen" 8 M

(Easter), was first pub. in the Irish Church Hymnal, 1873, in 4 st. of 7 l. It was written for that collection in 1873, to suit the tune "O Ursprung des Lebens," by T. Selle. So far as we are aware this is Lord Plunket's only contribution to hymnody. [G. A. C.]

Plymouth Brethren Hymnody. The sect popularly known as the Plymouth Brethren was in its earliest stage called The Brethren, because its members professed to meet solely on the ground that they were brethren in Christ. Eventually, however, the branch of it which met at Plymouth, Devon, chiefly from the position, learning, and labours of its members, acquired so great influence in the society as to give its name to the whole body, and it was thenceforth known as The Plymouth Brethren. In giving an account of the hymns and hymn-books of The Brethren, it is necessary to refer somewhat to the history of the sect. For the purpose of our article it will be convenient to divide thus:—Period I. From the commencement of the sect to the year 1848. Period II. From the year 1848 to 1889.

Period I.—Between the years 1828–33 a custom arose in Dublin, Bristol, Plymouth, and elsewhere for certain persons, irrespective of creed, to meet together for prayer, the joint study of the Scriptures, and mutual aid in spiritual matters generally. The principle on which they acted is thus put forth by one of their early associates, "the possession of the common life" (in Jesus Christ) and "that disciples should bear as Christ does with many errors of their brethren." At first the assemblies so formed did not in any way interfere with the worship of the members in the various churches and chapels to which they belonged; indeed their meetings were held at an early hour on Sunday morning so that they should not do so. But soon the separatist principle began to make itself manifest. With many, separation from religious communities was held to be the only means of promoting unity among Christians, and finally Mr. Darby, an author of some repute, who at one time held an Irish curacy, gained so much ascendancy as to bring the desired separation about, and their meetings have ever since been held as distinct from other religious denominations. They were united as a body and known under one name, The Plymouth Brethren, till the year 1848.

This period produced many hymn-writers who put forth a great number of hymns, some of which are very beautiful, and all of which, without doubt, helped either to form or to strengthen the Society. The principal hymn-writers during this period were the following:—Chapman, R. C.; Darby, J. N.; Deck, J. G.; Donny, Sir Edward, Bart.; Kelly, Thomas (?); Tregellics, S. Prideaux, LL.D.; and Wigram, G. V.

The hymn-books put forward and used by the Plymouth Brethren during this period were many. They include:—

(1) Hymns for the use of the Church of Christ, by R. C. Chapman, Minister of the Gospel, Barnstaple. A New Edition, to which is added an Appendix selected from various sources by John Chapman. (First edition, 1837.) Reprinted 1862, London. The number of hymns written by R. C. Chapman are in all 58. Those collected number 157, and are, as the title sets forth, by various authors, some of whom were Brethren denominations. Amongst the Brethren, Denny, and Kelly are found.

(2) A Selection of Hymns by Bart. London and Dublin. 1st contains many hymns by the Brethren written by himself, Chapman, Tregellics, Wigram amongst the Brethren.

(3) Hymns for the Poor of the Earth, Edited by G. V. Wigram. Wigram, in forewording this selection contains: "Hymns arranged for Speech, "Baptism," "Christian Sabbath," "Introductory to Prayer," "1st Evening," "Lord's Day Morning," "Morning," "Parting," "For 7 hymns in the body of this a variety of sources. (M. Wren) and Kelly are strongly represented man also contribute. The Appendix contains 40 hymns over 20.

(4) Psalms and Hymns : Two Parts. Part I. "Intend worship of the Children of G Private Meditation." London is the work of J. G. Deck. From their own body Der Part I. has Hymns on His Lord's Supper. Part II. contains most hymn-books. Der and the Editor are also represented.

Period II.—In 1848 which ended in a division of The Brethren. The Lord's favourite theme with difference of opinion of two of their leaders cause of the rupture gated the theory that His saints would be coming to judgment by all. Mr. Newton and who had tested against these retaliated by accusing (years later) with to the Humanity of which the Brethren years. Mr. Newton but this did not followers. They with Mr. Newton, called upon the same. Mr. Darby the greatest opponent Mr. Müller (the of Ashley Down), and They resolved on this the Darby Müller party, against them. This the time the Plymouth Brethren into two main or Exclusive and other Christians conditions, and The Brethren; then The Open or 1 to fellowship, and to be Christian.

This period production of brought forth and but few hymns. Besides those division of the exclusive section is at all gener hymns were sometimes very nice, but not suited to an 'Assembly of Saints'; several have gone into the Appendix, not necessarily as inferior but of a different character.... Many hymns have been corrected on the principles referred to."

Few hymns placed in those sections of their books for general use are written by the Brethren themselves, whilst many by them are found amongst those for the use of "the Assembly of the Saints." In this latter class hymns containing Confession of Sin and Prayer for Pardon are conspicuous by their absence. The doctrine such hymns teach is held to be unnecessary for the children of God, consequently they are deemed unsuitable for Assembly Worship. Hymns to be used at the Lord's Supper, and at Holy Baptism are found in some numbers, as are also hymns concerning the coming of Christ to raise His saints, and the millennium. Hymns teaching the dreariness of this world and all belonging to it, the full assurance of faith, and the completeness of the Christian in Christ, are strongly represented. The efficacy alone of the Blood of Jesus for Salvation is the theme of many of their best hymns. [W. S.]

Ποῖα τοῦ βίου τρυφή. St. John of Damascus. [Burial.] From the Greek Burial Office of Priests, in the Euchologion. Stichera Idiomela of great beauty, in which some of the strophes are supposed to be spoken by the dead. It is given in Daniel, iii. p. 96. The only tr. into English is Dr. Littledale's "With pain earth's joys are mingled," made for the People's H., 1867, No. 381, and transferred from thence to the Priest's Prayer Book, 1870. This is one of Dr. Littledale's best trs. from the Greek. He omits certain strophes of similar meaning, and the Theotokia (addresses to the B. V. M.). The original is also given in Bäessler, 1858, No. 17, with a tr. in German. [Greek Hymnody, § xvii. 2.] [J. J.]

Pollio, Symphorianus, originally called Altbiesser or Althiesser, was a native of Strassburg, and was for some time in clerical work at Rosheim, near Strassburg. In 1507 we find him as one of the priests attached to St. Stephen's church at Strassburg. He was thereafter at St. Martin's in Strassburg, and being very popular as a preacher was appointed, in 1522, by the Chapter as interim preacher at the Cathedral. The Chapter hoped he would counteract the influence of Matthias Zell, but as he preached quite as evangelically as Zell, he was soon sent back to St. Martin's. When, in 1524, he married his housekeeper, the Chapter tried to deprive him of his living, but by the help of the burghesses he continued in St. Martin's till the church had to be taken down in 1529. Thereafter he officiated as pastor of the church "Zu den guten Leuten," outside the city walls, and was still there at the Visitation of 1533. The date of his death is unknown (G. H. A. Rittelmeyer's Die evangelischen Kirchenliederdichter des Elsaasses, Jena, 1855, p. 17; Allg. Deutsche Biog. xxvi. 395, &c.). In the early Strassburg hymn-books there are paraphrases of the Lord's Prayer and of the Magnificat by Pollio. The latter is:—

Mein Seel erhebt den Herren mein. The Magnificat.
In Ordnung und yñhalt Teütscher Mess an Vesper.
Strassburg, 1524, and thence in Wackernagel, III., p. 609,
3 M 2

Besides the foregoing work the following books of poetry, which, though they cannot be called hymn-books pure and simple, yet contain many hymns, have been written by members of the Plymouth Brethren.

(1) Hymns and Poems by Sir Edward Denby, Bart., 1848. It contains "Millennial Hymns," with an "Introduction," "Miscellaneous Hymns"; "Miscellaneous Poems." 3rd ed. London: 1870.

(2) Spiritual Songs by J. N. Darby. Dublin. Entered at Stationers' Hall. London. 1883.

The Open Bible

The Open Brethren have put forth two

(1) Hymns and Spiritual Songs for the Children of God. Alphabetically arranged. 8th ed. Stereotyped. London. 1871. This selection contains more than 400 hymns, which are far more general in character than those of the Brethren. They are gathered from all sources, represented by Chapman, Darby, Kelly, and Wigram. In the Index the names of the hymns are given, a peculiarity worthy of notice, as it is found in no other hymn-book. The following heads:—
"Hymns for Worship," "Scripture Prayer," "Private Use," "Meals," "Baptism," "Bringing up little Children to Jesus," "Missions," "The Gospel." This book is used by the Open Brethren generally.

(2) Hymns and Spiritual Songs compiled in Bristol. 1870. This collection is the work of Messrs. Muller, Crank, and Tregelles, two of the catholic leaders among the Open Brethren. It is the most complete of all the books put forth by either section. It contains more than 600 hymns, which are arranged under the following heads:—
"The Holy Spirit," "The Lord Jesus Christ," "The Christian Life," "The Second Coming of Christ," "The Christian Ordinances," "Special Occasions," "Gospel." Amongst the Brethren no new hymn-writers appear. Chapman, Deck, Denny, Kelly, and Tregelles are represented. This work is used chiefly in Bristol and its neighbourhood.

The hymn-books put forth by the Plymouth Brethren up to the year of the rupture contain hymns for "the Assembly of the Saints," i.e. the books put forth since the rupture in 1848 contain also a selection, though a smaller one, for the "unconverted," i.e. those who are not in full communion with themselves. In the books of the Exclusive Section these hymns are placed in an Appendix, as seen in Hymns for the Little Flock, 1881, whilst in those of the Open Section, where fuller arrangement is found, they are placed under the heading "Gospel," "Blessing," "with its subdivisions "Prayer for the Hymns and Testimony," "Invitation," as in the Hymns and Spiritual Songs compiled in Bristol.

The principle on which this division is made will be seen from the following extracts from the Preface of the first of the Books just mentioned, which, as it is fairly applicable to all, we quote somewhat fully:

"Three things are needed fully:

Three things are needed for a hymn-book. A basis of truth and sound doctrine; something at least of the spirit of Poetry, though not necessarily of the kind commonly called poetry itself, which is obviously merely the spirit and imagination of man; and, lastly, acquaintance with the most difficult and important of all, the acquaintance with the vehicle in his hymn (if led of God to Him) through which grace and sustained thought and language in such sort that and truth which sets the soul in of which for assembly it is rises even to the Father, and the authors may be worshiped in not mere individual experience is out of place . . . . . comforted by knowing their in 4 st. of 10 l. The trs. are: (1) "My soul doth magnify the Lord," by Bp. Coverdale, 1539 (Remains, 1846, p. 565). (2) "My amlle dois magnifie the Lord." In the Gude and Godlie Ballades, ed. 1562, f. 73 (ed. 1869, p. 125). [J. M.]

Pollock, Thomas Benson, M.A., was b. in 1836, and graduated at Trinity College, Dublin, B.A. 1859, M.A. 1863, where he also gained the Vice-Chancellor's Prize for English Verse in 1855. Taking Holy Orders in 1861, he was Curate of St. Luke's, Leek, Staffordshire; St. Thomas's, Stamford Hill, London; and St. Alban's, Birmingham. Mr. Pollock is a most successful writer of metrical Litanies. His Metrical Litanies for Special Services and General Use, Mowbray, Oxford, 1870, and other compositions of the same kind contributed subsequently to various collections, have greatly enriched modern hymn-books. These are specially noticed under Litanies, Metrical, p. 677. i. To the 1889 Supplemental Hymns to H. A. & M. Mr. Pollock contributed two hymns, "We are soldiers of Christ. Who is mighty to save" (Soldiers of Christ), and "We have not known Thee as we ought" (Seeking God), but they are by no means equal to his Litanies in beauty and finish. [J. J.]

Πολυήρατε, κύδιμε. Synesius, Bp. of Ptolemais. [To Christ.] A hymn to Christ, being No. ix. of his ten hymns. The full Greek text is found in the Auth. Graeca Carm. Christ., 1871, p. 22, in 70 lines. From this Mr. Chatfield's tr., "To Thee, much loved, be honour paid," was made, and pub. in his Songs & Hymns, &c., 1876, p. 84, in 66 lines. A. Stevenson's tr. "Thee, desire of all the nations," was pub. in his Ten Hymns of Synesius, &c., 1865. [Greek Hymnody, § v.] [J. J.]

Pont, Robert, son-in-law of John Knox, was the s. of John Pont, Culross, Perthshire. He was b. at Culross in 1524, entered the University of St. Andrew's in 1543, became, in 1562, minister of Dunblane; in 1563, Commissioner of Moray; in 1571, Provost of Trinity College, Edinburgh; and, in 1574, Joint Minister of St. Cuthbert's, Edinburgh. He was one of the three who publicly protested at the Cross of Edinburgh against the Proclamation, on May 25, 1584, of the Acts of the Scottish Parliament against Presbyterianism. For this offence he was forced to flee the kingdom. After his return to St. Cuthbert's he was offered, in 1587, but refused, the Bishopric of Caithness. He d. May 8, 1606, and was buried in St. Cuthbert's Churchyard. Six Psalm Versions in the Scottish Psalter of 1564-65 are by him, viz., Ps. 57, 59, 76, 80, 81, 83. Their first lines are given under Scottish Hymnody II., § 2. Being mostly in peculiar metres none were transferred to the Scottish Psalter of 1650. In 1601 Pont was requested by the General Assembly to revise the Psalter of 1564-65, but never accomplished the work. It is probable he was also one of its original compilers. [J. M.]

Poor wanderer, return to the home of thy bliss. Margaret, Lady Cockburn-Campbell. [Invitation.] Written at Exeter, Aug. 27, 1839, in 3 st. of 6 l., and entitled "To a Friend." It was subsequently pub. in lithograph from the author's ms. In 1842 it was included in Pt. ii. of Hymns, & Spiritual Songs, with thence into Walker's Chelt 1855, and others.

Then follows the poem with the heading, "Messiah. A Sacred Eclogue, composed of several passages of Isaiah the Prophet. Written in imitation of Virgil's Poëto." It consists of 107 lines. When republished by Pope this heading was expanded into a paragraph as an "Advertisement." As a poem it is unknown to the hymn-books; but from it the following centos have passed into C. U.:

(1.) As the Good Shepherd tends his fleecy care. This was given in Collyer's Coll., 1812, No. 626, in 6 st. of 4 l., and has been repeated in later hymnals, but usually in an abridged form.

(2.) From Jesse's root, behold a branch arise. No. 623 in Collyer's Coll., 1812, in 5 st. of 4 l.; and again in later hymnals.

(3.) Hark! a glad voice the lonely desert cheers. No. 625 in Collyer's Coll., 1812, in 4 st. of 4 l.; in Bp. Heber's posthumous Hymns, &c., 1827, p. 106; and again in later collections.

(4.) Rise crowned with light, imperial Salem rise. In the Leeds H. Bk., 1852, No. 687, in 3 st. of 8 l., and several later collections.

(5.) The Saviour comes! by ancient seers foretold. In Mercer's Ch. Ps., & H. Bk., 1864, and others.

It may be noted that l. 46 of The Messiah reads in the original "He wipes the tears for ever from our eyes." This was altered by Pope at the suggestion of Steele, made to Pope in a letter dated June 1, 1712, to "From every face He wipes off every tear." This latter is the poet's authorized reading, is given in his Works, and is found also in the book form reprints of the Spectator. [J. J.]

Pope, Richard Thomas Pembroke, M.A., eldest son of Mr. Thomas Pope, of Cork, was b. at Cork, March 13, 1799, educated at Hyde Abbey, Winchester, and at Trinity College, Dublin, (B.A. 1822); took Holy Orders in 1822; and d. at Kingstown, near Dublin, Feb. 7, 1839. His hymn "In trouble and in grief, O God [Lord]" (Peace in Affliction) was given anonymously in Carus Wilson's Friendly Visitor, June 1824, p. 72, in 4 st. of 4 l., and headed "A Hymn." This text is repeated in the Irish Church Hymnal, 1873, with st. ii. l. 4, "Spread fragrance when they're bruised," altered to "Perfume the air when bruised;" and st. iv. l. 2, "In other times," &c., altered to "At other times," &c. This hymn is in several collections in G. Britain and America. [G. A. C.]

Popule meus quid feci tibi. [Good Friday. The Reproaches.] The Improperia or Reproaches, based on Jeremiah ii. and Micah vi. are in almost all Mediaeval Graduals and Missals. They are found in two mss. of the 11th cent. in the British Museum (Add. 19768 f. 51 b; Harl. 4951 f. 207 b); an 11th cent. ms. in the Bodleian (Liturg. Misc. 366 f. 20); and still survive in the modern Roman Missal (e.g. Mechlin, 1874, p. 165). In the Sarum use they found a place in the services on Good Friday, and were appointed to be sung during the prostrations (made before a veiled cross held by two of the higher clergy in front of the high altar), known by the name of "creeping to the cross." The elaborate rubrics and print of the Sarum Missal, cols. 327-330.

The text is partly in Latin and partly in Greek. In tender language it sets forth the remonstrances of our Blessed Lord with His ungrateful people, to whom He came, and they received Him not. The remembrance of Egypt, the death of the first-born, the overthrow in the Red Sea, the leading and protecting presence of the pillar of fire, the gift of manna, the living water that followed them, the expulsion of the Canaanite, the mightiness of His love—these facts, with others in their past history, are plaintively and sorrowfully applied to Himself, and their cruel guilt in refusing Him brought home to them. When sung in the Sistine Chapel, at Rome, to music adapted thereto by Palestrina, in 1560, the effect is deeply solemn. [See Grove's Dict. of Music, art. Improperia.]

The only metrical tr. into English in C. U. is the following:—

O my people, tell to me. By G. Moultrie, in the Church Monitor, Bristol, 1866, p. 56. Recast as "O my people, O mine own," in Moultrie's Hy. and Lyrics, 1867, p. 81, and this was included, with alterations, in the People's H., 1867; the Hymnary, 1872; and Thring's Coll., 1882. Of the alterations made in the text the greatest are in st. iii. This reads:—

(1) In the Hymns and Lyrics:—

"Holy, holy, holy God,
Holy, Almighty, whom we laud,
Holy and Immortal King,
Hear in mercy as we sing."

(2) In the People's Hymnal:—

"Holy God! O Holy Might!
Holy, Immortal, Infinite!
Victor o'er the Cross and grave,
Save us, Lord, in mercy save."

(3) In the Hymnary and Thring's Coll.:—

"God of holiness and might!
God Immortal, Infinite!
Holy and Immortal King,
Hear in mercy as we sing."

A prose tr. of the Reproaches was given in the 1860 Appendix to the H. Noted, p. 187. In the 1863 and later eds., No. 151, an antiphon is added beginning with "We venerate Thy Cross." From this text a shortened form is included in the Altar Hymnal, 1884, p. 60. Canon Oakeley has tr. it in metre in his Lyra Liturgica, 1865, as "What, O my people, have I done to thee?" [J. M.]

Pott, Francis, M.A., was b. Dec. 29, 1832, and educated at Brasenose College, Oxford, B.A. 1854; M.A. 1857. Taking Holy Orders in 1856 he was curate of Bishopscote, Gloucestershire, 1856-8; Ardingly, Berks, 1858-61; Ticehurst, Sussex, 1861-66; and Rector of Norhill, Ely, 1866. His was pub. in 1861, and reprinted from time to time with a few additions. Mr. Pott contributed trs. from the Latin and Syriac, and original hymns, including "Angel voices ever singing" (p. 68. 4.) and "Lift up your heads, eternal gates" (Ascension). These original hymns, together with his trs., have been received with much favour and are widely used. In several instances in the preceding pages of this Dictionary (and elsewhere in other works), several trs. from the Latin, and other hymnological work, are attributed to Archdeacon Alfred Pott. We are authorized to state that this ascription of authorship is an error. [See Index of Authors and Translators.] [J. J.]

Potter, Thomas Joseph, was b. at Scarborough in 1827, and joined the Roman Catholic Church in 1847, and subsequently took Holy Orders. For many years he filled the Chair of Pulpit Eloquence and English Literature in the Foreign Missionary College of All Hallows, Dublin. He pub. The Spoken Word; or, The Art of Extemporary Preaching; Sacred Eloquence, or, The Theory and Practice of Preaching; and The Pastor and his People; together with several tales. He tr. the Vesper hymns in the Catholic Psalmist: contributed to the Holy Family Hymns, 1860: and pub. Legends, Lyrics, and Hymns, 1862. His most widely-known hymn is "Brightly gleams our banner" (q.v.). Several of his hymns and trs. are in use in Roman Catholic hymn-books for Missions and Schools. He d. at Dublin in 1873. [J. J.]

Pour out Thy spirit from on high. J. Montgomery. [For a Meeting of Clergy.] There are two copies of this hymn in the author's handwriting amongst the m. mss. On one it is stated that it was written on January 23, 1833, for the Rev. J. Birchell, Rector of Newbury, Berks, who pub. a Sel. of Hys. in 1833. It was repeated in Bickersteth's Christian Psalmody, 1833, No. 429, in 5 st. of 4 l., and again in Montgomery's Original Hymns, 1853, No. 306. The most popular form of the hymn is "Lord, pour Thy Spirit from on high." This is in very extensive use. [J. J.]

Powell, Thomas Edward, M.A., s. of David Powell, of Loughton, Essex, was b. at Hampstead, Middlesex, Aug. 22, 1823, and educated at Oriel College, Oxford (B.A. 1845). Ordained in 1846, he was Curate of Cookham-Dean, near Maidenhead; and then Vicar of Bisham, 1848. He pub., in 1868, The Holy Feast, and subsequently his Hys., Anthems, &c., for Public Worship. To this collection he contributed the following hymns:—

1. Again upon the gladdened earth. Harvest.
2. Almighty Fount of love. (1864.) Confirmation.
3. Around Thy throne, O God. All Saints.
4. Bow down Thine ear, Almighty Lord. (1864.) Advent Weeks.
5. God of hope and consolation. Holy Scripture.
6. Hallelujah, hallelujah, Raise the hymn of thankful praise. Harvest.
7. Heavenly Father, King of kings. (1864.) Public Worship.
8. Jesus, from Thy heavenly dwelling. (1874.) Holy Matrimony.
9. Jesus, Whom heavenly hosts adore. (1874.) Holy Communion.
10. Let our hymns of prayer ascending. Ascension.
11. Lord, when beside the grave we mourn. (1862.) Burial.
12. Lord, with grief and sin oppressed. (1863.) Lent.
13. O God, eternal Fount of Light. (1880.) Holy Trinity.
14. O Lamb of God for sinners slain. (1880.) Holy Communion.
15. O Saviour, from Thy heavenly throne. (1872.) Missions.
16. Redeemer, ever blest. Holy Baptism.
17. Though bowed beneath Thy chastening rod. (1862.) Lent or Affliction.
18. To Thee, O holy King of saints. All Saints.
19. Until Thou comest, Saviour, in Thy might. (1874.) Holy Communion.

Mr. Powell's Hymns, Anthems, &c., have been privately printed as an Appendix H. Bk. for use in his parish of Bisham, Berks. The compilation was begun in 1855, and has gradually grown to 97 hymns, of which the above 19 are by the compiler. The dates given above are those of the composition of the respective hymns. [J. J.]

Præcursor altus lux Bede. [St. John the Baptist of this hymn is found in Cassander (Cologne, 1556; p. 263); of Ellinger (Fr. 1578, p. 275); and of Thomæ ii. p. 387). 1834. "Earth to heaven, and heaven to earth Tell his wonders, sing His worth."
1836. "Earth, to heaven exalt the strain,
Send it, heaven, to earth again."

Both texts are in C. U., but the first, as in the S. P. C. K. Church Hymns, 1871; the H. Comp., 1876, and many others, is the more widely used of the two. [J. J.]

Praise the Lord Who reigns above.
C. Wesley. [Ps. cl.] Pub. in Ps. & Hys., 1743, in 4 st. of 8 l. (P. Works, 1868-72, vol. viii. p. 262.) In 1760 M. Madan gave his Ps. & Hys., as No. 83, was repeated by A. M. The form in (ed. 1862, p. 95), which begins with the first line of the original, is considerably altered throughout. The revised Wesleyan H. Bk., 1875, for the first time.

Praise the Lord, Whose mighty wonders.
The Parent's Poetical Anthology, being a Selection of English Poems primarily designed to assist in forming the tastes and the sentiments of Young Readers, London, F. C. & J. Rivington, 1814. There is no editor's name on the title-page, nor appended to the Preface. On "Mrs. Richard Mant," i.e. the wife of Bp. Mant. On p. 27 there is:—

"Praise the Lord, &c. Ps. cxlviii.
Earth, and air, Whose mighty wonders
Him, Who high in tempests thunders,
Him, Whom countless worlds obey:
All ye works of God, adore Him.
Heaven, Who made you by His word;
Earth, exulting shout before Him;
Earth, in concert, praise the Lord.
In the eastern skies ascending,
Praise Him, glorious orb of day;
Praise Him, round the globe extending,
Pines, that crown the lofty mountains,
Bow, in sign of worship, bow:
All ye sweet springs and fountains
Warble praises, as ye flow.
Beasts thro' nature's drear dominions,
Praise Him, where the wilds extend:
Up to heaven's gate ascend,
Man below, the lord of nature,
Angel quires in realms above,
Hymning, praise the great Creator,
Praise the eternal Fount of Love."

In the S. P. C. K. Hymns, 1852, No. 64, the above text was given with the omission of ll. 4-8 of st. i., and the addition of four lines from C. Wesley's "Love divine, all love extolling," slightly altered as the conclusion of st. iii., thus making 3 st. of 8 l. This text has come down to modern hymnals, and is the one in C. U. The author of the original hymn has not been traced. [J. J.]

Praise the Lord, ye heavens adore Him. [Ps. cxlviii.] This hymn is given in a four-paged tract which is found pasted at the end of some copies of the 1796 musical ed. of the Psalms, Hymns, and Anthems of the Foundling Hospital, London [see Kemphorne, J.], and again also at the end of the edition of words only, pub. in 1801. When this sheet was printed, and when it was added to the musical ed. of 1796, and then to the copy of words only, 1801, is unknown. As the 1801 ed. is only a reprint of the words of the 1796 ed., it suggests that the sheet was added to copies of both editions at the same time, and that after the printing of the 1801 ed. The sheet has this title:—

"Hymns of Praise, For Foundling Apprentices Attending Divine Service to return Thanks." and the contents are:—

1. "Father of mercies! deign to hear." By the Rev. Mr. Hewlett. Music by "Shield."
2. "Again the day returns of holy rest." By J. Mason. Music by "Ebden."
3. "Soon will the evening star with silver ray." By J. Mason. Music by "Ebden."
4. "Praise the Lord, ye heav'ns adore Him." Music by "Haydn."
5. "While health, and strength, and youth remain." Music by "Gluck."

To these are added the words of a Sanctus to be sung "Before the Communion Service." The special hymn now in consideration is printed thus:—

HYMN FROM PSALM CXLVIII. HAYDN.

- I.
"Praise the Lord, ye heav'ns adore him;
Praise him angels to the height;
Sun and moon rejoice before him,
Praise him all ye stars and light.
- II.
"Praise the Lord, for he hath spoken;
Worlds his mighty voice obey'd:
Laws, which never shall be broken,
For their guidance hath he made.
- III.
"Praise the Lord, for he is glorious;
Never shall his promise fail:
God hath made his saints victorious;
Sin and death shall not prevail.
- IV.
"Praise the God of our salvation;
Hosts on high his power proclaim:
Heaven, and earth, and all creation,
Laud and magnify his name."

The same text is again found in Ps. & Hymns for Magdalen Chapel, 1804; in the Foundling Coll. of 1809, and then in J. Kemphorne's Select Portions of Ps. & Hys., 1810. In the last case slight changes are introduced, e.g. st. i. l. 7, "Laws which" to "Laws that"; and st. i. l. 8, "hath He," to "He has." This form of the text was repeated very extensively to 1853, when it appeared in the Cooke and Denton Church Hymnal, with the well-known stanza by E. Osler, from Hall's Mitre H. Bk., 1836:—

"Worship, honor, glory, blessing,
Lord we offer unto Thee;
Young and old Thy praise expressing,
In glad homage bend the knee.
All the saints in heaven adore Thee,
We would bow before Thy throne;
As Thine angels serve before Thee,
So on earth Thy will be done."

The use of this hymn in all English-speaking countries, sometimes with the addition of Osler's stanza, and at other times without, is very extensive.

The question of the authorship of this hymn has been a matter of serious inquiry for some years, with the result that on the one hand it is attributed to John Kempthorne, and on the other to Bishop Mant, and both in error. The claim for John Kempthorne was made by D. Sedgwick; and this claim, we find from his ms., was a pure guess on his part. Mr. Kempthorne's son (the Rev. R. Kempthorne, of Elton Rectory) said in the Guardian (Dec. 10, 1879) that it was not written by his father, and he has repeated the same to the writer of this article during the progress of this work. Kempthorne, in the Preface of the 2nd ed. of his Sel. Portions of Ps. & Hys., 1813, omits it from his list [see Kempthorne, J.]. It is clear therefore that it was not written by John Kempthorne. The ascription of authorship to Bp. Mant occurred through confounding the hymn "Praise the Lord Whose mighty wonders" (q.v.), which appeared in Mrs. Mant's Parent's Poetical Anthology, 1814, with this hymn. [J. J.]

Praise to God, immortal praise. Anna L. Barbauld, née Aikin. [Harvest.] This, the most popular and widely used both in Great Britain and America of Mrs. Barbauld's Hymns, first appeared in Dr. W. Enfield's Hym. for Public Worship, &c., Warrington, 1772, No. 36, in 9 st. of 4 l., and entitled, "Praise to God in Prosperity and Adversity." In the following year it was repeated in Mrs. Barbauld's (then Miss Aikin) Poems, Lond., J. Johnson, 1773, p. 115, without title, but with Habakkuk iii. 17, 18, "Although the fig-tree shall not blossom," &c., quoted as a note. It is not found in many collections until 1812, when it was included by Dr. Collyer in his Coll., No. 689. From that date it gradually increased in use, sometimes in its complete form, but more frequently with abbreviations, extending to the omission of various stanzas, until in one or two cases it has been reduced to twelve lines only. The various centos, all beginning with the same first line, are too numerous to analyse, save the more important and such as have additions made thereto by others. These are:—

1. In S. P. C. K. Hymns, 1852, No. 172, this cento is in 4 st. of 6 l., the first three of which are compiled, with alterations, from the original text, and the last "Peace, prosperity and health," from another source.
2. In Morrell and How's Ps. & Hys., 1854: the same three stanzas as above, and a new fourth stanza by Bishop How of 8 l. This text is repeated in Church Hymns, 1871, No. 280, with the last stanza by Bishop How reduced to 6 lines.
3. In the New Mitre Hymnal, 1875, from the original Mitre H. Bk. of 1836, with a doxology.
4. In Thring's Coll., 1882, No. 408, the cento is composed of 4 st. of 6 l., of which stanzas i., ii. are from the S. P. C. K. Hymns, 1852, altered; st. iii. is the new stanza first given in the S. P. C. K. as above, and st. iv. a doxology.

Other centos may be traced out by consulting the original text in Lyra Brit., 1867, p. 33, or Lord Selborne's Book of Praise, 1862 and 1867, pp. 289-290. In addition to these centos, beginning with the original first line, there are also the following in C. U.:—

5. Praise to God, unceasing praise. This, in Francis Pott's Hymns, &c., 1861, is the S. P. C. K. Hymns text as above, with an alteration of the opening line.
6. Praise to God, exceeding praise. This, in T. Darling's Hys., &c., 1887, is from the original with alterations by Mr. Darling.
7. Lord, should rising whirlwinds tear. This, in the Presb. Ps. & Hys. for the Worship of God, Richmond, U.S.A., 1867, No. 431, is composed of st. iii.-vi. slightly altered.

Most of the foregoing a hymn are repeated in oth those named, and their us extensive. The text rend R. Bingham, in his Hymn 1871, and beginning "La fine," is a cento of 3 st. of the original.

stanza of J. Fawcett's hymn divided into two parts: whilst the lines in italics are mainly from C. Wesley's well-known hymn, "Love divine, all loves excelling" (q. v.), 1747, as the following comparison will show:—

C. Wesley, 1747.
"Jeau, Thou art all com-

Thou art; Thy salvation,
Enter every trembling

"Joyfully on earth adore

Till in heaven our song we raise;
There, enraptured, fall
before Him,
Lost in wonder, love,
and praise."

The cento in the above form of 4 st. is in numerous hymn-books in G. Britain, and in a few also elsewhere. In America it is sometimes found with an additional stanza:—

Praise to God, the great Creator,
Praise to Son, and Holy Ghost,
Praise to Earth and heaven's united host.

In the doxology is a cento of the hymn, whilst in 1872, it is the close of the cento is of more than average merit. [W. R. S.]

Praise waits for Thee in Zion, Lord. [Ps. lxx.] This is the version of the 65th Pa. in the Scotch Psalter, 1650. It is in C. U. in its full form, in an abbreviated form, and written as "Before Thee, Lord, a people waits," as in the Presb. Hymnal, Philadelphia, 1874. [J. J.]

Praise ye Jehovah, praise the Lord most holy. [Ps. cxlix.] Written by Lady Cockburn-Campbell. [Ps. 27, 1838, and subsequently printed in litho-graph from the writer's ms., together with 31 additional hymns. It was first pub. in J. G. Deck's Ps., Hymns, and Spiritual Songs, 1842, 1 t. i., No. 191, in 4 st. of 4 l. This was re-peated in Dr. Walker's Ps. & Hys., 1855, with the signature "M. C. C.," and subsequently in a large number of hymn-books. Orig. text in Snapp's Songs of G. & G., 1872. [J. J.]

Praise ye the Lord! immortal choir, [Ps. cxliii.] In heavenly heights above. G. Rawson, 1853, No. 200. Written for the Leeds H. Bk., Hymn verses, in 9 st. of 4 l. In the author's and extended to 10 st. Mr. Rawson was somewhat indebted to Watts's paraphrase of the same Psalm, "Praise ye the Lord with joyful tongue" (q. v.), as seen in Watts's st. ii. and Rawson's st. i.:—

Watts, 1706.
"Gabriel, and all th' immortal choir
That fill the realms above,
Sing; for He formed you of His fire,
And feeds you with His love."
Rawson, 1853.
"Praise ye the Lord, immortal choir
In heavenly heights above,
With harp and voice and souls of fire,
Burning with perfect love."

The resemblance throughout the rest of the hymn is still slight: but not so marked as in the lines which we have quoted. The 1853 text is in extensive use. [J. J.]

Praise ye the Lord; 'tis good to raise. I. Watts. [Ps. cxlvii.] 1st pub. in his Psalms of David, &c., 1719, p. 385, in 8 st. of 4 l., and entitled "The Divine Nature, Providence, and Grace." It was included by J. Wesley in the 1st ed. of his Ps. & Hys., published in Charles-town, 1736-37, p. 10, with slight variations, the omission of st. ii., and the addition of Ken's doxology, "Praise God," &c. Further alterations were made by Wesley on adapting it for the Wes. H. Bk., 1780, No. 216, and these latter readings are still retained in all collections of the Methodist bodies. The hymn in its original and altered forms is in extensive use. Orig. text in Watts's Psalms, late editions; Wesley's 1st reading in the re-print of 1736-37 Coll., Lond., 1882; and Wesley's final reading in the Wes. H. Bk., 1875. [J. J.]

Praise ye the Lord with joyful tongue. I. Watts. [Ps. cxlviii.] Pub. in his Horæ Lyricæ, 1706, in 14 st. of 4 l., and headed "The Universal Hallelujah." In Hatfield's Church H. Bk., 1872, st. ii.-iv., vii., viii., and xiii. are given as:—

"Praise ye the Lord! immortal choir,
That fill the realms above;"

these lines being altered from Watts's—

"Gabriel and all th' immortal choir
That fill the realms above."

See also "Praise ye the Lord! immortal choir," by G. Rawson. [J. J.]

Praises to Him Who built the hills. H. Bonar. [Praise of the Trinity.] Pub. in his Hys. of Faith and Hope, 1864, in 7 st. of 4 l., and entitled "Praise." It had previously appeared in the American Sabbath H. Bk., 1858, No. 469. It is also in the American Bapt. Service of Song, Boston, 1871, in 5 st., beginning with st. iii., "Praises to Him Whose love has given." In the Hymnary, 1872, it is again altered as "All praise to Him Who built the hills," and is appointed for Septuagesima. [J. J.]

Prätorius, Benjamin, s. of Andreas Prätorius, pastor at Obergreisau near Weissenfels in Saxony, was b. at Obergreisau, January 1, 1636. In 1637 his father was appointed pastor at Gross-Lissa near Delitzsch, in Saxony. Benjamin became a student of theology, and graduated M.A., probably at Leipzig. In the entry of his marriage in the registers of Gross-Lissa, for 1657, he is described as "regularly ordained substitute and future successor of this parish"; and he is never described in the registers except as Pastor-substitute. His ninth child was b. in 1671, and on Jan. 8, 1675, his son Andreas Benjamin, on acting as godfather, is described as "surviving son" of M. Benjamin Prätorius. It is probable that he d. some time in 1674, but as the register of deaths of this period is lost, we are unable to fix the exact date (K. Goedeke's Grundriss, vol. iii., 1887, p. 176; ms. from Pastor Moehius of Gross-Lissa, &c.).

According to Wetzel, ii., 314, he was crowned as a poet on Feb. 15, 1661. In the registers for 1663 he first designates himself "poeta Caes." and "Kais. gekrönter Poeta" (i.e. imperial crowned poet), and in 1670 as "poeta Caes. laur. coronatus." His hymns appeared in his (1) Jauchzendes Libanon, Leipzig, 1859, and (2) Spielende Myrten-Aue, Leipzig, 1864. In the preface to the latter he signs himself as "C. P. Caes. und Diener am Wort daseibst" (minister of the Word), under date "Gross-Lissa, Dec. 14, 1863." The only hymn by him tr. into English is:—

Sei getreu bis an das Ende. The Reward of the Faithful. In 1859, as above, No. 64, p. 157, in 3 st. of 8 l., and founded on Rev. II. 10. In full in the Chr. L. S., 1861, No. 339. It is also often found as "Sei getreu in deinem Leiden," as in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 149. This is from Luppius's G. B., Wesel, 1692, p. 22, where it is in 7 st. (iv., ll., ll., v., ix., i. and a new st. which begins, "So wohlthun, so will ich leiden"), and is erroneously ascribed to J. C. Schade. The original form is tr. as:—

Be thou faithful to the end, let not. By Miss Warner, in her Hys. of the Ch. Militant, 1858, p. 362, repeated as No. 258, in Bp. Ryle's Coll., 1860. [J. M.]

Prätorius, Johann, was b. at Copenhagen, Oct. 20, 1738. He was educated in the training schools of the Moravians, and after 1761 held various positions in their schools and communities. In 1772 he was appointed preacher to the new community at Christiansfeld, in the north of Schleswig, and d. there, Dec. 12, 1782 (Hist. Nachricht to the Brüder G. B., 1778, ed. 1851, p. 224). In the Brüder G. B., 1778, two hymns and part of a third are ascribed to him. The last is noted under O süsse Seelenweide, p. 467, ll. [J. M.]

Pray, Lewis Glover, was b. at Quincy, Massachusetts, Aug. 15, 1793. Removing to Boston in 1808, he entered into business there in 1815, and retired therefrom in 1838. He was for some time a member of the City Government of Boston, of the Board of Education, and of the State Legislature. From an early date he was associated with Sunday schools, and was for 34 years superintendent of the S. School of the Twelfth Congregational Society, Boston. In 1833 he pub. a Sunday School H. Bk., the first with music ever compiled for American Unitarian S. schools. This was enlarged in 1844 as the Sunday School Hymn and Service Book. He also pub. a History of Sunday Schools, 1847; a Christian Catechism, 1849; and other works. His hymns and poems were collected and pub. in 1862, as The Sylphides' School, and a second volume of a like kind appeared in 1873, as Autumn Leaves. Most of his hymns appeared in his collections of 1833 and 1844. Putnam (to whom we are indebted for these details) gives in his Singers and Songs, &c., 1874, p. 81, four pieces from his volume of 1862, and two from that of 1873. One of these, "When God upheaved the pillared earth" (Silent Work) was repeated in the American Hymns of the Ages, 3rd series, 1864. [J. J.]

Prayer Book. Hymns based on various portions of the Book of Common Prayer, and metrical paraphrases of other portions of the same book are somewhat numerous. In this article we purpose pointing out those portions of the Prayer Book which have been treated in this manner, and to indicate where these metrical versions may be found. Observing the order of the Services we have the following results:—

i. The Lord's Prayer. Metrical versions are given in the Old and the New Versions, and in part or in full in various works and collections of hymns. A tolerably full list will be found in the Index of Seasons and Subjects at the end of this Dictionary.

Another work which deals with every portion of the Prayer Book from the "Sentences" to "The Fifth of November," is:—
A Companion to the Book of Common Prayer, Being a Compilation of the Psalms and Hymns on the Collects, Epistles, Gospels, and on the Fasts, Festivals, and Rites of the Church of England and Ireland, London: Smith, Elder & Co. 1832.
 This work was compiled by a lady, and contains about 400 hymns. [J. J.]

Prayer is the breath of God in man.
B. Beddome. [Prayer.] This appeared in Robert Hall's Posthumous ed. of Beddome's Hymns, &c., 1817, No. 405, in 5 st. of 4 l., and headed "Importance of Prayer." It was added to the 27th ed. of Rippon's Sel., 1827, No. 353 (Pt. i.), and from thence has passed into several collections, sometimes dated 1787 (Rippon's 1st ed.) in error, and at other times with the opening line changed to "Prayer is the Spirit of our God." The hymn "When God inclines the heart to pray," in Spurgeon's O. O. H. Bk., 1866, is composed of st. iv., v. of the original. [J. J.]

Prayer is the soul's sincere desire.
J. Montgomery. [Prayer.] This hymn was written in 1818, at the request of the Rev. E. Bickersteth, for his Treatise on Prayer. It was first printed in 1818, together with three other hymns by Montgomery on Prayer ("Thou, God, art a consuming fire," "Lord, teach us how to pray aright," and "What shall we ask of God in prayer?"), on a broadsheet, for use in the Sunday Schools of Sheffield (Wincobank Hall Library). In 1819 it was published simultaneously in Bickersteth's Treatise on Prayer and the 8th ed. of Cotterill's Sel., No. 278. whilst Bickersteth's text is that of the broadsheet, st. v. l. 4, "And cry 'Behold,'" &c., changed to "And say 'Behold,'" &c., and st. vi., which reads in each:—
 In prayer on earth the saints are one,
 In word, and deed, and mind;
 When with the Father and His Son
 Sweet fellowship they find."

Bickersteth. "The saints in prayer appear as one,
 In word, and deed, and mind,
 When, with the Father, and the Son,
 Their fellowship they find."

In his Christian Psalmist, 1825, No. 480, Montgomery repeated the text as in Bickersteth, with the change in st. vii. l. 4 of "For sinners intercede," into "For mourners intercede." In his private copy of the Christian Psalmist Montgomery marked st. iv. and v. to be transposed in case of a reprint, and this was carried into effect in his Original Hymns, 1853, No. 62. The altered line, st. vii. l. 4, is also restored to read "For sinners intercede." In addition to the extensive use of the hymn in its full form, it is also abbreviated. Sometimes the abbreviated texts begin with the first stanza, and at other times with "Prayer is the Christian's vital breath," or with "Prayer is the contrite sinner's voice." [J. J.]

Precious Bible! what a treasure.
J. Newton. [Holy Scriptures.] Pub. in his Twenty Six Letters, &c. By Omicron, 1774, in 6 st. of 6 l., and headed, "The Word of God more precious than Gold." It was repeated in R. Conyers's Coll., 1774, No. 276, and again in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. ii., No. 63. It is found in a few modern hymn-books. [J. J.]

Precious promise God hath given.
N. Niles. [The Divine Guide.] Concerning this hymn and its writer, S. W. Duffield says in his English Hymns, 1886, p. 461:—

"This well-known 'Moody and Sankey' hymn was written by Mr. Nathaniel Niles, a resident of Morristown, New Jersey, and, at that time, a lawyer in New York City. Mr. Niles was born at South Kingtown, Rhode Island, September 15th, 1836. He composed these verses on the margin of a newspaper in the railway car while on his way to business."

The hymn was pub. in The Episcopalian; and again in P. Bliss's Gospel Songs, 1874, with music by Bliss. The text and music in I. D. Sankey's Sacred S. and Solos, are from the Gospel Songs. [J. J.]

Preis, Lob, Ehr, Ruhm, Dank, Kraft und Macht. [Glory to the Lamb.] In the Geistreiches G. B., Halle, 1697, p. 591, in 7 st. of 6 l., repeated in the Berlin G. L. S., ed. 1863, No. 1028. It is tr. as, "Thanksgiving, honour, praise and might," as No. 628 in pt. i. of the Moravian H. Bk., 1754, and No. 653 in the ed. of 1886. [J. M.]

Preiswerk, Samuel, s. of Alexander Preiswerk, pastor at Rümelingen, in the canton of Basel, was b. at Rümelingen, Sept. 19, 1799. After studying at the Universities of Basel, Tübingen, and Erlangen, he was for some time curate in charge at Benken, in the canton of Basel. In 1824 he was appointed preacher at the Basel Orphanage, and in 1829 tutor of Hebrew at the Basel mission house. In 1830 he was chosen as pastor of Muttensz, near Basel, but on the outbreak of the Revolution of 1832 had to leave. After being from 1834 to 1837 professor of Old Testament Exegesis and Oriental languages in the Evangelical Theological Institution at Geneva, he returned to Basel, where he was instituted, in 1843, as pastor of St. Leonard's church, and in 1859 as antistes, or highest dignitary in the Cathedral. He d. at Basel, Jan. 13, 1871

Preiswerk was a distinguished preacher. He was one of the editors of the Basel G. B., 1854. His hymns were written at various times, generally to be used at Mission and other meetings in which he was to take part. Sixteen were included in a collection edited by two of his friends and pub. at Basel, 1841, as the Evangelischer Lieder Kraus (271 hymns old and new). Nine of his hymns are in Knapp's Ev. L. S., ed. 1850. The only one tr. into English is:—

Das ist der Gemeine Stärke. Missions. In 1844, as above, No. 98, p. 124, in 6 st. of 4 l. Included in Knapp's Ev. L. S., 1850, No. 1160 (1865, No. 1200). Tr. as:—

Hark, the Church proclaims her honour. In full by Miss Winkworth in her Lyra Ger., 2nd ser., 1858, p. 60, and her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 104 (she misquotes the first line as Ums ist der Gemeinde Stärke). Repeated in the Ps. & Hys., Bedford, 1859, and the Ohio Luth. Hym., 1880. [J. M.]

Prentiss, Elizabeth, née Payson, youngest daughter of Dr. Edward Payson, was b. at Portland, Maine, Oct. 26, 1818; married to George Lewis Prentiss, D.D., then at Bedford, Massachusetts, April, 1845; and d. at Dorset, Vermont, Aug. 13, 1878. Her Life and Letters by her husband appeared some time after. Dr. Prentiss removed from Bedford to New York in 1851, and was appointed Professor of Pastoral Theology at Union Seminary, New York, 1873. Mrs. Prentiss's works include The Finner of the Family; Stepping Heavenward, 1869; and Religious Poems, 1873. Of her hymns the two following are most widely known:—

1. As on a vast eternal shore. Thanksgiving. Contributed to Schaff's Christ in Song, 1869.

2. More love to Thee, O Christ. More Love to Christ desired. Written in 1869, and first printed on a fly-sheet; then in Hatfield's Church H. Bk., N. Y., 1872.

Presbyterian Hymnody, English.

Presbyterianism in England presents in its history four distinct and sharply defined periods, and in all of these it has been directly associated with English hymnody.

i. It was the form of religion "as by law established" in England from 1647 to 1652, a period of five years. It was originally intended to institute a Synod in each county, and a General Assembly for the whole kingdom. The usurpation of Cromwell, however, and the interference of the army in ecclesiastical as well as in civil affairs, prevented the execution of this design, and it was only in London and Lancashire that Synods were formed. In Lancashire there were nine Presbyteries, and several must have been formed in the neighbouring counties. The Presbyteries of Manchester and Newcastle-on-Tyne were established in 1646 and 1648, under the ordinance of Parliament; and the first meeting of the Synod of Lancashire was held in 1649.

The Metrical Psalms, which were in use in the Presbyterian Churches during this period were those of Francis Rous (q.v.). Speaker of the House of Commons, and one of the lay deputies to the Westminster Assembly. [See Psalms, English, § XI.]

ii. The overthrow of Presbyterianism was followed by a general decline. Having ceased to meet in Presbytery, many of the ministers, in the face of the Calvinism of the Westminster standards, became tinged with Arianism which ultimately developed into Socinianism. A considerable number of congregations in various parts of the country north, adhered to the doctrine of those documents; others rationalists; but a considerable number were influenced by their views in the course of 150 years the orthodox Church became

During this period, the Psalter of 1650 was in use amongst the congregations throughout England.

iii. In 1836 a new era in the history of ministers and elders of the orthodox Presbyterians in England began, when they agreed to form a Synod, in accordance with the recommendation of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, at Edinburgh, 1834. "The Presbyterian Church in England" was formed forty years its progress was rapid. The Home Mission Society succeeded in establishing many of the leading towns in England, especially in Liverpool, Newcastle, London, which became a centre of activity was also shown in work, especially in China.

For a few years the revision of the Psalter of 1650 was a committee was appointed to revise the book for its use, which was published in 1857. In 1857 Hamilton, of Regent Square, laid upon the table of the House of Commons a Hymns for Divine Worship, of 521 hymns and versions with paraphrases of Scripture fully edited, and set to music, the latter being edited by the Rev. J. W. Mackenzie, and was accompanied by a preface explaining its scope and design, and a table of contents. It took a foremost position in the Presbyterian Church in England, and all the other Presbyterian churches in England, and many of them in Scotland, especially in Australia, the Cape.

iv. In 1876 a great step was taken in the history of Presbyterianism in England when the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in England, which then took place in Scotland, decided that the Presbyterian Church in England should have a hymnbook of its own. The Scottish Hymnal of 1867 was now known as the "Psalter of England."

At the Union in 1870 the Presbyterian section continued to exist which had been recent Mother Church in Scotland. The Scottish Hymnal. [See Scottish Hymnal.] The Presbyterian Church in England, mainly, the Psalter of 1857 arose that the time had come when a new hymnbook, enriched with recent hymnody, should be compiled. A committee was accordingly appointed in 1880, with instructions to select the materials for the new hymnbook, but to bring the Church, as far as possible, into unison in the matter. Under the convenerhip of the Rev. W. Rigby Murray, Brunswick Street Church, Manchester, that committee produced in 1882 the present hymnal of the "Presbyterian Church of England," Church Praise (Lond., Nisbet & Co.). It contains 535 hymns and 19 doxologies, arranged in 15 sections, as i. "The Holy Trinity"; ii. "The Lord Jesus Christ"; iii. "The Holy Spirit"; iv. "The Gospel," &c. In the text of the hymns the originals have been followed in every instance except where a divergence seemed to exist in doctrine from that of the Presbyterian Church. The section for the young forms a prominent feature, 63 hymns being supplied for the purpose of adapting the collection for the Sunday Schools and Children's Services. The music has been revised by Dr. E. J. Hopkins, and is of a high order. The expression marks throughout the collection are by the Rev. W. Rigby Murray.

v. Great progress has been made in Psalmody in the Presbyterian Church of England within the past twenty years. The use of instrumental music, strictly forbidden till 1870, has become general. The practice of chanting and the use of anthems in public worship, are also spreading rapidly. Sir Herbert Oakeley's Bible Psalter is in use in a considerable number of congregations; and the Rev. W. Rigby Murray (Editor of Church Praise, and School Praise.) has published (1886) The Revised Psalter, being the first attempt to adapt the Revised Version of the Holy Scriptures to chant music.

vi. The only hymn-writer of note belonging to the Presbyterian Church of England is the late J. D. Burns, M.A., sometime minister at Hampstead, who died in 1864. [See Burns, J. D.]

Prichard, Vicard, M.A., younger brother of Rhys Prichard, was an eminent Welsh poet and the author of the well-known book called Carmarthenshire. He was b. at Llanymddyfri, Carmarthenshire, about 1579. His father was the owner of large property in the neighbourhood. He was educated at Jesus College, Oxford, where he took his degree in June, 1602, having been previously ordained Priest on the 25th of April in that year by John Suffragan Bishop of Colchester. In the same year he was presented to the Vicarage of Llandoverly, a native parish, in which the town of Llandoverly is situated, and whence he was called to the Cathedral residence of Llandoverly, one of the first of his day, as his popularity that when he kept his residence at St. David's, of which Cathedral he was a Prebendary, he was obliged to keep a moveable pulpit, which was placed in the church yard, the Cathedral being too small for the very large congregations. Perceiving the ignorance, and also much of his parishioners, into which he turned the substance of his verse which he gave to the people to sing, he thus originated most of those hymns which are now sung in the country. When men were so ignorant, the pious Bishop Bull, who was on the subject, took the hymns and made them into a book, which was published in 1644. The hymns were on the subject of the angels.

poems, wished to be buried near him, his grave could not be found. [W. G. T.]

Primers and Offices for the Laity.
i. Introduction.—1. The term Primer, in its ritual sense, designates a series of devotional books for the laity, marked by certain general characteristics. The word is found thus as early as Piers Ploughman (before 1360). The earliest known copy is a ms. of the end of the 14th cent. The earliest printed Primer, according to the Sarum Use, is of the year 1494. Its contents are:—

(1) The Kalendar. (2) Sundry Prayers. (3) Matyns of our lady, with pryne and the hours, the hours of the passion of our lorde, and of the compassyon of our lady. (4) De Profundis for all Crysten soules. (5) Sundry prayers. (6) The fifteen hours of the passion. (7) Prayers to the Saints. (8) The seven psalmes, fifteen psalmes with the letanye and suffrages. (9) Placebo, dirige and commendacyon. (10) Psalmes of the passion. (11) The fifteen Oos in Englyshe. (12) Sundry prayers.

From this period to 1545 a number of editions of the Sarum Primer are extant. Additions are made to the contents of the volume, which attains its greatest development in the editions of Regnault at Paris, 1526–34 (Rev. Ed. Hopkins). From 1545 there is a break in the Sarum series, but it is resumed in 1551, and in Mary's reign (1554–8). These Sarum Primers are of great interest in regard to the provision of vernacular devotions for the laity in the Roman Church.

2. The Reformation produced another series, which may be divided into three stages: (1) The illicit Primers of the Gospellers, commencing as early as 1580. The earliest extant edition is that known as Marshall's Primer (1534–5). The basis of these is still the Sarum book, but with alterations, omissions (e.g. in some editions, of the Litany and Dirige or Office for the Dead), and explanations in the Reformed sense. (2) The Primers of Henry VIII. and Edward VI. (3) The Revised editions of these, with the Orarium, of Elizabeth.

3. Finally, The 17th cent. (1599–1706) produced a series founded no longer on the Sarum but on the Roman Breviary, for the use of English Roman Catholics.

4. For the purposes of this Dictionary, these groups, with their numerous members, can only be considered with reference to the trs. of the Latin hymns, which they exhibit. As they extend over a lengthened period, they present a variety of renderings, changing with the change of poetical fashion, and are thus well worth attentive study with a view to securing the best representation of the Latin hymns for purposes of worship. They seem, except in a few cases, of which an echo remains in the trs. of this century, to have passed almost into oblivion, even among Roman Catholics.

ii. Sarum Primers.—1. The ms. Primer of Sarum (c. 1400), printed in Mr. Muske's Monumenta Ritualia (vol. iii.), has prose renderings of the hymns. A ms. at Cambridge (c. 1430) has the memories of the hours in metre. In the Sarum Primers, 1538–41, and 1555–8, not only the hymns for the hours and the memories, but portions of the Dirige (the Office for the Dead), are versified in a rude fashion; more, apparently, as an indication of metre in the original than for singing. Such a verse as this could never have been sung to the tune of "Veni Creator":

"Come holy Ghost o Creatour eternall
In our mindes to make visitacion:
And fulfyl Thou wyth grace supernall
Our hartes that be of thy creacion."

iii. Unauthorized Primers of the Reformation.—Of the early and illicit primers of the Reformation, the primer known as Marshall's, 1535 (reprinted in Three Primers set forth in the reign of Henry VIII., Clarendon Press), is a good type. The hymns for the hours are versified. In metre they are more regular than those of the Sarum series, and more conformed to Latin types. The Latin originals of the Sarum series are rejected; and all hymns to the B. V. M. are omitted. The "Veni Creator" is translated in part, and probably many of the hymns have some Latin source of inspiration, but the feeling and the doctrinal cast is that of Coverdale's Goostly Psalmes and the Gospellers. Bp. Hilsey's Primer (1539), which was drawn up at Thos. Cromwell's command, is based far more on the Sarum series, is similar to it in irregularity of metre, and retains with little modification the addresses to the B. V. M.

iv. Authorized Primers, 1545-1559.—1. The Primer of Henry VIII. (1545), which was reprinted frequently, with increasing modification of the worship of the B. V. M. up to 1553, and then revised under Elizabeth, in 1559, chooses from the Sarum Breviary an entirely new set of hymns, "Jam lucis"; "Ales dici nuntius"; "Consorts paterni luminis"; "Rerum Creator"; "Aeterna coeli gloria"; "Salvator mundi"; and in two cases, apparently, joins verses from two Latin hymns so as to form a new piece. They are chosen partly for allusions to the hours for which they are fixed, and partly as expressions of sober piety. The trs. are evidently intended to reproduce Latin measures, and are either trochaic or iambic. (The sacred use of iambic for our hymns springs from the Reformation Primer, as a representative of the iambic Latin.) The versification is a great advance on the Sarum Primers, and the trs. contain some good verses. The following may serve as a specimen of the sort of verse which might be still enshrined in the Prayer Book if the Latin hymns had then been made part of Matins and Evensong.

"Quench the flames of our debate;
Foul and noisome heat abate;
Grant unto our body health,
To our hearts true peace and wealth."

In the sanction if not the production of this book, Cranmer must have had a hand, and a letter of his (Oct. 7, 1544, Works, p. 412, Parker Society) shows that he had it in his mind to translate the Latin hymns. But the Prayer Book of 1549 has no hymns, except the "Veni Creator" (C.M.), in the Ordinal; nor has that of 1552. And as if the omission in both cases was the result of some change of view, perhaps connected with Calvin's restriction of praise to the Metrical Psalter, the Primer of 1553, which has very little of the distinctive features of the other primers, and is based on the Book of Common Prayer, has no hymns whatever.

2. In connexion with the Primer of Elizabeth, or more accurately with the Orarium (1560), should be mentioned The Hours of Prayer, &c., 16 and John Austin's Devotio Way of Offices, 1668 [Austin framed on the model of the some Latin translations, 1 pieces are original English Hymnody, Early, § 111. 10].

A good selection from them by side in pairs, for comparison Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 11 of these hymns easy of a hymn of 1604 should have beautiful translation of "tus" ("Come unto us, Holy Mr. Shipley has published 1685. It is singularly like tion, "Holy Spirit, Lord of H. A. & M. translation, "

Spirit, come," in treatment, and here and there in actual lines.

3. The Primer of 1615 is examined under Drummond. 18 of its hymns being included in the 1711 ed. of Drummond's poetical works.

Mr. Orby Shipley, in the Annus Sanctus, strongly disputes Drummond's claim. (See also Saturday Review, Aug. 2, 1884.) Mr. W. T. Brooke, however, still upholds Drummond's authorship. In the preface to the 1st ed., 1615, the trs. are said to have been the work of "one most skilful in English poetrie."

4. The next known Primer is that of 1684. But in a little book, examined by Mr. W. T. Brooke, entitled Prison Pietie, by Samuel Speed, 1677, there are renderings of "Christe sanctorum decus," in c.m., and the "Dies Irae," and 7 trs. which reappear in the Primer of 1685, relics apparently of some lost Primer. The Primer of 1684 (Rouen) is independent in arrangement of the 1615 (Mechlin) and 1599 (Antwerp), and has additional devotions. The hymns are generally the same as in 1615. But in the additional offices of "The Name of Jesus," and "The Immaculate Conception," there are new hymns. The hymn in the office of the "Blessed Trinity," and of "The Holy Ghost," are also new. In the first of these offices is a good tr. of "Jesu dulcis memoria" (part), in l.m. couplets (Jesu, the very thought of Thee), which is repeated and furnished with additional stanzas, so as to represent the entire hymn, in 1685. The Primer of 1685 has, as has been said, 7 pieces (trs. of "Te Deum"; "Veni Sancte Spiritus"; "Memento salutis humane"; "Jesu dulcis memoria"; "Salutis Sator"; "Creator alme siderum"; "Flores"), found in Speed's Prison Pietie, 1677. As Speed's book is quite as much a compilation as an original (e.g. containing pieces from Austin, Quarles, and a variation of Cosin's "Veni Creator"), these pieces are probably copied from some earlier Primer now lost. The "Te Deum" is in the Primer for the first time in metre. The hymns for the office of "The Holy Ghost" are identical with those of 1684. The "Veni Sancte Spiritus," which had come down from 1599, is revised (see Annus Sanctus, Appendix, p. 33, "Come unto us, Holy Ghost"). A few hymns for Holy Day, Vespers, St. Joseph, Hermene, gill, Veni, and Latin originals are added. The Primer of 1684, throughout those of the Reformed, the trs. are new. In this Primer the new manner of the Restoration poetry makes itself distinctly felt. The trs. are some wholly unequal, but there are stanzas and vigour, and the large number of great nervousness and offices of the Primer of 1685 is attested by the Primer of 1687 (London) is, so far as its hymns are concerned, a revision of the Primer of 1684, with the addition of a few new hymns. The Primer of 1687 extends to the substitution of a new tr. some cases. Among the new at a dreadful year (1687) in The Great Sacrifice of the New Law, 8th edition, by James Dy-earlier source. The new tr. of "Stabat Mater" ("Under the world's redeeming rood"), is notable as occurring again in the succeeding Primer of 1706, and later Office Books.

5. The Primer of 1706 demands somewhat closer attention. Its place of publication is not stated. In arrangement and contents it recalls the Antwerp series, not the London Primer of 1687. The number of translations it contains is a great advance on preceding Primers. Not the Vesper hymns only but those for Matins and Lauds are translated in the series of hymns for the year; the Breviary hymns are translated entire, together with the "Dies Irae," and "Jesu dulcis memoria;" in all 120 pieces. Of these, the tr. of "Stabat Mater" is from 1687. The "Dies Irae" ("The day of wrath, that dreadful day") was first published in a text that varies from this, in Tate's Miscellanea Sacra (1696, 2nd edition, 1698), and was there ascribed to Lord Roscommon. The tr. of "Veni Creator" ("Creator Spirit, by whose aid") is Dryden's. So also is the tr. of "Ut queant laxis" ("O sylvan Prophet"), the hymn for evensong on St. John Baptist's Day; and the tr. of the "Te Deum" ("Thee, Sovereign God, our grateful accents praise"); both of which were printed by Scott in his Life of Dryden, 1808. These two latter translations are in metres that had not occurred in previous Primers. The tr. "O sylvan Prophet," is one of 11 pieces, chiefly representing the Sapphic originals, which preceding Primers had always dealt with awkwardly, from an attempt to produce some syllabic equivalent of the Latin. The tr. of the "Te Deum" is one of a series of 8 pieces in heroic metre. A third new metre (c.m.) occurs in the tr. of "Ave maria stella," and "Jesu dulcis memoria," which is not found in any known Primer previously, though there are two c.m. trs. in Speed's Prison Pietie, which may belong to some lost edition. A very full selection from this Primer is given in Mr. Orby Shipley's Annus Sanctus, 1884; and it demands closer analysis than the rest, because both Mr. W. T. Brooke and Mr. Shipley claim a very large proportion of these translations as the work of Dryden. The special question of Dryden's authorship is dealt with under Dryden, John, but one or two general remarks may be best given here.

The claim of Dryden will in great measure depend on the evidence of unity of hand. The natural presumption in the several successive editions of the Primers is that each new set of translations is by a single hand; and in the case of the edition of 1616 this is positively asserted in the preface. But it is not always safe to assume it. Thus the pieces in Speed's Prison Pietie may possibly be older than the other pieces combined with them in 1685. The "Veni Sancte Spiritus" tr. of 1699 is an instance of a piece of older date reproduced (1615) among later ones. More strongly still suggestive of caution is the fact that the trs. of "Stabat Mater" and "Dies Irae," in this edition (1706) had both appeared before; the latter, notwithstanding Mr. Shipley's imputation, being with little doubt by Lord Roscommon. It may be added that the free way in which the translators of the Primers use up the lines and phrases of their predecessors shows that the idea of plagiarism was not a restraining force with them. (The beautiful tr. of "Jesu dulcis memoria" ("Jesu, the only thought of Thee") is a striking instance of this: it is often simply a reproduction in c.m. of the lines and phrases of the 8-syllable tr. of 1685.) But a very strong presumption of unity of hand arises out of a close study of the Glorias of 1706. Large groups of the Latin originals have an identical Gloria: and this identity is faithfully reproduced in the English Glorias. The Latin Glorias have affinities with each other, and these affinities are constantly maintained in English by reproductions of the same phrases. The English Glorias have also affinities of their own, not found in the Latin. In style they are very like one another; they are quite in keeping in their grandiose phrases with the hymns they close; and certain mannerisms recur (e.g. the use of "equal"). The repetition of common lines, the slight variations of phrase accompanying large repetition, and other economies, are such as a man would naturally practise in the use of his own material, and point very strongly to a common author. The number of pieces, which the Glorias that bear clear family likeness touch, comprises the great bulk of the book; and links, of varying strength, connect most of the remainder with them.

The style of the Primer of 1706 is by no means always superior to that of 1685. It is often less nervous, too rhetorical and too florid. The translations of 1685-7 have consequently remained in at least equal circulation with those during the 18th cent. But as pieces of devotional poetry, the translations of 1706 are often of great merit; and the bold handling, the brilliance of single lines, and the frequent beauty of cadence, look far more like the work of a poet coming fresh to the task, than of a routine translator.

vi. Manual of Prayers, and The Garden of the Soul. Two other devotional books for the laity, which passed through many editions, contain translations of the Latin hymns, viz.: the Manual of Prayers, and The Garden of the Soul; but perhaps in no instance are they independent trs., but transcripts from the Primers or English Offices current at the time of publication. An edition of The Manual, circa 1596, has no hymns: perhaps the Primer of 1599 was the first to introduce translations of the Latin hymns. An edition of 1613 reprints 22 of the translations of the Primer of 1599. Another of 1688 by Henry Hills reprints from the Primer of 1687. Another of 1699 reprints, sometimes revising, from Primers of 1685-7. That of 1733 retains the same Latin originals (28) as 1699, but adopts the translations of the 1706 Primer. The same thing occurs in the ed. of 1750 (Shipley).

The hymns in the various editions of the Garden of the Soul apparently follow the same law, taking their Latin translations from the current edition of the Primer, or in the latter part of the 18th cent. from the editions of Vespers or The Divine Office. This fact is important in its bearing on the question of Dryden's authorship of the 1706 Primer. Under the impression that Bp. Challoner (who improved both the Manual and The Garden of the Soul) selected hymns by Dryden for the editions of 1737 (Garden) and 1750 (Manual), Mr. Shipley has adduced these editions as proofs of Dryden's authorship. But all that Bp. Challoner did, supposing there are editions which he superintended, was to substitute the newest trs. for the previous ones. This, in the case of the Manual, had been done as early as 1733. Dryden's authorship did not determine the choice, and is not attested by it.

vii. Conclusion. The needs of the laity, which were supplied in the 17th cent. by the Primers and The Manual, produced in the 18th translations of the Vesper Office, of the entire Breviary, and of the Missal. But they do not supply many fresh translations of the Latin hymns. The eds. of the Primers of 1685, 1687, and 1706, are drawn on in equal proportions. Sometimes the 1706 in one edition of the Evening Office will make translations in the next. from 1706 are mixed with (Exx. will be found in the Evening Office of 1710 in the Evening Office of 1760); pro- substituted for metre; and revised. A few new trs. (e.g. in the Evening Office of the Divine Office, 4 vols. quires translations of the Missals do not supply the Latin hymns are some in the original (e.g. in the Missal of 1803).

[The Five Wounds of Christ, or, Passiontide.] This hymn appeared in the Paris Breviary, 1680; Cluniac Breviary, 1686, p. 414, and again in the Paris Breviary, 1736, and later French Breviaries, and is given in the Office of the Five Wounds of Christ. The text is also in J. Chandler's Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837, No. 67, and Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as:—

1. Now, my soul, thy voice upraising. Sing aloud, &c. By J. Chandler, in his Hys. of the Prim. Church, 1837, p. 75, and again in his Hys. of the Church, 1841, No. 41, in 8.7.8.7.4.7. It is found unaltered in a few collections, and also altered as: (1) "Now, my soul, thy voice upraising. Sing the Cross," &c., in 8.7.8.7.4.7. in Murray's Hymnal, 1852. This was repeated in other collections. In the Sarum, 1868, it was altered to 5 st. of 6 l. in 8.7 metre. (2) "Sing we now, our voice upraising," in Kennedy, 1863, is the same text as Sarum with slight variations.

2. Slow and mournful be our tone. By R. Campbell, in his Hys. and Anthems, 1850, and a few collections of a later date.

3. Now, my soul, thy voice upraising. Tell in sweet, &c. By Sir H. W. Baker. This tr. is based upon the above by J. Chandler, more specially in the first and last stanzas. It is in 6 sts. of 8.7. Its first appearance was in the trial copy of H. A. & M., 1859, and then in the 1st ed., 1861. It is in several hymn-books, and sometimes with slight alterations.

4. Lift, my soul, thy voice harmonious. This was given in Mercer's Church Ps. & H. Bk., Oxford ed., 1864, No. 180, and is probably by the Editor.

5. Now, my soul, thy voice upraising. Sing in sweet, &c. This cento in the Hymnary, 1872, No. 243, in 6 sts. of 8.7. metre, is somewhat peculiarly constructed. St. i. is by Chandler and the Editors; ii. is by Sir H. W. Baker and the Editors; iii. is by Chandler and the Editors; iv. is by Sir H. W. Baker and the Editors; and v. is by the Editors alone. The result is not good.

Other trs. are:—

1. Draw out, sad heart, thy melody. I. Williams, 1839.
2. Soul, draw forth thy voice, deep-sounding. W. J. Blew, 1852-55.
3. O my soul! thy lamentation. J. D. Chambers, 1857. [J. J.]

Promittis, et servas datam. C. Coffin. [Wednesday.] This is the hymn on Wednesday at Lauds in the Paris Breviary, 1736. It is also in C. Coffin's Hymni Sacri, 1736, p. 20; J. Chandler's Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837, No. 24; and Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as:—

1. A faithful promise Thou hast made. J. Chandler. 1837.
2. Thy promise, Lord, is our sure stay. I. Williams. 1839.
3. Thou, Lord, dost promise; firm and sure. J. D. Chambers. 1857.
4. Thy truth, O God, stands firm in heaven. D. T. Morgan. 1860. [J. J.]

Prose. A synonym for Sequences (q.v.), referring to the character of the composition, while 'sequence' refers to the position in the service. A Prose was originally in prose of a rhythmical character, but not in strict metre, while the word Sequence was used when the Prose assumed the form of a metrical Hymn. But a single quotation from a mediæval writer will suffice to show that the two words were used indifferently, and at the same time tells us on what festal days Proses or Sequences were appointed to be sung in the Missal of the Cluniac Order.

Prudentius, Aurelius Clemens, with the occasional prefix of Marcus (cf. Migne, vol. lix. p. 593, and Dreanet, p. ii. n.), is the name of the most prominent and most prolific author of sacred Latin poetry in its earliest days. Of the writer himself we know nothing, or next to nothing, beyond what he has himself told us in a short introduction in verse to his works. From that source we learn that he was a Spaniard, of good family evidently, and that he was b. A.D. 348 somewhere in the north of Spain, either at Saragossa, Tarragona, or Calahorra, but at which is left uncertain, by his applying the same expression to all, which if applied only to one would have fixed his place of birth. After reception befitting his social station for some years to pursue in the local courts of law, promotion to a judgeship came successively:—

Psalters, American. [American Hymnody.]

Psalters, English. I. Introduction. A glance at the long list appended to this article will apprise many for the first time of the enormous number of efforts made to versify the Psalms. Among the authors will be found Queen Elizabeth, Lord Bacon, Fairfax, and many of our poets and theologians. The Psalter has been subjected to a great variety of experiments. Literal translation, paraphrase, evangelical expansion, the development of portions as themes, have been successively attempted. The change of metrical and poetical expression is reflected in the history. In the Puritan period the versification of the Psalms even touches the history of the nation. But notwithstanding all this, partly from extreme reverence for the letter of Holy Writ, partly from the fact that the bulk of the translators were hampered by the secondary object of turning the Psalter into a hymnal, and most of all from the impossibility of representing Hebrew parallelism in English metres, no version approaches in merit such translations as Lord Derby's Homer or Conington's Virgil. With but few exceptions the succeeding pages are a comparison of mediocrities.

II. Curious examples.

Some experiments are very eccentric, such as Abraham Fraunce's hexameters (1581), Pike's lyrics without rhyme (1751), Wheatland and Sylvester's heroics (1754), Dennis's blank verse (1808). The strangest is Psalterium Americanum by Cotton Mather (1718), printed like prose, but in reality simply the Authorized Version thrown into unrhymed a.m. for singing.

III. Pre-Reformation Psalters.

Metrical Psalters existed in England at a very early date. Bp. Aldhelm of Sherborne (died A.D. 709) is said to have composed one (Bede); and Archdeacon Churton (see Preface to the Cleveland Psalter) ascribes to him the Anglo-Saxon Version edited by Thorpe (1835). Thorpe himself, however, assigns it to a later date. A Latin Psalter, with interlinear Anglo-Saxon gloss, and a translation into Middle English has been published by the Surtees Society. T. Brampton's Seren Penitential Psalms (1414) have been printed by the Percy Society; and Holland (Psalmists of Britain, 1842) mentions a translation of St. Jerome's Gallican Psalter into English of the date of Henry II. or Richard I.

IV. Importance of Psalm-singing at the Reformation.

The practice of versifying the Psalms assumed a larger significance among the Reformers. The Psalm Versions of Luther and Justus Jonas, combined with their translations of the Latin Hymns and their original compositions, stirred the heart of Germany: the Psalms of Marot became the badge of the French Reformation; and, completed sole hymnal of Geneva Scotland, following the the metrical Psalms a sively used in public wo the long tradition of the form, set at first to bul special music of their ov Reformation, the Psalm the people, not merely t Messianic import, and tion of human emotions living trust in God as and even by their terrib enemies. Full selections from both these versions may be seen in Farr's Select Poetry (Parker Society). To these may be added a lost version of the Seven Penitential Psalms by Edmund Spenser.

X. Partial translations, Bacon, Herbert, &c.
Versions by Dod, Wither, Sandys.

Among the versifiers of "Selected Psalms" are found the eminent names of Donne, Dean of St. Paul's (1633), Phineas Fletcher (1633), George Herbert (1632), and R. Crashaw (1648). The first ten Psalms were rendered clearly and naturally by Bishop Hall (1607), and a few by Lord Bacon (1625), (see Fuller Worthies Library by Grosart), dedicated to George Herbert. The complete version of Henry Dod (1603-20) is utterly valueless, and according to Wither was burnt by the hangman; the preface however shews the early dissatisfaction felt with Sternhold and Hopkins, and there is appended to it a ludicrous versification, intended apparently to be sung, of the Act of Parliament passed after the Gunpowder Plot! The so-called Version of King James (1631) is described elsewhere. (See Scottish Hymnody, i. § 3.) The version by George Wither (1619-32) was a far more serious rival of the Old Version. He obtained a privilege from the King, which ordered it to be bound up with every copy of the Bible, and authorized Wither to seize every Bible in which it was not found. But it met with the same fate as a similar privilege of Wither's for his Hymns and Spiritual Songs of the Church. (See English Hymnody, Early, § viii.) The resistance to the privilege on the part of the Stationers' Company, who owned the Old Version, ended in the withdrawal of this monopoly by the Privy Council (1633). (See Preface to Wither's Hymns and Spiritual Songs, by E. Farr in Library of Old Authors.) The metres of this book are more varied than those of the Old Version, and yet more regular and even than those of Sidney, and tunes are set to them by Orlando Gibbons. The author of Anthologia Davidica, a compilation of Psalms from many sources (1846), considers this the best version he knew for fidelity, harmony, and simplicity of expression. Judged, however, by his copious extracts (the book itself is rare) there is a want of force and spirit. The 137th, "As nigh Babel's streams we sat," is gracefully rendered; the best is the 150th, "Come praise the Lord, come praise Him" (S. P. C. K. Ps. and Hym., Ps. cl.). The version by George Sandys (1636), son of the Abp. of York, is of far greater literary merit. Though set to music by Henry Lawes, it was intended only for private devotion, and perhaps never used otherwise. Baxter laments that Sandys's "seraphic strain" was useless to the vulgar because not composed in the ordinary metres; but its poetical grace exercised a considerable influence on translators. The longer Psalms are often in l. m. couplets; some of his most graceful pieces are in couplets of 7s, as Ps. 150, "Praise the Lord enthroned on high" (S. P. C. K. Ps. and H., Ps. cl.), and Ps. 148 "You who dwell above the skies" (Wes. H. Bk. 639). by an eulogy by his friend. In the opinion of Bu Conder, and Holland, it is a version. See, however, K

XI. Puritan Versions; Rous

To the psalm-loving Puritans the metrical version was a moment. The first book (Cambridge, N.E., 1640) was the Psalter, often called The Book of Psalms, the editors of which were the most rigorous literalists in England the Committee of the House of Commons, recommended in 1640 that "The meeter be corrected and allowed." The first ed. (1641) of Francis Rous, Provost of Eton under Charles I, was an attempt to satisfy the Puritans by amendment of the Old Version. Changes were made in 1641 which were ordered to be printed in the House of Commons. The Directory (1645), in which that can read "was a psalm-book," made Rous's third edition (1646) be printed on the record of the Assembly of Divines; in 1647 this Version "authorized by the House of Commons to be sung in all churches and chapels in the kingdom." There was at this time on both sides a desire to agree on a version which would secure uniformity in religious worship. It was frustrated by two causes. First, the Puritans were inclined to a rival version, which was published by a minister of St. Martin's in 1644; 2nd, 1645); and 3rd ed. (1646) to the House of Commons, who, however, declined to adopt it. Rous's version came up again in 1647, they referred it to a committee, which apparently sanctioned it. Rous was discontented with Rous's version of heterodoxy, as an ad hoc introduction of considerable changes from other versions, in 1650. [See B. Rous's confidence in Rous was at its height. It may have been diseased by the death of Milton in 1648 and had a special significance of the war (Masson). His version is direct from the Hebrew, and printed in the margin: the original is printed in the margin. The illustration of the list of Puritan translations can say it was successful in 1653, without being literalism, and in view to be sung; but the Portions of Ps. 82, 85, "The Lord will come part of Ps. 84, "How beautiful," are found in some of the only one of real note with a gladome mind, age of fifteen. In 1651 in the preface to his version, sneers, from the churchman's stand-point, at the failure of one of our "pretended Reformers" (probably Rous). And in 1654 appeared a new edition of Barton, its title-page a license for publication from Cromwell. A version by Thomas Lord Fairfax is mentioned in the preface to Cotton's Editions of the Bible; he quotes the 137th Psalm in stanzas of four long lines. It was never published.

XII. Baxter, Miles Smyth, Denham, Patrick.

From Sternhold to Rous the prevailing principle of translation was literal exactness; but the dreariness of all these efforts, and in some measure the grace of Sandys, now produced a demand for some literary excellence. In the preface to his version (written probably about this time, though not published till 1692), Richard Baxter says, after reviewing preceding versions, "The ear desireth greater melody, than strict versions will allow." And in their measure the versions that followed the Restoration were an attempt in this direction. Examples may be seen in S. Woodford's verbose and pompous Psalter (1667); in Miles Smyth's, which is often smooth and melodious (1668); in Luke Milbourne (1698), who tried to adapt his metres to the music of Playford, who had recently edited Sternhold and Hopkins, and to that of Henry Lawes, found in Sandys's Psalter; and in the stately though monotonous L.M. of Sir John Denham (written at this time, though only published in 1715). But the difficulty lay in the decay of music, by which metres were more than ever restricted. Baxter adopted a plan of bracketed words, by which L.M. could be sung as C.M., or C.M. as S.M., for the use of ignorant congregations. But scarcely in the interest of literary success. A Century of Psalms was published by John Patrick, Preacher to the Charterhouse, brother of the Bishop, in 1679; and a complete version in 1691-2, which attained considerable success for its fidelity. It was not, however, exactly a literal version. It adopted a mode of evangelical interpretation, of which the germ exists in Parker, and which will be discussed at large under Watts. See § xv.

XIII. The New Version.

(1.) History.—The first instalment of Tate and Brady's Psalter is a sheet and a half, first XX. Psalms (Bodleian); the next is "The Psalms by N. Brady and N. Tate" published as a specimen (1695). A new version followed (1696), entitled Reasons of the Psalms of David, Fitted to the Tune of the Psalms, By N. Tate and N. Brady Used in Churches. By N. Tate (Brit. Mus.), and dedicated to William III. This edition was apparently subjected to criticism and revised; and in its preceding expressions, it differs from each of the Council, and it was in some of the metres and &c., permitted to be used in all churches. Sec. 3. as shall think fit to receive. [See Tate's Preface, 1696. This second edition was published in 1696 (Brit. Mus.).] The Supplement thereto was published in the same terms as the Psalter, by the Queen in Council, July 30, 1703. (2.) Value of Council, July 30, 1703.

license to print was concerned, the royal "allowance" was not strictly necessary, as the Licensing Act had recently expired; but it was extremely politic. (See it again under § xvi.) The "permission" to use it in churches, &c., which is a distinct matter from the "allowance," whether actually necessary or not in order to legalise its adoption, was of great value. Under the sanction of the sovereign, and recommended by the Abp. of Canterbury and Compton, Bishop of London, The New Version presented itself as a settlement of the long dissatisfaction with Sternhold and Hopkins. Its success was not however universal. Beveridge (1710) wrote a vigorous protest against it, and in favour of the Old Version. He calls it a "New Version in deed," "fine and modish," "flourished with wit and saucy," "gay and fashionable." He dilates on the inconvenience of two versions: calls it a breach of uniformity; "in time we might have one secundum usum London, another secundum usum Richmond (see Brady below), another secundum usum Sarum." He records the protests of congregations: one vestry had cast it out, after its introduction by the clergyman. It was then only used in a few churches in London.

(3.) Character and Merits.—The material of the New Version may be thrown into three groups: 1. Psalms of an ornate character, with occasional vigour of rhythm, written mostly in L.M. and P.M. The best is 139th, "Thou, Lord, by strictest search hast known." 2. A large quantity of very spiritless C.M., as poor in language as the literal versions. 3. A few examples of sweet and simple verse, such as the 34th, "Through all the changing scenes of life;" 42nd, "As pants the hart;" 51st, "Have mercy, Lord, on me;" and 84th, "Oh, God of hosts, the mighty Lord," which retain their hold on our hymn-books. There is nothing to shew certainly how the work was divided between Tate and Brady: both were poets; it is plausible to attribute the ornate work, in which some have even suggested an occasional aid from his patron Dryden, to Tate. Another theory makes Brady the theological, Tate the poetical workman throughout. Beveridge's epithets suggest the general impression of the book. The artificial style of that period is applied to the Psalms; and in the hands of men of genius—far less in those of mere versifiers—so alien a form could not have succeeded. "Tate's poor page" (Pope) has been abused as roundly as The Old Version. And yet one condemned to tread the waste of metrical Psalters will consider it an advance on its predecessors, suffering more from its own success than comparison with them. And this merit is fairly theirs: they asserted successfully, and with an emphasis scarcely known before, literary and poetical excellence (according to their light) as a principle of translation, and the precedent thus set was seldom ignored afterwards. It has been gravely censured for want of fidelity by Keble and others. Traces of political allusion have also been pointed out. The curious reader may like to trace them in Ps. 18, 37-43, in the courtly complexion given to Ps. 101, 2-7, in a possible allusion to the queen, Ps. 45, 16, and in Ps. 107, 40 ("The prince, who slights what God commands, exposed to scorn must quit his throne").

(4.) Authors.—The New Version was the work of two Irishmen. Nahum Tate was the son of Faithful Teate, an Irish clergyman, author of some religious verses. He was b. in Dublin (1652), and educated at Trinity College. He wrote, under Dryden's superintendence, the second part of Absalom and Achitophel with the exception of about two hundred lines. He succeeded Shadwell as Poet Laureate. Among his works are Characters of Virtue and Vice (1691), Miscellanea Sacra, a selection from various writers (1696-8), and Panacea, a Poem on Tea. He is said to have been a man of intemperate and improvident life. He wrote a reply to Beveridge, defending the style of the version on literary grounds. (Essay on Psalmody, 1710.) He d. in London in 1715. Nicholas Brady was born at Bandon (1659). He was educated at Westminster, and went afterwards to Christ Church, Oxford, and to Trinity College, Dublin. From the latter he received the degree of D.D. for services to the Protestant cause. He was a Prebendary of Cork. In the Irish war he was an active adherent of William; and three times saved his native town from burning. Coming from Bandon with a petition to William, he remained in London, and was appointed Chaplain to the King; and afterwards (1702-5) Incumbent of Stratford-on-Avon. He had previously been minister of St. Catherine Cree's, and Lecturer of St. Michael's, Wood Street; probably holding some or all of these appointments in plurality. Notwithstanding the income derived from his appointments, his extravagance obliged him to keep a school, while incumbent of Richmond (1710). He died in 1726. Besides several volumes of sermons, he published a tragedy called The Rape, or the Innocent Impostors, and a poetical translation of the Aeneid of Virgil in four vols.

XIV. J. Addison.

In the Spectator of 1712, were published the well-known paraphrases of the 19th Ps., "The spacious firmament on high," and the 23rd Ps., "The Lord my pasture shall prepare." They have been attributed to Marvell, but (see Addison, J., p. 16, ii.) are Addison's. They are found in many collections, and have been admired by good judges. The style is more florid than the New Version. The fault in both is, that the sense of God's Presence, which is so vivid in the original, is subordinated to the somewhat unreal description of landscape.

XV. Watts's Version.

The versification of the Psalms engaged the attention of Isaac Watts in his early days; a translation of Ps. 137, not included in his complete Psalter, is found in Reliquiæ Juveniles. Paraphrases on Ps. 148 were published in the Horæ Lyricæ (1705); and at least half of the Psalms had been versified at the date of the publication of his Hymns (1707-9). Ps. 114 was published in The Spectator (1712); and the complete version (so far as his theory of completeness extended) in 1719; entitled, The Psalms of David imitated in the language of the New

The best is Ps. 96, "Raise the psalm; let earth adoring" in Kennedy, 1863, and the Wes. H. Bk. (604), 1875. A smooth, fairly-sustained Version, but deficient in spirit, had been published (1831) by Bp. Trouser (revised in 1875). Sir Robert Grant had published some renderings early in the century, among which is the fine ornamentation of the old 104th, "Oh worship the King." J. Conder's Ps. 113, "Hallelujah, raise oh raise," is a lyric of great brightness and jubilation. A Selection of Psalms by Hookham Frere was privately printed, see his Poetical Works (1872). The Symmetrical Psalter by W. Vernon Harcourt appeared in 1856, and The Cambridge Psalter by Dr. Kennedy in 1860 (revised 1876).

XX. Recent Versions.

The reader of this sketch will have observed that in one aspect it is the history of the long tenacious struggle of the Metrical Psalter against the growing power of original hymns as the material of praise. This conflict has been now long ended, and the task of versifying the Psalms greatly simplified by enfranchisement from the routine metres. But fresh efforts are still made under these freer conditions. A version of considerable freshness, freedom, and spirit appeared in 1863, with an irregular structure of verse, by Mr. A. Malet. The Companion Psalter, by Rev. T. R. Birks (1874), is a valuable compilation of the choicest pieces of preceding versions, and contains several of his own developments of the meditative psalms. His lyric measures are often soft and melodious: he introduces freely Evangelical ideas; but they are not always the legitimate unfolding of the psalm, and sometimes the groundwork is scarcely perceptible. Ps. 19, "The heavens declare Thy glory"; Ps. 20, "O Christ, whose intercession"; Ps. 80, "Oh King of Mercy"; and Ps. 89, "O comfort of the weary"; are good specimens. The Marquess of Lorne published alternate renderings of the Scottish Version (1877). The late Dr. Irons promised a complete version, written with special attention to Hebrew parallelisms; an instalment of it appeared in 1875. The latest versions are by Digby Seymour (1882), and Digby S. Wrangham (1885).

Among the efforts to make the Psalter compete with original hymns may be noted Matthew Henry's Family Hymns (really selected Psalms, 1695); Dorrington's Devotions in Psalms and Hymns and Spiritual Songs, arranged as a hymnbook for Sundays, &c.; Select Psalms and Hymns for the use of St. James's Westminster (1697). The most interesting is an arrangement by Romaine (1775), to which is prefixed an essay in defence of the Old Version, a strenuous protest against the growing power of Wesley's hymns.

XXI. Conclusion.

The quotations in the foregoing sketch shew that metrical psalms still contribute largely to our hymnals. The least successful renderings have been those of the Messianic psalms. Nor have the penitential psalms yielded much for Lenten use. In one or two instances the dauntless trust of the Psalmists has been nobly reproduced. And for the worship of the masses certain psalms are unequalled. Influence of the long tutelage must not be lost sight of. Earlier hymns a severity objective tone, and a wide natural religion. Nowhere God in his works so magnificently as in the Psalms, and the presentation is grounded on one of the works in themselves single and perhaps sentimentally. Nowhere is the joy unchecked by the chilling thought—true and sad as it is—and inadequacy of majestic. These characteristics deeply on Watts; and the value, as a counterpoise to effeminacy, self-consciousness of motives, which make some so sickly. The influence of English hymns is by no means small. It may take new forms, but more freely from the ideas, that the Psalms can cease to be the deepest, tenderest, most in future hymns.

This little work is written on beautiful vellum, and in an old English cursive mixture of Anglo-Saxon characters, and in an old English words, which tends to show that it was made at a time when the language was in a state of change. [No. 1.]

Brathwaite, Richard, b. 1588, d. 1673, at one time Deputy-Lieutenant of the county of Westmoreland, was the author of several metrical works. Haslewood, the editor of Brathwaite's Barnabee's Journal, is of opinion that No. 63 by "R. B." is his work.

Bryan, Joseph, one of the "other gentlemen" referred to in No. 51. Concerning him we know nothing except that his name is prefixed to the Introduction to the ms. named, and that he wrote some of the versions therein. See Davison, C., below.

Byrd, William, one of the "Gentlemen of the Queen's honourable Chappell," s. of Thomas Byrd, was b. circa 1538, and d. in London, July 4, 1623. He was a chorister in St. Paul's Cathedral; Organist of Lincoln Cathedral, 1563-1569; and Gentleman of the Chapel Royal, 1569. He was the composer of several well-known anthems. [No. 32.]

Carey, Thomas. A gentleman attached to the court of King Charles I. See Davison, C., below.

Cayley, C. B., B.A., translator of Dante's Divine Comedy, author of Psyche's Interludes, &c. [No. 296.]

Chamberlayne, James, composed a few poems that he might not trifle away too much of his time, and pub. a selection therefrom as:—A Sacred Poem on the Birth, Miracles, Death, Sepulture, Resurrection, and Ascension of the Most Holy Jesus, 1690. To this were added 18 Psalm Versions, the Lamentations of Jeremiah in verse, &c. [No. 93.]

Coldwell, William, sometime resident in Sheffield as an architect and surveyor, was a local preacher in the Methodist New Connexion body. He pub. (1) Fables and Moral Poems, Halifax 1819; (2) Hebrew Harmonies, (No. 304), 1820; and (3) The Bk. of Praises, &c.

Colman, George, the younger, s. of George Colman, a dramatic writer, and for some time the Lord Chamberlain's Examiner of Plays, was b. at London, Oct. 21, 1762, and d. in 1836. [No. 177.]

Coney, Thomas, B.D., sometime Rector of Chedzoy, Somersetshire, and Prebendary of Wells. [No. 123.]

Cosworth, Michael. This versifier's history is unknown to the British Museum. His version of Some Select Psalms is in the Harleian Collection. [No. 37.]

Cradock, Thomas, a native of Staffordshire, and sometime Rector of St. Thomas's Church, Baltimore County, Maryland, pub. his Paraphrase of the Psalms as below. [No. 144.]

Cumberland, Henry Clifford, Earl of, was b. in 1591, and d. at Dec. 1643. "In the dimensions which Earl of gave to Charles the First and his Parliament the distinguished himself more by his cause, than by his activity or skill: he was a man of great honour and integrity; and he has a full brief memoir of him into his Wood's Athenæ (conciennes)" (Holland). [No. 10.]

Cumby, Richard, dramatic and miscellaneous writer, was b. at Cambridge, 1732, and d. at Tunbridge, 1811. He was sometime Secretary to the Board of Trade, but is better known for his character in the latter part of his life he devoted himself to literature. [No. 188.]

Davison, Christopher, second s. of William Davison and brother of Francis Davison (see below), was a member of Gray's Inn. We cannot ascertain the dates of his birth or death. He is one of the "other gentlemen" referred to in No. 51.

Davison, Francis, eldest s. of William Davison, Secretary of State to Queen Elizabeth, and brother of the above, was b. circa 1576, and was a member of Gray's Inn. He d. circa 1621. His Poetical Rhapsodie was pub. in 1602. [No. 51.]

The Harl. MS. referred to in No. 51 is one of three mss. which are thus referred to by W. T. Brooke in his ed. of Giles Fletcher's Christ's Victory and Triumph, &c., Lond., Griffith, Farran, &c., 1888, p. 242:—"No. complete edition of the psalms of Francis and Christopher Davison has hitherto appeared; and for the first time (with the hitherto unknown Introduction of Francis Davison himself) they are here completely given. It is probable that Davison's death interrupted the plan of the collection, and it remained unfinished. At least three mss. of it have survived (i.) the apparently original ms. in the Harleian Collection; (ii.) a transcript by Ralph Crane with additional poems [referred to by Farr in his Select Poetry, &c., 1848, p. xxx., under T. Carey, whose version of Ps. 91 is therein]; and (iii.) the anonymous ms., formerly Archdeacon Cotton's, and the late Alexander Gardyne's, from which we print. Of the fellow-workers of the Davisons—Joseph Bryan, Richard Gipps, and Thomas Cary—little is known. Bryan contributed twenty-two psalms to the collection; Francis Davison eighteen; Christopher Davison and Richard Gipps each two; and T. Carey a single psalm. Mr. Brooke reprints about one half of the mss., all of Bryan's but one being omitted.

Dennis, Thomas. Concerning this author our information is limited to the titlepage of his version. [No. 191.]

Dickson, Thomas, a schoolmaster at Chirnsdale, Berwickshire. [No. 242.]

Dod, Henry, is called by G. Wither "Dod the silk-man." Beyond this, and that his "late ridiculous translations of the Psalms was, by authority, worthily condemned to the fire" (i.e. burnt by the common hangman), and that he turned the Act of Parliament enjoining a Public Thanksgiving on the Fifth of November, into metre to be sung in church, we know nothing of him. [No. 40.]

Donald, Robert, an illiterate person of Woking, Surrey, was persuaded in his own mind that he had a divine call to prepare a new version of the Psalms, and when done had to get the assistance of a friend to correct the grammar. [No. 196.]

Ducarel, P. J. Our knowledge of this versifier is confined to the details on the titlepage of No. 236.

Usher, James. From the titlepage and the Preface of his version [No. 219] we gather that Usher was a layman, who, with a limited education and little or no preparation, began his paraphrase on the 18th of Aug., and completed it on the 15th of Dec. 1823.

Versteegan, Richard, a Roman Catholic, d. circa 1636. [No. 39.] He was possibly the editor of the 1599-1604 Primer, printed at Antwerp, where he was at that time, and the Preface of which is signed "R. V."

Vicars, John, b. in London, 1582, educated at Oxford, was for some time an usher in the school of Christ's Hospital, and d. in 1657. He was a virulent writer against the Royalists, and spared no one in his zeal. His England's Hallidajuh for God's Gracious Benediction; with some Psalms of David in Verse was pub. in 1631. [No. 55.]

Wheatland, Stephen. Of this versifier we know nothing beyond the fact that he joined Tipping Sylvester in publishing the Ps. of David, &c., 1754. [No. 146.]

White, John, M.A., sometimes called "The Patriarch of Dorchester," where he was rector for 42 years, was b. in 1574, and d. in 1648. He was one of the Clerical Assessors of the Westminster Assembly of Divines, 1643. His version was pub. posthumously in 1664. [No. 81.]

Winchester, Elkanah. A celebrated Universalist preacher who ministered in a chapel in Petticoat Lane, London, in 1778-9. His version was on the basis of the teachings of the Universalists, and specially for the use of that community. [No. 184.]

Woodford, Samuel, D.D., b. in London, 1636, and educated at Wadham College, Oxford. He was for some time Rector of Hartley Maudit, Hants, and Prebendary of Winchester. He d. in 1700. [No. 87.]

Wotton, Sir Henry, M.A., b. in Kent in 1568, and educated at New and at Queen's Colleges, Oxford. After spending nine years on the Continent, on his return he became secretary to Robert, Earl of Essex, with whom he continued until Essex was committed for high treason, when he retired to Florence. There he became known to the Grand Duke of Tuscany, and was sent by him, in the name of "Octavio Baldi," with letters to James VI., King of Scotland, in which the king was informed of a design against his life. On succeeding to the English throne James knighted Wotton and sent him as ambassador to the Republic of Venice. In 1623 he was made Provost of Eton (having previously taken Deacon's Orders). He d. in 1639. His works include The Elements of Architecture, Parallel between the Earl of Essex and the Duke of Buckingham, Essay on Education, &c. His poems and other matters found in his MSS. were pub. posthumously by Izaak Walton in 1661, as Reliquiæ Wottonianæ. This has been several times reprinted. [No. 79.]

Wrangham, Francis, D.D., sometime Archdeacon of Cleveland, b. in 1769, educated at Magdalen and Trinity Colleges, Cambridge, and d. Dec. 27, 1843. [No. 259.]

Wrangham, William, a tradesman of Louth, Lincolnshire. He d. in 1832. [No. 223.]

Wyatt, Sir Thomas, b. at Allington, Kent, in 1503, and d. at Sherborne, Dorset, 10th or 11th Oct., 1542. He was educated at St. John's College, Cambridge. He was knighted by Henry VIII., and was sent by him on various embassies. His Songs and Sonnets were pub. with those of his friend, the Earl of Surrey. His Poetical Works were reprinted by R. Bell, 1855, and are also included in the Aldine Poets. [No. 8.]

Young, Robert, M.A., says on the titlepage of his version that he was "formerly Classical Teacher, Glasgow, latterly for some time Minister of the Free Church, Chapleton." [No. 299.] [J. T. B.]

Psalms, French. The French Psalms, in common with the English, the German, and others, require a distinct history from the hymnody of the same nation.

i. Clément Marot.

1. Very few trs. of the Psalms have been found prior to the great Psalter of Marot and Beza. The germ of this work was Ps. 6, attached to the Miroir de tres chrestienne Princesse Marguerite de la France Roynne de Navarre, Duchesse d'Alençon (1533). At least 13 others must have been tr. by 1539 (§ 2). In 1540 the psalms which Marot had then written and circulated in ms., were in the highest favour with Francis I., Catherine de Médicis, the Dauphin, and the court. They were sung to ballad tunes. privileges du Pape." The internal evidence afforded by a comparison of the liturgical portions with subsequent liturgies at Geneva (1542) and Strasburg (1545) is consistent with this assumption. The printer was very probably Jehan Knobloch. Pierre Brully, the pastor, was perhaps the editor.

5. In the library at Stuttgart there is an unique copy of Calvin's first Liturgy pub. at Geneva, entitled

"La forme des prieres et chants ecclésiastiques avec la manière d'administrer les sacrements, et consacrer le mariage, selon la coutume de l'Eglise Ancienne, 1542."

There is no name of place or printer; but the device of an olive branch, ending in an ornamental "G.," is known to be the mark of Jean Gérard or Girard, a Genevan printer. The liturgical contents of this volume are of great interest; but the only portion of them that concerns our subject is the preface, which exhibits Calvin's sentiments on the use of music in public worship.

The Psalms are a reprint of those in the last-mentioned ed., known as the Pseudo-Roman, with the omission of the prose 113th Ps., and the 4 by various authors (43, 120, 130, 142). The other pieces of the Pseudo-Roman are also reprinted, with the exception of the prose Creed, which is exchanged for Marot's Creed, pub. in the Miroir. Some slight alterations are made in the text of the Psalms. But considerable alteration is made in the melodies. Only 17 are common to this and the Pseudo-Roman ed., and modifications which lessen their German character are made in these. There are 22 new melodies, 14 as substitutes for rejected tunes of the earlier edition, 8 set to psalms, which previously had no melodies attached to them. This musical contribution is probably the work of Louis Bourgeois.

A second ed. of this book, probably only a reprint with no material alteration, is known to have been pub. later in the year. These several editions show plainly that for nearly three years the psalms of Marot were in favour alike in the Catholic court and the Huguenot worship.

6. In 1542, Marot himself pub. his 30 Psalms. The title of the book is—

Trente Pseaumes de David, mis en francoys par Clement Marot, valet de chambre du Roy, avec privilege. Imprimé a Paris, s. n. (An unique copy is in the Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris.)

It contains the privilege from the King, dated Nov. 30th, 1541; an epistle dedicatory to Francis I., not without evidences of real religious feeling, in which Marot contrasts the true inspiration of David with the fabled muse of Greece and Rome; and the 30 Ps. of the other editions (1-15, 19, 22, 24, 32, 37, 38, 51, 103, 104, 113, 114, 115, 130, 137, 143). At the head of some of the Psalms are short indications of the nature of the metre, but no suggestions of melodies, and no music. The text of this ed. varies, as has been said, greatly from that in the editions noticed in the last section. Whether both texts are by Marot himself, or whether the editions of 1539 and 1541 represent a text revised by other hands than his, it is difficult to decide.

M. Douen has printed the principal variations in the first 8 Psalms, and pronounces that the Paris text is infinitely superior in elegance and rhyme; that in only 4 places (of these 8 Ps.) are the variations in the other editions more literal than in Marot's; and that of these 4 Marot himself adopted 3 in his ed. of 1543. On the ground of its superiority, and of the phrases on the Antwerp title-page ("recongner et corriger"), which indicate revision in that ed., he decides that the Paris ed. for the first time prints Marot's genuine text, and that the others exhibit a text that has been altered by Pierre Alexandre and the Theologians. To this verdict however the 13 Ps. in the Strasburg ed. (1539) which are identical in text with those of Pierre Alexandre's book (1541) are a considerable objection. The imprimatur of Pierre Alexandre also in the Antwerp ed., does not seem necessarily to indicate extensive alteration, for he says, "nec in ipso reperi quod possit pias aures offendere;" and the other 14 psalms by various authors would share the revision with the 30 of Marot.

7. The publication of the 30 Psalms drove Marot from France to Geneva. Though the privilege for it had been signed by three doctors of theology, the book was condemned by the Sorbonne, and Marot was only saved from arrest by flight. In August, 1543, he pub., evidently at Geneva,

Cinquante Pseaumes en francois par Clement Marot. Item une Epistre par luy nagueres envoyee aux dames de France.

The contents of this book are:—

An Epistle to the Ladies of France; an Epistle to the King; the 30 psalms already pub., revised and corrected; 20 fresh psalms (the Song of Simeon counting as one); the Commandments, the Articles of the Faith (the Creed); the Lord's Prayer; the Angelic Salutation; and two prayers, one before, one after meals. The Epistle to the King is very brief. It contains an allusion to the fact that Francis had commanded him to continue the work of translation. The Epistle to the Ladies of France is in the courtier vein. He bids them quit their love-songs to Cupid to sing Him, Who is love indeed, "O bien heureux qui voir pourra, Fleurir le temps que l'on oïra Le laboureur à sa charrue, Le charretier parmi la rue, Et l'artisan en sa boutique Avesques un Pseaume ou Cantique En son labeur se soulager." The new psalms are Ps. 18, 23, 25, 33, 36, 43, 45, 46, 50, 72, 79, 86, 91, 101, 107, 110, 118, 128, 138. There is no music to this ed. A few months later however an ed. (now lost) of these Fifty Psalms, with music, was pub. along with the Liturgy and Catechism by Calvin. The 5 psalms, generally assigned to Calvin, which had hitherto come down from the Strasburg ed. (1539) were in this ed. replaced by Marot's.

8. Marot's death (1544) arrested the progress of the Genevan Psalter. But his psalms were utilised in other quarters. Editions of them appeared in Paris, Lyons, Strasburg, and Geneva, 16 of which are extant. The Strasburg ed. of 1545, printed 10 of the new psalms, together with the psalms and pieces of Marot and others in the Pseudo-Roman ed., the Commandments by Marot, and a hymn, "Salutation à Jésus-Christ," beginning "Je Te salue, mon certain Rédempteur" (p. 579 l.) Louis Bourgeois pub. a harmonised ed. of the Cinquante Pseaumes in 1547. A compilation of Marot's psalms, 29 by Gilles d'Aurigny, 42 by Robert Brinzel, 31 by "C. R." and "Cl. B.," forming an entire Psalter, was pub. in Paris (1550). And Poitevin's 100 psalms (Poitiers 1550) were bound up, in later editions, with Marot's 50 as a complete Psalter.

ii. Completion of the Psalter by Beza.

1. The Genevan Psalter was completed by Théodore de Beze, at the request of Calvin, who had found on his table a tr. of Ps. 16. The first instalment of them was principally written at Lausanne. On March 24, 1551, he requested from the Council of Geneva permission to print "the rest (le reste) of the Psalms of David," which he "has had set to music," and asked for a privilege of exclusive sale. They were however very far from being completed at that date; and on June 24 Calvin wrote to Viret asking Beza to send what psalms he had, without waiting for the versification of their companions. Accordingly before the year closed there appeared:—

Trente quatre psaumes de David nouvellement mis en rime françoise au plus pres de l'Hebreu, par Th. de Beze de Veselay, en Bourgogne. Geneve. 1551.

This volume contains a dedicatory epistle, "A l'Eglise de nostre Seigneur," and the new psalms by Beza.

The Psalms are: 16, 17, 20, 21, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 34, 35, 39, 40, 41, 42, 44, 47, 73, 90, 119, 120, 121, 122, 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 129, 131, 132, 133, 134. The dedicatory epistle is justly eulogised by MM. Douen and Bovet. It illustrates the difference of standpoint and temper between the two poets. In place of the lighter grace, the classical and mythological allusions, and the courtier vein of Marot's addresses to the King and the Ladies of France, we have the strong firm tone, the contempt of worldly poetry, the sense of endurance, hardness, even scorn, left by persecution, which marks the Huguenot theologian. The Church to which he dedicates his work is the "petit troupeau," which, despite its lowliness is the treasure of the earth, the kings he honours are not Francis the king of flatterers, but the champions of the Reformation in Germany and Edward VI. of England. There is however a high eulogium of Marot, "Las! tu es mort sans avoir avancé Que le seul tiers de l'œuvre commencé, Et qui plus est, n'ayant laissé au monde, Docte poète homme, qui te seconde Voila, pour quoi quand la mort te rault, Avecques toy se tent aussi David."

2. In 1554, 6 new psalms (52, 57, 63, 64, 65, 111), 4 of them without melodies, the other 2 set to previous tunes, were added as an appendix to the combined ed. of Marot and Beza which had been pub. under the title of Psaumes Octante trois in 1552. In an ed. without date, Ps. 67, the Song of Moses, the Song of Simeon, and the Ten Commandments are added.

3. The various volumes extant show no further increase of pieces until 1562, when the complete Psalter appeared, entitled

Les Psaumes mis en rime françoise par Clément Marot et Théodore de Bèze.

The privilege for this ed., obtained from Charles IX. (!), is dated Dec. 26, 1561. It was printed for Antoine Vincent at Geneva, Paris, Lyons, Caen, and other places, in 24 editions at least of that year. There are 60 new psalms, and 40 new melodies; the total of melodies is raised to 125. The Pater Noster and the Creed are no longer included; the Song of Simeon and the Ten Commandments are alone appended.

4. The music of the Psalter is beyond our scope. It is treated fully in M. Douen's work, in a series of articles in The Musical Times (1881), and in several articles of The Dictionary of Music. The melodies in the Strasbourg ed. (1539) are of German descent. The editor of the Genevan psalters (1542-5 probably, 1545-57 certainly) was Louis Bourgeois. Only 11 of the Strasbourg melodies are retained in the complete Psalter, most of them in a modified form; 74, the finest in the Psalter, are by Bourgeois; the 40 of 1562 are by an unknown hand. Side by side with the work of Bourgeois, Guillaume Franc, cantor at Lausanne, wrote in 1551 melodies for the psalms then recently translated by Beza, and obtained a licence to print them at Geneva, together with the original melodies to Marot's psalms. Nothing further however, as far as is known, was done until 1565, when a psalter was printed at Geneva for use at Lausanne. The bulk of the tunes in this psalter were derived from that of Geneva, 4 melodies by Bourgeois, and 15 by the unknown editor of 1562. The new tunes introduced by Franc were 46 in number, of which 26 were by himself, one from the England a volume entitled All the French Psalm Tunes with English Words (1632) is in the British Museum, Lambeth and Lincoln Cathedral libraries. At the end of a French tr. of the Liturgy of the Church of England, dedicated to George I. (1719, London), perhaps for the Savoy Church, the psalms of Marot and Beza are printed. In England's Hallelujah, by John Vicars (1631), are Divers of David's Psalmes according to the French forms and metre. The influence of the French on the O. V. of England and Scotland is only perceptible in a few French tunes and metres: 30 of the Scottish, and a smaller number of the English melodies are French. Psa. 50, 104, 120, 121, 124, 127, 129, in the English, and Psa. 102, 107, 110, 118 in the Scottish version are identical in melody with the corresponding French Psalms.

6. The general verdict of critics from the time of Voltaire to that of Sainte-Beuve has been severe. MM. Bovet and Douen are more kindly. Yet the former speaks strongly of the wearisomeness, diffuseness, inversions, obscurity, and vulgar, even gross, expressions in the work of Beza, and the prosy commonplace, inversion and coarseness in the far better verse of Marot. The judgment of the 16th and 17th cents., when the antiquated language was current, and the coarseness less perceptible, was full of eulogy. Out of the wide variety of subject matter, emotions and poetical style which the Psalter exhibits, the simplicity, plaintiveness, lyric grace, and subjective meditation are those best reproduced in Marot's choicest pieces, descending through him into the body of French hymns. The striking variety of metre evidently impressed Kethe and Whittingham, and an imitation of it was ineffectually attempted by them, as a relief to the humdrum monotony of the English and Scottish versions. The solidity, the breadth, the celebration of God in nature, on the other hand, which passed from our Old Version into the work of Watts, has no counterpart in the French Psalter, or the hymns that succeeded it. The contrast is due doubtless to deeper differences in the genius of the nations. The merit of fidelity has been generally conceded. The work of Marot was based on the direct translation from the Hebrew by Vatable, and perhaps other Hebrew studies. Beza was a deep student of the Psalms, as well as a theologian.

iii. The Revised Psalters of the Reformed Church and Independent Versions.

1. The version of Marot and Beza was the psalm-book of the Reformed Church. The French Lutheran Church, which from the first used hymns in worship, felt less the necessity of a complete Psalter. The Frankfurt Psalmes, Hymnes, et Cantiques (1612) contains 35 psalms by Matthieu Barthol. M. Douen also mentions in his bibliography Les Psalmes de David, avec les hymnes de D. M. Luther et autres docteurs de l'Eglise mis en vers françois selon la rime et composition allemande. Montbeliard, 1618. More than 50 versions were pub. in the interval that preceded the revision of Marot and Beza. Two—a poor one by the Abbe Philippe Des Portes (1591), and that by Godeau, bishop of Grasse (1644), to which Louis XIII. contributed four tunes, and which was interdicted, because the Huguenots, forbidden for the time to sing their own psalms, adopted it—were efforts within the Roman Church. Those of Baif (1587), J. B. Chassignet (1613), Racan (1631), Desmarets de Saint-Sortin (1680), were not intended for music. Louis des Mazures (1557), Cardinal du Perron (1589), Malherbe (1630), Corneille, Racine, and his son Louis, have left partial translations. In the Reformed Church Charles de Narières, of the suite of the Prince of Orange, pub. (1580) a version, as an improvement in versification on Marot and Beza. Diodati's Psalter (1646) testifies to the growing unpopularity ("attiedissemens et desgoutemens") of the French old version, but was not designed for public use.

2. The great change in the French language towards the close of the 16th cent. made the old version grotesque and antiquated. "People feared," says M. Bovet, "that the passage of time would gradually make the Psalms unintelligible, and that the reproach of being written in a dead language would be as true of them as of the Latin." The general decision of the synods was for a revision, preserving the metres, and departing as little as possible from the old version. The author of it was Valentine Conrart, the eminent founder of the French Academy. The first ed. is entitled—

Le Livre des Psaumes en vers françois. Par C. Marot et Th. de Bèze. Retouchés par feu Monsieur Conrart, Conseiller Secretaire du Roy... Première partie, 1677.

It contained only 51 psalms, which are admitted to be the work of Conrart alone. The complete version—was to some extent perfected by La Bastide, to whom Conrart had entrusted his ms. Gilbert's Psalter asserts in the preface that La Bastide had made such large changes in Conrart's text, that the 99 new psalms are only nominally his. But M. Bovet's examination of the evidence decides—on the ground of the expressions in the preface to the ed. of 1677, and the universal ascription of the version to Conrart alone, without mention of La Bastide, in letters and acts of synods of the time—that La Bastide's alterations were probably trifling. Conrart's Psalter, though called a revision, and preserving here and there some phrases, and throughout the metres of the old version, is in reality The French New Version. When allowance is made for the difficult conditions of production, M. Bovet pronounces it, though unequal and sometimes deficient in spirit, a remarkable work; recalling in parts the naive simplicity and lyric movement of Marot, in others the noble solemnity of the classic language of the 17th cent.

3. The distressed condition of the French Huguenots under Louis XIV. preventing the authorization of this book in France, the French exiles at Zurich appealed to the Church of Geneva as the chief of the French Reformed Churches, to take up the matter. In reply the Venerable Company of Pastors appointed three of their body, Benedict Pietet, De la Rive, and Calandrin to review the version, adding as a special instruction, that they should remove all phrases that savoured of Jewish imprecations against their enemies. The work was principally done by Pictet. Saurin, an avocet of Nismes, also assisted the editors. Completed in 1693, pub. in 1695, the title of this edition seems to have been ;

The text of Conrart is for the most part retained, with occasional reversion to the language of the Old Version, and occasional excision of phrases of it, which Conrart had spared. First used in public worship at Geneva in 1698, it was sent (1699) by the Venerable Company to the other Reformed Churches, and generally adopted by the French refugees in Switzerland, and the national Churches of Erguel and Neuchâtel. The Church of Berlin reserved to itself the right to make a few alterations, which were carried out by Beausobre, whom Frederick the Great called "the best pen in Berlin," and his subsequent colleague in the translation of the New Testament, Lenfant. The title of this version is

The Church of the United Provinces, under the leadership of Jurieu, resenting the assumption of primacy by Geneva, made a longer resistance. Bitter recriminations passed, and the adoption of the new version was stigmatised as an act of schism. An unsuccessful attempt was made to produce a version of their own, and they fell back on the old version. After Jurieu's death, Conrart's version was made the base of a new revision, which is entitled:—

It was authorized by the States General in 1727.

4. The era of Conrart and Pictet marks the beginning of decline. The new versions never attained the popularity of the old. The unsuitability for singing, not only of the imprecations, but of other portions more plainly showed itself. They ceased to be sung as a whole; and the selection in actual use continually narrowed. Voltaire expended his ridicule on them. Even the music began to give way to new melodies. (The earliest substitution is by De Camus (1760), who abuses the old music roundly.) Hymns pushed out the Psalms more and more at the close of the 18th century. The collections of St. Gall (1771) and Berlin (1791) have only from 50 to 60 Psalms. The Walloon Collection retained the whole Psalter, with a Supplement of hymns (1802). The ed. of Bourrit, resulting from several commissions of the Churches of France and Geneva (1823), contained the whole Psalter in an abbreviated form, with several new melodies and alterations of the old ones. That of Gallot of Neuchâtel (1830) was made on the same principle. Wilhem (1840) pub. a complete Psalter, with changes in the music, alteration of antiquated expressions and softening of the imprecations. The Recueil des Psaumes et Cantiques, Paris, 1859, has only 70 psalms: some of these fragments.

ment, and scarcely connected with this use of Latin hymns. Taking the hymn-books in chronological order, the Schools represented are:—

i. Rugby.—The earliest of our modern Public School Hymn-Books is Psalms and Hymns for the Use of Rugby School Chapel. It was in use in 1837. There were perhaps two editions during Arnold's lifetime; the text in this book of the hymn by J. H. Gurney, "We saw Thee not when Thou didst tread" (q.v.), is said to be a revision of Gurney's original by Buckoll. The earliest accessible edition (1850) of this book contains a hymn, which could not have been added until after Arnold's death. Small as it is (18 Ps. 68 Hys.), and merely providing hymns for such Christian seasons as occur during the school period, this little book contained very few pieces that are devoid of merit. The Psalms are the best specimens of the Old and New Versions, with some from Watts, Montgomery, and Henry Vaughan: the hymns are for the most part standard hymns at the present day, drawn from the Latin and German, from the Wesleys, Ken, Keble, Heber, and others. The hymns that are peculiar to it are those, partly original, partly trs. from German and Latin, by Rev. H. J. Buckoll, who is believed to have edited the book. Two hymns of his—"for the first Sunday of the half year" ("Lord, behold us with Thy blessing"), and "for the last Sunday of the half year" ("Lord, dismiss us with Thy blessing")—are found in every Public School hymnal. Shortly after Dr. Goulburn's entrance on the Headmastership, he issued (1857), with Mr. Buckoll's assistance, the Psalms and Hymns for the Use of the Congregation of Rugby School Chapel. All the pieces of the original book, except 4, are retained; 10 new Psalm versions—from Milton, Keble, Tower and others; 33 hymns—from Isaac Williams, Neale, Caswall, Trench, and older sources; and an Appendix, containing a Latin Version of Ps. 117, "O omnes gentes undique" (taken from the Communion Office in the Liber precum, Ch. Ch., Oxford, 1726), with a tr. "O all ye nations, praise the Lord," and a Selection of Psalms (Latin titles only) for chanting between the Litany and the Communion Service (really the Introits from the 1st Prayer Book of Edw. VI.) are added: the object being to increase the hymns for the Festivals and give a more decided Church tone to the hymnal.

In 1876, Hymns for the Use of Rugby School were published, edited by Dr. Jex-Blake, the Head Master, assisted by a Committee of Masters. The division of the book into Psalms and Hymns was discarded, 14 pieces from the previous edition were omitted, and the total of psalms and hymns together raised to 339. The names of the authors were given in the index of first lines. The new pieces are chiefly from modern sources, and most of them the accepted hymns of our general collections. Some of the pieces are more of the class of devotional poetry than of hymns; two or three of the Latin hymns are given in the original. The tone of the book is pure and high: the hymns of praise full; but there is a dejection in some of those on Prayer, Faith, and Hope, which seems more adapted to older stages of Christian experience than that of the boy.

ii. Harrow.—The next Public School to compile a Hymn-book for its own use was Harrow. Hymns for the Chapel of Harrow School were 1st pub. in 1855, edited by Dr. Vaughan (then Head Master). It is a far larger collection than either of the two prior Rugby hymn-books (240 hymns). The sources from which it is drawn are chiefly Watts and Doddridge, Cowper and Newton, the Wesleys, Heber and Milman, Ken, Keble, and the Metrical Psalms. It belongs to the older type of Church hymn-books; full of simple piety, with no great effort at relation with the Prayer Book; often losing its directness of address to God in reflection. The number of hymns on death seems out of proportion in a school collection. A few hymns (e.g. Buckoll's hymns for the opening and ending of the Half-year) are apparently taken from the Rugby Collection. The 3rd ed. of this book (1866), edited by Dr. Butler (then Head Master), retained all the hymns of Dr. Vaughan's book, and raised the number to 351. Several of the new pieces are common to the newer series of hymnals, of which H. A. & M. is the type; others are from less obvious sources. The book in its present shape might be considerably reduced without the loss of really good hymns: a pure ideal, an ardent thirst for holiness, and a vivid faith in the Unseen God are its leading ideas. Some of the pieces are too reflective to be suitable for direct worship, though useful for private meditation.

iii. Marlborough.—The Marlborough Series of hymn-books commenced in 1856, with Psalms and Hymns for Use in the Chapel of Marlborough College. About half of its 100 hymns are from the Rugby prior editions; of the other hymns three demand special notice, as having rightly been included in most subsequent Public School Collections; a hymn of Bp. Cotton's (apparently, from the description of scenery, written at Marlborough), deeply imbued with the sense of the beauty of creation, "We thank Thee, Lord, for this fair earth"; a beautiful hymn by Dr. Jex-Blake (then Assistant Master at Marlborough), on the gladness, fulness, buoyancy of human life, which is so vivid to the boy, "Lord, we thank Thee for the treasure that our happy lifetime gives"; and one for the Anniversary of the Consecration of The Chapel (St. Michael and All Angels) by Archdeacon Farrar, "Father, before Thy throne of light, the guardian angels bend." These three hymns are an excellent illustration of a principle that runs through the numerous editions that followed under the successive Head Masters of Marlborough (see below)—the production of a book, not only good in itself, and reproducing the hymns endeared by the associations of home, but specially meeting the needs and aspirations of a Public School community. On the side of boyhood, this aim reaches its fullest achievement in the edition of 1869: it may be traced in the simplicity and clear reality, with which the Christian ideas of faith, penitence, frailty, dependence, and the stainlessness of heaven are presented, in the absence of morbid longings for death, in hymns of fortitude and endeavour, in jubilation and thanksgiving, and in celebration of God's glory in nature. The edition of 1869, and still more that of 1878 (which adds several rarer pieces, especially from the German, and has greatly enhanced the effect of the general hymns by massing them more broadly, under the headings of Praise, Prayer, Faith, and Hope), recognize the further fact, that the atmosphere of culture at a Public School permits and demands a higher literary and poetical standard, careful editing, and such full indication of sources and authors, as may encourage and suggest study of the history of hymns. Among the more choice pieces are some by Dean Stanley and F. T. Palgrave. The names of authors are given at the foot of each hymn, as well as in an index. The edition of 1869 has in an Appendix some beautiful selections of devotional poetry, from the Christian Year and other sources. Very little use is made of translations from the Latin.

v. Repton.—The Repton Series of hymn-books began in 1859. The 103 hymns of the 1st ed. were reprinted in the 2nd ed., 1864 (141 pieces), and in the 3rd ed., 1869 (154 pieces). These three editions were compiled in Dr. Pears's Headmastership. The 4th ed., 1874 (211 pieces), and the 5th ed., 1881 (246 pieces), were compiled under Dr. Huckin's Headmastership. All but 20 from the original editions are retained in that of 1881; several of them are of no particular merit, and might well be omitted in any new edition; and the alphabetical arrangement, nowhere so ineffective as in a Church hymn-book, should be abandoned. This series shows no special connection with other Public School hymn-books, and has no very salient features.

vi. Wellington.—The 1st ed. of The Hymn-book for the Use of Wellington College, appeared in 1860. The three editions published during Dr. Benson's Headmastership only add about 20 pieces to those of the 1st edition (162 pieces), which is always substantially retained. In the psalm versions by Montgomery and Keble, and other pieces, and in the reproduction of the Psalms (quoted by their Latin headings only) from the 1st Prayer Book of Edw. VI., the book has affinities with the Rugby edition of 1850. But the sources from which the hymns are drawn are far wider. The hymns and trs. from the Latin, by I. Williams, Chandler, Caswall, and others, which reproduce the spirit of the Breviary, are largely used. Pieces by our older poets, by the Wesleys, Cowper and Newton, Heber and Milman, Keble and Newman, Professor Bright and Bp. Wordsworth, are combined with the familiar hymns of our general books. The principal pieces that are peculiar to the volume are the hymns and trs. from the Latin by Archbishop Benson himself. The special characteristic of the book is however by no means indicated by the range and judiciousness of selection. The order in which the hymns are to be used is fixed beforehand with elaborate care; so that morning, and night, each day of the week, each season of the year, each Holy Day, each Festival, each Sunday, by its own never varied cycle of hymns enforcing the great teaching of the Prayer

Some of the tunes are by Mr. P. David. In 1888 the Head Master of Sherborne, the Rev. E. M. Young, pub. Hymns for the Use of Sherborne School. It is a choice selection, is well edited, and has been brought down to the latest date.

ix. Rossall.—Hymns for Use in the Chapel of Rossall School, 1880, is one of the best Public School hymn-books. It is mainly founded on the Marlborough edition of 1878, and draws largely from the same sources—Watts and Doddridge, the Wesleys, Montgomery, Heber, Kehler, Mrs. Alexander, Dr. Bonar, and Miss Winkworth. Among the rarer pieces are some by Professor Bright, Bp. Walsham How, Mr. F. T. Palgrave, Dean Stanley, Dean Plumptre, Miss Procter, the Rev. John Ellerton, and the Rev. H. A. Martin. The book is designed to express "the hopes and fears, the difficulties, trials and temptations of school-boys," and it largely achieves its object by the full and buoyant praise, the sense of the gladness of life, and the glory of nature, and the bright Christianity it presents. Some of the pieces are more of the order of devotional poetry than hymns; but good pieces of this kind have more justification in a school hymn-book than elsewhere. Hymns "of which the burden is the weariness of earth and the longing for death," have been specially excluded. The book is carefully edited, as regards text, indices, and indication of the authors at the foot of each hymn.

x. New Hymn-Books.—New hymnals are in course of preparation at Westminster and Merchant Taylors' Schools. The first, following the lead of the Abbey hymnal, will enshrine hymns of old Westminsters as one of its distinctive characters. The latter will pay some attention to Latin hymns.

xi. Appendices.—It may be noted that an analogy exists between the various Appendices in these books for private use, and the often forgotten catena of hymns for private devotion, of which the Sarum and Reformation Primers exhibit early examples, and the Primers of the 17th cent. Besides these there are Ken's great hymns for the use of the Winchester scholars; a book dedicated to Etonians by Randolph Gilpin, Liturgia sacra curru Thebitico . . . vel opsonia spiritualia . . . etiam pueris degustanda 1857; and the Latin hymns attached to the edition of Herbert's Church Porch with Notes, by Canon Lowe, and others. (Parker, 1867.)

xii. Conclusion.—Some of the aims and difficulties of the task of compiling a School hymn-book can be easily gathered from this review of the books. It should have some relation to childhood, so far as the child's devotion remains true and touching to the boy and even the man. It should express as fully as possible those spiritual moods—such as, on the one hand, the sense of dependence and frailty, young sorrow and penitence for falls, purity and the high vision of heaven, and on the other, steadfastness, resolve, the facing of odds, the warrior and chivalrous aspect of the cross, the thrilling memory of prophet and apostle, saint, hero and martyr—which vibrate in the boy's soul and conscience. It should be rich in praise and jubilation, penetrated with the majesty of God's creation, and the God-given beauty of human life. Its two greatest dangers are puerility and unreality. To the first, boys, especially in the higher forms, are intensely opposed; the second, by placing in their mouths expressions that are untrue to their nature (such as a longing for death), turns worship into something little removed from acting. As designed for a community, drawn from the higher ranks, and through its masters and older boys, full of culture, it should not only be thoroughly edited, in the matter of purity of text, exact indication of the source and authorship of each piece, effective grouping of the general hymns under declared headings and full indices, but it should aim at a higher mark of imagination and poetical form; and in schools of the Church of England, the hymn-book should be in the fullest sense the hand-maid of the Prayer Book, enhancing, not crossing her utterance of doctrine, illuminating her festivals, and through the Latin hymns (sometimes even in the original) attesting her deep root in the Catholic past.

Puchta, Christian Rudolph Heinrich, s. of W. H. Puchta, then residing as Justizrath at Kadolzburg, near Nürnberg, was b. at Kadolzburg, Aug. 19, 1808. He matriculated at the University of Erlangen, in 1826, and completed his theological course at Berlin. In 1832 he was appointed Stadtvicar (general assistant preacher) at Munich, where he became acquainted with many men of light and leading; and in 1837 became repentent in theology at Erlangen. In 1839 he was appointed professor of Philosophy and Religion in the newly organised Lyceum at Speyer (Spire), but his nervous system broke down in 1841, and he had to be confined in the lunatic asylum of Winnenthal, Württemberg. After a year he was able to take charge of the parish of Eyb, near Ansbach, and then became, in 1852, second pastor, and in 1856, first pastor of St. James's Church, in Augsburg. He d. at Augsburg, Sept. 12, 1858 (Koch, vii. 277; Allg. Deutsche Biog. xxvi. 687, &c.).

Puchta had a genuine poetic faculty, and a mastery of style. His early poems were secular; his later were mostly hymns. His hymns were mainly meant for private use, and appeared principally in his Morgen- und Abend-Andachten am Christlichen Hausaltar in Gesängen, Erlangen, 1843 (2nd ed. 1857, 3rd 1868). Besides these, 38—including 11 trs. from the Latin—were given in Knapp's Christoterpe, 1837-1852. A few others, with a selection of his poems, edited by Knapp, appeared in his posthumous Gedichte, Stuttgart, 1860. Knapp in his Ke. L. S., 1850, included 30 hymns by Puchta, and in his edition of 1865 no less than 42. Puchta was also one of the editors of the Bavarian G. B., 1854. Those of his hymns which have passed into English (all from his Hausaltar, 1843) are:—

i. Ein neues Jahr ist angefangen. New Year. In 1843, p. 173, as above, in 6 st., entitled, "New Year's Morning." In Knapp's Ke. L. S., 1850, No. 2104. Tr. as, "Another year we now have enter'd," by Miss Burlingham, in the British Herald, January, 1866, p. 200, and Rel's Praise Bk., 1872.

ii. Herr des Himmels, Gott der Gnade. Sunday. In 1843, p. 3, as above, in 6 st., entitled "Sunday Morning." In Knapp, 1850, No. 1171. Tr. as, "God of grace and Lord of heaven," in L. Rehfuess's Church at Sea, 1868, p. 88.

iii. Herr ein ganzer Leidens-tag. For the Sick. In 1843, p. 227, as above, in 6 st., entitled, "In sickness. First evening." In Knapp, 1850, No. 2659. Tr. as, "Lord, a whole long day of pain," by Miss Winkworth, 1858, p. 81. Her st. i-iv. are No. 263 in Hp. Ryle's Coll., 1860.

Pugnate, Christi milites. [All Saints.] This hymn, in common with "Coelestis O Jerusalem" (p. 240, II.), is usually given as being in the Paris Breviary of 1736. This is however not the case. It is found in the Brev. of Chalons-sur-Marne, 1736 (Himnalia, p. 148), appointed for Saturday; in the Amiens Brev. of 1746; the Paris Brev. of 1822, and other French Brevs. Also in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as:—

1. Soldiers who to Christ belong. By I. Williams, in his Hys. tr. from the Parisian Breviary, 1839, p. 256, in 5 st. of unequal lines. This was rewritten for the Hymnary, 1872, and repeated from the Hymnary in Thring's Coll., 1882.

2. Soldiers who are Christ's below. By J. H. Clark, written at Marston, Montgomery, on Palm Sunday, 1865, and pub. in the 1868 Appendix to H. A. & M. Also in the revised edition, 1875.

Another tr. is:—

The text is also in J. Chandler's Hys. of the Primitive Church, 1837; Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865; and H. M. Macgill's Songs of the Christian Creed & Life, 1876. Tr. as:—

Long time the fallen human race. By J. Chandler, in his Hys. of the Prim. Church, 1837, p. 100. This is given in several collections, and sometimes with alterations. In the Hymnary, 1872, it begins "Far from their home, our fallen race." The alterations in this case are somewhat numerous.

Other trs. are:—

1. Driven from their home, their pathway lost. I. Williams. 1839.

2. Exil'd from Paradise and Heaven. W. Palmer. 1845, p. 69.

3. Poor wanderers, banished from their home. R. Campbell. 1860.

Punshon, William Morley, LL.D. This greatly and justly honoured name of recent Wesleyan Methodism finds a tiny niche in this work from a thin poetic vein, which gave him much enjoyment, if its working out must be confessed to have yielded nothing of permanent value for hymnody, or at all comparable with his splendid service to the Christian Church as preacher and lecturer. His contributions to J. Lyth's Wild Flowers, or, a Selection of Original Poetry (1843) [see Lyth, J., p. 707 I.], though reprinted in 1846, speedily withered as "flowers" in a hortus viceus. His Lays of Hope (1853) was no advance on the Wild Flowers. His Sabbath Chimes, or, Meditations in Verse for the Sundays of a Year (1867), suggested inevitable comparisons with Keble's classic of the Christian Year. Throughout, the thinking is bewilderingly meagre, the sentiment commonplace, the workmanship clumsy and poor. Ease and inspiration are absent. His Life has been amply and lovingly written by F. W. Macdonald and A. H. Reynar (1887); and it is a noble and beautiful story. He was b. at Doncaster on 29th May, 1824, only child of John Punshon and Elizabeth Morley. The latter was of a good family. He lost his parents in boyhood. Through maternal relationship, young Punshon was introduced to commercial life in Yorkshire, Hull, &c. He marked 29th November, 1838, as the day of his spiritual birth. In 1842 he began to be heard of locally as a preacher, being still in business. In 1844 he proceeded to the Methodist Theological Institute at Richmond; but remained there only a few months. He preferred evangelizing to stated preaching. He leapt into popularity at a bound, probably not to his gain, either intellectually or morally, though his diary breathes an admirable humility. In 1854 he made his advent as a lecturer by his Prophet of Horeb. The impression made by it was amazing. Then followed others, with ever deepening and widening impression. Contemporaneous with his abundant, over-abundant preaching and platform speaking, was such quantity and quality of effective work and service in raising large sums of money for Christian and other missionary and educational work as astounds a reader of his Life. He was five times President of the Canadian Methodist Conference (1868-72), and once of the English Conference (1875). His degree of LL.D. was conferred upon him by the Victoria University, Cobourg, Canada, in 1873. Throughout, in private and public, he was a large-souled, whole-hearted, true man of God. "Weakened by the way" on the continent, he slowly worked his way home, and after a brief final illness, fell gently and softly asleep on April 14, 1881. His hymns in the Wea. H. Bk., 1875, and the Meth. S. S. H. Bk., 1879, are:—

1. Listen! the Master beseecheth. Go, work in the Vineyard.

2. Sweet is the sunlight after rain. Sunday Morning.

3. We woke to-day with anthems sweet. Sunday Evening.

No. 1 is in the Meth. S. S. H. Bk., 1879; and 2 and 3 are from the Sabbath Chimes, 1867.

Pure spirit, O where art thou now? Anna L. Barbauld, nee Aikin. [Death and Burial.] Pub. in The Works of Anna Letitia Barbauld, with a Memoir, 1825, vol. i. p. 224, in 9 st. of 4 l. and headed, "Dirge. Written November 1808." From the Memoir we gather (p. xlv.) that the occasion was the death of her husband, "whose latter days were oppressed by a morbid affection of his spirits, in a great degree hereditary, which came gradually upon him, and closed the scene of his earthly usefulness" (p. xlix.). The "Dirge" was repeated in Martineau's Hymns, 1840, No. 623. In the same Hymns, 1840, No. 404, is arranged from this poem, and begins with st. ii., altered to "Not for the pious dead we weep," sometimes given elsewhere as "Not for the dead in Christ we weep." The original poem only is repeated in Martineau's Hymns, &c., 1873. [J. J.]

Pusey, Edward Bouverie, D.D., s. of Mr. Philip Pusey, was b. Aug. 22, 1800, and educated at Christ Church, Oxford, where he graduated in first class honours in 1822. Subsequently he became a Fellow of Oriel, a Canon of Christ Church, and Regius Professor of Hebrew in the University of Oxford. He d. Sept. 16, 1882. Dr. Pusey's prose writings and trs. are very numerous. Amongst the latter was his tr. of a part of Horat's Paradisus Animæ Christianæ, pub. in 1847 as The Paradise of the Christian Soul. In this work there are several metrical trs. of hymns which in the early pages of this Dictionary we have attributed to Dr. Pusey. We have Dr. Liddon's authority for stating that the hymns were not translated by Dr. Pusey. Some were tr. by W. J. Copeland, and others probably by J. Keble. [J. J.]

Pusey, Philip, eldest s. of Mr. Philip Pusey, and brother of Dr. Pusey, was b. June 25, 1799, and d. July 9, 1855. His father, a son of the first Viscount Folkestone, had assumed the name of Pusey instead of that of Bouverie. [G. A. C.]

Pye, Henry John, M.A., s. of H. J. Pye, of Clifton Hall, Staffordshire, was b. circa 1825, and educated at Trinity College, Cambridge. (B.A. 1848, M.A. 1852.) Taking Holy Orders in 1850, he was presented by his father in 1851 to the Rectory of Clifton-Campville, Staffordshire. In 1868 he, together with his wife (only daughter of Bishop S. Wilberforce), joined the Roman Catholic Church. Mr. Pye pub. Two Lectures on the Church, 1852; Short Ecclesiastical History, 1854; and various Sermons. He also compiled a book of Hymns for use at Clifton-Campville in 1851. To that collection he contributed a few hymns, including:—

1. In His temple now behold Him. Purification of B. V. M. This hymn was repeated, in a slightly altered form and an additional stanza (iv.), by Canon W. Cooke in the Cooke and Denton Hymnal, 1853; the Salisbury H. Bk., 1867; and many later collections. It is sometimes given with the fourth stanza as in the Serum, 1668; Sæpp's Songs of G. & O., 1872, &c. The full Pye-Cooke text of 1853 is in the S. P. C. K. Church Hym., 1871; Thring's Coll., 1882 (slightly altered); and others. This hymn is sometimes given as a tr. from Angelus Silesius (Scheffler), but in error.

2. O praise ye the Lord. Ye nations rejoice. Annunciation. This hymn was also repeated in the Cooke and Denton Hymnal, 1853, No. 169. [Wm. C.]

Quarles, Francis. The life of this "fine old English gentleman" and charming essayist and quaint singer, will be found in full in the present writer's collective and complete edition of his works in verse and prose (3 vols. 4<sup>o</sup>. 1880-81, Chertsey Worthies' Library). His father was James Quarles, of Stewards, Esq., and his mother Joan Dalton. He was their 3rd son and child. In the registers of Romford, Essex, is this entry, "1592, May 8. Baptizatus fuit Franciscus filius magistri Jacobi Quarritus." He lost his father in 1599. His first school was Romford and his first tutor William Tichbourne, chaplain of Romford. He lost his mother in 1606. He proceeded to Christ's College, Cambridge, and later was of Exeter College, Oxford. It is to be regretted that the College registers furnish no exact data. He passed from the University to Lincoln's Inn, where his widow-biographer tells us—

"He studied the laws of England; not so much out of desire to benefit himself thereby, as his friends and neighbours (showing therein his continual inclination to peace) by composing suit and differences amongst them."

Some years advance us from 1608 (at Lincoln's Inn) to probably 1612-13, or his 21st year. His widow continues,

"After he came to maturity he was not desirous to put himself into the world, otherwise he might have had greater preferments than he had. He was neither so unfit for Court preferment, or so ill-beloved there, but that he might have raised his fortunes thereby if he had had any inclination that way. But his mind was chiefly set upon his devotion and study; yet not altogether so much but that he faithfully discharged the place of cup-bearer to the Queen of Bohemia" (p. 2).

How long Quarles continued with the Queen is unknown. He accompanied Frederick and Elizabeth to Germany. He married Ursely [= Ursula] Woodgate, of St. Andrew's, Holborn, on May 28, 1618. In 1620 appeared the first and most characteristic of his poems, entitled, after the odd phrasing of the period, A Feast for Worms. In the epistle he says, "Wonder not at the title, for it is a Song of Mercy: what greater Feast than Mercy? and what are men but worms" (vol. ii. p. 5). Kindred with the Feast followed Hadassa, or the History of Queens Esther. In 1621 he was in Dublin. He dated his Argalus and Parthenia, "Dublin, 4th March, 1621." He filled the office of Secretary to the illustrious Usher, on whose death John Quarles composed a memorable elegy. Usher wrote to Vossius highly laudatory of our Quarles. His successive books are practically the only landmarks of his remaining years. (The reader is referred to our Life and the Works, ut supra.) The Emblems appeared in 1634-35, and his Hieroglyphics in 1637. In 1639 he was appointed "Chronologer" of the City of London, an office which he held till his death. From 1639 his various prose books were written, and became as popular as his poems. They are all in fine English. He was an out and out loyalist, and was with the king at Oxford. He had a numerous family. He d. Sept. 8, 1644, and was buried in St. Olave's, Silver Street, London, "11 Sep. 1644." His title to a place in this work rests mainly on his versified Psalms. These appear in the famous Bay Psalter. [See Bay Psalter, p. 119, l.] Quarles's are Psalms xvi., xxv., li., lxxxviii., cxlii., cxxxvii. They were reclaimed by us for Quarles on the authority of John Josselyn's Account of Two Voyages to New England (1674). In the year 1638 he says, on his arrival in Massachusetts Bay,

"Having refreshed myself for a day or two at Noddies Island, I crossed the bay in a small boat to Boston, which then was rather a village than a town, there not being above twenty or thirty houses, and presented myself to Mr. Winthorpe, the Governor, and to Mr. Cotton, the teacher of Boston Church, to whom I delivered from Mr. Francis Quarles, the poet, the translations of Nos. 16, 25, 51, 88, 113 and 137 Psalms into English metre for his approbation." &c.

These "Psalms" are more curious than successful. But besides them the poetry of Francis Quarles is a virgin field for the capable hymnologist. It is a mystery and a sorrow that few only have been adapted and adopted. There are many of his verse-Emblems that fittingly married to music would be solemn and searching, and nobly displace accepted pious inanities. No xii. of Book iii. of Emblems (vol. iii. pp. 75, 76), "Oh that Thou wouldst hide me in the grave," deserves a supreme effort of highest genius to make it worthily. In delightful contrast in its vividness and sweetness is his "Like to the damask rose you see" (vol. iii. p. 285). Equally noticeable are his "Backsliding" (ibid. p. 66, xiv.), "Vain Physicians" (ibid. p. 189, iv.), "Waste not Life" (ibid. p. 194, xi.), "A Little While" (ibid. p. 196, xiv.). (See Critical Essay in Works as above.) [A. B. G.]

Quarles, John, s. of the above, was b. in Essex in 1624, and was educated at Exeter College, Oxford. He bore arms within the garrison at Oxford on behalf of Charles I. and subsequently (it is said, he was raised to the rank of captain in the King's service. On the downfall of the King, Quarles retired to London, and devoted himself to literature for a livelihood. He d. there during the great Plague, 1665. He pub. several works including (1) Jeremiah's Lamentations Paraphrased, with Divine Meditations, 1648; and (2) Divine Meditations upon Several Subjects whereunto is annexed God's Love to Man's Unworthiness, with several Divine Ejaculations. Lond. 1655 (Wood's Athenæ Oxon.). From the Ejaculations, Mr. Darling adapted two hymns for his Hys. for the Church of England. In the 1889 ed. these are:—"O King of kings, before Whose Throne" (Holy Trinity); and "O Thou Who sitt'st in heaven and seest" (Visitation of Sick). [J. J.]

Quem terra, pontus, aethera [sidera]. [Purification of the B. V. M.] This has been frequently ascribed to V. H. C. Fortunatus, and is included by F. Leo in his ed. of Fortunatus's Opera Poetica, Berlin, 1881, p. 385, but among the hymns falsely attributed to him. It is found in four mss. of the 11th cent., in the British Museum (Jul. A. vi. f. 38 b; Vesp. D. xii. f. 61 b; Harl. 2961 f. 231; Add. 30848 f. 55 b); and in the Lat. Hys. of the Anglo-Saxon Church, 1851, p. 74, is printed from an 11th cent. ms. at Durham (B. iii. 32 f. 22). It is also in the St. Gall ms., No. 387, of the 11th cent. Mone, No. 419, cites it as in a ms. of the 9th cent. at Admont. The second portion, "O gloriosa femina, Excelsa super sidera," is often given as a separate hymn, sometimes beginning "O gloriosa Domina," as in a 12th cent. ms. in the British Museum (Harl. 2928 f. 120 b); in Mone, No. 420, and in G. M. Dreves's Hymnarius Moissiacensis, 1888, p. 38, from a 10th cent. ms. In the Roman Breviary, 1632, the first part begins Quem terra, pontus, sidera, and the second part O gloriosa virginum. Vespers in the Office of the "Most Sacred Heart of our Lord Jesus Christ," which the Roman Breviary, Lisbon, 1786, pars. Est.
p. 447, is marked as a festival of the Sacred Class, and appointed for the Sixth Day of the Octave of Corpus Christi. It is repeated in some more recent eds. of the Breviary, e.g. Bologna, 1827; but in other eds. the Quicumque Christum quaeritis. Prudentius. [Epiphany.] This is the 12th and last poem in his Cathemerinon, and in its full form consists of 208 lines. It is found in a ms. of the 5th cent. in the Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris (8048. f. 39b), and is included in all eds. of his Opera: e.g. Halle, 1703, p. 75; and Aurelii Prudentii Clementis V. C. Opera Omnia. . . (Delphin and Variorum Classics), London, 1824, vol. i. pp. 150–163. Though one of the finest poems of Prudentius, it was comparatively little used in the services of the Church until the revision of the Roman Breviary after the Council of Trent. In the ed. of that Breviary pub. at Rome, 1570, there are the following centos:—

- i. Quicumque Christum quaeritis. Transfiguration.
- ii. O sola magnarum urbium. Epiphany.
- iii. Audit tyrannus anxius. Holy Innocents, at Matins.
- iv. Salvete fores martyrum. Holy Innocents, at Lauds.

These centos are repeated in later eds. of the Roman Breviary, and also in Daniel, i., Nos. 107, 108, 112, and iv. p. 121. The earliest and most beautiful cento is the Salvete fores martyrum, which is found in the St. Gall ms., No. 413, of the 11th cent., in a 12th cent. ms. in the British Museum (Add. 18301, f. 113), &c. [J. M.]

These centos have been translated into English as follows:—

i. Quicumque Christum quaeritis. The Transfiguration. This begins with the first line of the poem. The Roman Brev. text is in Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1838 and 1865. Tr. as:—

1. All ye who seek in hope and love. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 167; and again in his Hys. & Poems, 1873, p. 90. This is repeated in several collections, and is usually given in an unaltered form. In J. A. Johnston's English Hyl., 1852, it begins, "Ye who for Christ are seeking, raise."

2. O ye, who Christ are seeking, raise. In J. A. Johnston's English Hyl., 1858, based upon Caswall.

Other trs. are:—

 1. Hail, martyrs, sweets de flower'd. H. Kynaston, 1862.
 2. Hail, ye flowers of martyrs bright. H. M. Macgill, 1876.
 Dr. H. M. Macgill's tr. of this poem in his Songs of Christian Creed and Life, &c., 1876, is broken up into the following parts :—

1. "Quicumque Christum quaeritis." See above.
 2. "En Persici ex orbis sinu." Tr. as: "Lo! far from under Persic skies."
 3. "Sed verticem pueri supra." Tr. as: "Behold! the sign has ceased to move."
 4. "O sola magnarum urbium." See above.
 5. "Audit tyrannus anxius." See above.
 6. "Salvete flores Martyrum." See above.
 7. "Sic stulta Pharaonis mali." Tr. as: "So Moses Israel's destined guide."
 8. "Jure ergo ae Judae ducem." Tr. as: "Well had those wise men from afar."

In addition Dr. Kynaston has a cento in the Lyra Messianica, 1864, beginning, "En Persici ex orbis sinu," which he has tr. as "From day-light's portals, burning."

The use which has been made of this fine poem is extensive both in Latin and English. [J. J.]

Quiet, Lord, my froward heart. J. Newton. [Resignation.] Appeared in the Olney Hymns, 1779, Bk. iii., No. 65, in 4 st. of 6 l., and headed "The Child." It has passed into a large number of hymn-books. In some it begins "Jesus, make my froward heart," but this form of the text is not popular. [J. J.]

Quis te canat mortalium? Jean Baptiste de Santeuil. [The Annunciation of the B. V. M.] Appeared in the Cluniae Breviary, 1686, p. 1073. It is also in the Orleans Brev. 1693, both for the Conception and for the Nativity of the B. V. M. In Santeuil's Hymni Sacri, 1689, p. 30 (ed. 1698, p. 20), it begins, "Quis ore digno te canat," and in this form it is in the Narbonne Brev., 1709, and later French Brevs. Tr. as :—

What mortal tongue can sing thy praise! By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 269; and his Hys. and Poems, 1873, p. 170. It is in C. U. in Roman Catholic collections for missions and schools. [J. M.]

Quisquis valet numerare. [Eternal Life.] A fine poem "on the glory of the heavenly Jerusalem" given by Mone, No. 803, from a Karlsruhe ms. of the 15th cent., and in 16 st. of 6 l. In some copies of the Hymnal N., 1854, the first line reads "Si quis valet numerare." The tr. is usually given for All Saints. Tr. as :—

1. If there be that skills to reckon. By J. M. Neale, in the Hymnal N., 1854, in 7 st. of 6 l., including a doxology, being a part only of the hymn. This has been repeated in whole or in part in Kennedy, 1863; in the Hymnary, 1872; and as "Who of men hath skill to reckon?" in the Sarum, 1868. In Dr. Neale's Hys. . . . on the Joys and Glories of Paradise, 1868, the Latin text of 9 st. is given, together with a tr. of which 6 st. are from the H. Noted. This tr. is divided in the St. Margaret's Hyl., 1876 (East Grinstead), into two parts, pt. II. being "O what splendour, O what beauty."

2. Is there man could ever reckon? By J. A. Johnston, in his Eng. Hymnal, 1861.

3. Who the multitudes can number. By T. B. Pollock, in the 1889 Suppl. Hymns to H. A. & M.

16. What is life? A rapid stream. Life. In the "n. m." in 6 st. of 4 l., and dated in pencil 1838. At the foot is written by Dr. Raffles "Originally published in the Investigator, and, &c., &c., &c., London."

The "Raffles ms." from which we have annotated these hymns, was kindly lent by Mr. T. S. Raffles, n.a., Stipendiary Magistrate of Liverpool. Mr. Raffles is the author of his father's Memoirs, 1864, and of hymn 25 in his father's Supplement. Dr. Raffles's original Hymns were pub. in 1868, with a Preface by J. Baldwin Brown. [J. J.]

Raise the psalm, let Earth adoring E. Churton. [Ps. xvi.] 1st pub. in his Cleave land Psalter, 1854, in 13 st. of 4 l., with the refrain, "Hallelujah, Amen." In 1863 Dr. Kennedy embodied in his Hymn. Christ. st. i., ii., viii.-xiii., as a hymn, of 2 st. of 16 l. each st. ending with "Hallelujah, Amen." This successful arrangement was repeated in the Wes. H. Bk., 1875, No. 604, but divided into 4 st. of 8 l., and with the omission of the refrain. This rendering is one of the author's best and most vigorous versions of the Psalms, and is worthy of more extended use than is accorded to it. [Psalter, English, § xix.] [J. J.]

Raise thee, my soul, fly up and run. I. Watts. [Heavenly Joys.] Appeared in his Hys. and Sac. Songs, 1707 (ed. 1709, Bk. ii., No. 33), in 8 st. of 4 l., and headed "The blessed Society in Heaven." It is in C. U. in its full, and also in an abridged form. In some American collections, including The Baptist Praise Bk., N. Y., 1871, it begins "Arise, my soul, fly up and run," and st. ii. and vi. are also omitted. [J. J.]

Raise your triumphant songs. I. Watts. [The Love and Work of Christ.] 1st pub. in his Hys. and S. Songs, 1709, Bk. ii., No. 104, in 6 st. of 4 l., as the second of two hymns on "Christ's Commission." John iii. 16, 17. It was extensively adopted by the older compilers, including G. Whitefield, M. Madan, A. M. Toplady, and others. Bickersteth (1833), Elliott (1835), the Leeds H. Bk. (1853), &c., followed; and modern editors in G. Britain and America have, in very many instances, also included it in their collections. Notwithstanding this popularity it does not rank with the best of Watts's hymns. [J. J.]

Rambach, August Jakob, s. of Johann Jakob Rambach (then pastor of St. Nicholas's Church, at Quedlinburg, and, after 1780, chief pastor of St. Michael's Church, at Hamburg), was b. at Quedlinburg, May 28, 1777. He entered the University of Halle in 1796, passed his final theological examination in Nov. 1799, was appointed diaconus of St. James's Church at Hamburg, in May 1802, and on March 16, 1819, preached his first sermon as chief pastor of St. Michael's, in succession to his father. He received the degree of D.D. from the University of Marburg, on the occasion of its tercentenary, Nov. 12, 1827; and became senior of the Hamburg clergy in 1834. After 1814 the burden of infirmities made him resign his public offices one after another. He finally resigned his pastorate in the beginning of 1851, and retired to Ottensen, near Hamburg, where he d. Sept. 7, 1851. (Die Familie Rambach. By Dr. T. Hansen, Gotha, 1875, p. 237: Allg. Deutsche Biog., xxvii. 193, &c.)

A. J. Rambach is better known as a hymnologist than as a hymn-writer. His earliest work, entitled, Ueber D. Martin Luthers Verdienst um den Kirchengesang, Hamburg, 1813, is an essay on Luther as a hymn-writer musician, &c. His greatest work is his Anthologie christlicher Gesänge aus allen Jahrhunderten der Kirche, Altona & Leipzig, vols. I., II., 1817; III., 1819; IV., 1822; V., 1832; VI., 1833 (vols. V., VI., also pub. separately, as Der heilige Gesang der Deutschen . . . seit Gellerts und Klopstocks Zeit). Though this is now to a considerable extent antiquated, and is really of value only for the period 1600-1830, it still is of much use for the biographical notes on many of the more obscure writers, and for the exceptional accuracy of the references to the sources from which the hymns are taken. (It is occasionally referred to in this Dictionary as Rambach's Anthologie.) During its compilation he gradually gathered together an extensive and valuable hymnological library, over 2000 volumes of which are now a part of the Hamburg Town Library. He was also the principal editor of the Hamburg G. B. of 1842, and in 1843 pub. a small volume of biographical notices thereto (Kurzegefasste Nachricht von den Verfassern der Lieder im Hamburgischen Gesangbuche).

Rambach does not seem to have pub. any original hymns. His trs. are given in vol. I. of his Anthologie, as above, and five are included in the Hamburg G. B., 1842. The only one which has passed into English C. U. is noted at p. 227, I. [J. M.]

Rambach, Johann Jakob, D.D., s. of Hans Jakob Rambach, cabinet maker at Halle on the Saale, was b. at Halle, Feb. 24, 1693. In 1706 he left school and entered his father's workshop, but, in the autumn of 1707, he dislocated his ankle. During his illness he turned again to his schoolbooks; the desire for learning reawoke; and on his recovery, early in 1708, he entered the Latin school of the Orphanage at Halle (Glauchau). On Oct. 27, 1712, he matriculated at the University of Halle as a student of medicine, but soon turned his attention to theology. He became specially interested in the study of the Old Testament under J. H. Michaelis. In May 1715 he became one of Michaelis's assistants in preparing his ed. of the Hebrew Bible, for which he wrote the commentary on Ruth, Esther, Nehemiah, &c. His health began to suffer in the spring of 1719, and he gladly accepted the invitation of Count von Henkel to stay at Pölzig, near Ronneburg, where he spent several months. By August he had quite recovered, and went to pay a visit to Jena, where a number of the students asked him to lecture to them. For this purpose he settled at Jena in Oct., 1719, and lived in the house of Professor Buddens (J. F. Budde). He graduated M.A. in March 1720. In 1723 he was appointed adjunct of the Theological Faculty at Halle, as also inspector of the Orphanage; in 1726 extraordinary professor of theology; and in 1727, after A. H. Francke's death, ordinary professor as well as preacher at the Schulkirche. Here he was very popular, both as preacher and professor, but the jealousy of his colleagues induced him to accept an offer from the Landgrave Ernst Ludwig of Hesse, who, in 1731, invited him to Giessen as superintendent and first professor of theology (before leaving Halle he graduated D.D., June 28, 1731), and in Aug., 1732, appointed him also director of the Paedagogium at Giessen. In 1734 he was, for various reasons, greatly inclined to accept the offer of the first professorship of theology in the newly-founded University of Göttingen, but eventually, at the earnest request of the Landgrave, remained in Giessen, where he d. of fever, April 19, 1735 (Die Familie Rambach. Gotha, 1875: Allg. D. 196; Blätter für Hymno 129, 145, 163, 186; I p. 13, &c.)

Rambach was a voluminous writer of practical theology, elementarische sacrae, Jena, 1724, 4 eds. in his lifetime; his Es für Kinder, 1734 (see below), v in 1736, and a 14th in 1786; sermons, &c. He justly earned thoroughness of his researches in the way in which he set forth his opinions. It is however as a hymn-writer that he is likely to be best known. With the best hymn-writers of his time, he yet takes a high place, and deserves to be almost any of the 18th cent. He is good and dignified; his thought is clearly expressed. While his hymns are didactic, they are also churchly in tone, and are characterized by lively imagination, and earnestness, in the strict sense, he wrote over which passed into the German cent. (e.g. the Hannover G. B., 1767, contains 62 by him still found in modern hymn-books. Pasig gives 165 in his ed. of Lieder, Leipzig, 1844, and the Hansen as above, while the first given in the Blätter as above. Fully original, made for the *Hannover G. Randall, Thomas, M.A., was b. in 1711 and studied at the University of Edinburgh where he graduated M.A. in 1730. In 1739 he became parish minister of Iuchter, Perthshire, and in 1770 minister of the East Church Stirling. He d. at Stirling, July 21, 1780. He was one of those added in 1744 to the Committee of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland which compiled the Translations and Paraphrases of 1745. To him is ascribed No. 11 in the collection of 1745, No. 49 in that of 1781. See Scottish Translations and Paraphrases. [J. M.]

Randolph, Anson Davis Fete, was b at Woodbridge, New Jersey, Oct. 18, 1820 and subsequently became a publisher and bookseller in New York. His Hopefully Waiting and other Verses were pub. in 1867. His hymn "Weary, Lord, of struggling here" (Desiring to Depart), was written in 1849, and first printed in the New York Independent. It was repeated in his Hopefully Waiting, &c., 1867, and is in a few collections. [F. M. B.]

Rands, William Brighty, was b. in Chelsea in 1862 and d. at Dulwich on April 23rd, 1882. He was a considerable contributor to literature, but published his works under various names—e.g. "Matthew Browne," "Henry Holbeach," "Lilliput Levee," &c. One hymn by him of great force and originality has found its way into recent hymnals, "One Lord there is all Lords above" (God a consuming fire to sin). It appeared originally in his "Lilliput Lectures," 1872. It has been included in Horder's Congregational Hymns, 1884, and in the Congregational Church Hymnal, 1887. [W. G. H.]

Rankin, Jeremiah Eames, D.D., was b. at Thornton, New Haven, Jan. 2, 1828, and educated at Middlebury College, Vermont, and at Andover. For two years he resided at Potsdam, U.S. Subsequently he held pastoral charges as a Congregational Minister at New York, St. Albans, Charlestown, Washington District of Columbia, &c. In 1878 he edited the Gospel Temperance Hymnal, and later the Gospel Bells. His hymns appeared in these collections, and in D. E. Jones's Songs of the New Life, 1869. His best known hymn is "Labouring and heavy laden" (Seeking Christ). This was "written [in 1855] for a sister who was an inquirer," was first printed in the Boston Recorder, and then included in Nason's Cong. H. Bk., 1857. Another of his hymns is "Rest, rest, rest, brother rest" (Death & Burial). [F. M. B.]

Rawson, George, was b. June 5, 1807, at Leeds, in which town he practised for many years as a solicitor. In 1853 he assisted the Congregational ministers of Leeds in the compilation of Psalms, Hymns, and Passages of Scripture for Christian Worship, a vol. commonly known as the Leeds Hymn-book. Mr. Rawson was a member of the Congregational body. In 1858 he also assisted Rev. Dr. Green and other Baptist ministers in the preparation of Psalms and Hymns for the use of the Baptist Denomination. A number of Mr. Rawson's own compositions first appeared in this and in the Leeds H. Bk. In 1876 he pub. his Hymns, Verses and Chants (Hodder and Stoughton, London), including his previously published hymns, and containing (exclusive of chants) 80 original pieces. In 1885 most of these, with several additional hymns, were pub. by the R. T. S. under the title Songs of Spiritual Thought. Mr. Rawson d. March 25, 1889. His hymns are distinguished by refinement of thought, and delicacy and propriety of language; and if they do not attain the first rank among the songs of the Christian Church, many are of great excellence. The most widely known are, "By Christ redeemed, in Christ restored;" "Come to our poor nature's night;" "Father in high heaven dwelling;" "In the dark and cloudy day;" and "Reaper, behold the fields are white." In the Leeds H. Bk., 1853, and the Bap. Ps. & Hys., 1858, there are also several recasts of and additions to the hymns of other writers. These are noted in this Dictionary, and may be gathered from the Index of Authors and Translators. In addition to Mr. Rawson's hymns which are annotated under their respective first lines, the following are also in C. U.:- i. From the Leeds H. Bk., 1853.

 Rector potens, verax Deus. St. Ambrose? [Noon.] This hymn has been ascribed to St. Ambrose, and is certainly ancient, but is not assigned to him by the Benedictine editors. Daniel, i. No. 41, gives the original (and the text of the Roman Brev., 1632). in 2 st. of 4 l., and at iv. p. 44, cites it as in a 10th cent.; while at iv. p. 43 he expresses the opinion that the hymn "Bis ternas horas" (q.v.), is more probably that written by St. Ambrose for the Sixth Hour. In all the ancient Breviaries it is the hymn at Sext, as in the Ambrosian of 1539, 1632), Mozarabic of 1478 and the revision of 1502, Sarum, York, &c. It is suggested by Hosea vii. 4, Ps. xci. 6, and James iv. 1. As the sixth hour was the time for the mid-day meal (Acts x. 9), it may have been meant for use as a prayer against the temptations of the flesh. [W. A. S.]
Mone, i. p. 372, cites it as at Darmstadt and in two use, of the 8th cent. It is also in three Mass. Trier, both assigning it to Sext. Museum (Vesp. D. xii of the 11th cent. in the British 2961 f. 220); in a Ms. of the 8th cent. at Corpus Christi, Cambridge (391. p. 230); in the St. Gall. ms., No. 4 of the 11th cent., &c. In the Latin Hys. of the Ang. Saxon Church (Sutton Society), 1861, it is printed from an 11th cent. Ms. at Durham (B. lib. 32 f. 4). [J. M.]

Reed, Andrew, D.D., son of Andrew Reed, was b. in London on Nov. 27, 1787, and educated for the Congregational Ministry at Hackney College, London. He was first the pastor of the New Road Chapel, St. George's-in-the-East, and then of the Wycliffe Chapel, which was built through his exertions in 1830.

His degree was conferred by Yale College, America. He d. Feb. 25, 1862. As the founder of "The London Orphan Asylum," "The Asylum for Fatherless Children," "The Asylum for Idiots," "The Infant Orphan Asylum," and "The Hospital for Incurables," Dr. Reed is more fully known, and will be longer remembered than by his literary publications. His Hymn Book was the growth of years. The preparation began in 1817, when he pub. a Supplement to Watts, in which were a few originals. This was enlarged in 1825; and entirely superseded by his collection The Hymn Book, prepared from Dr. Watts's Ps. & Hys. and Other Authors, with some Originals, in 1842 (Preface). His hymns, mostly of a plain and practical character, numbering 21, were contributed to these various editions, and were republished with those of his wife (see below) in the Wycliffe Supplement, 1872. The best known are "Ah Jesus, let me hear Thy voice," and "Spirit Divine, attend our prayer." All Dr. and Mrs. Reed's hymns are anonymous in The Hymn Book, 1842, but are given with their names in the Wycliffe Suppl., 1872. His hymns now in C. U. include, in addition to those annotated under their respective first lines:—

1. Come, let us strike our harps afresh. Praise.
2. Come, my Redeemer, come. Desiring Christ's Presence.
3. Gentle Saviour, look on me. Christ's protection Desired.
4. Gracious Lord, as Thou hast taught us. Public Worship.
5. Hark, hark, the notes of joy. Missions.
6. Holy Ghost, with light divine (1817). Prayer to the Holy Spirit. Sometimes given as "Holy Ghost, Thou light divine;" and again as "Holy Spirit, Light divine."
7. Listen, sinner, mercy hails you. Invitation. Generally given as "Hear, O Sinner, mercy hails you."
8. Rich are the joys of solitude. Retirement. Sometimes given as "How deep and tranquil is the joy."
9. There [comes] is an hour when I must part. Death anticipated.
10. Ye saints your music bring. Praise of the Cross. [J. J.]

Reed, Eliza, née Holmes, was b. in London, March 4, 1794; married to the Rev. Andrew Reed (see above) in 1816; and d. July 4, 1867. Mrs. Reed entered fully and earnestly into her husband's extensive charitable works. Her publications include Original Tales for Children; and The Mother's Manual for the Training of her Children, 1865. Her hymns, 20 in all, were contributed to her husband's collection, and were republished with his in the Wycliffe Chapel Supplement, 1872. They are only of average merit, and have not attained to a marked position. They include:—

1. Gracious Lord, as Thou hast bidden. Holy Baptism.
2. I would be Thine, O take my heart. Dedication of Self to Christ.
3. O do not let the word depart. The Accepted Time.
4. O that I could for ever dwell. Communion with God Desired. [J. J.]

[J. M.]

Adam, was b. in 1496 at (now Mindelheim) in Swabian Bavaria. He first studied at Wittenberg, and then, about 1521, he learned Hebrew and Greek under Johann Reuchlin. He then became a private secretary to Georg von Freundsberg (who d. Aug. 20, 1528), and accompanied him during the campaign in Italy, the capture of Rome in 1527. After 1526-27. he went back to Germany, and spent some time at Strasbourg, where he became a friend and adherent of Caspar Schwenkfeldt. He seems to have been living at Frankfurt-am-Main in 1563, but thereafter returned to Mindelheim, where he was still living in 1572. He appears to have d. there about 1575. (Koch, ii. 156; Preface to his Historia Herrn Georgen unnd Herrn Caspar von Frundsberg's [d. Aug. 31, 1536] Lettere und Sons . . . Kriegesthaten, 1568. The Brit. Museum copy is unmistakably dated on title 1568, but the preface is dated Jan. 31, 1572.)

Three of Reissner's earlier hymns are in Zwick's G. B., 1536-40. His later hymns, including a tr. of the hymn of Prudentius, are collected in two mss., both dated 1596 (see Wackernagel, Geistl. Lied. i. pp. 690, 691). That now at Wolfenbüchels Gesangbuch . . . durch Adam Reissner, and as over 40 hymns which may be regarded as by Reissner, the rest being by other writers of the school of Schwenkfeldt. Wackernagel, vol. iii., gives Nos. 170-194 under his name.

The only hymn by Reissner tr. into English is:—

In dich hab ich Schöffet, Herr. Ps. xxi. 1st pub. in the Form und Ordnung Geistlicher Gesang und Psalmen, Augsburg, 1533, and thence in Wackernagel, iii. p. 133, in 7 st. of 6 l. It was included in V. Babel's G. B., 1546, and repeated in almost all the German hymn-books up to the period of Rationalism. It is one of the best Psalm-versions of the Reformation period. Included in the Univ. J. S., 1861, No. 629. The tr. in C. U. is:—

In Thee, Lord, have I put my trust. A good tr., omitting st. vii., by Miss Winkworth, in her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 120.

Other trs. are:—
(1) "Lord, let me never be confoundit." In the Gude and Godly Ballades, ed. 1568, f. 82; ed. 1868, p. 141.
(2) "Great God I in Thee I put my Trust." By J. C. Jacobi, 1725, p. 33 (1732, p. 116). Repeated in the Moravian H. Bk., 1754, pt. i., No. 118. (3) "Lord, I have trusted in Thy name." By Dr. H. Mills, 1856, p. 171. (4) "On Thee, O Lord, my hopes I lean." By N. L. Frothingham, 1870, p. 263. [J. M.]

Rejoice and be glad, the Redeemer has come. H. H. Bonar. [Praise of Jesus.] Written for I. D. Sankey's Sacred Songs and Solos, circa 1875. From that collection it has passed into a large number of Sunday School hymn-books, and other. [J. J.]

Rejoice, rejoice, ye fallen race. C. Wesley. [Whit Sunday.] Pub. in Hys. and Sac. Poems, 1742, p. 165, in 12 st. of 4 l., and headed "Hymn for the Day of Pentecost." (P. Works, ii. p. 227.) The following cento are in part, or in full from this hymn:—

1. Our Jesus is gone up on high. Composed of st. ii.-ix. in the revised ed. of the Wes. H. Bk., 1875.
2. Lord, we believe in thee. Composed of st. v., vii.-ix., xi., and xii. in Mercer's Ch. Psalter as a Hymn for Ember Days composed of st. i.-iii. raise our songs. This cento is from R. C. Brackenbury's Sac.

Poems & Hys., 1792; and the rest from this hymn C. Wesley. It was given in this form in the Wes. Bk., 1830, but omitted in 1878. [J. J.]

Rejoice, the Lord is King. C. Wesley. [Easter or Ascension.] This is No. viii. of hymns printed in 1746 as Hys. for Our Lord's Resurrection. It is in 6 st. of 6 l. It has previously appeared in J. Wesley's Moral and Sacred Poems, 1744. (P. Works, iv. 140.) It has been included, either in full or in part, in most hymn-books of any moment from Whitefield's, in 1753, to Thring's, 1882, with the result that it is in extensive use in all English-speaking countries. Curiously enough, however, it was not given in the Wes. H. Bk. until the revised ed. 1875. A cento for harvest beginning with the first stanza is found in some Unitarian hymn-books both old and new, including Ellen Courtland's Ps., Hys. and Anthem, 1860. It is in 5 st., the first stanza and ll. 5, of each of the others being from this hymn whilst the rest are by John Taylor in Enfield Norwich Sel. of Hys., 1795. [See Taylor, John In R. Bingham's Hymno. Christ. Latina, 1871, st. i., ii., iv., vi., slightly altered, are rendered into Latin as, "Rex est Dominus! Lætantes"] [J. J.]

Rejoice to-day with one accord. S. H. W. Baker. [General Thanksgiving.] Contributed to the 1st ed. of H. A. & M., 1861, and continued in the revised ed. of 1875. It is also repeated in a large number of hymn-books both at home and abroad. It is justly regarded as a good example of the author's jubilant style. [J. J.]

Religion is the chief concern. Fawcett. [Pure Religion desired.] Pub. in his Hymns, &c., 1782, No. 78, in 8 st. of 4 l. and entitled "The Nature and Necessity of inward Religion." It is in C. U. in an abbreviated form, under the original opening line, and also as, "O may my heart, by grace renew'd." [J. J.]

Remark, my soul, the narrow bounds. P. Doddridge. [New Year.] 1st pub. in J. Orton's posthumous ed. of his Hymns, &c., 1755, No. 52, in 5 st. of 4 l., and again in J. D. Humphreys's ed. of the same 1839, No. 63. In each case it is headed "Reflections on our waste of years, Psal. xc 9. For New Year's Day." It is in C. U. in the following forms:—

1. Remark, my soul, the narrow bounds. The original form in several collections both old and new.
2. Remark with awe the narrow bounds. In Stowell's Manchester Ps. & Hys., 1831 and 1877, &c.
3. Behold, my soul, the narrow bounds. H. W. Beecher's Plymouth Coll., 1856. [J. J.]

Rest from thy labour, rest. J. Montgomery. [Death and Burial of a Minister.] Received into the Moravian community as a member of that Society by the Rev. Christian Ramftler. Mr. Ramftler died at Bristol on Oct. 25, 1832. In the letter which conveyed to him the sad intelligence, they were requested to write a suitable hymn for the approaching Lovefeast at Bristol. The response was this hymn, which was first sung in public at Bristol (Memoirs, v. 66). It was included in Montgomery's Original Hymns, 1853, No. 307, in 5 st. of 4 l., and headed "On the death of a Minister." On Jan. 22, 1855, Montgomery wrote a hymn on the death of the Rev. Dr. Sutton, Vicar of Sheffield, which began with the same opening stanza. This hymn is not in the Original Hymns, nor in C. U. The hymn-books of 1849 st. iii.-v. were given in Dr. Alexander's Augustine H. Bk., No. 494, and have been reprinted in several later collections as "Lord O, thy cento suggests that the early date of this hymn was published before it appeared in the Original Hymns, 1853, and possibly in a magazine, but it has not been traced to any work of the kind. [J. J.]

Rest in the Lord; from harps above. Bp. E. H. Bickersteth. [Holy Matrimony.] Says in his Notes to his H. Comp., 1870, "This hymn was written by the Editor for this hymnal, and is especially designed to follow the air from Mendelssohn's Elijah, 'Rest played at the Lord,' which is so often added in the solemnization of holy matrimony." In addition to the H. Comp. this hymn appeared in Bp. Bickersteth's The Two Brothers, &c., 1871, p. 242, and in several hymn-books. [J. J.]

Rest, weary heart [soul]: The penalty is borne, the ransom paid. Jane Barthwick. [Passiontide.] Pub. in her Thoughts for Thoughtful Hours, 1859, p. 33, in 4 st. of 7 l. It has passed into several collections, and sometimes as "Rest weary soul: The penalty, &c." It is a beautiful hymn, but better adapted for private devotion than for public worship. [J. J.]

Restore, O Father, to our times restore. Maria Popple. [Christian Unity desired.] Contributed to Beard's Unitarian Coll. of Hymns, 1837, No. 304, in 3 st. of 4 l., and entitled "Christian Unity." It is signed "Miriam." It has passed into a few collections in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

Retire, vain world, awhile retire. [Home Missions.] This is found in the 1828-1829 ed. of the American (Old Presbyterian) Ps. & Hymns. It is again of the Presb. Church, in 7 st. of 4 l., and again in later collections. In most cases it is attributed to I. Watts, but we have failed to trace it to any of his works. Two centos therefore from it are also in C. U., both beginning with st. ii., "The Blest Jesu, come Thou gently down." The first is in the Presb. Ps. & Hymns for the Worship of God, Richmond, U. S. A., 1867, composed of st. ii., iv.-vi.; and the second, in Hatfield's Church H. Bk., N. Y., 1872, composed of st. ii., iii., vi., vii. It is usually given for Revival Meetings and Prayer [J. J.]

Return, O wanderer, return. W. Collyer. [Call to Repentance.] Appeared in the Evangelical Magazine, May 1806, and his Hymns, &c., 1812, No. 928, in 6 st. of 5 l. and headed "The Backslider." It is in its original form; as "Return, my wandering soul, return and seek an injured," &c. in the Philadelphia Bap. H. & Tune Bk., 1870, and as "Wanderer from God, return, return in a few of the American collections [J. Reusner, Adam. [Reissner, A.]

Reusner, Christoph, was a bookseller and bookbinder in Stockholm, and was probably born there, but date of birth is unknown. In 1675 he printed, and seems also to have edited, a collection of hymns for the German congregation at Stockholm, entitled Gottsel Haus- und Kirchen-Andacht, zu Dienst der Gemeinde der Teutschen Kirche in Stockholm. This work contains a number of hymns signed "R." which have been ascribed to Reusner. By others this "R" has been taken to mean Regina, i.e. the Queen of Sweden [Ulrich Eleonore, dau. of King Frederick III. of Denmark, b. at Copenhagen, Sept. 11, 1656; became Queen of Sweden by her marriage with Charles XI. in 1680; d. at Carlberg, July 2, 1693], but this ascription seems quite improbable. One of these hymns has passed into English, viz. —

Bin ich allein ein Fremdling auf der Erden. [Credo and Consolation.] 1st pub. 1675 as above. A copy of this work is in the Royal Library at Stockholm, and Dr. G. E. Klemming, the librarian, has kindly informed me that the hymn in question is No. 441, and is in 13 st. signed "R." He adds that in the ed. of 1693 it has 1 st. (st. xi., xii. being additional), and that in the Weisliches Handbuch, Stockholm, Wankjff, 1692, it has 1 st. (st. xi.-xiv. being additional). As the German hymn books copied from Stockholm, there is the same variety in them, e.g. the Frankfurt ed., 1678, of Crüger Praxis, No. 827, has the 13 st. of 1675; while the Nig G. B., 1690 (Andachts-Namme), the 17 st. of 1692, and so in Freylinghausen's Neues Geistesreiches G. B., 1716 No. 440. Bunsen, in his Versuch, 1833, No. 881, follows the 1675, but omits st. iii., vi. The tr. in C. U. is —

Am I a stranger here, on earth alone. In full from Bunsen, by Miss Winkworth, in her Lyra Ger., 1st Ser., 1855, p. 57. In her C. B. for England, 1863, No. 43, the trs. of st. v., vii., viii., x. are omitted, and it is given altered in metre as "Am I on earth a lone and friendless stranger." [J. M.]

Revive Thy work, O Lord, Thy mighty arm make bare. A. Midlane. [Home Missions.] 1st pub. in the British Messenger, Oct. 1858, again in the Evangelical H. Bk., 1860, and again in a large number of hymnals in G. Britain and America. The original text is usually given with the change of st. v. 1. 2, "Give pentecostal showers," to "And give refreshing showers," as in the H. Comp., No. 150. It is one of the most popular of Mr. Midlane's hymns. [J. J.]

Rex aeterne Domine. [Eastertide.] This hymn is certainly ancient, being mentioned in the Rule of Aurelianus of Arles (d. 555), and by the Venerable Bede (d. 735) in his De arte metrica. It is found in a ms. c. 700, in the British Museum (Vesp. A. i. f. 153); in a ms. c. 890, in the Bodleian (Junius 25 f. 116 b); in an 11th cent. Mozarabic Breviary, in the British Museum (Add. 30848 f. 131 b); in a ms. of the 8th cent. at St. Gall, No. 2; and in the Lat. Hymns of the Anglo-Saxon Church (Surtees Society), 1851 is printed from an 11th cent. ms. at Durham (B. iii. 32 f. 9b).

The original text has 16 stanzas and a doxology. This form is in Daniel, i., No. 80 (for metrical reasons but without any authority Daniel reads, O Rex aeternus); Wackernagel, i., No. 64; the Hymnarium Sarisb., 1851, p. 95; and in G. M. Drevens's Hymnarius Moissiacensis, 1888, from a 10th cent. ms. In the older Roman Breviary (e.g. Venice, 1478), st. i.-vii. were given as a hymn for Matins on Low Sunday. At the revision of 1568 it was altered to Rex sempiternus Domine, and at the revision of 1632 to Rex sempiternus coelitus. The text of 1632 (appointed for Sunday Matins, "Tempore Paschali," i.e. during Eastertide), is in recent eds. of the revised Roman Brev.; in Daniel, i., No. 80; and Card. Newman's Hymni Ecclesiae, 1835 and 1866. [J. M.]

This hymn has been tr. as follows:—

i. Rex aeternus Domine. Of the full text there is one tr., that by J. D. Chambers in his Psalter, &c., 1852, p. 90, "O king Eternal, Lord of grace," and in his Lauda Syon, 1857, altered to, "Eternal Monarch, Lord of all."

ii. Rex sempiternus coelitus. This Roman Breviary text in 6 st. has been tr. thus:—

1. O Thou, the heaven's eternal King. By E. Caswall, in his Lyra Catholica, 1849, p. 96, and his Hys. and Poems, 1873, p. 54. In a full or in an abbreviated form it has passed into several hymnals.

2. O Christ, the heaven's eternal King. By the Compilers of H. A. & M., 1861, "based on former translations." It was repeated in Kennedy, 1863.

3. Eternal King of heaven, Whose word. By G. Moultrie, in his Hys. and Lyrics, 1867, p. 125; and thence into the People's H., 1867.

Translations not in C. U.:—

4. Eternal King of all the spheres. J. Wallace, 1874.

iii. Qui pastor aeternus gregem. This, beginning with st. v. of the Roman Brev. text, is tr. by W. J. Blew, in his Church H. and Tune Bk., 1852-5, as "Shepherd of life, Who dost Thy flock." [J. J.]

Rex angelorum praepotens. [Passiontide.] This is found in a ms. of the 11th cent. in the British Museum (Harl. 2961 f. 239). Daniel, i., No. 224, gives st. i. only as a hymn "on the Invention or Exaltation of the Cross." Tr. as:—

O King of Angels! Lord of power. By J. D. Chambers, in his Psalter, &c., 1852, p. 85, and altered to "O King, by angel-hosts obeyed," in his Lauda Syon, 1857, p. 147, in 5 st. of 4 l. In the Parish H. Bk., 1863 and 1875, and in Chope's Hymnal, 1864, it is given, with alterations and the omission of st. ii., as, "O King of angels, Lord of grace." [J. M.]

Rex Christe, factor omnium. St. Gregory the Great. [Passiontide.] This is one of the eight hymns accepted in the Benedictine ed. of Gregory's Opera (Paris, 1705, vol. iii. col. 879), as his genuine productions. It is found in a ms. of the 11th cent. in the British Museum (Harl. 2961 f. 240); in a ms. of the 12th cent. in the Bodleian (Liturg. Misc. 297 f. 309); in three mss. of the 11th cent. at St. Gall (Nos. 387, 313, 314), and others. In mediaeval times it was often used at the Tenebrae service on Good Friday, but does not seem to have been received into the more important Breviaries. It long survived in its original form in the Lutheran Church, and is e.g. in the Dresden as one of "Certain Latin songs from time to time at in the Holy Cross Church, of Divine service." The Daniel, i., No. 151; Bässel feld, i. p. 72, and others.

Rhodes, Benjamin, b. at Mexborough, Yorkshire, in 1743, was brought under the influence of George Whitefield, and received the elements of a schoolmaster in his youth. He was for many years a Wesleyan Minister, having been sent forth to at Margate Oct. 13, 1815. To Joseph Benson's Hys. for Children and Young Persons, 1806, and his Hymns for Children selected chiefly from the publications of the Rev. John and Charles Wesley, and Dr. Watts, &c., 1814 (an additional volume to the first, and sometimes bound up with it, he contributed several hymns. Very few of these are now in C. U. They include "Duty towards Parents," "Come, let us obey" (Duty towards Parents), "Come, let us join our God to thy praise" (Praise), and "Thou shalt not steal thy neighbour's right" (Against Stealing.) His best known hymn is "My heart and voice I raise" (The Kingdom of Christ). It appeared as st. i. of his poem Messiah, 1787, pt. ii. being "Jerusalem divine." Each part is in use as a separate hymn. [J. J.]

Rhys, Morgan, a famous Welsh hymn-writer of the last century. He published several collections of hymns under quaint titles. Goleg o ben Nebo ar telad yr Addewid (A View of the promise from the top of Mt. Nebo). Fruyd Ysbrydal (The Spiritual Warfare). Graddfannan y Credadyn, &c. (The Groanings of the Believer). He d. in 1776, and was buried at Llanfynydd Church, in Caermarthenshire. [W. G. T.]

Richards, George, born near Newport, Rhode Island, circa 1755. For some years he was Purser and Chaplain in the United States Navy, and also taught a school in Boston. In 1789 he became a Universalist preacher, ministered at Portsmouth, New Haven, 1793-1809, and from 1809 in Philadelphia, where, his mind having given way under trouble, he d. by his own hand, March 18, 1816. With S. Lane he edited the Universalist Hymn Book, pub. at Boston, 1792. This was one of the earliest collections of that body. It contained 49 of Richards's hymns. In 1801 he pub. A Coll. of Hys., Dover, New Hampshire, which contained 6 additional hymns by himself, and in 1806, also at Dover, a second ed. of the same, greatly enlarged, with another 26 hymns. Of these the following are in C. U. at the present time:—

1. O Christ, what gracious words. The Gospel

Message. This hymn appeared in the Boston Coll., 1792, and is the best of the early Universalist hymns. In the Andover Sabbath H. Bk., 1856, it is given as "Saviour, what gracious words." In this form and also in the original, it is found in several collections.

2. Long as the darkening cloud abode. Easter. This hymn in modern collections, as the Songs of the Sanctuary, 1865, No. 687, is composed thus: st. i. and ii., ll. 1-4, are from Richards, and the rest of the hymn, 3 st. of 8 l. in all, is anonymous.

Additional hymns by Richards, from both the Boston and the Dover collections, are in modern Universalist hymn-books. [F. M. B.]

Richardson, James, s. of the Hon. James Richardson, of Dedham, Massachusetts, was b. in that town May 25, 1817, and graduated at Harvard College, 1837. After being engaged, first as a clerk of the county courts, and then in teaching, he entered the Divinity School at Cambridge, where he graduated in theology in 1845. Subsequently he was Unitarian Pastor at Southington, Connecticut, and then of the Unitarian Society in Haverhill, Massachusetts. Ill-health compelled him to retire from his pastoral work to Dedham. During the war he joined himself to the hospitals at Washington, where he d. Nov. 10, 1863. Mr. Richardson was well known as an Essayist, Poet, and Preacher. Two of his hymns, from Longfellow and Johnson's Book of Hys., 1848, are still in C. U.: "From Zion's holy hill there rose" (One in Christ), and "How glad the tone when summer's sun" (Summer). We are indebted to Putnam's Singers and Songs of the Liberal Faith, Boston, U. S. A., 1875, for these details. [J. J.]

Richter, Anne, née Rigby, was the third daughter of the Rev. Robert Rigby, Vicar of St. Mary's, Beverley, Yorkshire, from 1791 to 1823, and married the Rev. W. H. Richter, sometime Chaplain of the County Gaol at Kirton Lindsey, Lincolnshire, and then Rector of St. Paul's, Lincoln. Mrs. Richter d. at 23 Minster Yard, Lincoln, in 1857. She contributed to various magazines, and pub. The Nun and Other Poems, Hull, 1841. Her intimate literary acquaintances included Mrs. Hemans. Mrs. Richter was descended from the celebrated John Bradshaw, whose name is the first in the list of the signatures on the death warrant of Charles I. Her hymn, "We have not seen Thy footsteps tread," in its altered form as "We saw Thee not when Thou didst come," is widely used in G. Britain and America. [J. J.]

Richter, Christian Friedrich, s. of Sigismund Richter, Rath and Chancellor to Count von Promnitz at Sorau, in Brandenburg, was born at Sorau, Oct. 5, 1676. At the University of Halle he was first a student of medicine and then of theology. In 1698, A. H. Francke appointed him Inspector of the Paedagogium, and then made him, in 1699, physician in general to all his Institutions. In company with his younger brother, Dr. Christian Sigismund Richter, he made many chemical experiments, for which he prepared himself by special prayer; and invented many compounds which came into extensive use under the name of the "Halle Medicines," the most famous being the Essentia dulcis, which was a preparation of gold. He d. at Halle, Oct. 5, 1711 (Koch, iv. 351, &c.).
